LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF ONTARIO

---

Tuesday, March 20, 1973, being the first day of the third session of the 29th Parliament of the Province of Ontario for the despatch of business pursuant to a proclamation of the Honourable W. Ross Macdonald, Lieutenant Governor of the province.

TUESDAY, MARCH 20, 1973

The House met at 3 o'clock, p.m.

The Honourable the Lieutenant Governor, having entered the House and being seated upon the throne, was pleased to open the session with the following gracious speech.

SPEECH FROM THE THRONE

Hon. W. Ross Macdonald (Lieutenant Governor): Pray be seated.

Mr. Speaker, and members of the legislative assembly: I extend my warmest greetings to you on this occasion of the opening of the third session of the 29th Parliament of Ontario. On behalf of our sovereign I convey best wishes to the Premier and to my ministers and to all hon. members.

Je tiens à vous souhaiter à tous une chaleureuse bienvenue en ce jour d'ouverture de la troisième session de la 29<sup>ème</sup> Législature de l'Ontario. Je veux présenter, au nom de notre souveraine, tous les meilleurs vœux au Premier Ministre, à mes ministres et aux hon. membres.

The people of Ontario and hon. members of this assembly share the honour and pleasure afforded them by the gracious presence of Her Majesty, Queen Elizabeth, and His Royal Highness, Prince Philip, on the occasion of their visit to Canada this summer. This royal visit will provide Her Majesty's loyal subjects the opportunity to accord a warm welcome to their Queen and to His Royal Highness.

Hon. members, the province's economy has been strengthened considerably in the past year and has enjoyed the fastest growth rate in the level of employment in over a decade. My government expects this trend to continue in 1973 with an increase in real growth of goods and services of six per cent this year, compared with an estimated 5.5 per cent gain in 1972.

Despite the continued rapid growth of the labour force, the average unemployment rate has declined from 5.2 per cent in 1971 to 4.8 per cent in 1972, and a record 140,000 new jobs were created. This achievement compared favourably with Canada as a whole, where the unemployment rate last year remained virtually unchanged at 6.3 per cent. A moderation in the labour force growth in 1973 combined with the continuing expansion in job opportunities should further improve the Ontario employment picture. Indeed, on a seasonal basis, unemployment in Ontario was 4.1 per cent in February this year compared with 4.6 per cent in February, 1972.

In its continuing activities in the development of medium and long-term provincial economic objectives, it is my government's intention to use the resources of the Joint Committee on Economic Policy to study and recommend policies for provincial implementation and to develop positions concerning economic and industrial policy co-ordination between the province and the government of Canada.

My government proposes to strengthen the Ontario Economic Council to support its independent studies of the Ontario economy.

All are aware of the rapidly increasing rate of change around us. The steadily increasing and more concentrated population and the resulting pressure on land create a wide range of new policy imperatives.

It is clear that the preservation of our physical resources is one of the most urgent requirements facing all governments today. The most important of these resources is land. My government will place before you proposals for major new programmes designed to ensure sound planning and to preserve this resource for the use and advantage of future generations.

Two major studies undertaken by the government have now been received and action will be taken with respect to their implementation.

My government will introduce legislation which will ensure the preservation of the Niagara Escarpment. Such proposals will be balanced to permit mixed uses compatible with the preservation of the ecological and historic features of this physical land form which is a unique feature of our province.

In this connection, my government will establish a Niagara Escarpment Commission to be responsible for the overall planning of physical resources and to ensure that government policy to preserve the escarpment is carried out. The total area subject to planning and control in the public interest will be in excess of one million acres.

My government is prepared to proceed with plans for a parkway belt system from Dundas in the west to Oshawa in the east. This parkway belt will provide for the orderly channelling of services and utilities that are the essential support systems of urban southern Ontario, while affording opportunities for the preservation of open space and providing for the separation of individual urban communities.

One of the primary purposes of the reorganization of local government structures is to encourage more effective planning at the local level, particularly in regard to the control and use of land. My government believes it essential that the public be increasingly involved in this process. In this regard, my government intends to initiate a major review of the Planning Act and other legislation related to land development.

My ministry has received proposals regarding regional government both east and west of Metropolitan Toronto and will introduce legislation in this regard. My government believes that a strong and reformed local government is in the best position to determine its own priorities and proposes to transfer to strengthened local governments more authority and responsibility for many of the decisions that relate to local matters.

My government will take steps to ensure proper policy co-ordination of initiatives involving land use controls where agricultural lands are concerned so that good farm land may be retained for agricultural purposes.

My government will introduce legislation to implement recommendations contained in the interim report of the select committee on land drainage.

As a result of its review of the report of the select committee on the Ontario Municipal Board, my government will place before you proposals to make the board a more effective vehicle for discharging its responsibilities.

My government will continue to work for the fullest co-operation with the federal government and other provincial governments and looks forward to a number of joint meetings in the coming months. Amongst them will be the conference of welfare ministers next month which, it is hoped, will provide for the development of an integrated approach to income security programmes. The province is well aware of the implications for our municipalities of many of these policy negotiations and will continue to encourage active municipal representation and participation in provincial negotiations with the federal government.

New policy initiatives in the energy field are a matter of active and intensive consideration.

In its concern about changes taking place in the field of energy, Ontario fully recognizes that actions taken now and in the near future by governments both in Canada and abroad will have a profound impact on the supply and cost of energy and, in turn, on the very foundation of our economic progress. The province is equally aware of the need to place questions on energy in a balanced social perspective to protect the environment as well as the economic interests of the citizens of this province. New policy initiatives establishing agencies for energy may be expected, as well as changes in the role and place of the Hydro Electric Power Commission of Ontario. These proposals will be based on the reports of the advisory committee on energy and Task Force Hydro.

My government has already acted in relation to specific matters involving potential and significant environmental considerations, such as the Solandt commission on the proposed Nanticoke-Pickering hydro line and the task force to study the potential of the lignite fuel deposits in northern Ontario.

In the knowledge that similar matters will arise in future which will require intensive and expert study and analysis, my government will place before you legislation to establish a permanent agency for environmental protection, having the responsibility for a comprehensive system of assessment and evaluation of the environmental significance of activities of ministries of the government, utilities, projects funded in part by the government and related activities in the private sector which have comparable environmental implications.

On receiving the recommendations of the task force of the Ministry of the Environment, my government will introduce legislation on the disposal of solid waste.

With respect to the programme initiated last year to remove abandoned automobiles from the landscape, new regulations will be introduced providing simplified and more rapid procedures for divesting the title in derelict vehicles to hasten their removal. Other controls will be introduced with regard to locations where these vehicles are collected.

Measures to control the sale of pesticides and also their use by farmers and foresters are being effectively enforced with the co-operation of vendors and users. Further steps will be taken to strengthen these controls.

It is also the intention of my government to institute a noise abatement programme in co-operation with the municipalities.

The objectives of my government with respect to environmental matters can only be effectively achieved with the co-operation of the people of Ontario, neighbouring provinces and states, and other nations. Therefore, my ministers attach particular significance to the fact that the province of Ontario is to be host to a conference sponsored by the Canadian Council of Resource and Environment Ministers this November.

You will be asked to approve a programme designed to increase my government's activity in forest management. This expanded programme includes the regeneration of cut-over lands, establishing new forests on private land, improving growth conditions in existing forests and preparing idle land for planting or seeding. These measures are designed to help meet Ontario's long-term requirements from its forest resources.

Hon. members, various development policy initiatives and programmes will be reviewed by you, including new guidelines for financial assistance to the tourist industry, further support for exports, and industrial development with special emphasis on assistance to small business. An expanded programme has been prepared to promote all-season facilities in northern Ontario and throughout the province.

In view of the accelerated economic growth expected to take place in the United Kingdom because of that country's recent entry into the European Economic Community, the Premier, the Hon. William Davis, has arranged to lead a special mission of manufacturers and businessmen to visit Britain in May to fully explore the range of new opportunities for increasing exports and investments from Ontario to the British market.

To serve the special needs of communities in northern Ontario, amendments will be introduced to the Airports Act, designed to improve existing aviation facilities in that part of our province. My government will propose to contribute up to 80 per cent of total construction costs for these new airport facilities.

In addition, my government will continue to assume full responsibility for the construction and operation of airport facilities servicing unincorporated northern settlements, including plans for three new airstrips at Indian settlements at Round Lake, Fort Hope and Pikangikum, and a new runway for the airport at Moosonee.

My government is also proceeding with plans for the development of a new intermediate-capacity transit system to help meet the transportation needs of our larger cities, and is evaluating proposals from two manufacturers of intermediate-capacity systems. One of these systems is to be installed as a demonstration project at Exhibition Park in Toronto for operational testing purposes.

As hon. members are aware, the Camp Commission on the Legislature is presently studying the procedures and processes of our legislative activities and is giving consideration to certain reforms with respect to party finances and election expenditures. The reports from your commission will be presented for your consideration and resolution during this present session.

My government will ask you to approve the appointment of an independent commission to redistribute the electoral districts of the province, and redefine their boundaries.

My government will propose measures relating to conflict of interest with respect to its civil servants.

My government will provide increased assistance and encouragement to our amateur athletics through special community-wide athletic and recreational programmes, and will be giving full support to the first Ontario Summer Games which will be held in Oshawa this summer.

Following my government's study of the recommendations of the Symons Commission on French-Language Secondary Education, a bill will be put before you to create a Languages of Instruction Commission for Ontario's education system.

Plans for immediate implementation involve expanded services to the Franco-Ontarian community by the addition of more French-speaking staff in the central and regional offices of the Ministry of Education.

My government will provide increased assistance to the native people of our province through support for cultural development projects, communications services and the local management of resources. More teachers will be provided who are fluent in the languages of native peoples, and better teaching materials will be made available in those languages.

To help promote greater understanding of the rich cultural heritage of Ontario's native people, new courses will be designed for the Ontario curriculum, especially for elementary students.

To conserve and maintain Ontario's heritage and history, my government will propose legislation and make funds available for the restoration and maintenance of selected buildings and structures of historical significance. Local public libraries and existing museums will be given increased financial support.

The report of the Rohmer Commission on Book Publishing has been made available to the hon. members of this House. A number of recommendations have already been implemented by my government and proposals will be submitted to you in relation to the further implementation of the commission's final report.

My government will present legislation in respect to negotiations between the teaching profession and school boards.

My government has published a position paper inviting public reaction with regard to future policies and programmes for the mentally retarded, with particular reference to community as opposed to institutional living. My ministers are confident that the response of interested organizations and the general public will be helpful in determining future programmes. In the interim, present care systems for our retarded and handicapped will continue to receive direct government support, including additional capital funding for daycare nurseries for retarded children and experimental projects in new selected centres for the seriously retarded.

A third regional centre for the hearing handicapped will be opened in London this fall and will provide residential and daycare programmes for 250 deaf and hard-of-hearing students. This new facility will serve as a resource centre for southwestern Ontario so that more children may receive improved educational programmes in their own communities.

My government is appreciative of the co-operation of the Ontario Council of Health advisory group on medical care insurance for undertaking a comprehensive review of the health insurance plan. My ministers are determined to maintain the highest standards of medical and hospital care for all our people throughout Ontario and to deliver these services at a reasonable cost.

Advice has been sought from the Ontario Council of Health on the question of community health centres which when considered with the current activities of the special committee on the future delivery of health services will provide a strong blueprint for future policy in these important areas.

My government will proceed with proposals for a Health Disciplines Act which were tabled in the previous session and will introduce legislation during this session to establish a health disciplines board.

Further legislation will be presented to you to strengthen the position and clarify the role of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Ontario.

My government proposes to increase assistance to family service agencies, and, in addition, to establish a special counselling and welcoming centre for newcomers to our province, which will serve as a means to familiarize them with government services and benefits available to them.

My government will propose adjustments in the benefits provided under the Workmen's Compensation Act in order to maintain an appropriate level of support reflecting increases in the cost of living and recent adjustments to provincial wage rates.

My government will continue its substantial commitment in the field of housing and land development for low and moderate income wage earners. Housing programmes will be restructured during the year in light of new amendments to the National Housing Act and recommendations of the Ontario Task Force on Housing Policy. My government has recently initiated an integrated community housing programme for which Ontario provides development funds at preferred interest rates for the construction of private housing. In return, builders set aside up to 26 percent of this housing for families requiring assistance.

In the area of consumer and commercial relations, my government regards as essential a co-ordinated approach to the development of provincial and federal policies. The government of Canada has been informed of Ontario's concerns regarding the development of a national competition policy, with the hope that through such consultation more effective legislation may be achieved.

A Livestock Medicines Act will be introduced to control and regulate the use of drugs available for agricultural livestock purposes.

My government plans to introduce the Consumer Reporting Act and the Co-operative Corporations Act, both of which have important implications with regard to credit and loan practices throughout Ontario.

Ontario will press for a greater degree of co-operation and co-ordination with the federal government with respect to the administration of justice.

In one area of special concern, the introduction of intermittent sentencing, while essentially a commendable principle, has resulted in a conflict with the well-developed temporary absence programme of the provincial Ministry of Correctional Services. This has also placed certain difficulties before our judges, and it is most important that clarification of the application of these principles be achieved.

To increase the availability of trained personnel in the corrections field, arrangements have been made with selected community colleges for experimental correctional worker courses, using corrections staff to give advice on the curriculum and offering field training in correctional settings.

My government will also implement certain recommendations of the Botterell report to improve health care services for wards and inmates of correctional institutions. The group home programme for juveniles will be expanded.

My government proposes to improve the efficiency of the courts of law. Following studies by the Law Reform Commission and other agencies, plans will be introduced designed to provide a systems concept based on modern management methods. These measures will require a review of our tiered system of justice, the rules of procedure governing the operation of the courts, and new ways of dealing with certain infractions which are handled as criminal offences but which, as is widely agreed, should not be so treated.

Furthermore, my government will introduce proposals for a system of Crown legal clerks to prosecute minor offences under the direction of the Crown attorney and relieve the police constable of this task.

Amendments will be proposed to the Jurors Act to remove disqualification of people in many occupations and trades and allow greater citizen participation in the jury process. The grand jury, as an element in the criminal trial process, will be abolished, and its present function relating to the inspection of public institutions will be retained and performed by a public review committee.

My government will establish a training programme for justices of the peace who preside in provincial courts, and the Justices of the Peace Act will be amended to clarify their role in relation to that of provincial court judges.

My government will continue to seek the co-operation of the federal government to permit the province to introduce an off-track betting service.

My ministry holds the view that support for our law enforcement services must be strengthened. To this end, improved police training facilities, an upgraded communications and information network, and the comprehensive review of policing in Ontario, currently being conducted by a task force, are all essential elements of an overall response to growing concerns and expectations with regard to public protection.

To help combat drug-related crimes and the illegal use of drugs, the Ontario Provincial Police will establish a special drug law enforcement programme to be undertaken jointly with municipal forces and the RCMP. The programme will place emphasis on controlling the trafficking of hard drugs.

As a result of extensive investigations by our law enforcement agencies, and upon the advice of the appropriate ministry, my government will establish a royal commission to inquire into the possibility of criminal activities within the plastering, lathing and dry-walling sectors of the building industry in Metropolitan Toronto.

These and other matters will be placed before you for your consideration.

May Divine Providence guide you in your several tasks and in the discharge of your serious responsibilities.

God bless the Queen and Canada.

The Honourable the Lieutenant Governor was then pleased to retire from the chamber.

Prayers.

Mr. Speaker: I beg to inform the House that to prevent mistakes, I have obtained a copy of His Honour's speech which I will now read.

(Reading dispensed with.)

POWERS OF ATTORNEY ACT

Hon. Mr. Bales moves first reading of bill intituled, the Powers of Attorney Act, 1973.

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

Hon. Mr. Davis moves that the speech of the Honourable the Lieutenant Governor to this House be taken into consideration on Thursday next.

Motion agreed to.

Mr. R. F. Nixon (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, just before you put the motion to adjourn, I would like to ask the Premier if the omission of any reference to the elevator strike in His Honour's remarks is an indication of the Premier's change in policy on compulsory arbitration?

Hon. W. G. Davis (Premier): Mr. Speaker, to reply very briefly, a bill will be introduced tomorrow afternoon providing for compulsory arbitration by way of settlement of that particular strike.

Mr. I. Deans (Wentworth): Mr. Speaker, recognizing the unusual conditions which may well prevail, if the Premier intends to proceed or hopes to proceed tomorrow through all three readings, would it be possible for draft legislation to be made available to the opposition members in order that we can study it?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I'll see if we can have a draft bill available for both the Leader of the Opposition and the acting leader of the New Democratic Party so they will have an opportunity to assess it. It is our intention to introduce it tomorrow afternoon and move it through as rapidly as possible.

Hon. Mr. Davis moves the adjournment of the House.

Motion agreed to.

The House adjourned at 3:45 o'clock, p.m.

---

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 21, 1973

The House met at 2 o'clock, p.m.

Prayers.

Mr. Speaker: I beg to inform the House that a vacancy has occurred in the membership of the assembly since the last session by reason of the resignation of Charles Steel MacNaughton as member for the electoral district of Huron.

Mr. V. M. Singer (Downsview): That has since been remedied. Very appropriately!

An hon. member: Are there any other resignations?

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Statements by the ministry.

GREAT LAKES FLOOD DAMAGE

Hon. A. B. R. Lawrence (Provincial Secretary for Resources Development): Mr. Speaker, the damage caused by the extraordinarily high levels of the waters of the Great Lakes, particularly last weekend, is a matter of considerable concern to the government of the Province of Ontario.

I should like to advise the hon. members of the steps which have been and will be taken to alleviate the damage and hardship caused. Both during and since the weekend, the extent of the damage has been assessed by the ministries involved and we now have a reasonably complete picture as to the extent of the damage.

I do not wish to minimize the hardship which the people involved have and are undergoing. The cleanup task will not be easy or without cost. Moreover, the likelihood of a recurrence of the damage is far from remote. We are then faced with both a short- and a long-term problem. The first involves providing assistance now to the people affected. The second involves deciding how a similar situation can be avoided in the future.

Last fall, when similar damage occurred, special funds were made available to the Ministry of Natural Resources to restore and protect diking and roadways on Pelee Island from flooding. At approximately the same time the Ministry of Agriculture and Food, in co-operation with the federal government, provided over $4 million for improving dikes and works, under the ARDA programme, to protect agricultural farm lands from flooding.

Approximately three weeks ago I, along with the Minister of Agriculture and Food (Mr. Stewart), and the Minister of the Environment (Mr. Auld), and our senior officials, met with the Hon. Jack Davis, federal Minister of the Environment, to discuss ways and means to combat damage along the shorelines of the Great Lakes. The federal government at that meeting intimated that it was prepared to assist in three respects.

First, with regard to compensation for damage sustained, the federal government would be prepared to consider participating with Ontario based on a provincial population formula similar to that which has previously been applied in other circumstances. Under that formula the federal government would give no assistance until this province had made a commitment to pay the first $8 million of compensation. Thereafter a sliding scale of federal participation would apply, with the federal government paying one-half of the cost of compensation by the time the amount paid out reached $40 million. Unfortunately, if and when any assistance were to become available under the federal formula it would be highly restricted. It would not, for example, include any compensation for damage to recreational lands or for summer cottages, and with minor exceptions would generally exclude damage to commercial and industrial enterprises.

Mr. Speaker, the logic of the federal government's formula based on population is highly questionable, as damage along the shorelines has no direct relationship to the population of this province.

In spite of this lack of clear and unrestricted assistance from the federal government, the government of Ontario will provide an immediate emergency programme on an 80-20 per cent cost-sharing basis, with those affected municipalities which wish to participate, for dike repair, pumping off of flood waters, temporary diking and road repair.

In addition, the province is prepared to participate with local disaster committees on a matching dollar-for-dollar basis for compensation paid with regard to permanent residences and farm buildings not of the recreational type. This programme would be similar to those previously effected when natural disasters occurred in this province. It is hoped that federal government participation will be forthcoming for this programme so that the compensation fund would be supported one-third from local resources, one-third from the province and one-third from the federal government. We shall press the federal government for such assistance.

This describes the immediate short-term forms of assistance available. The government is prepared to allot funds for the support of this programme and it is establishing a working group, headed by a representative from the Ministry of Natural Resources and including officials from the Ministry of Agriculture and Food, the Ministry of the Solicitor General—Emergency Measures Organization—the Ministry of Transportation and Communications, the Ministry of the Environment and the Ministry of Treasury, Economics and Intergovernmental Affairs.

This task force will be empowered to allocate funds immediately and to draw on the physical and technical resources in the appropriate ministries and agencies—for example, for equipment, supplies and engineering support. Affected municipalities should contact the municipal subsidies branch of the Ministry of Treasury, Economics and Intergovernmental Affairs for detailed information as to how to receive financial assistance. The Ministry of Natural Resources should be contacted for all other forms of assistance.

As for the longer term programme of prevention, our recent discussions with the federal government resulted in an indication from it that over the next 20 or 30 years the federal government would be prepared to participate on a 50-50 basis with the province for the construction of a permanent and comprehensive system of shore protection on the Great Lakes.

No detailed planning or assessment has been made, but the required engineering would presumably require at least a year to prepare. The cost of the whole project could run from perhaps $100 million to $200 million over that period of 20 or 30 years.

I should like to make clear to the hon. members that before such a programme is embarked upon some hard decisions will have to be made. While no one would wish to see property destroyed by high water, the public interest must be considered to the extent that the community as a whole has a responsibility to protect property which was originally located in areas likely to be flooded or washed away by high waves. These are not easy questions to answer. Nonetheless, a long-term solution is desirable and this avenue will be pursued further with the federal government.

Lastly, it has been indicated to us that the federal government would be prepared to continue to support expenditures of funds through ARDA specifically for the protection of agricultural lands, again on a 50-50 cost-sharing basis.

Mr. Speaker, these then are the initiatives we as a government have been pursuing. Immediate help is available and long-term preventive measures are being explored.

Mr. J. E. Bullbrook (Sarnia): That is not enough.

Mr. Speaker: Statements by the ministry.

Mr. E. W. Martel (Sudbury East): They are fighting for the floor over there.

An hon. member: Much too late!

REMOVAL OF SAND FROM DUNES IN PRINCE EDWARD COUNTY

Hon. L. Bernier (Minister of Natural Resources): Mr. Speaker, I would like to make a statement concerning a matter involving the Lake Ontario Cement Co. and the disposition of 16.2 acres of land under lease to that company.

As all members are aware, this matter has been of considerable concern to my ministry and to the government of Ontario for some time.

Mr. I. Deans (Wentworth): For a long, long time!

Mr. J. A. Renwick (Riverdale): One would never know it.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Last spring I appointed Dr. Walter Tovell, then the associate director of the Royal Ontario Museum and a distinguished conservationist and a geologist in this province, to inquire into and to report to the government on various matters concerning the area under lease to the company.

Dr. Tovell was asked in particular, to study the geology of the area adjacent to Sandbanks Provincial Park as related to the physical and aesthetic effects on the environment should the Lake Ontario Cement Co. be permitted to continue its operations on the site now being worked. As I indicated at that time, Mr. Speaker, Dr. Tovell's report was to be used by the government and by the company as a basis for discussion leading to a settlement of outstanding points at issue.

Since the receipt of the report, numerous meetings have been held between representatives of the Lake Ontario Cement Co., my legal advisers and officials and myself. Also during this time two actions were brought against both the company and the government by environmental groups. Until these issues were resolved by the courts, negotiations between the company and the government were suspended and it was not possible for me to make any announcement on the progress of this matter.

As hon. members will recall, I made a commitment during the last session of the Legislature that, when these matters had been resolved and periods for appeal had expired, I would announce the government's decision as to how best to resolve this matter. I am pleased to inform the members of the House that no sand has been extracted from the site since last summer and that there has been no reduction in the employment opportunities available at the company's Picton operations.

Mr. R. F. Nixon (Leader of the Opposition): Is there any sand left?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: I am also pleased to say that the company has co-operated fully with the government in agreeing to suspend the extraction of sand. Moreover, both the government and the company have agreed that the government shall acquire the company's interest in the lease of the land in question. Accordingly, it has been decided that the most equitable method of proceeding would be for the Crown to expropriate the lease, pending the hearing of which, efforts to negotiate a settlement will continue. Steps to carry out expropriation have been taken.

It is my hope that this matter will be resolved in the very near future—

Mr. J. E. Stokes (Thunder Bay): We are buying back what we already own.

Hon. Mr. Bernier:—and that this area can become an integral part of Sandbanks Provincial Park for use this summer.

CENTRAL REGISTRY SYSTEM

Hon. J. T. Clement (Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations): Mr. Speaker, I'd like to take this opportunity to make a brief statement to the House as an introduction to two bills that will receive first reading today.

Mr. Speaker, in 1967 the interim report of the select committee on company law recommended the establishment of a central registry for corporate and business names, so that searches from across the province could be carried out with substantially greater despatch. As a result, this government proposed and the House passed the Corporations Information Act, which was proclaimed into force Jan. 1, 1972.

Under section 2 of that Act, Mr. Speaker, any corporation carrying on business in Ontario in a name other than its proper corporate name must register that name with the Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations.

The intent of the two bills which will be introduced today is to place partnerships, limited partnerships and sole proprietorships on a footing similar to that of corporations.

The records system, as it exists under present legislation, is in the process of centralization and the proposed legislation is necessary if we are to continue that process. It is this government's intention that, with the passage of these two bills, Ontario will move forward toward a fully integrated business names registry system.

The Partnerships Registration Act was first enacted in 1869. It appeared in the Revised Statutes of Ontario, 1877, and has not been substantially amended since that date. The Limited Partnerships Act first appeared in 1877, and it too has remained substantially unchanged since that time. In both cases, the legislation had as its focal point the small county town; and this system simply does not meet the needs of present-day business. In 1971, for example, some 30,000 declarations or certificates were filed in this province under these Acts. More than half the total were made at the registry division for the City of Toronto. It was recognized that the system of filing was no longer workable.

In 1968 an Act to amend the Partnerships Registration Act provided for the establishment of a central registry system. These sections, never proclaimed in force, permitted the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council, notwithstanding anything contained in the Act, to make regulations under the Act to bring a central registry system into operation. To accomplish the goals, however, the changes needed were of such a nature that amendment of the Act and not merely regulation was required.

The proposed legislation provides that the declarations and certificates filed under the Act would expire five years after the date of filing, unless previously renewed. This will clear the backlog of business names which have been abandoned and are no longer in use. Best estimates would indicate that 90 to 95 per cent of present filings would not be renewed.

In the registry office for the city of Toronto, an estimated 204,000 certificates and declarations of partnership are on file. Experience of other provinces, particularly Manitoba, which recently modernized its statutes in this area, indicates that no more than 10 per cent are active. The remainder ceased carrying on business in their partnership names and have failed to register a declaration of dissolution.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to reiterate that under the proposed legislation the system for filing partnerships, limited partnerships and sole proprietorships will be put on a similar footing to that which already exists for assumed names by corporations.

The changes in procedure made possible by these amendments should enable the operation of a central registry by existing staff in the ministry, even though these documents will, for the time being, be accepted by all registry offices throughout the province. A position of registrar of partnerships will be created utilizing the present complement of the companies division in my ministry.

The regulations to be made under the legislation will increase the filing fees from $3 to $10 for each registration to cover the costs of an improved service and possible acquisition of more up-to-date equipment in the future.

In summary, Mr. Speaker, the intent of the two bills will be to simplify registration, clean up the backlog of inactive files and ensure that the public has a quick and ready source of information on business operations being carried on in the province.

ACCIDENT ON HIGHWAY 400

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order before you leave statements, perhaps the Minister of Transportation and Communications would make a statement on the accident on Highway 400 on Sunday night, similar to the one that he apparently did make public expressing his concern about certain matters on licensing procedures and about the type of investigation he has launched into this matter.

Hon. G. R. Carton (Minister of Transportation and Communications): I have no objection to making a statement on that, Mr. Speaker. As a matter of fact, this has been one of the problems uppermost in my mind since Sunday night.

First of all, there was a press release by the member for Yorkview (Mr. Young) that I was expecting to answer today, and therefore of course I have certain concerns that he has in mind that I would like to relate.

Secondly, I do not have a police report as yet. One has not come to my ministry. We had one of our own individuals at the scene of the accident on Sunday and Monday, but there are several matters that I would like to go into in detail.

Thirdly, with respect to illegal leasing, so called, which was one of the matters, I believe, raised by the member for Yorkview; as I pointed out, illegal leasing is a term used in connection with PCV licensing. Whether or not a person is—and I state this, I do not know as yet whether it was, in fact, an illegal lease or not—but whether it was an illegal lease or not has no bearing on safety.

In other words, you could have an illegal lease in effect and have the safest operator and the safest truck meeting all the conditions possible. Illegal leasing relates to the PCV licensing and does not relate to safety. Safety is covered by the Highway Traffic Act, and of course the police enforce that.

With respect to whether or not the truck should have been on the highway on Sunday, that comes under the Lord's Day Act. It is a federal statute and is the responsibility of the Ontario Provincial Police. So, I would suggest that I would defer to my colleague with respect to any statement insofar as that particular aspect is concerned.

One other thing that I would like to point out, Mr. Speaker, with respect to the accident itself; first of all it is my understanding—and I qualify it by simply stating that these are the remarks that have been related to me and from the witnesses that have been interviewed—as I understand it, the truck itself had stopped and that in fact the operator of the truck and his family were able to get out of the truck prior to it being hit by the bus. So, insofar as to whether it was a pup trailer or a tractor trailer or whatever, the operator had, in fact, brought it to a complete stop. It is my understanding that it did not hit any of the vehicles in front of it. It was while the truck was stopped that it was hit from the rear by the bus and this caused the load to overturn.

So, I think there is a great deal of speculation about this particular accident, Mr. Speaker, and until I get the police report, obviously, I am not able to go into it in too great detail.

I point out that the truck was stopped; so whether it was a tractor trailer, or whether in fact it had been any other kind of load, or even a car for that matter—because there were some 30 cars, as I understand it, that had been stopped after there had been a slight mishap ahead, which involved two cars; then there was a coming to a stop of approximately 30 cars; in other words they all stopped safely; then the truck stopped and then the bus came along later—so whatever may have come along later—whether it was the tractor trailer, another car for that matter, or a pickup truck, or whatever—it's possible there would have been an accident in any event.

I point that out, that I am not aware of the facts that will be stated in the police report, but one peripheral matter relates to pup trailers. Since the accident on Dec. 20 on the Don Valley Parkway—and subsequently another one in February and another one in March involving pup trailers—gasoline trucks I might add—I've had this matter investigated by my ministry officials, and particularly with respect to the hitch. As a result, we are bringing in new regulations with respect to the hitch. But I would again point out I have studied those accident reports and in none of the three cases was the primary hitch the cause of the accident. In other words, it had not become loose because of that particular aspect.

Mr. Speaker, I would again sum up that I do not have the accident report. I think perhaps that with the press reports there has been a lot of speculation as to what may have caused the accident. I am awaiting the police report, and had intended to wait before I made a statement on this matter.

Mr. E. Sargent (Grey-Bruce): I have a supplementary.

Mr. Speaker: This was a statement by the ministry. Questions may be brought up under the oral question period.

Any further statements by the ministry?

Oral questions.

The hon. Leader of the Opposition,

INQUIRY INTO CRIME IN CONSTRUCTION INDUSTRY

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the Premier if he is prepared to amend the terms of reference to the royal commission he announced yesterday in the Speech from the Throne so that the investigation into criminal elements in certain labour unions will not be restricted to Metropolitan Toronto, but in fact be expanded across the province?

Hon. W. G. Davis (Premier): Mr. Speaker, the specific terms of reference are being developed at this moment. When they are made public—announced here to the House—I think that would be the appropriate occasion, perhaps, to discuss what those terms of reference contain.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: A supplementary: Since the matter was specifically referred to in the speech read by His Honour as being restricted to Metropolitan Toronto, would the Premier undertake to give consideration to this suggestion, in that surely this would unnecessarily hamstring the responsibilities that any royal commissioner might have in investigating the infiltration of certain labour unions by criminal elements?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, of course we will consider many things. The observations in the Speech from the Throne were relatively general in character, and yet at the same time—

Mr. T. P. Reid (Rainy River): Vague is the word the Premier is groping for.

Hon. Mr. Davis: —I think it is also proper to observe that we are anxious for—that is not the correct expression—I think it is also relevant to observe that we are anxious for this royal commission to achieve some specific objectives. We are trying to balance the desirability of not inhibiting the commission while at the same time keeping in mind the objectives, to see if we can't get something or the commission can't get something specific from its deliberations.

Mr. Sargent: Why can't the government widen the area?

Mr. Deans: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker: Will the Premier bring the terms of reference before the House for debate prior to their becoming official?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, it is not customary to bring the terms of reference here for debate. They will be announced here, and of course the hon. member will have an opportunity to make what observations he may deem fit. I think really the appropriate time to do this would be at the time the announcement is made about the terms of reference and the personnel responsible. Certainly he will have an opportunity, either in the throne debate or perhaps in the question period, at some time, to make whatever observations he might like.

Mr. D. C. MacDonald (York South): That is a meaningless gesture.

Mr. Deans: Doesn't it make sense to the Premier that, in fact, the terms of reference ought to be discussed by this Legislature since the royal commission will be answering at some point to the Legislature?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I am always anxious to have the views of the hon. members opposite but I think it is proper for the government to determine the terms of reference. If the members opposite have some thoughts that perhaps might be incorporated in any amendments, I'm never averse to considering this. I can't give the member an undertaking that it would become a subject of debate on the floor of the House as to the specific terms of reference.

Mr. Speaker: Has the hon. member for Ottawa East a supplementary?

Mr. A. J. Roy (Ottawa East): Mr. Speaker, I would like to address a supplementary either to the Premier or to the Attorney General (Mr. Bales).

In light of the fact that the Throne Speech specifically mentioned that extensive investigations have taken place, and the Throne Speech specifically mentioned as well the Metropolitan Toronto area, I would like to ask the Premier why this royal commission would not be extended more specifically to the Ottawa area where there is evidence available that there have been problems and that Toronto firms have moved into that area?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, the member has become more specific than the Leader of the Opposition in identifying Ottawa as a specific area. I would think that the answer I gave to the Leader of the Opposition would be just a duplication of what I would say to the hon. member. I think until the terms of reference are announced to the members of the House we are discussing something that is relatively academic.

Mr. Roy: A further supplementary—

Mr. Renwick: By way of supplementary—

Mr. R. F. Nixon: The Lieutenant Governor's words are academic. The Premier put them in his mouth—

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for High Park was attempting to ask a supplementary.

Mr. M. Shulman (High Park): Inasmuch as the speech yesterday specifically singled out one small branch of the construction industry and inasmuch as most of the evidence of crime involves other parts of the construction industry, would the premier make the terms of reference sufficiently wide so that all crime in the construction industry, whether it be in this area or in all of Ontario, be covered?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I repeat what I said earlier. It is the desire of the government not to inhibit the responsibilities of the royal commissioner—

Interjection by an hon. member.

Hon. Mr. Davis: —but at the same time to make it clear that we are anxious for the commission to come in, hopefully, with something specific as it relates to this general problem. I would say to the member for High Park that when these terms of reference are made public would be the occasion for him to offer his constructive suggestions.

Mr. Speaker: One more supplementary—the hon. member for Grey-Bruce.

Mr. Sargent: A question of the Premier, Mr. Speaker: In view of the alleged criminal offences in the Fidinam affair and the subsequent whitewash of the whole deal, why can't the Premier let himself off the hook and extend the terms of reference to criminal offences in Queen's Park?

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order! The question is certainly not proper. Does the hon.—

Mr. Sargent: Why doesn't he answer?

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Sargent: I'd like an answer, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: Order! Does the hon. Leader of the Opposition have further questions?

Mr. Roy: On a point of order!

Mr. Speaker: Yes?

Mr. Roy: I would like, under standing order 27(g), to advise the House—advise you, Mr. Speaker—that we are not satisfied with the response of the Prime Minister and that we will be raising this matter at the adjournment of the House. I shall be giving you written notice accordingly.

Mr. Speaker: I'll be glad to consider the written notice.

MEDICAL CARE COSTS

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, I have a further question of the Premier. Can he recall as a member of the policy and priorities board of cabinet, giving approval to a programme brought before the board by the Minister of Health (Mr. Potter) which would, in fact, apply a package of restraint on the payments associated with our OHIP programme and which was indicated would save us $50 million during the last fiscal year?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, there were a number of discussions; before the policy and priorities board, before cabinet, before the policy field committee; related to the whole question of the delivery of health services, related to the financing and the question of seeing if there are some constraints that could be applied.

The matter is still the subject of discussion within the ministry, within cabinet—the policy and priorities board. When there are policy statements to be made in respect of this, they will be made here in the House.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: A supplementary: Does the Premier then deny that committee of cabinet gave specific approval to a programme of constraint or restraint which was designed to accomplish such savings, and that this policy, which there is every indication was approved by cabinet, was not implemented by the Minister of Health?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, of course the discussions within the policy and priorities board are confidential, as they are within cabinet. If there are to be announcements of government policy, they will be made here in the Legislature.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: A supplementary: Is the Premier aware that a senior official of the Ministry of Health has made public papers indicating that such cabinet approval was established, and that the cabinet policy was not carried out by the Minister of Health, and that there are therefore responsible people in this province who feel that he is no longer fit to continue with those responsibilities?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, in that I observe the Leader of the Opposition in one of his more enlightened moments made that observation himself with respect to the Minister of Health, I would like to take this opportunity, in answer to his question, to say that I believe the present Minister of Health is well qualified to discharge his responsibilities.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: A supplementary, Mr. Speaker: While the Premier is taking that opportunity to make that observation, would he not take the same opportunity to answer the question? And if he is not prepared to answer the question, then why would he not refer the matter to the standing committee on human resources so that the Minister of Health, Dr. Kinloch, whose name has appeared publicly recently, the OMA and others directly concerned with this matter can testify publicly before a representative committee of the Legislature?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I think the Leader of the Opposition and the members opposite, if they wish to pursue this matter, will have ample opportunity during discussion of the estimates of the Ministry of Health with the minister.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Not if the government is going to stonewall it.

Hon. Mr. Davis: There is no question that this can be done.

Mr. Singer: All the minister wants to talk about is hospitals in Huron county.

Mr. Speaker: Does the hon. Leader of the Opposition have further questions?

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: No.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Wentworth.

GREAT LAKES FLOOD DAMAGE

Mr. Deans: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have a question of the Provincial Secretary for Resources Development.

Does the provincial secretary believe that the municipalities involved in the flood damage at this point can afford to pay 20 per cent of the cost of the emergency programme that he is outlining?

Hon. Mr. Lawrence: Yes, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Deans: Can the minister explain what appears to be a conflict in his statement? On the one hand he claims that the municipalities will be carrying 20 per cent of the cost and the province 80 per cent, while on the other hand he indicates that if the federal government involves itself it will be a one-third, one-third, one-third sharing, with the municipalities carrying one-third of the cost.

Hon. Mr. Lawrence: The distinction there, Mr. Speaker, is that the 80-20 relates to work to be done immediately in relation to diking, roads and pumping. That is not a question of compensation to private individuals.

The question of compensation to private individuals for damage done to their homes has been separated from that formula. In that case the proportions, I hope and expect, will be one dollar, one dollar and one dollar from the local committee. We had this, for instance, in Sudbury a few years ago, where the local resources provided a dollar, we provided a dollar, and the federal government's disaster fund provided a dollar.

Mr. Deans: A final supplementary question: Why has the ministry waited so long to come up with a programme that at this point meets emergency conditions which have caused considerable discomfort and disaster throughout the province, rather than develop a programme over the last year and a half when the minister was aware of the impending dangers?

Hon. Mr. Lawrence: I would think, Mr. Speaker, that an overall series of engineering works that would have accomplished real protection would have been beyond the capacity of this province during the last six months, year or 18 months. These disasters are not foreseen. As I mentioned in my remarks, it is possible that they could come again.

Mr. Deans: They were foreseen.

Mr. Bullbrook: The minister knows they were foreseen. I wrote telling him—

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Windsor West.

Mr. Bullbrook: A supplementary question.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Windsor West was up on a supplementary.

Mr. E. J. Bounsall (Windsor West): A supplementary, Mr. Speaker: Why won't the minister consider extending the announced assistance to cottage owners, many of whom are retirees and have invested their entire life savings in those cottages? Many of those cottages are now wiped out, and in Essex county occupancy occurs for fully eight months of the year.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I think the question is hardly supplementary to the original question which had to do with the percentage of grants.

The hon. member for Sarnia.

Mr. Bullbrook: A supplementary question to the hon. provincial secretary, if I may:

Would he consider some amendment in his policy in connection with the restrictive nature of the words "private residences," in light of the information that I now give him, that many residences in my riding are themselves not directly damaged, but find themselves eight feet from a huge precipice, an imminent danger?

Mr. Speaker: I take it this was not intended as a supplementary; it was a new question.

Mr. Bullbrook: It was—certainly it was a supplementary. The policy was restricted to the words "private residences," and I am interested that the minister's policy be established as far as their total property is concerned.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member's question is no more a proper supplementary than that the hon. member for Windsor West placed. Neither one of them was supplementary to the original question. I would permit additional new questions on that topic, but not as supplementary to the original which had to do with grants only.

Mr. Bullbrook: Well, I am talking about—

Mr. Speaker: There was a further supplementary on grants.

Mr. Bullbrook: On a point of order—and may I suggest that I don't want to begin the session having undue difficulty with the Speaker, or he with me—but in the statement made by the provincial secretary he talked about a grant structure of one-third, one-third, one-third, as far as damage to private residences was concerned. I am asking if he would consider an amendment to that policy to include the total property rather than just the residence.

Mr. Speaker: The original question from the hon. member for Wentworth asked whether the minister felt that the municipalities could handle the 20 per cent; it was an 80-20 per cent split. He carried that as a further supplementary, asking about the one-third, one-third, one-third.

Now the next question asked by the hon. member for Windsor West had to do with the programme announcements and the indication of what might happen or might not, but it was not supplementary to the original question. A new question could be asked, and I point out to the hon. member for Sarnia that while I ruled the hon. member for Windsor West out of order on a supplementary, the hon. member for Sarnia's question is equally out of order as a supplementary.

Mr. Bullbrook: I bow to your ruling.

Mr. Speaker: I will go back to the hon. member for Windsor West. If he wishes to ask a new question on that topic, he may do so.

Mr. Singer: He can't, it's not his turn.

Mr. Reid: He's forgotten the question.

Mr. Deans: Mr. Speaker, I want to ask another question of the same minister.

Mr. D. W. Ewen (Wentworth North): Give him a chance.

Mr. Deans: Is the minister trying to tell the House, by his statement, that the damage which we now see around this province was unpredictable?

Hon. Mr. Lawrence: Mr. Speaker, we have been aware of the damage occurring—

Mr. J. F. Foulds (Port Arthur): Since last fall.

Interjections by hon. members.

An hon. member: Every 10 years.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Lawrence: The potential of damage has been obvious with the rise in the waters. I don't think the degree of the damage caused by that particular storm was contemplated.

I know that in our discussions with the federal experts and with the people in our own departments in Toronto, they did speculate that for as long as the water was high, there would always be the risk of an extraordinary weather system hitting the province and causing damage, but no one could expect it as such, nor expect the eventual degree of damage.

Mr. Deans: Isn't the minister aware of the ongoing concern that has been expressed, at least by those residents of Lake Ontario from Burlington down to the Niagara Peninsula, about the high water levels and the loss of property and the almost immediate problem of being closer every single day to the water's edge? And isn't he aware that there have been representations made to his departments asking for assistance in erecting some kind of diking arrangement to help offset the emergency conditions that we had last weekend and the weekend before?

Hon. Mr. Lawrence: Mr. Speaker, the Province of Ontario has never had the capacity, financial or physical, to protect the shores of this province from the erosion involved in the high water levels of 1972 and 1973. Nor have we, as a province, felt that the taxpayers generally should be placed in the position of financially supporting those whose shorelines are being eroded.

Insofar as temporary assistance is concerned—the supply of sandbags and that kind of thing—the best engineering advice we can get is that the enormity of the problem would be virtually unaffected by the kind of Band-Aid assistance that we would be capable of giving.

Mr. Deans: A final supplementary question: What is the point of waiting until after the disaster occurs and then expending considerably more money trying to bring people back to normalcy when we could take a positive approach and have an overall programme for the preservation of the shorelines of the Province of Ontario?

Mr. F. Young (Yorkview): It's like locking the door after the horse has bolted!

Mr. R. Haggerty (Welland South): Move their cottages back and hold on!

Hon. Mr. Lawrence: Well, Mr. Speaker, the answer again is that I have to rely on the advice of both federal and provincial engineers, and their statements to me have been that to do anything effective in the way of preventive measures will require, as my statement mentioned—

Mr. Stokes: To wait until it happens!

Hon. Mr. Lawrence:—months of engineering; and ironically it will require the waters themselves to recede before anything significant in the way of erosion protection obstacles can be developed.

Mr. J. R. Breithaupt (Kitchener): We're not doing any better than King Canute!

Mr. Speaker: Has the hon. member for Wentworth finished with his supplementaries on that point?

Mr. Deans: Yes.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Downsview.

Mr. Singer: I have a new question—

An hon. member: Supplementary.

Mr. Speaker: Brand new or on this same topic?

Mr. Singer: A different topic and a different minister.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Sandwich-Riverside.

Mr. F. A. Burr (Sandwich-Riverside): Mr. Speaker, a supplementary question: I wonder whether the minister would consider having engineers visit as soon as possible at least the most badly damaged communities to discover what protective measures have been effective and what measures have not been effective in protecting property both against the simple high lake levels and against the violent wave action.

Hon. Mr. Lawrence: Yes, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Bullbrook: By way of supplementary, in view of the fact that many of my constituents presently find themselves landlocked because roads have fallen into the lake, can I assume that very shortly somebody from the minister's secretariat or from the Ministry of Natural Resources will be in touch with my municipal officials in connection with these abject difficulties?

Hon. Mr. Lawrence: Yes, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: Does the hon. member for Wentworth have further questions?

PENSIONERS' RENTS

Mr. Deans: One further question, Mr. Speaker, of the Minister of Community and Social Services:

What steps is the minister taking to ensure that pensioners getting an increase in their old age pension on April 1 will not be subjected to unjustified rent increases in the Province of Ontario in regard to apartments, private homes and rooms, in which live many of them who are married, and in regard to homes for the aged and nursing homes?

An hon. member: He thinks that's funny!

Hon. G. A. Kerr (Provincial Secretary for Justice): How can we regulate private homes?

Hon. R. Brunelle (Minister of Community and Social Services): Well Mr. Speaker, this matter relates to government policy. It relates to more than one ministry; it relates also to my colleague, the Minister of Revenue (Mr. Grossman). There will be a statement in the near future with reference to this matter.

Mr. Deans: Are there any steps being taken, since April 1 is only a matter of a week away, and will these people be informed as to what steps will be taken prior to April 1?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: They will be informed in the near future, Mr. Speaker. For instance, those who are in homes for the aged only receive their cheques at the end of the month; we will try to inform the administrators of the homes for the aged as soon as possible.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Windsor-Walkerville has a supplementary.

Mr. B. Newman (Windsor-Walkerville): May I ask the minister if those living in accommodation and receiving rent supplement will be included in any statement that he will make?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Yes.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Grey-Bruce has a new question.

FIDINAM (ONTARIO) LTD.

Mr. Sargent: Mr. Speaker, a question of the Premier: This Fidinam affair will not go away—

Mr. MacDonald: Not as long as the member is around!

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Sargent: It's a two-part question to the Premier—

Mr. MacDonald: He won't go away.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order, order!

An hon. member: Let's try them. Who's ready to resign there?

Mr. Sargent: In view of the fact that the Premier, in the raising of $5 million, was party to a criminal offence, an alleged criminal offence—

Mr. Speaker: Order, order! The statement is certainly an improper statement and should be withdrawn.

Mr. Sargent: All right. We'll take that back then. But if this were true under US law, the Premier would be impeached.

May I ask what he would do if we requested him to have a royal commission and he was subpoenaed to furnish a list of where his party got its money from in relation to government contracts. If the leader of this party were to suggest that if the Premier did not furnish that list he would lead the official opposition out of the House, what would the Premier do? Secondly—

Mr. Speaker: It's hypothetical and out of order!

Hon. Mr. Kerr: Has the member checked with his leader?

Mr. Sargent: As recently as three weeks ago, I am informed, Mr. Kelly put the bite for $50,000 on a firm that had a contract with the government; it came to the Liberal Party because of this disclosure business the Premier is talking of bringing up.

The Premier promised at the last sitting of the House to furnish me with the name of the firm that did all the legal work in this multi-million-dollar deal, and he promised to furnish me with the name of who got the finder's fee—but we've heard nothing about this yet. I'd like an answer to these questions, sir.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I'll certainly try to get the name of the legal firm. I think the answers to the balance of the question really are self-evident, but I certainly will try to get the name of the legal firm for the hon. member.

Mr. Sargent: I hope we can get to discuss this—

Mr. Roy: Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary to this: In view of the fact that the Throne Speech mentioned that the Commission on the Legislature is studying the question of election expenditures and that the government wants to bring this in this session, should the Premier not advise his people to curtail their fund-raising activities and hence avoid the law that he intends to bring in?

Mr. S. B. Handleman (Carleton): Is the member running for something?

Mr. Ewen: Ask him why he didn't make the front row.

Hon. Mr. Davis: I don't intend getting into debate on fund-raising activities. I would only make this observation: We've had two or three fund-raising activities, including a fund-raising dinner in the riding of the hon. member for Grey-Bruce. I notice the Prime Minister of Canada had a fund-raising dinner the other evening at the Royal York. I anticipate even that his own party at the provincial level has been raising funds; certainly at the federal level they have been raising funds.

Mr. Sargent: That's only window dressing!

Hon. Mr. Davis: And I would only say, Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Sargent: It's only window dressing!

Hon. Mr. Davis: Well, I would say that the hon. member for Grey-Bruce probably knows whereof he speaks because he perhaps has some knowledge that I don't have relating to these matters.

An hon. member: A hell of a lot more!

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Davis: I would only restate what was said in the Throne Speech, Mr. Speaker: It is the intent of the government, when we receive the recommendations of the Camp commission related to election reform, that we will introduce legislation related to it.

Mr. Sargent: From here on the government is going to be good, is it?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Well, the member should know!

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for York-view.

ACCIDENT ON HIGHWAY 400

Mr. Young: Mr. Speaker, a question of the Minister of Transportation and Communications:

Do I understand from his statement this afternoon that the lumber truck involved in the accident on Highway 400 was operating without a PCV licence and, therefore, apart from the Lord's Day Act, was in breach of the law by being on Highway 400 on Sunday afternoon?

Hon. Mr. Carton: Mr. Speaker, again I preface my remarks by stating that my information is not derived from the police report. I think in all fairness we should wait until that police report gets on my desk. All I can do is inform this House, as I did today, of what had come to my personal knowledge through other sources. I think it's unfair to delve into the matter and deal with these particular problems because I might be doing someone an injustice.

Mr. Young: As a supplementary, Mr. Speaker, could I ask the minister when he plans to bring in legislation to plug this loophole and to deal with illegal licensing of vehicles in the province?

Hon. Mr. Carton: Yes, Mr. Speaker. First of all, again I point out that whether or not that truck was illegally leased has nothing whatsoever to do with an accident on the highway.

Mr. MacDonald: It was a good one. Don't spoil it with undue repetition.

Hon. Mr. Carton: Right! Now that the truck was on the road, again I defer to my colleague. Enforcement of this particular statute is not under my ministry. Insofar as illegal leasing is concerned, I am surprised and I think the hon. member is aware that, yes, I am moving to plug a loophole insofar as illegal leasing is concerned and I will be bringing forth legislation in this session.

Mr. MacDonald: How come that wasn't included in the Throne Speech?

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for York-Forest Hill; a supplementary.

Mr. P. G. Givens (York-Forest Hill): I would like to ask the minister whether it isn't a fact that Highway 400 has now become a serious highway hazard because the government has jammed six lanes into what was normally a four-lane right of way, and that by eliminating the median strip and the shoulders it has cut down the margin of safety on that highway to a serious extent and that will result in other accidents in the future?

An hon. member: A very good question.

Mr. Givens: Is that not so?

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Carton: Mr. Speaker, I will get the information insofar as statistics on accidents on Highway 400 are concerned. To my knowledge they are no greater or lesser than any of the other highways. I will get that information for him. It would be interesting to see what the statistics prove.

Quite candidly, it is the drivers who abuse our highways, Mr. Speaker, and I do not think there is any member in this Legislature who will deny that when you are driving on our highways under very difficult conditions you will see cars passing you as if they were driving on a sunny Sunday afternoon, not having any regard whatsoever to icy conditions, to fogging conditions, to other matters that the ordinary prudent driver does give precedence to. I think the drivers in many cases, Mr. Speaker, are the ones who are to blame.

Mr. Speaker: I think there have been sufficient supplementaries on this topic, particularly in view of the hon. minister's replies. The hon. member for Downsview is next.

STATUS OF OPC OFFICER

Mr. Singer: Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Solicitor General. Has the Solicitor General yet been able to gather his facts together so that he is now able to tell us about the mystery of Mr. Thurston's suspension from the intelligence branch of the Ontario Police Commission and about the mysterious disappearance of one Gary Rolph from that commission?

Hon. J. Yaremko (Solicitor General): Mr. Speaker, I shall be making a statement with respect to this matter on Friday morning.

Mr. Singer: On Friday?

Hon. Mr. Yaremko: Yes.

Mr. Speaker: The New Democratic party is next. The hon. member for Port Arthur.

Mr. F. Laughren (Nickel Belt): Nickel Belt!

Mr. Speaker: Nickel Belt. I am sorry.

SUDBURY HOUSING INVESTIGATION

Mr. Laughren: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. A question of the Minister of Consumer and Commercial Affairs: Why have no charges been laid or why has no hearing date been set considering the activities of Ross A. Shouldice in the Whitson Gardens subdivision in Chelmsford?

Hon. Mr. Clement: Mr. Speaker, with the greatest respect, charges have been laid as they relate to the Real Estate Business Brokers Act. I don't want to deal with the merits of it until it has been determined, but just so the member will know what has happened, the people who were charged under that Act with offences have appealed, as they have every right to do, and they advised my ministry in early January that they intended to ask for an adjournment. The date was to be set in early February. They appeared before the tribunal and made their request for that adjournment. A solicitor from the Ministry of Consumer and Commercial Relations appeared and opposed that request. In spite of that opposition the date of the hearing was adjourned until, I believe, April 20.

Mr. Laughren: Mr. Speaker, with all due respect, I would ask the minister, is he not confusing the activities of Cambrian Realty versus Trasco and Silhouette who are active in Whitson Gardens? I believe he is mixing up these two firms.

Mr. Roy: Mixed up a bit?

Hon. Mr. Clement: Nothing new of course! I think I may well be confusing the two. I thought the question related to the development there of Cambrian—referred to as Cambrian and Shouldice—and I think there were two individuals who were charged. I am sorry, I misinterpreted the question.

Mr. Martel: Supplementary question, Mr. Speaker: Why is it that although some 18 months ago I requested that Shouldice be investigated, in fact despite that request and all that was going on, the Ontario Housing Corp. gave Mr. Ross A. Shouldice two contracts which are now before a hearing in Blind River?

Mr. B. Gilbertson (Algoma): Question?

An hon. member: He asked the wrong minister.

Mr. Martel: How is it that when a company lawyer is under investigation another department is giving it contracts?

Hon. Mr. Clement: I am sorry, Mr. Speaker, I can't answer that because I have no knowledge of it.

Mr. Martel: Well, maybe the minister responsible for housing could answer that question?

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order please! I must confess that I was unable to hear the question by the hon. member for Sudbury East.

Mr. Martel: Why is it—

Mr. Reid: He answered it.

Mr. Speaker: Did the hon. minister hear the question?

Mr. Martel: Why is it that when a company is being—

Mr. Speaker: Order please! The hon. minister has answered. I couldn't hear it but it was apparently given. The hon. member for Rainy River.

Mr. Reid: I have a question of the Minister of Natural Resources—

Mr. Martel: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Sudbury East feels he has a point of order.

Mr. Martel: Could that question be answered by the minister responsible for housing? Why is it that a contract is being—

Mr. Speaker: The minister may answer in any manner he sees fit. He has answered. There is no point of order. The hon. member for Rainy River.

Mr. Reid: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the Minister of Natural Resources. Can the—

Mr. Martel: Mr. Speaker, apparently he is willing to answer the question if—

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Rainy River.

Mr. Reid: Can the minister indicate—

Mr. MacDonald: It is more difficult to keep that minister down than the hon. member for Sudbury East.

Hon. A. Grossman (Minister of Revenue): I would like to make it clear that I don't want to avoid answering a question if it is properly directed to me. I look to you, sir, for clarification as to whether I can properly get up and answer the question. It was directed to me in a very indirect way.

Mr. Roy: You wouldn't want to play politics.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Sudbury East had, to my knowledge, directed the question to another minister. There was an exchange that took place across the floor of the House, which unfortunately I didn't hear very clearly, but it was intimated that the answer had been given so I don't think two ministers need reply. The hon. member for Rainy River.

MERCURY TASK FORCE

Mr. Reid: To the Minister of Natural Resources, for the fourth time: Can the minister indicate what action his department, or his department in conjunction with the Department of Health, is taking in relation to the Indian reserve located in that minister's riding where the mercury levels in the Indians have been found to be more than those that killed the Japanese some 25 or 26 years ago?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Mr. Speaker, the inter-departmental task force has been working on this particular matter for the past several weeks. They have made a trip into north-western Ontario and have met personally with the Indian bands from Grassy Narrows and the Indian band at Whitedog. The summary of their report has not been compiled yet. When it is, we will of course be studying their recommendations.

Mr. Reid: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker: Can the minister tell me how long the Ministry of Health has known that the levels of mercury in these people have been so high—higher than the point where it killed other people; how long has the minister known that and why has he taken no action to prevent those people from eating the fish where this mercury is coming from? He is endangering people's health.

Mr. Roy: How many does he want to die?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Mr. Speaker, I think this is a health matter and the question should properly be directed to my colleague, the Minister of Health.

Mr. Reid: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker: may I redirect my question to the Minister of Health? How long has he known about these high levels of mercury and what action has he taken to stop the people from eating the mercury polluted fish?

Hon. R. T. Potter (Minister of Health): Mr. Speaker, I think the information had now better be made available that the high levels of mercury have been brought to the attention of the people in the area and they have been advised of the risks they are taking by continuing to consume the fish, and they are also being warned of the numbers of fish that they can eat safely and what they should do to prevent the levels from increasing.

Mr. Foulds: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Port Arthur, a supplementary.

Mr. Foulds: I am in a bit of a quandary here and I ask for guidance. The question was originally to the Minister of Natural Resources. Can I ask a supplementary of the Minister of Natural Resources or does it have to be directed to the Minister of Health?

Mr. Speaker: No, the hon. Minister of Natural Resources has deferred that aspect of the question to the Minister of Health.

Mr. Foulds: Oh, well then I would direct it to the Minister of Health. Would he agree with his colleague, the Minister of Natural Resources, as quoted in the Chronicle-Journal of March 2, that the mercury levels of the fish had been made known to the public but we have let them take their own risks; does he agree with that approach? Has he advised or worked in a co-ordinated programme with the Minister of Natural Resources to make sure that all the so-called "fish for fun" signs are no longer there, as it is no longer a fun matter?

Hon. Mr. Potter: I agree; I don't think it is a fun matter at all. It is my responsibility to bring to the attention of the citizens in the area that there is a health hazard. There is no way you or I or anybody else can stop any individual from eating fish that are contaminated with mercury if they decide they are going to do it.

Mr. Reid: The minister can if he provides them with something else to eat!

Hon. Mr. Potter: Certainly we can bring to their attention the fact that the danger is there. We can point out to them the number of fish they can consume daily without causing them any harm. We will continue to do just that.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: A supplementary, Mr. Speaker: Can the minister confirm that the actual levels of mercury in some of the tested residents of the Grassy Narrows-Whitedog areas is far in excess of the level that is generally accepted, not just for health but in excess of the level which is known to cause mental disability, leading to death?

Hon. Mr. Potter: I can't confirm that, Mr. Speaker, but I would be delighted to check it out and get the details for the hon. member.

Mr. Reid: Who knows?

Mr. R. F. Nixon: A supplementary: On these very levels, can the Minister of Health assure us that the individual people concerned, most of them Indians in those areas, have been personally informed that these levels are well past any maxima that have been permitted in any other situation? Have they been personally informed that they are in serious danger in this regard?

Hon. Mr. Potter: It is my understanding that they have been, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Reid: Who is doing the work over there? Who knows what is going on?

Mr. Singer: A supplementary—

Mr. Speaker: I think the hon. member for Port Arthur had the last supplementary. The hon. member for Downsview may now ask one.

Mr. Singer: Mr. Speaker, can the minister tell us if he is telling the Indians not to eat the fish? Knowing that the Indians haven't too many sources of food, is the government supplying alternative sources of food or is it just telling them not to eat or else they are in physical danger?

Hon. Mr. Potter: I haven't been involved in that aspect, Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Singer: Who has been?

Mr. Reid: Whose responsibility is it?

Hon. Mr. Potter: I was speaking specifically from the public health standpoint.

Mr. Speaker: A supplementary? The hon. member for—This will be the last supplementary; the hon. member for Sandwich-Riverside.

Mr. Burr: Mr. Speaker, a supplementary of the Minister of Health: Has the minister suggested to the Indians any antitoxin or antidote that they might use—

Mr. Reid: The minister hasn't done anything.

Mr. Burr: —if they insist on eating fish?

Hon. Mr. Potter: Frankly, Mr. Speaker, I don't know of any antitoxins that would be effective.

Mr. Singer: Don't eat it and starve to death!

Mr. Burr: Is the minister not aware that animal experiments have shown that large doses of vitamin C act as an antitoxin or an antidote?

Hon. Mr. Potter: Again, Mr. Speaker, this hasn't been proved definitely. It is strictly an experimental proposition.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Welland South with a new question.

DEFINING BEDS OF NAVIGABLE WATERS

Mr. Haggerty: Mr. Speaker, a question of the Minister of Natural Resources: Has the minister taken any steps now to bring in new legislation to define the beds of navigable waters on Lake Erie, particularly due to the recent high levels of water?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: No, Mr. Speaker, we have not. I will be glad to get some more information on this particular matter and report back to the member.

Mr. Haggerty: Is the minister going to give any further consideration, perhaps in a year from now when the lake levels go down, to allowing fences to be erected along the shores of Lake Erie out to the low water level?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: I'll look into this matter, too, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Sandwich Riverside.

HIGHWAY WARNING SYSTEMS

Mr. Burr: Mr. Speaker, a question of the Minister of Transportation and Communications: As a result of Sunday's traffic tragedy will the minister—

An hon. member: Oh, come on!

Mr. W. Newman (Ontario South): The member should be cut off.

Mr. Speaker: I am going to listen to the question before I rule the man out of order.

Mr. MacDonald: Good for you!

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Deans: And then see if he should be ruled out of order.

Mr. MacDonald: That is what one calls lesson "A" for beginners.

Mr. Speaker: I should not have anticipated.

Mr. Burr: I am moved by your generosity.

Will the minister reconsider his decision not to devise some system of warning lights on our freeways so that motorists can be warned that they are approaching areas of low visibility during storms?

Hon. Mr. Carton: Mr. Speaker, we have flares that people use on the roads. How would this work, Mr. Speaker? I would be glad to discuss it with the hon. member. How does one know where there is low visibility on any particular day?

Hon. W. A. Stewart (Minister of Agriculture and Food): He doesn't know either. If he were out on Saturday, there was low visibility anywhere.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Kit-chener.

COST OF TASK FORCE ON WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION BOARD

Mr. Breithaupt: A question of the Minister of Labour: Now that the task force on the Workmen's Compensation Board has reached its halfway mark in the expected time it would take for its deliberations, can the minister advise us what the cost of that task force has been to date?

Hon. F. Guindon (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, I doubt if the task force has reached the halfway mark of its terms of reference. I could not tell members at this point in time how much the task force cost so far, but I will be able to tell them what the total cost would be.

Mr. Deans: Mr. Speaker, if the task force hasn't reached a halfway point, is it reasonable to expect that the government will be able to introduce changes to the benefits received by recipients of workmen's compensation prior to the end of this current sitting?

Hon. Mr. Guindon: Yes, Mr. Speaker, I think the Speech from the Throne yesterday indicated that benefits would be increased.

Mr. Deans: By way of a supplementary question, does the minister mean that these benefits will be increased without the benefit of the results of the task force's inquiry?

Hon. Mr. Guindon: The terms of reference of the task force had to do with the administration of the Workmen's Compensation Board, not the benefits.

Mr. Deans: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order, the minister informed this House, when I asked the question in the fall, that the task force was going to look into the level of benefits. When I asked why they didn't raise the level of benefits at the same time as they increased the level of Community and Social Services benefits, the minister said he was awaiting the result of the task force inquiry.

Mr. Speaker: I think the hon. minister need not respond to that since the hon. member raised it as a point of order. It is not a point of order.

Mr. Bullbrook: I have a question, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: I think the hon. member for Sarnia is next.

STUDY OF PAYMENTS FOR MEDICAL SERVICES

Mr. Bullbrook: I have a question of the Minister of Health.

In view of the fact that the average payment to general practitioners in May, 1972, was $3,625 under the OHIP programme, or its predecessor programme, and the average payment to pathologists for that month was $13,004.84, could he advise what his ministry is going to do in connection with the rape of the public purse by these specialists?

Hon. Mr. Potter: Yes, Mr. Speaker. There has been for some months now an ongoing study of the whole system of paying for medical services in the province. We have had two task forces, one under the Ontario Council of Health and one internal task force. We have had recommendations from individual citizens and from individual physicians. We have been studying the programmes in other provinces and in other jurisdictions in the world. Within a very few weeks, Mr. Speaker, I will have an announcement to make to the House concerning the constraints that will be introduced.

Mr. Singer: By way of supplementary, I wonder if the minister would be prepared to make available to the public and to the members of the House the publication that came out of his department indicating comparative information relating to health costs in Ontario and other provinces, which was issued by his department in November, 1972, so that we could have a better idea of the kind of problem that the people of Ontario are facing?

Hon. Mr. Potter: I see no reason in the world why we should not, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Scarborough Centre is next.

Mr. F. Drea (Scarborough Centre): A question of the Solicitor General—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please! There is another supplementary; I am sorry. The hon. member for High Park has a supplementary.

Mr. Shulman: Would the minister agree that it would be a sensible solution to the heavy costs of the pathologists and the radiologists, as outlined by the hon. member for Sarnia, to put these particular specialists on salary?

Hon. Mr. Potter: Mr. Speaker, all of these are matters on which we are now making a decision. As I say, this will be announced very shortly.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Scarborough Centre.

DEMONSTRATIONS OUTSIDE HOUSE

Mr. Drea: Would the Solicitor General use his good offices to persuade the Provincial Police who are supposed to protect this government—

Mr. Roy: This government?

Mr. Drea:—from interfering and making a spectacle of this House?

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: If the hon. members will be silent, I will permit the hon. member to complete his question, otherwise the time has expired.

An hon. member: He's a bit mixed up. That's all.

Mr. Speaker: The time has expired otherwise.

Mr. Drea: No, I'm not mixed up. I used the word "government" quite properly, and I think they will understand when I finish my sentence.

To return to the question, would the Solicitor General use his good offices to restrain the Provincial Police and other police departments which supposedly are protecting this government—small "g"—from peaceful demonstrations like this morning? The reason that I ask someone to restrain them is that we have numbers out there that appear to me to be—

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member may not make a speech; he may direct the question.

Mr. Deans: He can't make a speech.

Mr. Drea: I'm trying to get it put. Would the Solicitor General not agree with me that upon entering these buildings this morning there appeared to be a sufficient number of uniformed police making a demonstration of force that would make these premises appear somewhat akin to Belfast?

An hon. member: Canadian Driver Pool.

An hon. member: That's not a question.

An hon. member: Does he want it or doesn't he?

An hon. member: Ask him to repeat it.

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Hon. Mr. Yaremko: Mr. Speaker, I would be very pleased to get a report on this matter.

As you will recall, Mr. Speaker, you have been approached by the government and will be approached again to enlist the combined judgement of all of the members of this House as to what arrangements should be made for both the security of this chamber and its environs and the use of the public with respect thereto. This, I believe, should be a matter of some discussion during the course of the session, and I would welcome the continued participation of the hon. members.

Mr. R. Gisborn (Hamilton East): Supplementary.

Mr. Speaker: The oral question period has expired.

Petitions.

Presenting reports.

Hon. Mr. Snow presented the 52nd annual report of the Public Service Superannuation Board and also the report of the Provincial Auditor for 1971-1972.

Hon. Mr. Clement: Mr. Speaker, I take pleasure in filing for the information of the hon. members a copy of the general remarks and recommendations of the minister's committee on insurance claims.

The extensive report commissioned by my predecessor a little over two years ago under the chairmanship of David I. McWilliams, Q.C., is under detailed review at the present time by the Superintendent of Insurance. A wide distribution of the report has been arranged to assist us in assessing the recommendations and to encourage a dialogue with all those concerned before implementation.

Mr. Speaker: Motions.

Hon. Mr. Davis moves that Mr. Speaker be authorized to arrange for the printing of the reports of debates and speeches in the amount of 2,500 copies daily, copies of such printed reports to be supplied to the Honourable the Lieutenant Governor, to Mr. Speaker, to the Clerk of the legislative assembly, to the legislative assembly, to the legislative library, to each member of the assembly, to the reference libraries of the province, to the press gallery, to the newspapers of the province as approved by Mr. Speaker, and that the balance to be distributed by the Clerk of the assembly as directed by Mr. Speaker.

Motion agreed to.

Mr. Speaker: Introduction of bills.

ELEVATOR CONSTRUCTOR UNIONS DISPUTES ACT

Hon. Mr. Snow moves first reading of bill intituled, the Ministry of Government Services Act, 1973.

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

The legislation is brought in line with the reorganized ministry.

CROWN ATTORNEYS ACT

Hon. D. A. Bales (Attorney General): Mr. Speaker, I have completed a reorganization of the ministry and the office of the Director of Public Prosecutions has been phased out. Due to that change the reference to that office in these three statutes has had to be changed to "the Deputy Attorney General."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

PARTNERSHIPS REGISTRATION ACT

Hon. Mr. Clement moves first reading of bill intituled, An Act to amend the Partnerships Registration Act.

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

Hon. Mr. Clement: Mr. Speaker, I made comment earlier in statements by the ministry pertaining to those two bills.

CONSUMER PROTECTION BUREAU ACT

Hon. Mr. Clement moves first reading of bill intituled, An Act to amend the Consumer Protection Bureau Act.

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

Hon. Mr. Clement: Mr. Speaker, the amendment to this bill is merely a deletion of one clause. The clause deleted makes it the responsibility of the bureau to promote and assist existing counselling services in respect of consumer credit. This duty has been given to the Ministry of Community and Social Services by section 2 of the Ministry of Community and Social Services Amendment Act, 1972, and accordingly this bill is for purposes of clarification.

COLLECTION AGENCIES ACT

Hon. Mr. Clement moves first reading of bill intituled, An Act to amend the Collection Agencies Act.

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

Hon. Mr. Clement: Mr. Speaker, this amendment adds credit unions to the activities exempt from the application of the Act and corrects the reference to the Consumer Protection Bureau Act because of the transfer to the Ministry of Community and Social Services, as per my earlier remarks.

ELEVATOR CONSTRUCTOR LABOUR DISPUTES ACT

Mr. Bounsall moves first reading of bill intituled, An Act respecting Labour Disputes between Certain Employers and the International Union of Elevator Constructors, Locals 50, 90 and 96.

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

Mr. Bounsall: Mr. Speaker, the purpose and overwhelming desire is to get elevator constructors back to work, and this bill will achieve this purpose. It proposes a novel and original procedure, in that while imposing arbitration on the parties in the dispute, it renders the conclusion not binding, thus allowing for a final opportunity for collective bargaining and avoiding the imposition of compulsory binding arbitration for the first time in a private dispute in the province of Ontario.

Mr. Speaker: Orders of the day.

Clerk of the House: Order for the day for the second reading of Bill 2, the Elevator Constructor Unions Disputes Act.

Mr. I. Deans (Wentworth): Mr. Speaker, on a point of order, it is not possible for the government to proceed with second reading of the bill without the unanimous consent of the House. My understanding of the rules, if you would care to point it out to me, is that it is not possible, by rule 45, without the unanimous consent of the House.

If I may explain my point, Mr. Speaker, under rule 45 it says: "Except by unanimous consent of the House, no bill shall be read the second time until it has been printed, distributed and so marked on the orders of the day." I point out to you, sir, that it is not so marked on the orders of the day, and therefore it is not proper for the bill to proceed through this House until unanimous consent has been sought and received.

Mr. Speaker: It seems to me that the hon. member has quoted the rule quite correctly, although in the case of controversy or dispute I think that we can be guided by the practices of the House. Certainly, according to my recollection there have been many occasions upon which bills which were recognized as important pieces of legislation, have not, in fact, been marked on the orders of the day as having been printed and that on many occasions we have dealt with such bills.

If the hon. member, of course, is going to raise a very specific objection to it, I think I would have no alternative but to accept this rule as it is indicated in rule 45—that we must have the unanimous consent of the House. I stand to be corrected on this but it seems to me that we must use this rule as it is printed, regardless of the custom that has been followed in the House of going by the rule to facilitate business. There has been a custom whereby the unanimous consent of the House has not been sought—

Mr. D. C. MacDonald (York South): The House began yesterday and the bill could have been introduced yesterday. Another one was introduced.

Mr. Speaker: As I say, I will be guided by this rule.

Mr. R. F. Nixon (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, on a point of order, I would say that the custom of the House has always been, in my opinion, to require unanimous consent and that the rule is quite clear.

I think that the one rule that is sometimes confused with this one—I have confused it with this one—was an old one we used to have which did not permit a bill to be put forward two stages at one session without unanimous consent. That rule is not on the books now.

This one is quite clear that, without unanimous consent I can't see how we can proceed. I would hope that unanimous consent would be forthcoming, however.

Hon. W. G. Davis (Premier): Mr. Speaker, just to speak to the point of order, I think there is no question as to the rule. I endeavoured yesterday to make it clear to the acting leader of the New Democratic Party (Mr. Deans) that the government would make available the legislation so that they would have an opportunity to assess it, and I understand that this legislation was made available this morning.

Mr. E. W. Martel (Sudbury East): At 11:30 this morning.

Mr. J. F. Foulds (Port Arthur): At 11:15 this morning.

Hon. Mr. Davis: It is not a very lengthy bill.

I would say, with great respect, that this is a matter of very real urgency, very real public concern. It may be that the New Democratic Party, for reasons of their own, may wish not to support the bill or have some advice to offer. But surely, in a matter of this significance for the public of this province, to introduce the strict interpretation of the rules of the House or to say that we must have unanimous consent to consider this matter that is so important and that they not agree to this, I think would be very regrettable indeed.

I think there has been sufficient notice; the public is aware, and the unions and management are aware. We have all had an opportunity to assess the bill, which is not lengthy by any means, and I think there is a great deal in the public interest to be served here.

I would say, and I would urge, Mr. Speaker—through you to the acting leader of the New Democratic Party—even though the members opposite may not wish to support the bill or the principle of it, for whatever reason they may wish to suggest, that surely the matter is of sufficient importance to the public of this province that we, in this Legislature, can waive the strict interpretation of the rule and proceed with this important public business.

Mr. R. Gisborn (Hamilton East): Why weren't we here two or three weeks ago?

Mr. Deans: Mr. Speaker, if I may, in answer to the Premier, I would point out that it's not a matter of impeding the progress of the bill but rather that the government had an opportunity yesterday to introduce this legislation and did not.

We have proposed to this House an alternative means of dealing with the dispute which would not impose compulsory arbitration by this government upon the private sector of this province. We would like to give every member of the House sufficient time to view the legislative proposals we have made before we deal with the government's bill. That requires simply that it wait until tomorrow.

If, in fact, such an emergency condition exists in the Province of Ontario that we cannot wait until tomorrow at this time to deal with this bill in all three readings, then this government ought to have called this House together some weeks ago. We don't accept the responsibility that this bill doesn't go through the House today. We ask simply that this government, by the expressed wishes of the Minister of Labour (Mr. Guindon), look at the alternative we have offered before we proceed further with this legislation.

Mr. Speaker: I would point out to the hon. members that so far no motion for second reading is before the House. The order has been called; in the orders of the day the second reading of this particular bill has been called.

Mr. J. A. Renwick (Riverdale): Mr. Speaker, on a further point of order, with great respect to the minister and with what the Premier has had to say, I certainly will not give unanimous consent to the bill being read a second time today. I do this for two specific reasons, one of which has already been stated, and that is that whatever urgency there is about the bill—and I do not dispute the urgency of the bill—it does not happen to coincide with the day following the date on which the government chose to call the House into session.

Secondly, we have adequate procedures in this House by which bills of public importance are, at least, available to someone outside this chamber for comment and concern before they are debated on principle in the House. I personally object to the autocratic procedures which indicate that on the first day of the session of this House we, in this little red-carpeted chamber, can see fit, without any public response to this bill, to pass the bill through the legislative procedures of the House.

The bill will be passed. It will be passed undoubtedly—

Mr. Deans: Tomorrow.

Mr. Renwick:—within the next day or so, depending on how the government sees fit to pass the legislation through the House. I reiterate that the practice of this government of attempting to force bills through this House in disregard of the rules, or to put us in a position where we have to apologize for abiding by the rules, is one that I will not countenance any longer.

The procedures of this House are adequate. They are public. It is public business and it is a chance for the people of this province to note the contents of the bill and to see what the terms of the bill are; and for us in this party to obtain whatever reactions may come to the terms of the bill within the next few hours.

We will move as expeditiously and as promptly to deal with the bill and make our contribution as the rules of the House provide.

Hon. F. Guindon (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, I am quite prepared to abide by your decision. However, I must say I am amazed at this attitude of the New Democratic Party this afternoon. There is urgency.

Mr. Martel: There was urgency three weeks ago.

Hon. Mr. Guindon: Members have mentioned that the public good was at stake. There is public danger and, I presume, the members opposite—

Mr. MacDonald: The minister's own approach was so lackadaisical he didn't even introduce it yesterday when he might have.

Mr. Martel: The minister plays games.

Hon. Mr. Guindon:—will take upon themselves the tremendous responsibility for what could happen within the next 24 hours.

Mr. F. Laughren (Nickel Belt): The minister took it upon himself not to print it yesterday.

Mr. Deans: Let's not play games with the bill. This minister has failed miserably in his responsibility to ensure adequate collective bargaining in this dispute.

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Mr. Deans: He failed to deal with the personal issues.

Mr. Speaker: Order, order!

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order! Order! An hon. member has pointed out to the chair that rule 45 should be applicable in this particular case and I now put the question to the House. Do I have unanimous consent to permit the introduction of this bill for second reading?

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: We do not have unanimous consent, therefore the bill may not be introduced for second reading at this particular time.

Mr. W. Newman (Ontario South): Shame. It's an absolute shame.

Orders of the day.

Mr. MacDonald: The minister had to learn lesson A yesterday.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. E. A. Winkler (Chairman, Management Board of Cabinet): Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of the House.

Mr. Speaker: Before I put the motion for adjournment I must point out that I have received written notice, which I have not yet had an opportunity to study, pertaining to the replies given to certain questions during the oral question period. In accordance with section 27(g), I believe, of the standing orders, at the adjournment of the House, based upon whether or not the Speaker deems that the debate may proceed at that particular time and that the question and the answer given to that question is proper—

Mr. A. J. Roy (Ottawa East): Could I raise a point of order, Mr. Speaker?

Mr. Speaker: Perhaps the hon. member would permit me to finish what I was saying. I must point out to the hon. members that I have not had an opportunity to review the written notices that have been given to me. It has been suggested that this applies only on Tuesday which, of course, is not correct. That's rule 28(a); the section applicable is standing order 27(g). I will read it for the benefit of the hon. members.

Mr. Speaker's rulings, relating to oral questions are not debatable or subject to appeal. However, a member who is not satisfied with the response to an oral question or who has been told his question is not urgent may give notice that he intends to raise the subject matter of his question on the adjournment of the House. Such notice, whether or not it is given orally during the question period, must be given in writing to Mr. Speaker not later than 4 o'clock p.m. the same day.

Now, I have received written notice that the two hon. members were not satisfied with the response given to their oral questions and, under this standing order, I feel they have the right to provide me with the notice.

I point out that rule 28(a) is applicable as well as 28(d); (d) is not applicable to 27(g).

Mr. E. Sargent (Grey-Bruce): Rule 27—

Mr. Speaker: Standing order 28 refers to Tuesdays only; 27 refers to the oral question period on any particular day.

Mr. V. M. Singer (Downsview): It looks like Tuesday on the clock.

Mr. Speaker: Just wait for a moment until our esteemed Clerk has the opportunity to direct the Speaker and advise him.

Our Clerk informs me that in his opinion rule 28(d) does apply to the provision under 27(g) and in his opinion this must be done on Tuesday; therefore there can be no debate on adjournment of the House.

Mr. Singer: The Clerk says Tuesday!

Mr. Speaker: I have a motion—I have ruled on this matter.

An hon. member: Be dissatisfied on Tuesday!

Mr. Roy: Can I raise one point?

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member usually raises pretty good points; I'll listen to him.

Mr. Roy: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I might point out that under standing order 27(g) we have until 4 o'clock to give you notice, Mr. Speaker. And so I would say possibly, in deference to you, Mr. Speaker, and with the greatest respect, that no ruling be made on who can participate in the debate until at least people have had a chance to submit all their notices—until 4 o'clock. It's not 4 o'clock yet.

Mr. Speaker: Well, it says 4 o'clock in the standing orders. If we adjourn prior to 4 o'clock obviously we can't wait until 4 o'clock—any notices served until that time will be acceptable. I do not intend in any way to indicate to the House which notices will be acceptable to me, or if debate in fact shall proceed next Tuesday—but we shall consider it very carefully.

Mr. Sargent: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order! The rules clearly permit notices to be served before 4 o'clock. You have two submissions now and I don't think that in a serious matter like this you should try to bend the rules for the government.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member is quite out of order! He has no point of order! I'm not bending the rules. On the contrary, I am attempting to interpret them and apply them quite clearly.

Mr. Sargent: Well, you didn't know the rules a minute ago. You didn't know the rules yourself a minute ago.

Hon. Mr. Winkler moves adjournment of the House.

Motion agreed to.

Mr. Sargent: What do the rules stand for then?

Mr. Speaker: This House stands adjourned until 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

The House adjourned at 3:45 o'clock, p.m.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF ONTARIO

THURSDAY, MARCH 22, 1973

The House met at 2 o'clock, p.m.

Prayers.

Mr. Speaker: We are pleased to have some special visitors with us today. In the east gallery we have a group of new Canadians from Humber College of Applied Arts and Technology, Keele's campus; and in the west gallery Girl Guides from the 347th Company of Willowdale.

Statements by the ministry.

Oral questions.

PROVINCIAL AUDITOR'S REPORT

Mr. R. F. Nixon (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I would like to put a question to the Treasurer pertaining to the Provincial Auditor's report that was tabled yesterday.

Since the standing committee of the Legislature dealing with the Provincial Auditor's report will be meeting over many weeks, and no doubt reviewing it item by item, can the Treasurer tell the House if he has any sort of a special committee in his department that is going to examine the recommendations and the criticisms so that these matters might be set right without delay?

Hon. J. White (Treasurer and Minister of Intergovernmental Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I spoke to the Deputy Treasurer this morning; I asked him to provide explanation to me on several of the points which were mentioned in the report. And I will certainly be exploring all aspects of the Provincial Auditor's report as they affect my responsibilities.

Mr. J. E. Bullbrook (Sarnia): By way of a supplementary, if I might, to the same minister: Recalling the filing with flourish of the statements of the restaurants at Ontario Place by the Treasurer, then the Minister of Industry and Tourism, and recalling that the Provincial Auditor says on page 79 that the then department under that minister didn't properly administer such statements, I ask: If he couldn't run Ontario Place how can he run Ontario?

Hon. Mr. White: I think I can't let that go by, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. A. J. Roy (Ottawa East): He almost did!

Hon. Mr. White: I think it was Feb. 8, 1972, that I took over that ministry, and within 48 hours—

Mr. Roy: He got rid of it!

Hon. Mr. White: —I had talked to the Premier about setting this up as a Crown corporation. I had informed Jim Ramsay that this was going to be done, that his responsibilities would be diverted away from Ontario Place to other projects, and immediately I went to work on the programme. So I was aware in February 1972 that radical changes had to be made to improve upon the performance which the Provincial Auditor complained about in the 1971-1972 report. I was exactly 13 months ahead of a number of people—including the hon. member for Sarnia.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: A supplementary, having to do with the Treasurer's answer: Can he now assure us, since he has personally taken responsibility for Ontario Place and its reform, that we can look forward to a better performance this summer and maybe even end up a bit in the black instead of the red?

An hon. member: Not white anyway.

Hon. Mr. White: Mr. Speaker, I think the Minister of Industry and Tourism (Mr. Bennett) can give us a much more incisive answer. But I have no doubt that this is going to improve year by year, notwithstanding the destructive comments of the members of the opposition.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Wentworth with a supplementary.

Mr. Bullbrook: He is protecting you.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Wentworth has a supplementary.

Mr. I. Deans (Wentworth): Perhaps the minister could explain why there were no contracts signed between the management of the Ontario Place restaurants and the government in regard to the management of that particular facility, Ontario Place?

Hon. Mr. White: I can't remember those details. Once again, I think the Minister of Industry and Tourism should be asked. I'm sorry, I just can't give the member an answer. I'll get an answer, or perhaps my colleague can give one now.

Mr. Speaker: Did the hon. member for Samia want to have a supplementary?

Mr. Bullbrook: Yes, I would like to ask a supplementary, so that we have no misunderstanding or equivocation. On the same page 79 of the Provincial Auditor's report, he recommends that the operation of Ontario Place be removed from the Minister of Industry and Tourism to the finance branch of this government under the aegis of the Treasurer. Does the Treasurer think—

Mr. Speaker: State your question.

Mr. Bullbrook: Does the Treasurer feel up to it?

Hon. Mr. White: Yes, sir.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for High Park.

Mr. M. Shulman (High Park): A supplementary, Mr. Speaker: If the minister is correct and things were so badly run that he noticed it within 48 hours of taking over, what are we to think of his predecessor who is now in charge of revenue? Does he feel that minister should remain in his job?

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Shulman: And, if so, what about the revenue of the province?

Hon. A. Grossman (Minister of Revenue): It is coming in very well.

Mr. Speaker: A supplementary, the hon. member for Ottawa Centre.

Mr. Shulman: Is the minister going to answer?

Mr. M. Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): A supplementary, Mr. Speaker: What steps is the Treasurer prepared to take in order to ease the entry into the civil service of pre-audit staff who are affected by the change in responsibilities of the Provincial Auditor, including specifically one of the people who led to this change, Mr. Tom Smith, who is now barred from entering the civil service?

Hon. Mr. White: The pre-audit staff who would have been in the Provincial Auditor's branch reporting to the Legislature, if they were not classified as civil servants, no doubt will be given top priority, and no doubt there will be opportunities within the operating ministries where this pre-audit function is now being handled. I will certainly look into that matter and, in particular, the member's friend, Tom Smith.

Mr. Speaker: Does the hon. Leader of the Opposition have further questions?

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, if you will permit another question of the Treasurer on the same subject, or at least a related subject because it refers to Ontario Place. Is the Treasurer aware that the estimated deficit this year since the reforms that he has suggested have been put into operation is $1.8 million; and that the Provincial Auditor draws attention to the fact that $40,000 of special advances from the government to certain people working in the commercial aspects of Ontario Place seem to have somehow disappeared from the concern of the government? What about that projected deficit and this $40,000?

Hon. Mr. White: Mr. Speaker, I am quite prepared to debate the Provincial Auditor's report here, if that's the wish of the Leader of the Opposition.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: I was just asking the Treasurer about—

Hon. Mr. White: It was my clear understanding that this matter was going to go to the public accounts committee where detailed replies could be given to questions like this with the advice of the officials who have day-to-day responsibility for these affairs. This is a great provincial facility and it will be a very successful operation after a difficult transitional period.

Mr. Cassidy: Does the Treasurer feel it is a contribution to the Conservative Party?

Hon. Mr. White: I anticipate a deficit this year.

Mr. V. M. Singer (Downsview): The whole government is answerable for 87 complaints.

Hon. Mr. White: The 13 very good men and women who constitute that new board of directors and who have worked very hard for six or eight months are coming up with long-term plans—

Mr. Cassidy: It is bankrupt. It is as empty as the Conservative Party.

Hon. Mr. White: —which will ensure the success of that very fine public facility.

Mr. Singer: The minister didn't tell us there was anything wrong when he had Spence running guard for him.

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Mr. Bullbrook: Those people are like Pontius Pilate; they are always washing their hands of everything that happened before.

Mr. Speaker: Order! The hon. minister had the floor; I am not sure whether he was finished or not.

Mr. Singer: Neither is he. That's our trouble.

Hon. Mr. Potter: Yes, I've finished.

Mr. Roy: He said it!

STUDY OF PAYMENTS FOR MEDICAL SERVICES

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, a question of the Minister of Health.

Can he advise the House whether the information associated with the overbilling by certain doctors, whose names have appeared recently in the press, is going to be passed on to the Attorney General (Mr. Bales) for suitable action or is the case closed, with the disciplinary action to be undertaken by the College of Physicians and Surgeons?

Hon. R. T. Potter (Minister of Health): Mr. Speaker, in all cases where there is any evidence of fraud or any indication of sufficient evidence to proceed with legal action, the information is turned over to the Justice department. At the present time I am told by them that they have sufficient evidence to prosecute three or four doctors. We are waiting for the judge to be named.

Mr. Roy: A supplementary, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Ottawa East.

Mr. Roy: If, as the minister says, in cases where in his opinion he has sufficient evidence to prosecute for fraud he can hand this over to the Attorney General, why have there been no prosecutions whatsoever since 1969 when we know that doctors have been defrauding the plan since that time?

Hon. Mr. Potter: Mr. Speaker, I am unable to say why it hasn't happened in the past. I can tell the hon. members what has gone on since I have been in the ministry; I have been telling them all along of the procedures that the Ontario College of Physicians and Surgeons has instituted over the past six or eight months. It is as a result of these procedures that we now have—

Mr. Roy: What's taking so long?

MEDICAL SPECIALISTS' FEES

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, a further question of the Minister of Health.

Regarding his letters to the boards of the public hospitals advising them that they should have doctors in the various specialties who are prepared to perform their services for the OHIP fee schedule, is he content that they will be sufficient to remove what has come to be a closed shop as far as some specialists are concerned in many of the public hospitals of the province? I refer specifically to North York Hospital in connection with obstetrics, and to many of the hospitals for the service of an anaesthetist.

Hon. Mr. Potter: Mr. Speaker, I can't say that I am content. What I have done is I have referred this problem to the boards of governors whose responsibility it is to administer the hospitals; I have asked them to deal with it. If they don't, and if it becomes necessary, then of course we will have to take the necessary action to see that they do something about it.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: A supplementary: Is the minister aware that some of the boards feel that the advisory medical committees have the primary responsibility for this and seem to be experiencing difficulties in achieving what the minister himself has indicated to be the goal? Further to that, if in fact this difficulty continues, is he prepared to amend the Public Hospitals Act, or whatever other Act or regulation would be required, in order to insist that all specialists be granted admitting privileges in the hospitals in their areas?

Hon. Mr. Potter: Mr. Speaker, I wouldn't be prepared to go that far, because I don't think it would be proper to suggest that all specialists in a particular area would be granted admitting privileges in that area. We could well find that a hospital had many more doctors on staff than are needed if we go too far in this—and I said that last spring when we talked about an appeals board.

Mr. Cassidy: Don't break the club. That is what the minister is saying.

Hon. Mr. Potter: It is not a question of breaking the club.

Mr. Cassidy: Sure it is! He has been lining up with the club all along.

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Mr. Cassidy: He is afraid to exercise his powers!

Hon. Mr. Potter: Certainly I am prepared to see that the necessary steps are taken to see that the public have available to them physicians in the hospitals who do in fact participate in the programme.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: A supplementary: Does that mean then that unless we find that there is a change in the next few weeks in the policies of the hospitals, particularly in Metropolitan Toronto, that the minister will instruct the boards that specialists accepting the OHIP fee will be given admitting privileges in all of the specialties, but particularly those specialists who administer anaesthetics and who are obstetricians?

Hon. Mr. Potter: Mr. Speaker, if we are unable to reach our goal along the lines that we are now pursuing, then I will have to take the necessary steps to instruct the boards of governors of the hospitals to see that doctors who do participate in the programme are appointed to the staff.

Mr. Speaker: Does the hon. Leader of the Opposition have further questions?

Is there a supplementary?

Mr. Cassidy: Yes. Is the minister prepared to take more direct action on this problem and, in view of the inflated earnings of doctors under Medicare, simply to insist that no doctor be able to bill beyond the OHIP level?

Hon. Mr. Potter: Mr. Speaker, I answered the question yesterday concerning the doctors' fees. I made the statement that we are doing a study of this at the present time and I hope very shortly to make an announcement in the Legislature.

Mr. Speaker: Does the hon. Leader of the Opposition have further questions?

Mr. R. F. Nixon: No, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Wentworth.

PAYMENT TO PROFESSOR SYMONS

Mr. Deans: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have a question of the Premier. Will the Premier move to recover the excess amount paid to Professor Symons? The amount I am talking about is that amount between what would have been chargeable by way of mileage where public transportation was not available and that which was paid on his behalf for the use of taxicabs around the Province of Ontario.

Hon. W. G. Davis (Premier): Mr. Speaker, this hasn't been contemplated. I think it is one of those matters in the Provincial Auditor's report, as the hon. Treasurer just said, that should be dealt with in some detail when the public accounts committee meets. I think that is one item, obviously, the committee will want to get into in some detail.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: The Premier could have flown him.

Mr. Singer: And his whole family too; like the cabinet ministers do!

Mr. Deans: Who was responsible for authorizing the payment of those accounts?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I can't tell who was responsible for the authorization of the accounts. I'm sure when the Minister of Education (Mr. Wells) returns he would be delighted to answer that question for the hon. member. I think it is a matter that could be raised quite properly at the public accounts meeting.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: The Provincial Auditor said the Premier had authorized it specifically.

Mr. M. C. Germa (Sudbury): A supplementary.

Mr. Speaker: A supplementary? The hon. member for Sudbury.

Mr. Germa: A supplementary, Mr. Speaker: Mr. Speaker, could the Premier determine if any funds are outstanding to Professor Symons and whether these will be attached; and is Professor Symons presently on a retainer from any ministry, board or commission of this province; and why would he be?

Mr. J. F. Foulds (Port Arthur): Good question!

Hon. Mr. Davis: I would only say this. If the hon. member still had with him—and from their standpoint it's regrettable, although not from ours—the former member for Peterborough, Mr. Pitman, I think he would say to the hon. member that the then President Symons is a very able man who has made a very distinct contribution on many aspects of public life in this province.

Mr. E. W. Martel (Sudbury East): Giving us a snow job!

Mr. Deans: That does not give him the right to rip off the public.

Hon. Mr. Davis: I would think that the phrasing of the question as to why he should or should not be available to any public body for his expertise and advice really is an improper question.

Mr. T. P. Reid (Rainy River): The province has made a very good contribution.

Mr. Foulds: It is an improper answer.

Hon. Mr. Davis: With respect to whether he is or is not at this precise moment; to the best of my knowledge he isn't, but he may be. I shall endeavour to find out for the hon. member.

Mr. Singer: Very touchy!

Mr. Deans: I would just like to ask a supplementary question: Does the Premier pretend to this Legislature that in fact the worth of Professor Symons as an academic gives him the right to rip off the public of Ontario to the extent that he has?

Mr. J. R. Rhodes (Sault Ste. Marie): There's a new phrase. Where did the member learn that phrase?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I have made no such statement. I only say this, that Professor Symons is a very able, intelligent person who made a contribution with respect to the language commission that I think was in the public interest. I would say, with respect, that if the acting leader of the New Democratic Party disagrees with the commission report—if he doesn't think this had validity, if he doesn't think it was helpful, which is not a view expressed by some of his colleagues, then he should say so.

Mr. Cassidy: But he can't find his way to the railway station.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: That is not the question.

Mr. Martel: Is he a Tory?

Mr. Singer: We were talking about taxicabs.

Hon. Mr. Davis: That is not just what he was dealing with.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Deans: I question the right of any individual to take money without justification.

Mr. Speaker: Order, order! Does the hon. member for Wentworth have further questions?

REMOVAL OF SAND FROM DUNES IN PRINCE EDWARD COUNTY

Mr. Deans: Yes. I have a question of the Minister of Natural Resources. Does the government consider proceeding by way of a special Act in this Legislature, instead of under the Expropriation Act, to recover for the people of Ontario the sand dunes presently on lease to the Lake Ontario Cement Co. for the amount of the lease, the $1 per year which they have already paid, plus whatever out-of-pocket expenses they may have incurred?

Hon. L. Bernier (Minister of Natural Resources): Mr. Speaker, in answer to the question concerning the problem that exists at the sandbanks, I would point out to the hon. member that we have gone into some very lengthy discussions with the company, and I would say that they have been very co-operative and willing to sit down and talk to us. They have not taken any sand, as I said yesterday, since last summer.

Mr. Deans: I understand.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Here again they have exercised a great degree of co-operation and I'm sure the members will agree with me.

Mr. Martel: How much do they want?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: We felt the best course of action to take would be through the expropriation procedures. There would be no controversy or no innuendoes thrown against us in regard to that course.

Mr. J. A. Renwick (Riverdale): By way of a supplementary question: Do I take that to mean the minister intends that the public treasury will pay something called fair market value in order to expropriate that lease? If so, has he given any thought to the estimate of what that amount would be that would be payable for the expropriation of the lease?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Mr. Speaker, under the expropriation procedures, of course, this would be the course of action that would be followed. I have no estimate in my head of what the cost would be.

Mr. Renwick: I take it the minister has no idea of what the cost would be.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: No, I have not.

Mr. Deans: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Can the minister explain why the government would contemplate paying more than the actual value of the lease as determined at the time of the signing, less the value of the lost sand, plus the out-of-pocket expenses of the company?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: That's a very unfair question, Mr. Speaker, as I don't know what the Crown will pay for that particular piece of property until that is decided by the expropriation procedures.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, isn't it true that the lands that the minister is presently attempting to expropriate or is intending to expropriate were leased at $1 a year?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Yes, that's correct, for a 75-year period.

Mr. Cassidy: Isn't that the value then?

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: That's the value of the lease.

Mr. J. E. Stokes (Thunder Bay): Then $75 would be fair compensation.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Be generous. Give them $100.

Mr. Deans: A question of the minister in charge of housing.

Hon. G. A. Kerr (Provincial Secretary for Justice): The Minister of Revenue.

Mr. Deans: Thank you, the Minister of Revenue.

Mr. L. C. Henderson (Lambton): A shortage of leaders today.

PUBLIC HOUSING RENTS

Mr. Deans: When will the Province of Ontario reply to the federal government in regard to the decision with regard to increases in rents in public accommodation?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Mr. Speaker, there is no reply necessary to any so-called request by the federal minister. The federal minister is replying to a request Ontario made to the federal government.

Indeed, the last time there was an increase in pensions we did not increase the rentals accordingly. We don't intend to do so at this time. On a number of occasions we have asked the federal minister to get together with us for the purpose of a complete review of the rent schedules. I've just heard from him—I think it was yesterday or the day before—and in fact he has agreed that we should sit down and discuss this to bring about a complete change in the rent schedules.

He suggested that perhaps this could be accomplished by March, 1974. I have written to him today and strongly suggested that this could be done long before that so there won't be all of these anomalies which have come into existence since the schedule was last revised.

We have asked the federal government, I repeat, on a number of occasions to look at this matter and he has, in the last day or two, agreed to do so.

Mr. Deans: By way of supplementary, is the minister aware that the minister in Ottawa, Mr. Basford, indicated that he was awaiting replies from the provincial governments, including the Province of Ontario, to the request that a freeze be instituted in the area of homes or apartments for senior citizens?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Mr. Speaker, in the first place, the impression that the federal minister had ordered a freeze on rentals for senior citizens across the country was entirely erroneous. He has admitted he had no right to do that; in fact what he was referring to was only those senior citizens projects in which the federal government was directly involved.

Mr. R. Haggerty (Welland South): Ontario Housing?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: No, not Ontario Housing at all. It had nothing to do with that. It was brought to his attention; he corrected his statement. I have the correspondence to that effect; I don't think I have it here but I'd be glad to table all of the correspondence in the House.

I took him to task, as a matter of fact, for unilaterally making such a statement. We have agreements—all of the provinces have agreements—with the federal government in respect of the rent schedules—

Mr. R. F. Ruston (Essex-Kent): They furnish all the money, eh?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: —and he should be sitting down with the provincial authorities to discuss with them any changes. As I said a few moments ago we indeed had asked for a change and a review of the schedule some time ago.

He had no authority to order a freeze; he didn't order a freeze. He merely ordered a freeze on those projects in which the federal government was directly involved. We, of course, didn't have to be ordered to freeze the rents for pensioners because we didn't increase them the last time, as indeed we are required to under our agreement with the federal authorities, and I advised him that we weren't doing it at this time either. But we have done this unilaterally, because really we are supposed to increase rentals just as soon as there is an increase in pensions, according to the requirements of the federal government and our agreement with them.

Mr. Cassidy: A supplementary, Mr. Speaker: What steps is the minister prepared to take to stop private landlords from raising rents for senior citizens just subsequent to their pension increase?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Of course, Mr. Speaker, the hon. member knows perfectly well I have no such authority.

Mr. Cassidy: Well, the minister could get it. He has the authority.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Sarnia.

RYERSON FINANCIAL PROBLEMS

Mr. Bullbrook: Mr. Speaker, I have a question in connection with Ryerson Institute that I would like to direct to the Minister of Colleges and Universities, recognizing that the fault in connection with this question doesn't lie with him but lies with the Premier of Ontario, as he was then the minister. In two parts, through you, Mr. Speaker:

Can the minister advise this House as to what actions his ministry has taken or plans to take with respect to the serious situation that has developed at Ryerson Polytechnical Institute, wherein approximately 50 per cent of that school's maintenance staff have been indefinitely laid off as a consequence of the school's unstable financial position? And will the minister undertake to order immediately the fullest possible inquiry into the matter, with a view to examining Ryerson's actual financial position and administrative costs—which are presumed to be in the nature of 45 per cent of their total budget—

Mr. Ruston: Shame!

Mr. Bullbrook: —as well as securing the most equitable method of reinstatement for those men who have lost their jobs and some type of moratorium for those who will lose their jobs tomorrow—four in number—and those who will lose their jobs on Monday—24 in number—in view of the fact that the faculty have offered to reduce—

Mr. Speaker: I think the hon. member is now making a speech.

Mr. Bullbrook: —to reduce—in view of the fact—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member is making a speech.

Mr. Bullbrook: —that the faculty have reduced their own salaries to maintain these people in their positions?

Mr. Speaker: Speeches are not permitted during this period. No speeches.

An hon. member: That was a good speech.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. minister.

Hon. J. McNie (Minister of Colleges and Universities): Mr. Speaker, I am tempted to ask the hon. member to repeat his question.

Mr. Bullbrook: I will. Through you, Mr. Speaker, to—

Hon. E. A. Winkler (Chairman, Management Board of Cabinet): He said he was tempted.

Mr. Bullbrook: I just want an answer.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The hon. minister has the floor.

Hon. Mr. McNie: Mr. Speaker, the president of Ryerson has been keeping me posted by sending me copies of his press releases.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: He is a very thoughtful chap.

Mr. J. R. Breithaupt (Kitchener): The Premier will do that.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order.

Hon. Mr. McNie: With regard to the plight of Ryerson, I think it might interest the House to know what their situation is. They have a deficit, a substantial deficit, this year as a result of forecasting a 10 per cent increase in their enrolment which didn't materialize. The moot question is whose fault that is. It is a pretty substantial forecast in view of the obvious trends of enrolment throughout the province.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: I think the Treasurer must have been predicting for them.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order.

Hon. Mr. McNie: With regard to the steps that they have taken, I read in the press, too, of the steps they have taken to reduce administrative costs, particularly with reference to the maintenance staff. I can only recall conversations we had last fall with respect to another—

Mr. E. Sargent (Grey-Bruce): Why doesn't the minister take a taxi down and find out?

Mr. Speaker: Order.

Hon. Mr. McNie: —another institution which also had problems and advertised what they were going to do about it. I might suggest that they have come to cope with those problems, and I think very responsibly, and we have heard very little about them since.

I think that in this particular instance they have been tempted to take advantage of the plight of the maintenance staff, the open college, the radio station and what not, to try to enlist support from the government for these extra special endeavours. I might tell the House something that you haven't read in the press yet, and that is that as of last Thursday we made available to Ryerson, through an adjustment to their part-time formula base, something in the order of $230,000 which they have available to them to deal with some of the kinds of problems that the member has referred to and the press have referred to.

Mr. Cassidy: That's enough for 48 jobs.

Hon. Mr. McNie: We're not steering their programmes. We leave it to their discretion to decide how they're going to spend it. Quite frankly, like the members, we are concerned with seeing that some of the programmes which they've initiated—and I think some very good programmes—do not fall by the wayside. We don't think there's any need for it. We think they have the capacity to sustain their open college thrust.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: How about CJRT?

Hon. Mr. McNie: As far as CJRT is concerned, they can do it if necessary without the radio station. There are only about eight and a half hours out of 133 hours on CJRT devoted to the open college and the radio only represents one small part of their total open college programme. That in itself is no justification for the government moving in and taking over a radio station, if the government, in fact, could. The Canadian Radio-Television Commission could have other views about that, I'm sure.

The fact is that there are other alternatives that they're exploring right now along with other institutions of post-secondary education. As far as the radio station is concerned, I'm satisfied—

Mr. Roy: The minister has come along pretty well. It took him five minutes.

Mr. Bullbrook: He's had training from the Premier.

Mr. Reid: He was almost as long answering the question.

Mr. Speaker: Order. I should point out to the hon. minister that the time has lapsed and he's approaching the ministerial statement time.

Hon. Mr. McNie: Mr. Speaker, if I answer the hon. gentleman's question—

Mr. F. Drea (Scarborough Centre): Well, it was a long question.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Drea: It took almost three hours.

Mr. Bullbrook: In recognizing the charming perambulations of the minister's response—

Mr. Speaker: Is this a supplementary question?

Mr. Bullbrook: It is.

Mr. Speaker: Or a statement?

Mr. Bullbrook: Would the minister—

Mr. B. Newman (Windsor-Walkerville): He didn't answer the first one yet.

Mr. Bullbrook:—answer my twofold question? Will he insist on a moratorium in connection with further layoff of maintenance people? Secondly, would he look into the allegations of waste in senior administration at Ryerson Institute?

Hon. Mr. McNie: Mr. Speaker, the answer to the first question is no. That's a matter for the institution to handle. I'm sure, like other institutions that have been faced with similar problems in the last few months, they'll find a way of handling it—

Mr. Bullbrook: By laying off people?

Hon. Mr. McNie:—that's fair to all concerned. What was the second part of the member's question?

Mr. Bullbrook: Will the minister look into the question of dinners at La Scala, for example?

An hon. member: Where?

Mr. Bullbrook: Thousands of dollars spent for the office of the assistant to the president of the university—things of that nature—while people are being laid off. Will the minister look into that? Will he have a public inquiry into that?

Mr. Roy: Right.

Hon. Mr. McNie: Mr. Speaker, the answer to that is no.

Mr. Bullbrook: No, I didn't think so.

Hon. Mr. McNie: However, Mr. Speaker, I'm—

Mr. Sargent: Answer the question.

An hon. member: Maybe he will.

Hon. Mr. McNie: I might add that—

Mr. Germa: He should sit down while he is ahead.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. McNie: Thank you.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Windsor West.

COMMITTAL ORDER FOR STRIKER

Mr. E. J. Bounsall (Windsor West): A question of the Attorney General, Mr. Speaker. Is it now the practice in Ontario that a person must be unaccompanied when submitting himself to an order of commitment, in that yesterday the sheriff of Waterloo county refused to take in one of the convicted Dare strikers when accompanied, and threatened that if he did not appear by noon today, unaccompanied, that he would inform the Attorney General that the striker was in default of his committal order? Further, what censure will the Attorney General impose upon this same sheriff when he did accept him for commitment this morning, but threatened one of the convicted Dare strikers who is appealing the decision that his appearance would be detrimental to his appeal?

Hon. D. A. Bales (Attorney General): Mr. Speaker, I'll look into the matter and give the member an answer.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Ottawa East.

An hon. member: That's Waterloo for you.

OHIP PREMIUMS

Mr. Roy: Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Minister of Health. I wonder if the minister might advise us when we can expect some senior civil servants to be dismissed, considering that they took it upon themselves not to collect some $55 million in premiums when the switch was made to OHIP? I might point out to the minister, in the light of that fact, that last time an official made a $50 million error, according to the minister, he was fired.

Hon. Mr. Potter: Mr. Speaker, first of all, I think that it should be understood that it's not a question of $55 million being lost.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Reid: Does the minister know where it is?

Hon. Mr. Potter: If we review the Provincial Auditor's report, it is pointed out that this was due to an amalgamation of the two services and the system of payment. I think the place for this to be studied further is in the public accounts committee.

Mr. Roy: Mr. Speaker, by way of supplementary, can the minister advise if he has taken some steps, at least, to recover some or part of this money?

Hon. Mr. Potter: Obviously the answer is no, Mr. Speaker. I have suggested that this be reviewed at the public accounts committee so we can determine what the actual facts are.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: A supplementary, Mr. Speaker: How would the minister—

Mr. Speaker: There have already been several supplementaries; I think, in fairness to the New Democratic Party, they should have their turn at a supplementary.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: We want to help them out all we can.

Mr. F. Laughren (Nickel Belt): A supplementary of the Minister of Health, Mr. Speaker. In view of the auditor's indications that the cost of health care in the province does not depend entirely on the public, has the minister ordered that the idiotic commercials that have been played across the province be stopped and, if not, will he do so?

Hon. Mr. Potter: I must disagree with the hon. member, Mr. Speaker. I don't think they are idiotic. I think they are very good commercials and it is our intention to continue them.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. Leader of the Opposition.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, I want to ask the minister a supplementary to the original question. Why did the Ontario Hospital Services Commission, as it was then constituted, have the power to make these decisions unilaterally? Is the minister concerned that any of his present boards and commissions reporting to him have those powers, or perhaps think they have?

Hon. Mr. Potter: Obviously, Mr. Speaker, I am sure that the hon. Leader of the Opposition knows that I am not in a position to answer that question. I wasn't here during the period that is being discussed. He knows that the commission—

Mr. Singer: No, it was all those fellows who went before—

Hon. Mr. Potter: He knows that the commission—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Mr. Roy: It's the fellows who make the mistakes who get promoted provincial secretary.

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Hon. Mr. Potter: He knows that the commission is no longer in existence and, as I suggested earlier, I think the place to discuss this is in the public accounts committee.

Mr. Speaker: I think there have been sufficient supplementary questions on that particular topic. A new question? The hon. member for Windsor-Walkerville will be next.

RELIGIOUS DISCRIMINATION IN EDUCATION

Mr. B. Newman: Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Minister of Labour.

What action does the ministry intend to take on the discrimination on the basis of religion that is being practised and promoted by the Ministry of Education in the directive of Aug. 31, 1972, that precludes a day school student of a senior division of a privately supported secondary school from enrolling in a correspondence course provided by the Ministry of Education?

Hon. F. Guindon (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, as my hon. friend knows, under the Human Rights Code, any discrimination of this kind is investigated. If my hon. friend would send me all the details, I will make sure that the Human Rights Commission will look into it as soon as possible.

Mr. B. Newman: A supplementary, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: A supplementary.

Mr. B. Newman: May I also ask the minister, while I am on my feet, to look into the case of a Miss Jean Lowry, a student of the Catholic Central School in London, who was ruled ineligible to take a correspondence course?

Hon. Mr. Guindon: I will, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Riverdale.

NO-FAULT AUTO INSURANCE

Mr. Renwick: Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations.

Having regard to the serious, if not devastating, criticisms of the general insurance business—particularly in the automobile insurance field—by the minister's committee on insurance claims, is the minister now about to give consideration to establishing a publicly-operated no-fault insurance plan in the Province of Ontario. If he is not already prepared to do that, would he advise the House whether or not any of the members of his ministry are in consultation with the private insurance industry which is desperately endeavouring to come up with a suitable plan for the Province of Ontario?

Hon. J. T. Clement (Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations): Mr. Speaker, I take it that the hon. member for Riverdale has had an opportunity of at least perusing the report that I filed yesterday. The question of no-fault insurance is being looked into very carefully. The questions raised, the issues mentioned in the McWilliams report are being studied very thoroughly by the department of insurance under the superintendent. No-fault insurance, I should point out to this hon. House, is not the answer to a maiden's prayer.

Hon. Mr. Kerr: Not the member for Riverdale's either!

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Foulds: We are talking about accidents.

An hon. member: You mean an NDP's prayer.

Hon. Mr. Clement: Mr. Speaker, considering the age of those who laughed I didn't think they remembered maidens.

We get into a no-fault insurance plan in this province where the loss of an arm is worth $1,500, a loss of a leg is worth $2,200 and this sort of thing. There is no question about fault. That is fine until you are the victim and you feel that you should have greater recompense with general damages for pain and suffering.

It is a very delicate issue and it is one that is worthy of great study. I am not recommending that we go into it at this time. I am waiting for the recommendations of the Superintendent of Insurance and his staff with reference to the McWilliam's report which was filed yesterday.

Insofar as I recollect the last part of the hon. member's question, my advisory committee is considering alternatives to no-fault and will in due course make a report to me upon completion of their study.

Mr. Stokes: And the maiden still waits.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Huron-Bruce.

HEALTH SERVICE COMMERCIALS

Mr. M. Gaunt (Huron-Bruce): Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Minister of Health. Has the ministry allocated funds for the ad referred to earlier, and if so, how much?

Hon. Mr. Potter: I would presume so, Mr. Speaker, but I haven't got the information yet.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Port Arthur.

Mr. Foulds: I have a question of the Premier, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. There is a supplementary.

Hon. Mr. Potter: It would be part of the budget for this year.

Mr. Gaunt: Did the minister authorize that particular ad?

Hon. Mr. Potter: Yes. You mean the commercials on radio and TV?

Mr. Gaunt: Yes? You did?

Hon. Mr. Potter: Yes.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Port Arthur.

EFFECT OF MERCURY ON INDIAN BANDS

Mr. Foulds: A question of the Premier, Mr. Speaker. What is the Premier doing about the devastating effect that mercury pollution has had on the Indian bands at Grassy Narrows and Whitedog reserves?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, this matter was raised, as I recall, yesterday, with two or three of the ministers. I would be quite prepared to discuss this in detail with those ministers who have some interest and get a detailed report for the hon. member.

Mr. Speaker: I am sorry I didn't get the import of the question; I agree it was raised at considerable length yesterday.

Mr. Singer: Yes, but we didn't get an answer.

Mr. Speaker: I think the answer is quite sufficient.

Mr. Foulds: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker: In view of the Premier's answer would be consider also pulling the Attorney General into that consultation so that that office may be made available to the Indians in case there is a necessity for prosecution against the polluters?

Mr. Cassidy: That is a nod. Put it in Hansard.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Downsview.

DESTRUCTION OF OHIP FILES

Mr. Singer: I have a question of the Minister of Health. Is the Minister of Health aware that some of the OHIP files have been destroyed, and that because they have been destroyed OHIP is unable to advise members of the legal profession who are acting on behalf of their clients, and by statute have to act for OHIP as well, as to how much in fact they should charge in settling negligence cases or in pursuing negligence cases through the courts?

Can the minister tell us how it has happened, and what kind of a solution there might be, so that the members of the legal profession who accept their statutory responsibilities very seriously will know that they have to collect the right amount on behalf of the people of Ontario?

Mr. D. W. Ewen (Wentworth North): Waive your fees, Vern!

Hon. Mr. Potter: It is the first I've heard of that, Mr. Speaker. I'll look into it.

Mr. Singer: Mr. Speaker, by way of supplementary: Now that the minister has heard about it could he undertake to investigate and advise the House, a) as to how this matter happened; and b) what he proposes to do to safeguard the interests of the people of Ontario?

Hon. Mr. Potter: In view of the fact that there has been considerable amount of information passed out from the Ontario Health Insurance Plan over the last few weeks, I'd be delighted, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Hamilton East.

SHORTAGE OF TRADESMEN

Mr. R. Gisborn (Hamilton East): A question of the Minister of Colleges and Universities. In regard to a Globe & Mail report this morning attributing statements to the personnel relations officer of Koehring-Waterous Ltd. in Brantford that they are again this year, as they did last year, importing welders and machinists to carry on employment in their industry. Will the minister explain the lack of evaluation of the projected need for trained tradesmen and apprentices in this province?

Hon. Mr. McNie: I'll look into the item that the member referred to.

An hon. member: Notify the Ministry of Labour.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Rainy River.

ALBERTA NATURAL GAS

Mr. Reid: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have a question, in the absence of number two, for the Premier. Can the Premier advise the—

Mr. Speaker: Will the hon. member please rephrase that question?

Mr. Reid: To the Premier, Mr. Speaker, through you: Can the Premier advise on the current state of negotiations with the Province of Alberta in regard to the price of natural gas? And can the Premier also advise as to what negotiations are going on with Ottawa in regard to an energy policy both for the Province of Ontario and for Canada as a whole, and what stand Ontario is taking in these matters?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, there will be a fairly detailed statement within the next few days and I don't want to be pinned down at this moment as to how many days.

Mr. Reid: The Premier never wants to be pinned down.

Hon. Mr. Davis: So why change? With respect to energy, I don't think one could really describe the discussions as negotiations. I don't think it is really a question of negotiations.

There has been a great deal of effort in the past few weeks put into the development of an energy position by the Province of Ontario. My parliamentary assistant is, I think, at this moment discussing the matter with the resources committee and with other federal officials.

I think Ontario's broad position, of course, is fairly evident, and that is that we believe that in the total context there should be a national energy policy. I think this is self evident and something that I'm sure the hon. members opposite would support.

Mr. Stokes: I'm not sure Mr. Lougheed would support that.

Hon. Mr. Davis: As it relates to the position related to the suggested price increases by the Province of Alberta, just what constitutional or legal position, or what posture we can adopt here, I'm not in a position to say at this moment. I can only assure the hon. member that this whole area has been the subject of very intensive work over the past three or four weeks—or couple of months now—and that we shall be in a position to make a form of statement setting out some of the problems and some of the possible solutions, hopefully within the next few days. I can't assure the hon. member it will necessarily be next week, but we wish to do it as soon as possible.

Mr. Reid: May I, by way of supplementary—

Mr. Speaker: The oral question period has expired.

Introduction of bills.

HIGHWAY TRAFFIC ACT

Mr. Kennedy moves first reading of bill intituled, An Act to amend the Highway Traffic Act.

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

Mr. R. D. Kennedy (Peel South): Mr. Speaker, this bill provides for compulsory wearing of seat belts while driving or travelling in a motor vehicle other than a motorcycle. There is evidence that the use of seat belts would result in very significant reduction of both fatalities and personal injuries.

ARBITRATIONS ACT

Hon. Mr. Bales moves first reading of bill intituled, An Act to amend the Arbitrations Act.

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

Hon. Mr. Bales: Mr. Speaker, the fixing of arbitrators' fees is taken from the schedule in the present Act and will be prescribed by regulation in future under the provisions of this bill.

PROCEEDINGS AGAINST THE CROWN ACT

Hon. Mr. Bales moves first reading of bill intituled, An Act to amend the Proceedings against the Crown Act.

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

Hon. Mr. Bales: Mr. Speaker, the amendment in this bill adds the Motor Vehicles Fuel Tax Act to the list of statutes not affected by the Proceedings against the Crown Act. Provisions for trial and appeal of assessments were added to the former Act in the 1972 session.

SECURITIES ACT

Hon. Mr. Clement moves first reading of bill intituled, An Act to amend the Securities Act.

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

Hon. Mr. Clement: Mr. Speaker, this is a very brief amendment, but in essence it provides that when orders of the director be stayed, they are to take effect immediately, even though under review subject to a stay being specifically granted.

CERTIFICATION OF TITLES AMENDMENT ACT

Hon. Mr. Clement moves first reading of bill intituled, An Act to amend the Certification of Titles Act.

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

Hon. Mr. Clement: Mr. Speaker, there are two amendments to this bill.

One amendment provides for the repealing of a section in the current Act which provides for the director of titles to have access to registry offices and to documents registered therein. The provisions are obsolete since they all come under the one administration covering persons employed under the Public Service Act.

The second amendment requires the director of titles to hold hearings in claims against the assurance funds.

MOTOR VEHICLES ACCIDENT CLAIMS ACT

Hon. Mr. Clement moves first reading of bill intituled, An Act to amend the Motor Vehicles Accident Claims Act.

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

Hon. Mr. Clement: Mr. Speaker, this bill provides that the Superintendent of Insurance be substituted for the Registrar of Motor Vehicles wherever it is referred to in the Act.

Secondly, it provides for a 48-hour period for the production of evidence of insurance instead of the term reasonable time as provided in the current Act.

Thirdly, it provides that the suspension of driving privileges not only applies to the current licence but to any renewal thereof. This amendment is required as the result of a recent case decided by the Ontario Court of Appeal.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Scarborough Centre.

Mr. Roy: This should be good.

Mr. Drea: Is the member still with us? I thought he was going federal.

Mr. Roy: Don't worry, I'll be around when the member is long gone.

Mr. Drea: I don't lose nominations to chiropractors.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Who is the member nominating today?

Mr. Roy: Hang on!

APPRENTICESHIP AND TRADESMEN'S QUALIFICATIONS ACT

Mr. Drea moves first reading of bill intituled, An Act to amend the Apprenticeship and Tradesmen's Qualifications Act.

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

Mr. B. Newman: Why didn't the member whisper it to the judge?

Mr. Drea: Where is he?

Mr. Sargent: It'll never sell!

Mr. Roy: Reluctantly carried. Just wait a second.

Mr. Drea: Mr. Speaker, the bill is to establish compulsory certification for persons engaged in the trade of servicing radio and television sets. Simply because you cannot establish honesty and competency at the same time I would like to introduce a second bill.

Interjections by hon. members.

CONSUMER PROTECTION ACT

Mr. Drea moves first reading of bill intituled, An Act to amend the Consumer Protection Act.

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

Mr. Roy: Reluctantly carried. Just wait a second; does that amend the first bill?

Mr. Breithaupt: More cabinet reform?

Mr. Bullbrook: The member better include the whole cabinet in that bill. There is no competency over there.

Mr. Drea: There is a little more than in those 22 seats.

Mr. Speaker, this bill would provide for the mandatory licensing and bonding of television repair servicemen and services and the licensing of repairmen across Ontario. There is an obvious need for it across all Ontario.

Mr. Speaker: The Leader of the Opposition.

PUBLIC HOSPITALS ACT

Mr. R. F. Nixon moves first reading of bill intituled, An Act to amend the Public Hospitals Act.

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, the bill provides for appeal procedures for an applicant who has been refused appointment as a member of the medical staff of a public hospital for the first time.

Mr. Speaker: Orders of the day.

ELEVATOR CONSTRUCTOR UNIONS DISPUTES ACT

Hon. Mr. Guindon moves second reading of Bill 2, An Act respecting labour disputes between Armour Elevator Canada Ltd., Dover Corp. (Canada) Ltd., Montgomery Elevator Co. Ltd., Otis Elevator Co. Ltd., and Westinghouse Canada Ltd. employers and the International Union of Elevator Constructors, Locals 50, 90 and 96.

Hon. F. Guindon (Minister of Labour): Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today I wish to proceed with legislation introduced into the House yesterday to bring an end to the work stoppage in the elevator industry in Ontario.

May I first express my regret that the government has been forced to take this step. Throughout the negotiations of the past few months it has been my hope that the parties themselves would be able to reach a satisfactory agreement. Regretfully, this has not been the case.

The dispute in Ontario involves five elevator companies—Armour Elevator Ltd., Dover Corp. Ltd., Montgomery Elevator Co., Otis Elevator Co., Westinghouse Canada Ltd.—and about 1,200 members of the International Union of Elevator Constructors, Locals 50, 90 and 96.

The collective agreements between these parties expired last April and negotiations have been under way since that time. In July, the conciliation and mediation services of the Ministry of Labour became involved.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Guindon: At the end of August the strike began in Hamilton and spread throughout Ontario and then across Canada. In early December Mr. William H. Dickie, my assistant deputy minister, became personally involved in the negotiations and he and his officers have held a total of 45 days of mediation talks since that time.

On March 5, 6, 7, 8 and 9 I met with both sides. By the end of that week I reported the results of these talks to the Premier (Mr. Davis) and he indicated he would like to meet personally with the parties. Two meetings for both management and labour were arranged.

Subsequently, the Premier and I reported to cabinet. The decision of cabinet was that legislation would be introduced early in the session to bring an end to the dispute and on March 14 Premier Davis announced this publicly.

Since that time I would emphasize that the full services of my ministry have continued to be available to the parties. There are those who say that our actions today will have a detrimental effect on collective bargaining in Ontario. Mr. Speaker, nothing could be further from the truth. Since I assumed my portfolio I have frequently stated my belief in the collective bargaining process, in the need for the parties in a dispute to reach their own solutions, and that is a belief which I reaffirm today. The very fact that this is the first occasion that compulsory arbitration has been imposed in the private sector in Ontario certainly speaks well of the state of labour-management relations in this province.

Mr. Speaker, I feel all of us here must agree that there comes a point in any dispute when public considerations must take precedence, when the interest, safety and well-being of the public must be of prime concern. I have received many letters from concerned citizens across the province outlining not merely inconvenience but genuine hardships which this dispute has imposed, and I am sure that every member of the House has received similar correspondence.

We have therefore reached a point at which the government cannot remain passive but must act in the best interests of the majority of the citizens of this province.

Mr. M. Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Tell us about the companies and how they held up—

Mr. R. F. Nixon (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, much has been said about precedent established by this bill and that it is the first time the Legislature has considered a law which would end, by compulsory arbitration, a strike that is totally in the private sector. In my opinion it doesn't matter a whit whether it is in the public sector or in the private sector. When the safety of the citizens and the welfare of the community are concerned, then it is our responsibility to act.

My criticism really is that the minister and the Premier of Ontario have not acted sooner in the capacities they have and with the powers they have enjoyed. But I can't understand the feeling that has been expressed by the NDP that there is something special about the circumstances of this particular negotiation because both the unions and the companies are entirely in the private sector. I cannot understand the rationale which on that basis would lead them to resist approving the bill. I have heard the acting leader of that party indicate that this is a major aspect of their opposition, and to me it seems completely irrational.

Mr. Speaker, I want to deal very briefly with some of the circumstances and events since the strike began on Sept. 7 and, as a matter of fact, in the Hamilton area on Aug. 28. My mention of Hamilton is significant, because I understand that most of the elevator union locals have already directed their workers to get back to their employment today in the expectation that this bill will become statute—with the possible exception of those workers in Hamilton, who seem to be even more militant than the others.

There is no doubt that this has been a very tough negotiation between the unions and management. The minister has mentioned the participation of his assistant deputy, Mr. Dickie, and of course I am glad to see that he is sitting under the gallery today. But I suppose this is a substantial disappointment for him, because he and his staff and the negotiators on behalf of the union and management have committed so many hours, according to all reports, to a very careful review of the two positions. Mr. Dickie in particular has attempted to bring them to some kind of meeting of minds that could effect a solution.

Apparently, however, this has not been possible, and hasn't even been nearly possible; the two sides are so remote from this meeting of minds that in the public interest it is necessary now to consider the legislation which we, on our part, are prepared to support.

Mr. Speaker, when we think of those events since the strike began officially on Sept. 7, almost seven months ago, there has been a serious dislocation on the part of many individuals and in some communities of the economy itself. I suppose we can survive most strikes for a few weeks, but once the effects of this kind of strike, which are cumulative, affect the community for many months, then obviously the public interest must be served by action taken by this Legislature and an action which, I suppose, has got to be as definite as this bill is.

I don't see how we can impose compulsory arbitration which is in fact not compulsory. I don't see how we can use the undoubted power of this chamber through the Minister of Labour and the government of Ontario to effect a solution which will put the elevator workers back on their maintenance and installation jobs, without going the whole way and setting up the procedures whereby an agreement will be hammered out and arbitrarily imposed, whether the two sides sign it or not.

I feel that the NDP in opposing this bill do so on the basis of principle, that it interferes with the ordinary course of the negotiations between two sides. I think that that is a stance which certainly is understandable. But when they say there is something special about this because only private parties per se are involved, then I think their approach becomes irrational. Also, by introducing a bill which evidently purports to achieve compulsory arbitration without imposing an agreement, I believe they are trying to have both sides of the issue at the same time, and that their actions yesterday in many respects have lost them the confidence of even a larger segment of the community than they might otherwise have expected.

Mr. T. P. Reid (Rainy River): Even within their own party!

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, I don't want to dwell on the events. After all, we have seen the problems in major hotels down the street—the Sheraton Four Seasons, for example. There has been a good deal of publicity about the problems in getting that edifice in full operation.

I'm not concerned about that particularly. I feel sure that once they get it in operation their profit position will be all right as far as they're concerned. But if you don't go quite so far down University Ave. you come to another major edifice, the Mount Sinai Hospital, which has had facilities suspended pending the ending of this strike; and also installations at the subway extension which is going to be opened in a few days. One of the homes for the aged in Sudbury, I believe put up under the auspices of the United Church of Canada, has been suspended in its usefulness.

All of these things, I suppose, while they are tremendously dislocating, can be borne for a long period of time, maybe even longer than seven months. But it's when the chief inspector for elevator safety goes out on a limb, lays his job on the line, and makes a statement publicly without reference to his minister that the situation as far as safety is concerned is approaching crisis proportions that we must take a new look at the situation. That's when, in our opinion in the Liberal Party, there could be no doubt that if solution was not achieved immediately then we would have to resort to the compulsory arbitration that is the principle of this bill.

I would have expected that the Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations (Mr. Clement), to whom the elevator inspection staff reports, would have made a statement either in the House yesterday or perhaps even publicly before the House began the session, indicating that he was accepting the report of his chief inspector as a valid one and one that in fact should have the impact on the community which it did have.

There were those in Ontario who, when they read the report, pooh-poohed it and said that, it was an exaggeration of the situation. In my view the responsibilities of the chief inspector and his staff are paramount, and further he deserves a medal for taking this independent action on behalf of the citizens of Ontario, an action which his minister should have taken even earlier than it was taken by the inspector himself.

Mr. Speaker, you are aware, I know, that the situation involving the elevator installers and maintenance men has been a matter of prolonged negotiations in the United States as well as in every province of Canada. The American solution, while it was not imposed, did have tremendous pressures, I believe from Washington, exerted upon the two parties so that they did reach a settlement and there was not the situation that we have experienced here of a prolonged strike. President Nixon's imposition of wage and price controls and more stringent controls on the economy in general, I felt, led to that situation in the United States. As a matter of fact, I had the impression since it is an international union that they had settled and really left it to the Canadians to fight the real battle to see just how far they could go in a community where the use of elevators is becoming absolutely of prime importance, and the maintenance and the safety of the facilities are of equal or even greater importance.

You know, Mr. Speaker, as well that, by the constitution—because elevators go up and down and not back and forth across provincial boundaries—this strike fell wholly in the provincial jurisdiction, although of course it had national ramifications. The installation of all elevators and their maintenance is a problem in very community in Canada and all of the workers have been out on strike.

There has been a special situation in BC and Quebec where the strike came under the jurisdiction of special legislation which actually made it illegal, but when in those jurisdictions there has been a work-to-rule and a slowdown so that the situation has been bad in those two provinces as well.

It is interesting, Mr. Speaker, that under those circumstances there has been considerable pressure on the provinces to turn to the federal Department of Labour for at least some assistance in these negotiations. For the life of me, I cannot understand why the Minister of Labour for Ontario and the Premier himself did not take the lead in at least requesting the involvement of John Munro, the federal minister, and his staff in attempting to work out some sort of a solution.

It seems to me eminently practical in a strike with interprovincial ramifications—national ramifications—that the federal department should have been involved. As a matter of fact, it would have been one way for the minister to have forgone that black Tuesday, or whatever it was that he called it when he made the decision to go forward with compulsory arbitration, if many months before had had asked the federal Department of Labour to share his responsibility and at least attempt to bring about negotiations.

I wouldn't for a moment suggest to you, sir, that there is anybody in Ottawa who can negotiate with the unions and with management any better than Mr. Dickie and our staff here, but we must remember that the unions have branches all across Canada and they can't all send their people down here to sit down in the Royal York or wherever the minister happens to have his negotiations. Maybe that's not quite luxurious enough for the three sides any more but it certainly would have been a sensible approach to recognize the ramifications of this strike as being national in scope and accept at least some assistance and support at the national level.

Further, Mr. Speaker, it has been interesting that this has been a matter of contention in Ottawa where the official opposition, the Conservative Party, has been deeply critical of the government of Canada for not intruding itself into this situation and attempting to effect a settlement. The other interesting part is that it has been big news in the press gallery in Ottawa, every time somebody from the opposition raises the question, that the hon. John Munro explains that he has no jurisdiction and that it is at the provincial level.

As far as we are concerned in this province, because of the unnatural decision of the Premier to postpone this Legislature until after the by-elections held last week there has been no opportunity to express these views in this particular chamber. In an attempt to make it an issue outside the chamber, I have found that the community, at least as expressed by the opinions of the press, has been completely uninterested in any aspects or any views that might have been expressed from the opposition side as to whether or not this Minister of Labour and the Premier of Ontario might have taken some initiative much earlier.

One valid point that was made by the NDP yesterday is that it seems ridiculous that the government now considers it to be such a matter of crisis importance that we act on the very day that the Legislature resumes its regular business—when it was the political decision of the Premier of Ontario to postpone this session later than any date since 1872 so that he was not going to ripple the waters of the by-elections and he didn't want political matters to be discussed. Of all the fatuous and ridiculous statements that was ever made that's got to take the cake!

Here is an issue of prime importance that should have been discussed in this House on a daily basis. We should have been bringing pressure on the minister and the Premier at least to make some personal intervention, if not to call in the government of Canada to share these heavy responsibilities. To delay action for seven full months is totally irresponsible. It is directly due to the political decision of the Premier to leave this chamber out of session and the members in limbo as far as expressing views that are our right to express in this chamber.

Mr. Speaker, the minister made a good statement in the introduction of the bill. I accept his protestations that he has expressed publicly over the last two or three weeks on his unwillingness to impose compulsory arbitration. Because of the intransigence of both sides, I would say that he was forced to take this step.

It is true that the unions have called for voluntary arbitration for a considerable period of time and the companies' management have said that: "We have gone as far as we can go; we cannot accept the fact that an arbitrator can move in and order us to give more because it would be the abandonment of the right to manage our own business."

If we have that sort of an attitude then there is no doubt that the Legislature must step in and impose compulsory arbitration; because the statements of management presuppose that the arbitrators, whomever they may be—and the bill calls for three of them—are going to somehow come to a position midway between the two extreme positions; and that may very well be the case.

But we have to have confidence that the three arbitrators, representing the two sides and the public interest—the third arbitrator hopefully representing the general public interest—will arrive at a fair and equitable solution so that the workmen can go back to their jobs and the companies can go back to theirs, which we presume is to make enough profit to pay the members of the union a fair wage and have a profit left over for themselves.

There is no doubt the elevator business must have been one of the most extremely profitable ones in recent years; and if it hasn't been then they must be very bad managers, because the development of the use of elevators has expanded fantastically. The expertise and even the costs have gone up in a skyrocket fashion.

It seems to me the crux of the situation is the fact that the safety of the general public is involved. The situation is intolerable that in some of these high rises older citizens in particular have been marooned for many weeks because they simply cannot make use of the stairs. The prospects of a fire in a highrise is something else that doesn't bear thinking about. And I know that my colleague from York-Forest Hill (Mr. Givens) raised the matter many months ago of the problems of fires in highrises and the fact that we are ill equipped to cope with them. The chief elevator inspector very specifically said that he didn't think that there was—

Mr. J. A. Renwick (Riverdale): The last thing you use is an elevator in the case of fire.

Mr. Cassidy: The first thing you do is shut it down.

Mr. V. M. Singer (Downsview): We are going to hear some really clever remarks today.

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Mr. Singer: Did the hon. member get a call from Kentucky today?

Mr. I. Deans (Wentworth): I don't require a call.

Mr. Singer: The member should have. He would have done better than the member does.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, the point that my hon. friends to the left have brought to my attention in chorus—

Mr. Cassidy: Has the Leader of the Opposition ever ridden in an elevator?

Mr. R. F. Nixon: —about not using elevators in a fire is well taken. Fortunately, Mr. Speaker, I live in an area where high-rises don't predominate and the only time I use an elevator is when I am visiting my friends in St. James Town—and there are a good many of them there.

So, Mr. Speaker, the matter that was certainly brought to the attention of reasonable citizens as far as safety is concerned is not so much that the elevators may drop—I don't think that the chief inspector made that as one of the scare points at all—he simply said that the doors might very well open, exposing an empty shaft with all the dangers involved; that the doors might open between floors and that there was an increasing incidence of this sort of problem, which was bound to increase because of the special permits given to the operators of these elevators to continue their use without their regular maintenance. I am sure they were inspected under their regular procedures. So that is the situation as far as safety is concerned; without regard to the fire hazard, which I take from my advisers to the left, since they are aware of these things, is an item that should not be considered.

So Mr. Speaker, the government must carry not only the responsibility for this legislation—

Mr. Deans: It is not the only area.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: —that is for the fact that after seven months they must impose compulsory arbitration, but for the fact that over these many months their efforts could have been stronger than they were.

I'm not saying that their negotiators could have worked harder, but that the initiative of the minister and the Premier has been lacking; that they have both been weak and they have both been ineffectual in seizing the alternatives that have presented themselves on more than one occasion to share the responsibility for the negotiations with the government of Canada; or if necessary, well before now, to call the Legislature into session so that this legislation could have been considered and we could have had this strike brought to an end at an earlier date.

As far as the bill itself is concerned, we have examined it carefully and we are going to offer a series, of I believe three amendments, which I would say to you, Mr. Speaker, we hope will be supported on all sides of the House because we think they will improve the concept of the application of compulsory arbitration in this respect to a considerable degree.

The bill essentially puts the elevator workers back on the job so that they can, I suppose primarily see to the maintenance of the elevators presently in function and then proceed with the installations of the new ones.

We are prepared to support the principle of the bill mainly because the public safety of the province demands it.

Mr. E. J. Bounsall (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, I rise to explain our opposition to the government bill as it now stands—

An hon. member: That will take some doing.

Mr. Bounsall: —which legislates compulsory arbitration for the first time in a private dispute in the Province of Ontario. This action by itself, as the Minister of Labour has said on several occasions, is a precedent that he would not like to see established; and I think it is a dangerous precedent. It opens wide the door for the public and the press. Although the Queen's Park press gallery may not fall prey to it, certainly the editorial writers of our newspapers would be more prone to use it. It opens the door to their calls for compulsory arbitration in every dispute in this province that runs beyond the time that they might decide is too long.

Hon. G. A. Kerr (Provincial Secretary for Justice): Who's they?

Mr. J. F. Foulds (Port Arthur): The editorial writers.

Hon. Mr. Kerr: Do they pass bills?

Mr. Bounsall: Capitulation to these demands, which will be successively harder to prevent, will result in the action of one side or in some cases both sides not seriously bargaining in good faith, lengthening the strike or lockout in the hope that the imposition of compulsory, binding arbitration will be imposed, thereby allowing them to say that it isn't we who have gotten ourselves into this labour relation situation with our employees but the government of Ontario which is to blame for the labour relations situation in our particular company and in our particular work jurisdiction.

In fact, once we have imposed compulsory arbitration in the private sector for the first time we needn't look for any further instances of imposition, this one will be enough for a party to a dispute to drag its feet, to not bargain in good faith in the hope of the Ontario government coming in. The Minister of Labour himself, upon hearing that the Premier of this province would impose compulsory arbitration called that day "black Wednesday". I quote: "As far as I'm concerned as Minister of Labour this is a black Wednesday. I've been a member of the Legislature for 15 years—"

Hon. E. A. Winkler (Chairman, Management Board of Cabinet): It was Thursday!

Mr. Bounsall: Thursday? Was it Thursday the minister called "black"?

Hon. Mr. Winkler: Get the days right.

Mr. Foulds: The minister hasn't been listening.

An hon. member: He was quoting the minister.

An hon. member: He's not sure what he's talking about there anyway.

Mr. Bounsall: "For 15 years—"

An hon. member: Back to the woodwork!

Mr. Bounsall: "—and this is the saddest day of my career."

An hon. member: Almost resigned I bet.

Mr. Bounsall: Well we have introduced a proposal—

Mr. E. R. Good (Waterloo North): That is a dentist's bill! There are no teeth in it.

Mr. Bounsall: —that is an alternative to this, a way to save the minister from this step—

Mr. Deans: That is a false interpretation.

Mr. Bounsall: —and one which would not cause him to impose what has hitherto been understood as—

Mr. Good: Ridiculous.

Mr. Bounsall: —compulsory arbitration; the understanding of that phrase being compulsory, binding arbitration.

Mr. R. Haggerty (Welland South): They brought the guillotine in.

Mr. Bounsall: It is a way in which we can offer the minister means of not dropping over this precipice which he would so dearly like not to do, in public terms at least.

Our proposal would allow for the immediate stoppage of the strike and would cause the workers to return to work, as indeed they already have—as indeed they said they would, once any government legislation was introduced. They would presumably have been willing to return to work last January, last February or early in March if the government had decided to involve itself sooner. The major difference, of course, is that there would be—

Mr. Singer: And then what happens?

Mr. Bounsall: —a voluntary acceptance of that decision. The important point to be made is that it allows the decision to be not binding and gives the unions and the companies 10 days in which to make their responses.

The purists in the province, labour lawyers and civil servants in the Ministry of Labour, will say that's not arbitration, because compulsory arbitration and arbitration generally has been defined heretofore as binding. Compulsory arbitration involves being bound to the decision. If we all took the attitude that this is the definition of compulsory arbitration and that there is no other way one can change or broaden that definition, not one advance would have been made in our courts or in our Legislatures in response to any needs of the day or in response to any questions that come before us.

Simply because compulsory arbitration heretofore has been written down and therefore understood as being binding in its decisions that is no reason we cannot write down that compulsory arbitration decisions may well be non-binding. It's only purists, who are unwilling to extend any definition of any written word, who say in this respect, "This cannot be done."

We can do it, should we choose to do it. I am suggesting that we chose to do it in this instance; that we add this little bit of originality to this particular long, involved and difficult labour dispute.

One can call this proposal any name one wants. I might say this does differ from simply a cooling-off period; which is familiar in some other jurisdictions, south of the border particularly. It is different from that. One can call it by any other name that one so chooses, but I would prefer to introduce this concept as a further refinement, and possibility therefore, to the definition of arbitration.

The advantages that flow from this, I think, are obvious. The arbitration board hands down a decision and in our bill we have put pretty firm time limits on how long it will take; how long either side can take to appoint arbitrators; how long the minister could, in fact, take, if the parties did not agree in a short time, to appoint the chairman of the arbitration board. On that point I might say that I suspect the minister may well be appointing the chairman of this arbitration board because the parties might not agree. But in this bill that the minister has presented he hasn't given them any opportunity for even three or four days to say that they can agree on an arbitrator. I don't see why the minister capitulates so early by saying that because there has been intransigence, mainly on the part of one party in this dispute up to this point, that those people cannot change their minds now.

Having formed an arbitration board and having heard the arguments of both sides, we would say that they should report their decision, not just in a reasonable time because that term can be a damned long time before it starts to become unreasonable—I would like to see this bill define that time. I know the Minister of Labour is very aware of situations in which arbitration boards have met, all the evidence has been presented, then the members of the arbitration board have disappeared rather than sitting down with the evidence all before them and banging out their decision.

What our bill would purport to do, as opposed to his, is put the number of days on it—10—in which the arbitration board members would arrive at their decision. Our bill says to them: "You are not returning therefore to your place of business, to your normal activities, to a vacation and then coming back days or weeks later to try to pick up all the points that were presented." We are saying that when the hearings are over, they sit right there and make up their minds on all the issues that are in dispute that this bill, and our bill, purports that they should deal with. So our bills differ in major aspects, apart from the time limits.

Then what happens? We would say that both sides have 10 days in which to render their decision as to whether they accept or reject the arbitration board's conclusions.

Mr. Singer: And then what happens?

Mr. Bounsall: This gives a return, Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Singer: Yes, and then what happens?

Mr. Bounsall: —to the collective bargaining system.

Mr. Deans: We sign an agreement.

Mr. Bounsall: This allows—and I'll spell it out in a very trite example.

Mr. Singer: We start all over again!

Mr. Bounsall: In any arbitration decision handed down we will probably find one-third of the decision which one side hates with its heart and soul—but there it is. And another third which the other side would find very difficult to live with.

An hon. member: That is nonsense!

Mr. Bounsall: But there is probably a third which both sides could probably live with.

Mr. Singer: Both agree and the strike starts all over again!

Mr. Bounsall: But within that third they would find points which they themselves, in consultation, could improve upon by agreement. This provides a final opportunity for the two sides, heretofore having great difficulties in reaching agreement, to sit down and say to each other: "We can live with what is here but the wording of this would be better, the phrasing of this or the intent of this would be better by a change."

Mr. J. E. Bullbrook (Sarnia): Why is it final? There is no finality about it at all.

Mr. Bounsall: And with the other side agreed, they could go back and say to the minister: "We accept your decision with these agreed-upon changes by ourselves." And if the minister really believes in the preamble to his Labour Relations Act, which he administers and in which it states: "Whereas it is in the public interest of the Province of Ontario to further harmonious relations between employers and employees by encouraging the practice and procedures of collective bargaining between employers and trade unions," this minister would want to provide every opportunity for the collective bargaining procedure to operate. Therefore, he should be accepting this final and further opportunity for the collective bargaining process to take place.

We hear cries from the group on our right: "What will happen if one of them rejects?" I don't need to point out to the minister that should one of the parties be so foolish as to reject at that point with three completely independent people pursuing arbitration in as rigorous a way as any arbitration is proceeded with, if they should be so foolish as to turn that down, that is the point where we in this Legislature could decide that we would compel some sort of decision. But I am confident that this will not occur because of public pressures in the face of that sort of an arrangement, in view of the rigorous arbitration procedure having been followed and the great public pressure on both sides to accept.

In the case of whichever side says no, I don't need to remind the minister or the officials from the labour department that are here that any arbitrator in a subsequent arbitration, if that is perhaps necessary, takes into account in his decision and in his conclusions, or tends to take into account in his conclusions, the mood and degree of intransigence that one side has exhibited. So the side which might object to this could be faced with another round of arbitration—meanwhile, I would point out that the workers are completely back to work throughout all of this—and stands a chance of getting a decision which is no better than the one it received, and could well be worse.

Therefore, that is why they will not reject. It is still not compulsory, binding arbitration and it allows the collective bargaining process a last and final chance. I might say to the minister this is a chance that should probably be given in this dispute. With 52 years of peace in this industry, the parties to this dispute are rather like a newly formed union which has never struck before, and which has never had to negotiate under the pressure of a strike. They are not like some of the other unions and companies in our province which are used to the pressures of negotiations which they are suffering financial losses on both sides.

They are rather, in a sense, compared to some of the experienced strikers and struck companies in this province, a little bit naïve, I really think in terms of what is going to happen five years from now and five years after that that the minister should provide them every opportunity to get used to the type of collective bargaining that they should be pursuing and are going to have to pursue in the future.

Mr. J. E. Stokes (Thunder Bay): Good point!

Mr. Bounsall: The minister can grant that. As the bill stands now, having offered this alternative procedure, and having allowed the minister the means by which he needn't fall over the precipice, we must vote against it.

We say to the minister we don't necessarily insist upon the form of our bill. He can tack it onto his bill; he can change the words in his bill. We say to him wait until later on this afternoon, or perhaps even wait until tonight. Take the supper hour to think it over before bringing it back to the committee stage. Think very seriously about the inclusion of that in the bill.

We don't need to remind the minister or his staff in the mediation department of the problems that they have encountered as they have tried to seek peace in this situation. It has been mentioned by the Leader of the Opposition in his remarks that it looked as if the international union was abandoning its Canadian counterpart to fight this out on their own.

Let me make clear what has happened in this international union. In March, 1971, at the international convention held in Miami, the Canadian division of this international union decided that it would acquire for itself complete autonomy, and it did so. At that convention one of the chief items that occurred was the right of the Canadian delegates by themselves, in caucus at that time, to elect by secret ballot amongst themselves four negotiators to undertake the task of negotiating a Canadian standard agreement that fitted the Canadian scene, free from any interference from the US head office. That is what they did, and Canadian negotiators on the union side have been the negotiators in this dispute.

Mr. Foulds: Good point!

Mr. Bounsall: I sympathize with the negotiators from the Ministry of Labour who had to sit through attempts to get proper agreement with these sides, when the company negotiators did not at all have that same power.

Mr. Foulds: Very good point!

Mr. Bounsall: I sympathize with the men that were placed by these companies at the negotiating table too, because they did not have that power—each one of their decisions had to be endorsed and await approval by a labour committee composed of whoever headed the Canadian division of these companies.

These people that would not come to the bargaining table, that could not get involved in the give-and-take, that could not see what progress was being made, could not see at first hand what could be given and what could not; they had to give the decision without having any of the flavour. But even this labour committee, composed of the heads of the Canadian companies, had to defer to orders from the US head offices. So this is a dispute taking place in Canada in which—

Mr. Renwick: No wonder you couldn't make a settlement.

Mr. Bounsall: —the negotiations were conducted by Canadian union negotiators and the other side had to wait for instructions from the US head offices.

An hon. member: Shame, shame!

Mr. Foulds: Why so quiet, Frank?

Mr. Bounsall: In one particular case, and I'll give an example—

Mr. F. Drea (Scarborough Centre): Where do the dues go?

Mr. Foulds: Where do the profits go?

Mr. Bounsall: —which again you are aware of.

Mr. Drea: Just tell me, where do the cheques come from? Where do the dues go?

Mr. Renwick: Where are the decisions made? That's what counts.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Bounsall: The member from Scarborough is unruly.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Drea: Who holds the membership cards for the men in the first place?

Mr. Foulds: Mr. Speaker, rule the previous speaker out of order, will you please?

Mr. Bounsall: Mr. Speaker, I am not telling anything which is not clear to the Minister of Labour or to his mediators in this dispute. In one particular case—

Mr. Drea: Second my bill!

Mr. Bounsall: —it took two days to obtain from the US approval to insert the word "intent" into the text of an article. What kind of progress can be made under those conditions?

And I might say that if our Labour Relations Act was seriously supposed to work in terms of bargaining in good faith, and cause people to bargain in good faith, you would have insisted upon the companies bargaining in good faith in this provision. I know you can say: "But the Act doesn't really provide that we, as the Department of Labour, can step in and say to one side you bargain in good faith." What I am saying to you is that you had better revise your Act, you had better even revise your attitude, and let it be known that if they don't do that you will revise the Act overnight so that you can, in fact, say to these companies: "Get down to bargaining in good faith, and quit this three-way up and down transferral of proposals that are coming forth from the table, and the three-way transfer down of a possible decision."

Mr. Drea: He wants to bring in—

Mr. Bounsall: If this Act was worth its salt, and if you were really concerned and really interested in proceeding with the bargaining in good faith legislation which is there, you would have insisted upon it.

Many times throughout these negotiations the company negotiators demanded that we accept the US agreement or major parts thereof as the Canadian agreement, and the negotiators refused to consider a Canadian proposal. In fact, one of the representatives of these United States-owned multi-national corporations at one point said—and this must make the Premier of our province feel pretty good—"What's good enough for the US is good enough for Canada. Who the hell does Davis therefore think he is?"

An hon. member: Shame on that!

Hon. W. G. Davis (Premier): Who would say that?

Mr. Bounsall: In front of—

Mr. Cassidy: One of the people who contributes to your party.

Mr. Bounsall: —civil servants from the Ministry of Labour. That is the attitude—

Mr. Cassidy: The Premier is losing his natural base of support.

Mr. Bounsall: —of at least one of the representatives of these companies. It is very clear—

Mr. M. C. Germa (Sudbury): Who the hell is Bill Davis?

Mr. Bounsall: —how he feels about Canada, the Province of Ontario or the Premier of this province.

An hon. member: Shame on him!

Hon. Mr. Davis: Yes, but does he know how we are settling it?

Mr. Germa: How much did he pay?

Hon. Mr. Davis: We don't like it any more than the member does.

Mr. Germa: How much did he pay?

Mr. Deans: Oh, I think that's all publicity.

Hon. Mr. Davis: I don't think so.

Mr. Bounsall: I'd just remind the members of the House that the union, in fact, was willing on March 3 to go to voluntary binding arbitration.

Mr. Singer: How can you have voluntary, binding arbitration?

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Bounsall: Here again it's very evident the members of the Liberal side don't know very much about the definition of arbitration.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Cassidy: That is being readily revealed.

Mr. Bounsall: For their edification binding, voluntary arbitration means that both sides go voluntarily to arbitration—

Mr. Singer: To arbitration which is binding.

Mr. Bounsall: —in which they agree that the decision will be binding, in which it is understood that all matters in dispute, which is the common—

Mr. R. F. Ruston (Essex-Kent): That's one of them NDPers and his forked tongue.

Mr. Foulds: Why doesn't the member just mind his jaw?

Mr. Bounsall: —which is common practice with all matters in dispute, go to arbitration.

It was interesting that the Leader of the Opposition—

Mr. S. B. Handleman (Carleton): The member is going off the track now.

Mr. Bounsall —has bought the companies' interpretation of what wasn't going to go to arbitration. They said that they will put all matters in arbitration but the work jurisdiction. In other words, they weren't willing to go to voluntary arbitration of all matters in the dispute.

Mr. Drea: Tell us about that.

Mr. Bounsall: In terms of the work jurisdiction, the Leader of the Opposition has made it sound as if the companies already had something that they were about to give up. Let's get right into that and clear this thing right up now.

Mr. Drea: Tell us about the—

Mr. Bounsall: In terms of the work jurisdiction, we have in this union the hiring hall practice which is very widespread in the entire construction industry. The majority of the construction industry has this practice. It is a practice that dates back to the guild halls of Europe and to the 13th century—

Mr. Drea: And modified by Jimmy Hoffa and Hal Banks.

Mr. Bounsall: —in which the labour on a particular construction job, in a particular division, is supplied through the guild. In North America, it is now supplied through the union. This is something which is here now.

When the companies say they are going to give up some managerial rights by putting that in the dispute, it's a right that they do not have and which the majority of the construction industry does not have. They're bucking a practice which dates back to the 13th century guilds in one small sector. It's a right that they do not have and therefore are trying to establish. The major thing in this issue is not the unions trying to get something new and novel for themselves, but to retain what already exists and is commonly accepted practice in the Province of Ontario, in North America and in Europe with respect to work jurisdiction.

This does not apply, for members who don't understand this or haven't taken the trouble to find out, with respect to layoffs. What the union did ask for, and I don't think any member in this House would find it unreasonable, and what they have said with respect to layoffs, which are a company prerogative, is that they don't think it's unreasonable that they have a small amount of seniority here. Anybody who has worked for 20 years as an elevator constructor or who is over 50 years of age should be among the ones laid off last from a particular job. I don't think any member in this House would find that an unreasonable proposal. They have also proposed at the same time a sequential system of layoffs, where in time of layoffs a probationary person would be laid off first, a trainee, who was not yet fully experienced in the way in which both sides had agreed he should, would be the next one to get laid off, and the permanent employees would be last, with those with 20 years experience or those of 50 years of age laid off as the very last group. I don't think the government would find that very unreasonable.

We have people in this House, 50 years of age or over, claiming that this is unreasonable. Well, if they had worked for 20 years or more in the industry, they might not think it too unreasonable.

Mr. Germa: They are all land speculators. They don't understand.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Bounsall: So we have the companies saying they will not agree voluntarily to put all matters in dispute to arbitration. At that point the union said, as I have indicated, that if the government therefore had to go to legislation, the moment that legislation was introduced the men would return to work. They have honoured that commitment which they made in private to the minister and in public.

Those persons in this House on the government side who supposedly were in close contact with both sides, who expressed the belief that there was going to be a delay in the return to work by the workers, which is the important point in this dispute in one sense, did not know or did not believe or forgot that that was the commitment they made. You can see across Toronto today the work being done on the elevators in the north Yonge subway, and virtually across this entire city and in other cities in Ontario you can see that word and that commitment being kept.

What we said yesterday was, "Let's give us one day for us to look further at each other's legislation," knowing full well there would be no delay in the return to work. The only delay would be if the companies decided they wouldn't accept the workers, and then we wouldn't have had a strike any more, we would have had a lockout.

I received a letter at one point early this month from the International Union of Elevator Constructors, in which it said that if at any time prior to the strike date there had been any indication of the company bargaining in good faith, no strike would have been called. They would have continued to negotiate as the settlement neared, as bargaining in good faith continued. If at any time after the strike commenced there had been similar indications, the union would have given serious consideration to ordering a resumption of work by its members.

We are particularly dismayed by the failure of this government to use the provisions of the Ontario Labour Relations Act, those dealing with bargaining in good faith, and the failure to impose penalties in that legislation to force the companies particularly to bargain in good faith.

There is one other aspect of this particular situation, in its international applications, which is interesting. Canada represents only a very small proportion of the construction of elevators by these multi-national companies. I have thought throughout this that they would have let this strike go on forever without any regard for public consideration or public safety in order to win a contract which they could then impose on the 90 per cent of their business which sits south of the border. Ten per cent of its business and its income disappearing for an interim period, I might also point out, is no great inconvenience to these companies.

They looked upon this Canadian sector as a real opportunity to let a strike drag on forever and get whatever kind of lousy contract they would like to see, using Canadians as the guinea pigs. I might further explain that as well as accounting for only 10 per cent or less of their total business, it is only a delay in their business. They don't suffer the same economically as in other strikes where loss of production results in loss of sales. Every elevator that was delayed in construction in Canada is still to be constructed once the strike is settled. There is no one else coming in and constructing elevators while this strike is proceeding. They will get the income from each and every job that they have on their books. It is only a delay of the profits that is occurring. Therefore, they could delay indefinitely and gave every indication that they would so do.

In each of their contracts—although not having been struck for 52 years—they had strike release clauses. So in fact there would be no penalty for them as companies. They did not care how many other companies, some of them Canadian, took financial losses that they might not be able to withstand. They couldn't care; they were "all right Jack" as far as their economic situation was concerned.

Mr. Speaker, I would suggest as well that the government has become involved belatedly. I point out that when Mr. Moser, the chief elevator inspector in Ontario said a couple of weeks ago that we had reached a position that could endanger the public safety, you could have had us back here then to settle that strike.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Would the member's position have been different then?

Mr. Deans: How can the Premier tell?

Mr. Bounsall: We were willing then to put the position that we are putting now. The Premier wasn't willing to have us come and put it then, was he?

Hon. Mr. Davis: The member wants it both ways and he can't have it both ways on this issue.

Mr. Bounsall: The Premier is still trying to say there was a delay. He is still trying to say there was a delay in getting the workers back to work by our action yesterday. Well that did not occur. The workers went back to work the day the government introduced legislation. And that could have been done two weeks ago, a month ago; or two weeks ago when Mr. Moser indicated public safety was involved. The only reason the Premier didn't was that he feared an impact on a couple of by-elections.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Oh nonsense!

Mr. Bounsall: There was utter disregard for the safety and convenience of the public for personal reasons. That is why we are meeting now rather than two weeks ago when technical experts told the Premier and the Province of Ontario, and Canada, there was a safety problem involved.

Hon. Mr. Davis: That's utter nonsense.

Mr. Bounsall: Now that he has become involved, the Premier has one other responsibility. He has a responsibility to set the priorities as to which projects are now going to be undertaken and in which locations elevators are going to be constructed. The big loss that is occurring in terms of revenue will be passed directly on to the tenants. There are apartment buildings which cannot be occupied, and some of them are for senior citizens who are in desperate need of that accommodation.

We in this Legislature have the onus to say in what order projects are to be now undertaken.

The Four Seasons-Sheraton and some of the commercial buildings, which are occupied by workers maybe eight hours of the day, can take second place to construction of elevators in apartments and for senior citizens' accommodation where people live 16 hours of the day or 24 hours of the day.

And the Premier had better see that this bill contains some provision for the priorities this government in Ontario would like to see in terms of which facilities get their elevators constructed first. And if it doesn't, the Premier is saying he really doesn't care which facilities go into operation first. He's saying let the Four Seasons-Sheraton have its elevator but let the senior citizens' homes in this city and in Kirkland Lake and in Windsor not open for a while; let them open after they've got the Four Seasons-Sheraton's escalators working!

I say to the minister that there are things which we left out of our bill which are left out of his. In this situation, bearing in mind that it is his own legislation in another sector which creates the problems, near the end of this bill he should provide a phrase allowing for voluntary overtime to occur. In this situation, we run the risk of some employees being worked 16 or 18 hours a day—and they cannot get out of that under the Employment Standards Act—and others not being taken back, should the company decide to be intransigent.

The Employment Standards Act has a nice little phrase in it which says: "All the provisions relating to eight hours and 48 hours," and so on—all those provisions can be disregarded if the bargaining agent and the company agree otherwise. When one asks what's the interpretation of that, it means that unless the bargaining agent puts into his collective agreement that overtime will be voluntary the company can force any worker to work any amount of overtime.

Therefore, because that's the minister's interpretation—which I think is faulty—of legislation which he has written in another sector, it's incumbent upon him to add to this bill a phrase that, for at least the length of this arbitration decision, whichever way that arbitration decision is to be, there be voluntary overtime to ensure that many men—perhaps all of them—are working a bit of overtime according to whether or not they can and want to work that overtime. We must not force them to work all kinds of overtime while some other people in this province are not being trained or are not being given an opportunity to construct elevators and work in their field of chosen specialty.

Mr. Drea: They have to get permission from the union to work.

Mr. Bounsall: I would ask the minister to give that very serious consideration before we get to the committee stage. Before we get to the committee stage, I would hope that he will consider very carefully the major provision that we have made and pull himself back from this precipice over which he is about to fall.

I may also say—perhaps the minister's officials for some reason were not aware of it—there is at least one other thing apart from the preamble which can bear some adjustment. That is the section which says: "The employers shall not, except with the consent of the unions, alter the rates of wages," or terms or conditions and so on, dating back to April 30. Perhaps the minister or his officials are not aware that the one-year agreement for automatic adjustment of wages, related to the average in certain other areas of the construction industry, occurred last July 1 before this strike occurred. If this section is not cleared up the minister is forcing the workers back at an hourly rate which is roughly 50 cents less than what they went on strike for, at the time they went on strike. He had better get that cleared up or make it very clear just exactly what rate he is referring to; is it prior to—

Hon. Mr. Kerr: They went back voluntarily today.

Mr. Bounsall: —July 1 or after July 1, 1972?

Hon. Mr. Guindon: We are quite aware of it.

Mr. Bounsall: I think, lest I be in danger of being out of order in talking in detail on some of the other things that we would like the minister to consider, we will simply conclude at this point. But I point out that I don't know how—with the preamble we have here, which blames the unions in essence; perhaps not in terms of pure English, but the way anybody reading this would take it—the minister could have the gall to say that strikes by the unions against the employers threaten the public safety and welfare in this province, particularly now when the workers are back to work.

Mr. Renwick: It is the only conclusion one can draw from the preamble.

Mr. Bounsall: And the minister had better change that one too.

Mr. R. Gisborn (Hamilton East): They can't get over that bias they have.

Mr. Speaker: Are there any speakers on the government side before we start alternating?

Mr. Reid: How about the Premier? He has been running things.

Hon. Mr. Kerr: I would just like to deal very briefly with some of the remarks that have been made regarding this matter.

I think one of the points that was raised by the Leader of the Opposition was the fact that we should have been back earlier to settle this strike, that the Legislature should have been called into session and this type of legislation that we are dealing with now considered by the Legislature.

I don't think it is correct or even reasonable to say that this strike has been postponed as a result of the House not opening earlier.

Mr. Deans: The strike has not been postponed, the strike went on.

Mr. Foulds: It has been extended.

Hon. Mr. Kerr: The strike continued yes, and was extended, and it was really only last week that the negotiations finally and completely broke down. It was at that time that the Premier—

Mr. Cassidy: They never got going because of the intransigence of the company.

Mr. Renwick: But if there was a clear and present danger to the public safety, why didn't the government act?

Hon. Mr. Kerr: —gave the parties a deadline and they were told that a bill would be introduced on Wednesday and that bill was introduced on Wednesday.

Mr. Deans: He is trying to provoke us.

Hon. Mr. Kerr: Now when the hon. members opposite say there were really no negotiations, the information is that there were 45 days of meetings between the parties.

Mr. Bounsall: It didn't produce a thing.

Hon. Mr. Kerr: Since September the conciliation officer and the officials of the Ministry of Labour have been involved in trying to settle this strike.

Mr. Haggerty: How many days?

Hon. Mr. Kerr: Now how much longer does the public have to wait? I would suggest—although I agree the negotiations were on again, off again—that certainly after 45 days every means is exhausted by the parties to try to resolve their differences. It was as a result of that, and as a result of the personal intervention of the minister and the Premier, that it was necessary to introduce this legislation.

Mr. Speaker, I don't think we should get into a great debate or discussion regarding the merits of the dispute. The member for Windsor West did get into certain aspects of the dispute. He also mentioned the question of bargaining in good faith and that the government in some way should have used the provisions of the Labour Relations Act.

Mr. Deans: They are not adequate.

Hon. Mr. Kerr: Well, I would think that the hon. member certainly knows that under the provisions of the Labour Relations Act the union can make application to the board to require management to bargain in good faith. I am not aware that that was done.

Mr. Bullbrook: Does the minister know how many successful applications there have been under that scheme

Mr. Deans: Don't play games.

Hon. Mr. Kerr: And I would suggest there is no real evidence that there hasn't been bargaining in good faith—

Mr. Deans: Oh come on, don't be ridiculous!

Hon. Mr. Kerr: —if they have met for 45 days.

Mr. Bounsall: There was no seriousness at all.

Hon. Mr. Kerr: I am suggesting that application could have been made by the union if they seriously felt that management wasn't at least talking to them during this period of time.

Mr. Cassidy: And the history is that they are doomed to fail.

Mr. Deans: With what chance of success, pray tell?

Hon. Mr. Kerr: Another point that was raised by the hon. member for Windsor West was the reference to the legislation that his party introduced yesterday. Basically, if I understood the member correctly, his party's legislation would immediately require the union workers to return to work, that there would be a stop to the strike and then there would be voluntary arbitration. There would be a 10-day cooling-off period, during which time the parties would again negotiate to see if they could resolve any outstanding differences that still existed. I think basically that is what he said; maybe I've misunderstood the hon. member.

Mr. Cassidy: Yes, he has.

Mr. Foulds: He failed to grasp the subtleties, all right.

Mr. Cassidy: His fine legal mind is at work again.

Hon. Mr. Kerr: The point is, does the hon. member really think that when the parties know that down the road, at the end of a certain period of time, there will be compulsory arbitration, that by his bill there would be co-operation, meaningful negotiation and voluntary arbitration during that period?

Mr. Deans: That's our whole argument!

Mr. Bounsall: The minister didn't listen!

Hon. Mr. Kerr: We don't think there will be.

Mr. Foulds: Oh, so the minister doesn't believe in the collective bargaining process?

Hon. Mr. Kerr: I certainly do; it has broken down in this case.

Mr. Cassidy: Why not let it prove itself? Give it a chance! The problem was to get the men back to work—and not impose compulsory arbitration.

Hon. Mr. Kerr: Every effort was made to have voluntary arbitration.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order, order!

Hon. Mr. Kerr: Certainly the hon. members know that a proposal was made by the Ministry of Labour that there be voluntary arbitration. That didn't work.

Mr. Deans: That is a different kind.

Hon. Mr. Kerr: The parties wouldn't agree to that because of certain items that had to be included and not included in that particular arbitration. Now the only answer is to bring in a bill where all the issues in dispute at this point will be considered—unless of course there is some agreement in writing that can be handed by the parties to the board that those items would be settled.

I think, Mr. Speaker, there has been every opportunity for collective bargaining here, every opportunity to promote harmonious relations between the parties in this dispute, and every opportunity to negotiate.

Mr. Bounsall: The minister is giving up now, is he?

Hon. Mr. Kerr: There certainly has been every assistance from the government, their negotiating team and the conciliator. Now it is time for this legislation. I think any other legislation that will postpone compulsory arbitration will only postpone the obvious, which is the proper settlement of this dispute.

Mr. Cassidy: That is a bankrupt speech.

An hon. member: Why doesn't he speak up?

Mr. Bullbrook: I don't know whether it is exemplary that the Provincial Secretary for Justice should speak on behalf of the government first, because when we as Liberals look at this will we really have to stretch our own personal and collective inclinations to find justice in it.

Hon. Mr. Kerr: The member doesn't agree with his own leader.

Mr. Bullbrook: We are supporting the bill in principle—

Mr. Deans: Here is the other side.

Mr. Bullbrook: —but the fact of the matter is that our general predisposition is not at any time to interfere with the collective bargaining process. I represent a highly unionized riding. I wouldn't sit in this legislative assembly if it weren't for some active support on the part of at least the rank and file of a large international union. I don't say for a moment that I get the support, direct or otherwise, of the heads of that union; they take it upon themselves at each election to support the candidate of the New Democratic Party.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: What a waste of time that must be for them!

Mr. Bullbrook: That in itself, as you read the results, shows that the leadership of that particular union doesn't speak on behalf of the rank and file of that union.

Mr. Gisborn: They haven't read the history of the Liberal Party. They haven't seen the ghosts down in Ottawa.

Mr. Bullbrook: What I want to point out more than anything is this: In premising these remarks, on the understanding of the people of Ontario as to what is almost our affection for the Minister of Labour, I want to say, Mr. Speaker, under our system of responsible government, one wonders if the minister shouldn't resign his portfolio.

Hon. Mr. Kerr: The member's cup runneth over.

Mr. P. J. Yakubuski (Renfrew South): That is the worst mistake the hon. member has made in his entire political career.

Mr. Bullbrook: I say that, Mr. Speaker, because this is the first time that any Minister of Labour has been called upon to bring legislation of this nature before the House.

Hon. Mr. Kerr: What would the hon. member do?

Mr. Deans: He's going to support it!

Mr. Bullbrook: I don't necessarily for one moment say that it is the fault of those people who assist him.

Hon. Mr. Kerr: He's worse than they were!

Mr. Yakubuski: He has gone away down into the depths.

Mr. Bullbrook: I think frankly that the minister is well served by Mr. Dickie and the other people who assist in conciliation services. Surely the history of success of his department in this province is a foundation for that assertion.

But the minister finds himself in the difficult position—a position that I, my leader and my colleagues find ourselves in—of saying that he believes in the propriety of the collective bargaining system.

Mr. Renwick: Well, the solution to that problem is not to ask the minister to resign.

Mr. Bullbrook: We say that we don't want any interference in that system; and we say, however, in these circumstances—

Hon. Mr. Kerr: The member should make up his mind.

Mr. Bullbrook: —the public good dictates. As my leader has said, the public good dictates that there must be compulsory arbitration.

I want for a moment to show the House the shallowness of the New Democratic Party in that bill that it put forward. My colleague, the hon. member for Windsor West would have us believe, as I understood him, that the presentation for first reading of that private bill was the catalyst that brought the people back to work. I don't say that—

Mr. Bounsall: No, they volunteered to go back.

Mr. Deans: We didn't say that.

Mr. Bullbrook: —not for one moment. How can members accept that? But as they analyse that bill that is brought before them, they find this section in it, section 8—

Mr. Speaker: Order please! I think the hon. member should stick to the bill before the House, not the other bill.

Mr. Bullbrook: I am going to say this—

Mr. Speaker: We are not debating the other bill. We can only debate the bill that is before us.

Mr. Renwick: Particularly when his reference was totally inaccurate.

Mr. Bullbrook: Well, I must say, I wonder whether there is justice for all in this House. The member for Windsor West spent half an hour talking about his bill.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Nothing else!

Mr. Bullbrook: Nothing else! Now I can't make one reference to it.

Mr. Foulds: The principle of it was fundamentally different from the government's principle.

Mr. Bullbrook: May I try to draw some connection then. We are talking about the general principle—

Interjection by an hon. member.

Mr. Bullbrook: We are talking about the general principles of the implications of compulsory arbitration on the collective bargaining process. The other bill put before us for our consideration had compulsory arbitration.

Mr. Drea: The member's leader said before that they were putting in amendments too.

Mr. Bullbrook: The only difference, in effect, was that it wasn't binding arbitration. I wanted to read from that section and, if I may Mr. Speaker, relate that bill to the government bill, and show why we in this party support the government bill and cannot adopt the position of the New Democratic Party.

Mr. Speaker: I really don't think it is necessary to refer to the other bill to debate this bill properly.

An hon. member: Any genius can make the argument—

Mr. Bullbrook: May I put this to the minister and to the members of the House, through you Mr. Speaker? The essential difference between the bill put forward by the New Democratic Party and the bill that we are asked to support today is that the former had no binding arbitration.

Mr. Bounsall: Right!

Mr. Bullbrook: They said in effect that the benefit of this bill would be—and these are the very words of the member for Windsor

West—the parties would be foolish not to accept the arbitration. Think of that for a moment. Think of the logic of that for a moment, if you will. Where the arbitration is not binding, the parties would be foolish not to accept it; but where the arbitration is binding, what are the parties going to do?

Interjections by hon. members.

An hon. member: There's no alternative.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: It's called an offer you can't refuse.

Mr. Bullbrook: They say in effect that after seven months of bargaining, or be it seven years of bargaining, if you bring together three objective people and they give a decision that is not binding, the parties would be foolish not to accept that decision.

Hon. Mr. Kerr: Yes, right, they are going to sit down and put their arms around each other.

Mr. Renwick: They will have to do that across the border.

Hon. Mr. Kerr: Don't open up that can of worms.

Mr. Bullbrook: I doubt very much that I've heard such an insipid argument since I first—

Mr. Bounsall: What would the member do?

Mr. Bullbrook: —came into this House. That argument, members have to turn down out of hand; that, they just can't accept at all.

What they have also done in their bill, if I may say, is they have done nothing about the important aspects of compulsory arbitration; nothing is said about the powers of the board itself, and I am going to talk about that.

I am going to talk about the collateral principles in the government bill—that's very deficient—and it is unfortunate that a party that is unilaterally tied to trade unionism couldn't think about its trade union friends in that respect and try to protect them as far as this government bill is concerned, as we in the Liberal Party will protect the rank and file of the trade union movement. Before I get to that, however—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Bullbrook: Before I get to that, however, may I for a moment record in the Hansard of this House the comment made by the Premier in his dialogue with the socialists a few moments ago. The member for Windsor West, with great justification, was talking about the comments of Mr. Moser some 10 days or two weeks ago, and commenting about the ludicrous response made by the Minister of Labour to that party yesterday when he said that "you will be responsible for anything that happens in the next 24 hours." What a cheap, stupid statement to make when two weeks ago one of his own officials told that very government that the people and public of Ontario were in danger—public danger.

Do members know what the Premier of Ontario said to the New Democratic Party? He said: "Would your position have been any different if we had convened this House two weeks ago?" Talk about responsibility from Her Majesty's Premier, right?

Hon. Mr. Kerr: That's a good question; that's a good question. What's the matter with that?

Mr. Bullbrook: A good question! What he should have been saying to himself two weeks ago is: "We convene this House immediately and we bring in compulsory arbitration legislation immediately because the government recognizes its responsibility to the safety of the public of this province." And I don't care what his motivation was in calling the House into session now.

Mr. Renwick: There was no danger to the safety of the public.

Mr. Bullbrook: I don't know whether he was motivated by the by-elections; it didn't do him any good in any event. But the fact of the matter is if he truly felt that he had a responsibility, then we should have been debating this two weeks ago and never mind the last 24 hours and trying to put that responsibility on the New Democratic Party. Think of the government's responsibility had there been people hurt in the last two weeks when they knew themselves they had control of it. The New Democratic Party doesn't have control of government business; those people over there do, and it's their sole responsibility.

Hon. Mr. Kerr: They have control of the unions.

Mr. Bullbrook: Now, the fact of the matter is we are going to support this bill in principle, but—

Mr. W. Hodgson (York North): Oh no!

Mr. Bullbrook: —there are certain other principles.

Mr. Drea: How can they? If they vote for the bill—

Mr. Bullbrook: We support this bill in principle because of the fact that we believe the public good demands—

Interjections by hon. members.

An hon. member: Right!

Mr. Bullbrook: —that there be compulsory arbitration. We individually and collectively find it reprehensible so to do, but we must make a value judgement, and we make that judgement in favour of our public responsibility, that's what we do.

Mr. Renwick: Oh! Come, come.

Hon. Mr. Kerr: But it is a little too late.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Drea: Vote against it.

Mr. Bullbrook: One other thing, Mr. Speaker—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Bullbrook: The Provincial Secretary for Justice gets up and mouths—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Bullbrook: —mouths the response to the New Democratic Party that, "We have an obligation to pass this bill."

I want to say to him, through you, Mr. Speaker, I'll tell him an obligation he has. He has an obligation, through himself and his Premier, and it is one place where the Minister of Labour obviously falls short. The next time they bring in a Throne Speech, I pray of them to say something about labour relations in this province.

For the last two Throne Speeches it has been the poor relation of government responsibility, Mr. Speaker. They do nothing about it. We have demanded of them—

Hon. Mr. Kerr: We are in good shape.

Mr. Speaker: Back to the bill, please.

Mr. Bullbrook: —we asked them—

Mr. Speaker: Back to the bill.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: The minister says they are perfect.

Mr. Speaker: Back to the bill.

Hon. Mr. Kerr: Ninety-eight per cent settled.

Mr. Bullbrook: The principle of this bill is the imposition and compulsory arbitration. Compulsory arbitration and its effects should be looked into. New formulae should be looked into—

Mr. Renwick: New formulae?

Mr. Bullbrook:—in connection with compulsory arbitration. Secondary picketing has to be looked into. The question of strike and lockout has to be looked into. Hiring hall tactics—

Mr. Drea: Ah!

Mr. Bullbrook:—have to be looked into.

There should be the establishment of a select committee. Those people over there want to appoint select committees for snow-mobiles. I tell them the public of Ontario demand—and we must meet that responsibility—that we have to lead in the field of labour relations.

We can't have ad hoc solutions to garbage strikes and ad hoc solutions to elevator strikes. We have a larger responsibility than that.

Hon. Mr. Kerr: I think the member is a candidate for the leadership!

Mr. Bullbrook: And why don't they do something about it? Why don't they tell the public through their Throne Speech that they are concerned about labour relations?

Mr. Drea: There is arbitration about everything.

Mr. Bullbrook: Now, as far as the ancillary principles of the bill are concerned, may I say this. May I say that we are not a party which will give to this board of arbitration the broad powers that the government wants to give in this bill. We put forward amendments to restrict those powers.

If it's anathema to us that the government imposes upon both management and members of the union a collective agreement that they didn't derive from their own negotiation, it's more anathema to us that nowhere in the statute does it restrict the term of the contract. It might seem an exaggeration, but under the term of this legislation, this board of arbitration could come down with a collective agreement that binds the parties for 20 years. We'll not be a party to that and we're going to bring in amendments to ensure that there is a restriction on the term of the contract itself.

We're going to bring in amendments that have effect also in connection with the question of retroactivity. There is a principle in this bill that says in effect that it's up to the board of arbitration to decide how retroactive the benefits will be. We say that's not good enough. It must go back to the termination of the prior contract. There's a responsibility for us to protect the average worker; and we're going to bring in amendments to that effect.

An hon. member: Sit down!

Mr. Bullbrook: We support the bill, therefore, with reticence. We are going to improve the bill to help the government and the people of this province.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Wentworth.

Mr. Deans: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's quite obvious to you, I'm sure, that we're going to oppose the bill. And we're going to oppose the bill because, in fact, we don't think the bill is necessary in this province at this time. We happen to believe that it's a primary responsibility of government to ensure the safety of the public. We believe that with the alternative legislation that we propose, the safety of the public was, in fact, ensured, and that it is not a responsibility of government to arbitrarily impose a decision to resolve any dispute. These are two distinctly different things and we see them in that way.

We see first of all that if there is any matter regarding the safety of the public of the Province of Ontario at stake at this time, then the return to work of the elevator constructors is necessary. And that is the responsibility of government.

But let's take a look at it. Much has been said in this Legislature by the Leader of the Opposition, by his friend from Sarnia and in fact by other speakers about the safety of the public. They have quoted the chief elevator inspector of the Province of Ontario and have pointed out that he said that the safety of the public was at stake. And yet upon looking at the press statements attributable to ministers of the Crown, we find that on March 8 the Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations, who is responsible for elevator safety, said: "The number of elevator accidents had actually decreased in the nine-month period ending Jan. 31."

Mr. J. R. Breithaupt (Kitchener): Well, a lot of them were out of service.

Mr. Ruston: They weren't running, that's why.

An hon. member: Right!

Mr. Deans: But the fact that an elevator isn't running—

Mr. Ruston: They were walking up.

Mr. Deans: The fact that an elevator isn't running is not in any way involved in the safety of the people of the Province of Ontario, in regard to accidents.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Deans: Now another question: How many elevators in the Province of Ontario had to be closed down as a result their not being fit for use? We have never had a statement in this regard by this ministry. But I'm going to say to you, Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Drea: Never asked for it, either.

Mr. Deans: —that I believe that there is not likely to be, in proportion to the increased numbers of elevators in use in the Province of Ontario, a proportionate increase of elevators not in use as a result of inspection and deficiencies found during that inspection. The fact of the matter is that the matter of public safety is a red herring in this dispute.

Mr. W. Newman (Ontario South): Does the member really mean that?

Mr. Deans: But recognizing that it may have some validity, then the attention of the government should have been paid to that aspect of the dispute and no other. And that could have been resolved by the bill which we proposed to the Legislature yesterday.

We proposed that the workers should return to work; and this government could have proposed that the workers should have returned to work—and the workers would have returned to work. In fact, the workers indicated throughout the entire piece, right from the beginning of bargaining, right through the beginning of the strike and throughout the duration of the strike, that they were prepared to return to work if they were informed adequately that there was in fact a safety hazard—that the public of the Province of Ontario was, out of necessity, using elevators which were a safety hazard.

They did say that they were prepared to service elevators in public institutions were there were problems developing. The companies refused, not the workers.

This is the first and hopefully the last day in the Province of Ontario when we will ever have to discuss legislation of this kind. Hopefully it is the last day when we will ever have to talk about the imposition by government of a collective agreement in a private dispute between two parties.

Mr. Drea: Does the member think arbitration should be compulsory?

Mr. Deans: We happen to think that arbitration per se in labour disputes is wrong. We believe that it is not necessary to impose compulsory, binding arbitration on the work force of this province. We worry about this government's attitudes over the last year and a half toward the collective bargaining process. We worry about the changes of attitude evidenced by this government's actions in dealing with its own employees in the Crown Employees Bargaining Act. We worry about the attitudes of this government as reflected in the Reville report which I suspect is likely to receive an airing in this House and will likely lead to some form of legislation by this government during this Parliament. Frankly, we don't trust this government to impose arbitration in disputes because we recognize that this government doesn't understand the collective bargaining process. This government doesn't believe in the collective bargaining process. This government is bent on destroying the collective bargaining process and this is the first step along the way in the private sector.

There is no question that what we proposed would have achieved the same results by way of public safety, but what we proposed as an alternative to what the government has proposed would have guaranteed that the collective bargaining process would have remained within the hands of the people who understand it best. Secondly, it would have given the government an opportunity to do something which is long overdue in this province.

It would have given the government an opportunity to take a look at section 14 of the Labour Relations Act and to put some teeth into it; to come to grips with what bargaining in good faith really means or what bargaining in good faith really ought to mean in the Province of Ontario. As my colleague from Windsor West so aptly said, bargaining in good faith doesn't mean having to call back to the United States in order to get permission to change one word in one sentence. Bargaining in good faith means that the parties who are sitting at the table have the sole and proprietary right to reach an agreement and this is not the case in this dispute.

Mr. Drea: Half the union constitutions forbid members to sign without head office approval.

Mr. Deans: This is not the case in this dispute. Bargaining in good faith means that all aspects which are at that particular time being negotiated and all of the conditions which surround those things should be laid open by both parties, in order that there can be access to the records and in order that proper collective bargaining can take place. Furthermore, bargaining in good faith means that there have to be penalties if you don't do it; and, in order to impose those penalties, it must be clearly defined.

I suggest to you, Mr. Speaker, that not only are the companies very much the culprits in this particular dispute but this government, by the negligence it has displayed in its attitude toward the bargaining process in this province in repeatedly refusing to deal with the problems that have arisen from time to time as a result of the ambiguity in this section, is equally responsible for the situation which prevails in the province today.

What are the matters which we are talking about? What, in fact, is wrong in the elevator dispute? Let's take a look at it. To begin with, we have a statement by a representative of the Canadian Electrical Manufacturers Association, elevator division—

Interjection by on hon. member.

Mr. Deans: We are talking about whether or not this principle should be passed. The issue in this dispute, they say, is not wages or fringe benefits. It has never been and we agree. The real issue is who shall manage the enterprise, says Mr. Tuff. Who will have control over the hiring of new employees, says Mr. Tuff. The quality of their training and their rate of progression within their trade, says Mr. Tuff; and he is right. He is right to a degree because Mr. Tuff, like the Conservative government of this province, has failed to recognize the growing trend within the work place for the worker to have a say in the things that directly affect 40 per cent. of his waking hours.

Mr. Tuff is of the old school, the school which says that he has something called management's rights which are inviolate, which cannot be broached, which cannot be discussed, which cannot in any sense be changed, and which are not subject to the collective bargaining process.

Mr. Tuff is wrong. When 40 per cent of a man's years are spent in a place of work in which he has to put up with unsafe, unsanitary and unsatisfactory conditions then surely, as I argued with the previous Treasurer, it is his right to speak about those things at the time of negotiation.

When there has been, as there has been in Canada, no regard paid to the changes and the automation that have taken place and to their effects on the employees, then the employees must have a say in determining how they will be treated. When the elevator companies have failed to provide any form of guarantee for the older employees by way of protection against layoffs or for that matter for protection against simply being automated out of existence, then the elevator constructors surely have the right to negotiate those things.

When the company talks about the union's desire to have a hiring hall, the fact of the matter is it is not the union's desire to have it; it already has it. It is the desire of the company to break it. And why? That is the question. The Leader of the Opposition perhaps hit the nail on the head, only he was in the wrong camp. This dispute is an attempt by these American-owned elevator construction companies to impose their wishes on Canada, and we are going to resist it.

This government should have recognized it. It is one of the portions of this bill which I find most obnoxious, and it goes right to the principle of the bill. Written in the explanatory note, it says: "The purpose of this bill is to provide for compulsory arbitration in certain disputes between Canadian elevator manufacturers and the local unions of the International Union of Elevator Constructors." I say to you that it is not; it is between the American-owned elevator manufacturers and the Canadian workers.

I am going to say to the minister, through you, Mr. Speaker, that if I have to make the choice I'll opt for the Canadian worker every time, and I'll opt for giving him more power. I'll opt for opening more doors for him, and I'll opt for guaranteeing him a greater say in his own future. I'll opt for guaranteeing him a better opportunity to provide for himself and his family.

And that is not accomplished through this particular process of arbitration. We reject arbitration. We reject arbitration as being unnecessary in this instance. We recognize the need for the workers to return to work, which they themselves have recognized.

We offered an alternative. I want to deal very, very briefly with what it would have meant because there are a number of people who don't seem to understand it.

We are not talking about an arbitration process. We are talking about an entirely new process in collective bargaining as yet untried, but which we believe would have provided a new avenue to explore and which we believe would have resulted, were it to have been implemented, in the resolution of this particular dispute and would have, in fact, resulted in the resolution of a great many other disputes yet to come.

What we have suggested is quite simply that recognizing that there may well be some element of public safety, and recognizing that there are old age homes needing elevators, and recognizing that there are senior citizen apartments needing elevators, and recognizing that hospitals require elevators, and that any number of other public institutions require them, the workers should return to work. But we also recognize that, if all of the matters in dispute were placed before a board and that board had the power to consider each and every matter and had the jurisdiction to make a complete and full document available to both parties bearing on all of the matters which were in dispute as a possible collective agreement, we believe that that would have turned out to be acceptable.

Mr. Renwick: No question about it.

Mr. Deans: And that's what we are saying to the House. It's different from conciliation, because you and I both know the conciliation process and that's not what it does. It's different from mediation, because we both know the mediation process and that's not what it does. There is no process in the Province of Ontario—for that matter in any other jurisdiction that I know of—where there is an opportunity for the two parties in the dispute to sit down with a board, to place before them all of the matters and to have that board come forward to them with a complete document which might well be the basis for settlement. As members know, we in fact deal with portions of it in an attempt to try and break down the negotiations to smaller areas and to try and bring about resolution of the problems.

We believe that what we have offered, given that it meets the matter of public safety, would have been more satisfactory, would have dealt with the wishes as expressed by this minister at the time that he indicated that he was going to follow through with the introduction of compulsory legislation in this House. And that would be that the government does not wish, nor does it have any desire, to impose binding arbitration in any dispute. We believe that the government would have lost nothing and gained much by pursuing the avenue that we have proposed to it for perusal. We believe that had it done so, at the end there would have been sufficient basis for an agreement; and we believe that it is not worth the establishing of the precedent which the government is about to establish in this province to disregard what we have offered as an alternative.

We happen to think there are in fact people of good faith who sit down, and if you could just break the management away from its ties, if you could just break the management away from the imposition that is upon it now by its parent company in the United States we would be able to reach an agreement in this province, satisfactory not only to this province but to the entire Dominion of Canada.

We suggest to the government it reconsider what it is doing. We ask it very seriously to reconsider what it is doing.

Just as the policy minister for justice said, when a man knows there is arbitration at the end of the line it impedes the collective bargaining process and he doesn't bargain properly; we suggest to the government that by this measure, in every dispute where there are companies or unions in this province who do not believe in attempting to reach satisfactory agreements they will fall back on this as the precedent and they will sit without collective bargaining taking place and they will ultimately arrive time after time at the doorstep of arbitration imposed by this government, and that's our main fear.

Our main fear is that companies who are not prepared to deal adequately and properly with their employees will find the easy way out and we will be asked time after time to consider the public interest, to consider the public safety. I don't doubt for a moment that the Dare manufacturer who makes the cookies could find some element of public interest or public safety that would require us to take a similar kind of step.

Mr. Reid: Oh don't be ridiculous!

An hon. member: Sure, they are using scabs to put the chocolate chips in.

Mr. Deans: They will find it. There isn't a dispute in the Province of Ontario—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Deans: —where there won't be an attempt made by the company which doesn't want to bargain in good faith to convince this government—and recognizing the inadequacies of this government I'm quite convinced that they would be successful—that it would be in their best interest to impose compulsory arbitration.

We will oppose the government's bill. We will oppose it for those reasons. We believe our alternative is better. We believe it would work. We believe it deserves a chance. If the government honestly means what it says, that it doesn't want compulsory arbitration in the Province of Ontario, it should accept it.

Mr. Speaker: The member for Carleton.

Mr. Handleman: Mr. Speaker, I am afraid I'm going to have to be in this House a little longer than I have been before I cease being amazed at the convoluted thinking of some of the people on the New Democratic Party benches.

Mr. Cassidy: Just think of our problem understanding the members on that side.

Mr. Handleman: You know it is coming, you see it is coming, and you don't believe it when it comes.

Mr. Bounsall: Slap them down!

Mr. Handleman: There are many things that can be questioned about this bill—the timing of it, the previous actions of the government and the minister—but not the need for it. And it is the need that is being questioned on the other side. I simply can't accept that.

Mr. Renwick: The member is right about that; there is nothing convoluted about that. That is perfectly direct.

Mr. Deans: The member is very astute at seeing the obvious.

Mr. Speaker: Order please!

Mr. Handleman: Both the hon. member for Windsor West and the hon. member for Wentworth spent great time dealing with the issues in the dispute. I am not concerned about the issues in the dispute.

Mr. Foulds: No, the member never is.

Mr. Handleman: I am not concerned with the workers or management; I am concerned about the innocent victims.

Mr. Bounsall: The member shouldn't bother his head with it; he shouldn't try and find out.

Mr. Handleman: In this province there are thousands of people—

Mr. Renwick: Don't overstate the case.

Mr. Handleman: —who are being subjected to financial, physical and emotional hazards because of this strike.

The record of this government is good in this respect. It has not imposed itself, but there comes a time when the government must protect the public interest; and that's exactly what they are doing.

Mr. Cassidy: And there will be pressure to do it again and again and again.

Mr. Handleman: I know my hon. friends are not very concerned about entrepreneurship in this province, but there are many small entrepreneurs who are being ruined because of this strike—

Mr. Bounsall: The US companies don't give a damn.

Mr. Renwick: That is not public safety!

Mr. Handleman: I am not talking about public safety.

Mr. Renwick: The member is talking about economic disruption.

Mr. Speaker: Order please!

Mr. Handleman: I am talking about hazards—

Mr. Cassidy: Entrepreneurs.

Mr. Bounsall: The entrepreneurs don't care.

Mr. Handleman: Serious hazards to innocent parties!

Look, the workers have gone out voluntarily and management has refused to bargain voluntarily. And they can stew in it as far as I'm concerned. It's the innocent victims of this strike that I'm concerned with, Mr. Speaker, and there are thousands of them.

I haven't heard a word from any member on that side about the innocent victims. They talked about some kind of safety factor. Well there may very well be, but I'm concerned about the people who are suffering because they are being laid off work, because they can't move into their apartments. I am not worried about the companies.

Mr. Cassidy: Never worried about the companies, no!

Mr. Foulds: No, and the member is not worried about the workers.

Mr. Handleman: No, I am not worried about the companies or the workers and I repeat it again. I am not worried about the workers. No, I am not worried about the companies, they can look after themselves.

Mr. Cassidy: The Premier will be proud of him.

Mr. Handleman: Neither side is completely altruistic in this dispute. They're trying to feather their own nests—but at the public cost.

I'm concerned that this strike be settled as quickly as possible and I do not consider this bill to be a precedent. Every bill that comes in here is brand new and if Dare cookies came in they would have to use the same kind of twisted thinking that the NDP uses to show that there was any factor harming the public safety. As far as I'm concerned this bill should be passed, passed today—and let's get on with the job.

Mr. Speaker: The member for Rainy River.

Mr. Reid: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker, the Minister of Labour has told us both within and without the House that the day he announced compulsory arbitration to settle this matter was a sad day. Yesterday, Wednesday, when he introduced the bill was a sad day in the history of labour relations in this province, and today the debating of the bill and final passage we trust later this evening will also be a sad day in labour relations in the Province of Ontario.

I might add, Mr. Speaker, that I feel it is also going to be a sad day for the history of the New Democratic Party in this province in the way it has completely abdicated its responsibility to the people of this province in opposing this bill.

Mr. Ruston: They're going down the drain anyway.

Mr. Reid: However, Mr. Speaker, it's probably just another turn in the long road of defeats and problems that party is suffering, but it is sad that without their leader here to direct them that they should have fallen into such a quandary.

I congratulate those members, and I'm sure that when we get to their eighth convoluter, the member for Riverdale, he will do a much better job of trying to justify the position they have put themselves in.

I would say to the member for Windsor West and the member for Wentworth that they can take lessons from the master sitting there in the front benches of the NDP, and no doubt we will hear from him later on in the debate.

Mr. Deans: If there are lessons available I suggest the hon. member enrol.

Mr. Reid: Mr. Speaker, anyone who is knowledgeable of the history of labour relations in the Province of Ontario—

Mr. Deans: The hon. member isn't!

Mr. Reid:—will recall that even as recently as the 1930s, the 1940s and even into the 1950s, various labour organizations were struggling for recognition so that they could take part in the collective bargaining process.

Mr. Drea: That was when the hon. member's party used to send the tanks in to show the workers where they belonged.

Mr. Singer: The minister needs help; the member for Scarborough Centre should go down and advise him.

Mr. Reid: To arrive at the stage, sir, where we are now, where hopefully we have two sides in the dispute—

Mr. Drea: And his army!

Mr. Singer: Yes, the minister needs him.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The member for Rainy River has the floor.

Mr. Reid: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Drea: Let's not have him rewrite history, Mr. Speaker. It's too dry.

Mr. Ruston: Speaking of dry!

Mr. Drea: Tell us all about Liberal recognition of unions.

Mr. Reid: It has taken a long time, Mr. Speaker, to arrive at the point where management on one side and labour on the other could sit down, equally balanced as opponents, to present their demands and come to some reasonable compromise. The essence of the whole system is that both are free to select those things on which they want to come to an agreement.

That, sir, is the sad thing about compulsory arbitration: The parties involved in the dispute have no choice left to them. The settlement is imposed on them arbitrarily and the whole process that has taken so long to build to the present stage is done away with.

Other speakers in this party, my leader, and the member for Sarnia, have spoken about how we feel with regard to voting in principle for a bill that would impose compulsory arbitration. It is abhorrent to us. We dislike it intensely.

Mr. Renwick: But they are going to vote for it!

Mr. Deans: In typical Liberal fashion: "We don't like it—but!"

Mr. Reid: However, Mr. Speaker, we have a higher duty to the people of this province than our personal feelings in this regard, and we are here to do that duty. As was pointed out by the previous speaker, there is only one issue contained in the principle of this bill: that the Province of Ontario needs this bill to protect the safety and welfare of its people.

Mr. Dean: They don't.

Mr. Reid: If there was any other reason than that, this party and I would not be supporting this bill.

It's unfortunate, as the previous speaker also mentioned—and he was right on when he said this—that we can criticize the government for what they did or what they didn't do. We wouldn't have come to this sad impasse today had the Minister of Labour and the government done what was suggested to them by this party some months ago. The leader of this party suggested that this matter be turned over to the federal Department of Labour because of the complexities of the whole problem.

We're aware of what's happened in British Columbia and we're aware of what's happened in Quebec. It is my understanding—and perhaps we'll hear from the minister again later—that he did go to the cabinet and say, "Look, we had better turn this matter over to the federal jurisdiction."

Mr. Deans: They wouldn't take it.

Mr. Reid: But the cabinet, for some reason unbeknownst to me, declined to accept that offer from the Minister of Labour.

Secondly, Mr. Speaker, again to avoid getting into this kind of position of imposing compulsory arbitration, the government had the power to convene this Legislature earlier, even two or three weeks ago, when Mr. Moser made his remarks concerning public safety. The Premier had the power to call us here together to impose a cooling off period of let's say 90 days, in which we could have put the men back to work so that the public safety could be served, and could have told management and told the union that they had 90 days to get together to settle their dispute, at the end of which time we were going to have compulsory arbitration if they hadn't come to their senses by that time.

Interjection by an hon. member.

Mr. Reid: This was an alternative that I say to you, Mr. Speaker, was available to the government and which they didn't take up.

Obviously, Mr. Speaker, there was a prior alternative and that was that we need in this province legislation to handle situations such as this in prolonged strikes. It has already been pointed out previously by my colleague that in the last number of Throne Speeches in this Legislature matters pertaining to labour relations in this province have been abysmally neglected. I would hope, Mr. Speaker, that the Minister of Labour—if he remains so, and there is some doubt that he should—will introduce in this session some legislation dealing with technological layoffs, elongated strikes and so on that are against the public interest.

I'd like to say, Mr. Speaker, that I listened because I couldn't avoid it to the member for Wentworth at great length, and that party—and to some extent, all three parties perhaps—I think are overlooking something of great significance that has happened in labour relations in Ontario. That is that in the late 1960's in particular it came to the public attention, and should have to the legislators', that in a labour dispute there are more than two parties involved. There is not just labour, there is not just management; there is labour, management and the general public.

Mr. Foulds: Does the member think he is revealing inside information?

Mr. Reid: In any discussion, any union and—

Mr. R. F. Nixon: There is no indication the member for Port Arthur discovered it.

Mr. Reid: —management settlement, the public weal must be taken into regard. Mr. Speaker, in this particular case, not the public's economic welfare is at stake, but public safety is at stake. How the party on the left over there can ignore that prime factor in regard to the principle of this bill is beyond me.

Mr. Speaker, we were going to have a number of amendments to introduce to modify this bill. We don't want to destroy the principle; we want the men back to work and we want the public safety protected, but we are not happy with some of the provisions of the bill. We will be introducing into the bill provisions that will restrict the arbitrary powers that the government bill intends to give to the compulsory arbitration board. We will support the bill regrettably. We hope that the government will bring in legislation in the future so that this kind of situation will not arise again.

Mr. Speaker: The member for Port Arthur.

Mr. F. Laughren (Nickel Belt): Nickel Belt.

Mr. Speaker: Nickel Belt—I'm sorry.

Mr. Laughren: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise in opposition to this bill because of the imposition of compulsory arbitration in this dispute. I don't think that it has a place, particularly in this situation.

I think the arguments that have been put forth concerning public safety are no more valid now than they were on March 1 when the unions offered to submit to arbitration. They are no more valid now than they were on March 5 when the chief government inspector indicated there was a threat to public safety. This can only lead us to conclude that it was political expediency on the part of the Premier to get by his two by-elections so that the introduction of the legislation would coincide with the opening of the legislature, not vice versa.

If there had indeed been public safety involved, how could we conclude otherwise but that the Premier would have called back the House in order to put an end to this threat to public safety.

We must conclude that the long-run interests of labour—if this bill is passed, which I assume it will be—are not being served. The long-run interests of collective bargaining certainly will not be served if this precedent is set. The elevator-construction companies claim that their long-run interests will not be served. The question then remains: Is the long-run interest of the public going to be served by this legislation? I and my party feel that this cannot be so because of what it may do to the collective bargaining process in the Province of Ontario.

This is a precedent that is not necessary because the collective bargaining process has not been exhausted. That is what my colleague from Windsor West is trying to tell the minister. He has not exhausted the collective bargaining process.

Indeed, if compulsory arbitration was brought in now but was not binding, it would accomplish three things. It would bring the men back to work; if, indeed, there is a threat to public safety, it would put an end to that; and it would allow for the completion of the various construction projects across the province. The three things which the minister seems to be so concerned about would be solved if he would take the advice of our colleague from Windsor West. We certainly think that it is worth a try.

A couple of things bother me as well. One is the national aspect, the national ramifications. If there was arbitration, but voluntary arbitration and not binding, surely the three parties would be able to keep in mind what the ramifications would be in other provinces, in terms of having the contract accepted by other provinces. If it is imposed upon them by arbitration, there is no guarantee that this will happen at all.

I am concerned also that in section 6(c) the minister has not spelled out that the rate of wages will be that of July 1 with the 50 cent increase as opposed to earlier in the year. I hope the minister will stand up and make that clear to us.

We think, Mr. Speaker, that collective bargaining is a civilized way of solving labour-management problems. We feel that the imposition of compulsory and binding arbitration in this case is indeed going to set a precedent for years to come and that the result will be increasingly bitter confrontations in labour disputes across the province. We cannot support it.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Scarborough Centre.

Mr. Drea: Mr. Speaker, I rise to support Bill 2. Unlike some of my esteemed colleagues in one particular section across the floor, I am not going to try to rewrite the labour history of Ontario. I find it very difficult to understand how the tanks that went into Oshawa flying the Liberal banner were somehow carrying CARE packages, but we won't go into that.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Tell us about the election of 1937.

Mr. Drea: Well, the member would know more about that.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Maybe he is right.

Mr. Drea: I always bow to the member when he knows more. We are coming to him in a moment on a couple of little fallacies he has tried to promote here today.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: The member ought to be losing weight with all that bowing he is doing here today.

Mr. Drea: I am not going to try to rewrite history.

Never before in the history of this province has the collective bargaining system been more abused and more exhausted by the worst pair of antisocial swashbucklers that ever came down the pike. Those are the five American-owned, American-controlled, American-dominated elevator companies; and on the other side the semblance of a branch plant union that exists under the name of the International Union of Elevator Constructors, whatever locals they say they may have in this country.

Mr. Renwick: Shame!

Mr. Drea: Both of them have had one common motto right through this strike and that is 'the public be damned.' As of yesterday—or as of this morning and I always give credit for a death-bed repentance—the union did go back to work. But until this morning, the union—and let's put that in quotes; not the men who belong to the union but the "union"—had the mottoes "the public be damned" and "might makes right," and so did the companies.

In the process, ever since last September they have abused, they have mislead, they have done their best to undermine the authority of the Minister of Labour of this province. They were only interested in one thing; whatever settlement there was going to be was going to be acceptable in the United States of America. Then the opposition members stand up and say that the Minister of Labour and his staff didn't do their job. Members have seen it on television. They have seen it in the movies. They've heard it on radio and now they see it right here. The two groups are going to use Ontario, an appropriate section of Canada, as a battleground because the economic struggle has too many consequences for the United States.

To his credit, the Minister of Labour in this province didn't bow to that. He didn't kowtow and go down to the United States to the principals and say, "How can we settle this thing in Ontario?" He stood here and he fought here like an honourable man and a minister of the Crown.

I say again, both sides betrayed him—not once, not twice, but right through week by week. Then people stand here and say that he was wrong. If members want hindsight, and I don't want to put words in his mouth—

Mr. Laughren: No, I don't think he wants the member to put words in his mouth either.

Mr. Drea:—he should have knocked their heads together one week after the strike started, because it was futile from the beginning and the members opposite know it.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Laughren: Does the member like collective bargaining?

Mr. Drea: Imagine my colleague from Nickel Belt standing up and defending an organization and saying it stands for the public good when it has two classes of workers. There are the serfs and there are the elite. There is a permit system in operation, and you know it and I know it. When you go to join that union you can't join. You have to come in as a permit man, as a helper. You get paid, it's true, the same rate as the full union man in cash, but you don't get your pension.

Mr. Laughren: The member served his apprenticeship.

Mr. Drea: I never served. I didn't have to.

Mr. Laughren: He served his apprenticeship in the Tory party before—

Mr. Drea: The union that I belonged to didn't go for two systems of workers.

Mr. Laughren: That $37,000-a-year board he served on was his apprenticeship.

Mr. Drea: The union that I worked for didn't go for two systems.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Drea: You have a union with the elite. For the member: His pension is paid, his dental care is paid, everything is paid. But the helper, the man who can't get the membership card: His teeth aren't fixed; Oh no! His pension isn't paid.

Mr. Haggerty: Union blackmail.

Mr. Drea: They have got a system and the member is trying to defend it, where the Province of Ontario and all its trade education is bypassed.

How do you get to be a qualified elevator constructor mechanic? You have to go through a joint labour-company examination. Yesterday I asked the company: "Don't you really think that you should have something that conforms with education in Ontario if you need more people? Don't you think that they could come out of the trade school?" They said: "Well no, we fund all of this and we have a very satisfactory relationship with the union." For 50 years the two of these principals have had a most cosy relationship—very cosy. Far be it from me, and I'm not being facetious, to imply in any way, shape or form that there was any kind of a sweetheart deal; let's just leave it at cosy. In the process of that—

Mr. Gisborn: That's what it was.

Mr. Drea: It might be very interesting to take a look at the history of this industry. How many elevator companies were there in the beginning and how many are there now? What has happened to the Canadian elevator companies over this period of time? Yes, they chose Ontario to fight on—

Mr. Bounsall: Canada.

Mr. Drea: —because the cosy relationship just isn't there any more. Having created each other, the two giants are now deciding who is really going to run it when there's only the one side left. That is the essence of the strike.

Mr. Breithaupt: And he goes upstairs to—

Mr. Drea: I said before, and I repeat again, I'm talking about the union leadership. I am not talking about the member. The member is as bewildered as the public and many of the members here.

I think it is a disgrace in a province like this, that when a member has been earning a certain standard of living, his whole economic base is knocked out of him, not for two, three or four or five weeks that he conceivably might be able to budget for, but he is left high and dry for four, five and six months so that the future may be protected of his fellow members south of the line, who are busy installing those high-speed jobs every day of the week. I think it's a disgrace that a Canadian working man is involved in a strike over which he has no real control and that he has to come to members of this Legislature to ask if there is any way he could get a part-time job or something else so that he can hold his house together and everything else.

Mr. Haggerty: Whose fault is it? It is this government's.

Mr. Drea: No, it is not this government. No government has ever bent over further to try to protect the collective bargaining process than this one.

Mr. Laughren: Who was intransigent? Not the union leadership, not the workers.

Mr. Drea: Oh no, don't just say the union leadership. The companies are as intransigent and worse.

Mr. Laughren: They were the only ones who were.

Mr. Drea: Pardon?

Mr. Laughren: They were the ones who were.

Mr. Drea: Both of them!

Now then, during the time of the collective bargaining there was the intriguing proposal from the Leader of the Opposition that we turn it all over to that great marvel in Ottawa, Mr. Munro. And the only reason that Mr. Munro is the federal Liberal Minister of Labour is because Mr. Mackasey did understand the labour movement and the Liberals got rid of him.

Interjection by an hon. member.

Mr. Drea: You have a strike that comes to a particular situation because of the economic forces in the industry and it is complicated by technology.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: It could have been settled last November.

Mr. Drea: Members opposite had a man in their own government in Ottawa who understood technology and he tried to bring in a bill that would help the worker and they bounced him. So let's not have any more about what the federal Minister of Labour could have done.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Breithaupt: What would the government's friends in Ottawa have done?

Mr. Drea: And they say to us, "Why didn't you turn it over to the federal Minister of Labour?" But the same people say one sentence beforehand, Mr. Speaker, "Under no circumstances do we want you to interpret what we are saying today as any criticism of the outstanding ability of Mr. Dickie and Mr. Scott to settle the issue." Do they mean they wanted Mr. Munro to come in as the figurehead and have Mr. Dickie and Mr. Scott do the work?

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Unfortunately, our officials were not successful.

Mr. Drea: I see, yes. In fact, has the federal Minister of Labour ever settled anything, let alone a strike? Perhaps the members opposite could help me out on that one.

Mr. Singer: The member for Scarborough Centre needs help.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Just take a step to the back.

Mr. Drea: And then we have the member for Sarnia with his delightful, if extremely naive, approach to labour relations. He loves the working man, but doesn't think terribly much of his union leader.

Mr. Bullbrook: He loves some of the working ladies too, I'll tell you.

Mr. Drea: Don't mumble, elucidate.

Mr. Bullbrook: In six years, I haven't been accused of mumbling.

Mr. Drea: Well, the member just did. I wouldn't want him to break his own record but he distinguished himself today with about 17 minutes of prattle. I never could figure out why, if he hated this bill so much, how he could stand there and in good conscience say he is going to vote for it. I would be afraid the lightning would come down.

Mr. Laughren: Good question.

Mr. Drea: In fact, if he does vote for this bill, I am going to get underneath my desk because the leaders up there will come down on him.

Mr. Singer: The member for Scarborough Centre would get a better view.

Mr. Drea: Talk about convoluted thinking: "I hate it but I will vote for it because I am from Sarnia." Wow, wow, wow!

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Drea: If the member is going to vote for this, let me know. He really frightens me.

Mr. E. W. Martel (Sudbury East): The member for Scarborough Centre should quit while he's ahead.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Tell us about the sweetheart deal, that was good stuff.

Mr. Drea: The member wants to talk about the sweetheart deal?

Mr. Speaker: Order please!

Mr. Drea: Well, the member knows and I know.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Drea: Is the member on retainer to one of them or—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Drea: Let's just turn for a moment—I think I have taken care of everybody over there for the moment—let's get back to this permit system.

I like this one. I too believe in collective bargaining. I am not as fanatical and I don't really believe that the NDP are as fanatical as they may seem to be, because I will tell the members something. If I could arrange to get the Dare strikers compulsory arbitration in the morning, the members know and I know that they would take it. We all know that, so let's not go into this thing that compulsory arbitration or any kind of arbitration to end a strike is necessarily and totally beyond any kind of approval.

Mr. Martel: Why doesn't the member talk about good faith bargaining?

Mr. Drea: I am talking about the situation right now.

Mr. Breithaupt: Two wrongs don't make a right.

Mr. Drea: We also have the intriguing proposition that everything goes; it's a concept of arbitration. I was in the chair when I allowed the member for Windsor West to pursue his thinking. I thought it was pretty germane to this. I think what I am doing is as germane.

You know, it concerns me that here we have a party that is dedicated to organized labour; and it says at the same time, in effect, let the strike go on. The member for Hamilton East really intrigues me. His organization represents people who are laid off because of this strike. His union represents people who might very well be forced to leave the union if some of the demands of the elevator constructors union go into a final agreement. He knows what I am talking about. Look what we had to do in Bill 2.

Mr. Gisborn: I have no idea what he is talking about.

Mr. Drea: The member represents the production workers at Otis Elevator and this union wants to take them over. He knows it and I know. Why did we have to put in in Section 4, subsection (2): "The board of arbitration shall not decide on any matters that come within jurisdiction of the Ontario Labour Relations Board"? Because there is going to be an attempt to scoop the member's workers and the machinists, and he knows it.

Mr. Bounsell: The member realized what that meant, too?

Mr. Drea: Yes, I do.

Mr. Bounsell: We will speak to that when we get to committee.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. A. J. Roy (Ottawa East): Straighten this place out!

Mr. Drea: Yes, we certainly will.

Mr. Speaker, to come back to the strike. You know there is another interesting part of this. It has been largely unnoticed but by deliberate design this union hasn't exactly closed down all of the elevator companies. I think it is very nice that the one they left in operation, Beckett, is building the Scarborough Town Centre.

Mr. Speaker: Order please! Please try to keep a little closer to the principle of the bill.

Mr. Drea: Yes I am.

Mr. Speaker: The bill as we have it before us.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Drea: They don't want to hear about this.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Drea: As soon as they are done with their little disturbance I'll be very glad to come back to the point.

Mr. Deans: Don't allow the irrelevancy of it to interfere.

Mr. Foulds: Consistency is the hobgoblin of small minds.

Mr. Drea: That is why the member can utter such proclamations as that. You know, this wasn't a total strike; there was a company left out of it. You see, once again, all of this has been very cleverly designed. We have the old whipsaw thing for one company, Beckett, which actually manufactures elevators and installs them. It is a small company, Canadian, and allowed to operate just on the periphery. That stops the Combines Act from getting into these cosy arrangements.

There are 27 or 28 maintenance companies operating, but somehow you can't get them to work on elevators. There are all kinds of maintenance companies operating—in fact, they say between 28 and 30. Both sides admit this. You can't get them to work on a building. This intrigues me a little bit more. It comes back down to what is the Province of Ontario to do? The chief elevator inspector puts his job and his neck on the line and he tells the truth right across the headlines in the paper.

Mr. Roy: The minister says no.

Mr. Drea: I hope my colleague, the minister who is in charge of that branch, is going to make sure that when this is done with, the civil service does not retaliate against that man because if anybody ever told the truth and stuck his neck out it was he. He said that the situation is a threat to public safety.

Whether you are a fanatic about collective bargaining, whether you are a casual observer, whether you just believe in the principles or whether you hate it all, that is where it ends. Because when the public safety is threatened, no matter how much you dislike the theory of compulsion, you must begin the wheels.

Again, it would have been very simple for the Premier to say, "That is it. It is all over. I am calling the Legislature in and we are going to do it in a day." But once again we went one more time, in the interests of common sense and stability—

Mr. R. F. Nixon: He was afraid to call the Legislature in.

Interjections by hon. members:

Mr. Drea: One more time we went to them and we said "For the love of heaven accept your responsibilities to the public." Both of them gave us the back of their hand. The public be damned again!

Mr. Foulds: Who didn't accept it?

Mr. Drea: Both of them.

Mr. Martel: They didn't do it.

Mr. Bounsall: Who was it?

Mr. Drea: Both of them.

Mr. Bounsall: No it was not.

Mr. Drea: Their deathbed repentance came two days ago. The only reason that the union proposed voluntary arbitration is that they knew—

Mr. Bounsall: The member's corporate friends, they were the ones.

Mr. Drea: —the company would not accept it. One's as bad as the other and let's stop splitting the difference. But they came back after that. And again, right down to today, if the union was so interested in the public safety that once we put this bill in, once it was tabled yesterday, it sent its men back, and this indicates that there is a future for collective bargaining; then why, when the Premier announced he was going to go and our Minister of Labour announced many, many days ago—

Mr. R. F. Nixon: The night before the election:

Mr. Drea: —that we were going to impose compulsory arbitration, where was that public spirited march back to work? There wasn't any. There wasn't going to be any because they were both determined that might makes right.

Mr. Laughren: Anti-labour speaking today.

Mr. Drea: Now another little fascinating diversion into the NDP.

Mr. Roy: Why didn't the House sit?

Mr. Drea: I hear over and over again compulsory arbitration in the private section is repugnant. Is it not repugnant in the public sector?

Mr. Deans: It's repugnant anywhere.

Mr. Martel: And we voted against it twice.

Mr. Drea: Good, the member had me worried for a minute. I thought he was coming over to our side and we haven't got room for him.

Mr. Roy: The government has two more places over there.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Drea: Good, great, good! The member had me a little nervous, between him and the member for Sarnia.

Mr. Deans: It is too far back.

Mr. Drea: Now then, here we are debating second reading of Bill 2. On the one hand we have a strike conceived, maintained, financed, directed and supervised from—

Mr. Martel: He is going to talk about the bill.

Mr. Drea: —a country that couldn't care less about what happens here.

Mr. Martel: Do branch plants in Ontario bother the member?

Mr. Drea: On the other hand we have a problem, and I believe there is a threat to public safety. I don't think it is a very intense one. I'm glad of that, quite glad that nobody has been injured in this, that it hasn't been proven that there was a very serious and substantial threat. But there is also a tremendous amount of very serious dislocation and inconvenience—older people being forced to walk up long flights in the subway because the escalators cannot be maintained, people unable to use elevators in their apartments, elevators in hotels being put on low speed because they cannot be maintained to a sufficient degree of safety for high speed, construction stopped, and—as a matter of fact I am very surprised this didn't come from members opposite—we have thousands of Ontario Housing units that can't be occupied by the poor and the needy and the deserving because of this strike. Not a word from any of them about that today, not a word. Once again, the public be damned if the union is there.

Mr. Bounsall: The member is saying he is surprised; is he admitting we are more concerned?

Interjections by hon. members.

An hon. member: They couldn't care less.

Mr. Drea: They couldn't care.

An hon. member: Where are the priorities in the bill?

Mr. Drea: The member's priorities? When he brought up his priorities he never mentioned Ontario Housing. He talked about homes for the aged or something else. He couldn't care less about the poor and the needy. He is into this because he sees it as a labour-management confrontation that he can make political gain out of, and that's it.

Mr. D. W. Ewen (Wentworth North): No wonder their leader stayed away.

Mr. Drea: And again, when we come back to arbitration, I want to talk about a very interesting theory by a noted labour leader in this country. In fact he is one of the leaders of the members' party. About 10 years ago, maybe 11 if memory serves me correct, at the time when labour disputes involving the railways in this country were of some substance and because of another era did really affect the public safety much more so than now, at that time he was asked what a New Democratic Party government would do in the case—

Mr. Martel: He is destroying his argument about public safety.

Mr. Drea: —of a national railway strike when the public safety was threatened. And he said: "I am afraid we would have to exercise one of the prerogatives of government and order the men back to work." His name is William Mahoney. They know who he is.

Mr. Deans: Our bill does exactly that.

Mr. Drea: Now how much more fanaticism about compulsory arbitration can those members opposite take when it is eroded by one of the leaders of their own movement. There has to be a time and a place when public safety takes issue over everything else, and that time is here and now and today. And if they believe that, they are going to have to vote for this bill!

Mr. Martel: Not on March 5.

Mr. Drea: All right, then vote against it.

Mr. Deans: It is not the only alternative.

Mr. Drea: Well this flimsy little thing that if you show up on Tuesday we will talk to you maybe is hardly an answer to anything.

In fact I will tell the member this, his colleague from Hamilton East, who knows something about labour relations in this province, I am going to be fascinated in listening to him defend that; and I hope for the sake of his sanity and mine that he doesn't attempt to do so. I think at that point the member will probably leave too.

Mr. Deans: It is too late for your sanity.

Mr. Bounsall: That is if it is there at all.

Mr. Martel: I was not aware you had any sanity.

Mr. Drea: If there is one thing on which I can agree with the member and his difficulty about getting the telephones, there is one winner in this strike, the Bell Telephone Co. with those toll calls to Philadelphia, because that is where the union headquarters are; and to Pittsburgh and other places. The Bell made a lot of cash, and now that the member is in a position to consult with Kentucky, he can give us a little extra dividend.

Mr. Breithaupt: That is the princess phone.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Bounsall: We'll get to the bill yet.

Mr. Yakabuski: I am sure the member's leader will take a different stand.

Mr. Martel: When are we going to talk about the bill?

Mr. Drea: Okay, I'll read members the bill then.

I really think in substance the only thing that is up for argument today is whether the facts which are stated in the preamble, and with all due respect to the member for Riverdale—and I do respect his interpretation of legal documents—I am going to have to seriously dispute one of his interpretations. The only things that are here to debate, really, I say again, are the 'whereas.' If those things aren't true, then we shouldn't be here; but I firmly believe that each one of them is true.

It says:

Whereas the parties have bargained for new collective agreements and to that end have exhausted conciliation services under the Labour Relations Act."

True, no argument!

Whereas strikes by the unions against the employers have continued since about the 7th day of September, 1972.

This dispute began with a wildcat strike and proceeded on into a legal strike; true. The companies did not lock out.

When they "threaten the public safety and welfare in the province of Ontario", by the member's own admission that is true.

Mr. Foulds: They?

Mr. Bounsall: Who does the member mean by "they"?

Mr. Drea: Both!

Mr. Cassidy: It is by the company refusal to negotiate in good faith that it is there.

Mr. Drea: How can either one of these bargain in good faith, they never had any intention to do so!

Mr. Foulds: Who is the "they"?

Mr. Drea: Both—one, two!

Mr. Foulds: That is not an interpretation of the words; it is a legal document.

Mr. Drea: And "whereas strikes by the unions against the employers"; the union called the strike, the company did not lock out.

Had the companies locked out and that caused the stoppage, then the minister is entitled to put in lockouts by the company. In this case a wildcat strike began it, and it spread on into a legal strike in this province.

Mr. Cassidy: Members opposite never understand that companies provoke strikes, and they do it often.

Mr. Drea: Oh for heaven's sake! And some unions provoke strikes. If the member really wants to get into some of the theories that have been advanced today that arbitration can solve it all, that all you have to do is get the union to agree; why in half of the union constitutions in this province the working man can't accept the agreement unless they okay it in the United States; the member knows it and I know it.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Drea: "Whereas intensive conciliation efforts have reached an impasse"—true!

Nobody has worked harder than our Assistant Deputy Minister of Labour, his conciliation officers and the Minister of Labour.

Mr. Bounsall: The member should have talked to him and had him explain it.

Mr. Drea: "And the parties are unable to achieve a settlement of a dispute." That is admitted.

"Whereas the public interest and welfare requires that means be provided to bring the strike to an end"—they don't disagree with that; true again. "And to settle all matters that are in dispute"—they agree with that—"between the parties in order that new collective agreements may be concluded between the parties." That is what we all want. It is all true in the preamble. There is no choice.

Mr. Roy: Why didn't the government do that two months ago?

Mr. Drea: If they want them to go back to work, if they want an end to the frustrations—

Mr. Martel: Has the member got himself convinced now?

Mr. Drea: —and the economic and social dislocations: if they're concerned about people riding up and down in high-speed conveyances that may injure or maim; if they are at all concerned about stability in the construction industry; if they are concerned about the degree of autonomy for the Minister of Labour so that he doesn't have to go kowtowing down in the United States, then I say to them that they have to vote for Bill 2. There is no other choice.

Mr. J. R. Rhodes (Sault Ste. Marie): There's an old elevator man!

Mr. Deans: He is almost convinced.

An hon. member: He's had his ups and downs.

An hon. member: The bottom fell out of the shaft for the NDP.

Mr. P. G. Givens (York-Forest Hill): Mr. Speaker, up until the preceding speaker spoke I had wanted to say that this debate had been remarkably free of acrimony. I think that this is significant because a great deal of reference has been made to the feeling that this is a sad day.

I don't regard it as a sad day, because I believe in the old adage that there is nothing as powerful as an idea whose time has come. This day has been coming for a long time. I would think that 10 years ago the kind of debate we have been listening to today could never have taken place in this chamber, because the whole concept of compulsory arbitration would have been reprehensible to everybody on all sides of this floor.

Society, I think, has become somewhat immune to outrages to its being. There have been so many outrages that people have become immune. I think the time has now come when the public has said, "Enough." Notwithstanding the sentiments expressed by our friends to the left, everybody I have talked to over the past two or three months—members of the public from all walks of life, all creeds, all beliefs, all philosophies—has said, "Enough is enough. This elevator strike has gone too far." It has led to economic disintegration. It has led to inconvenience. It has led to problems for everybody—physical, economic, financial and in every other way. Businesses have gone to the wall.

I think that the labour unions and the representatives of the companies that are under discussion today, will rue this day. This is an historic occasion. They will rue this day because, unlike somebody else who has said this is not a precedent, I suggest to you with great respect that it is a precedent; now that we have breached the wall the first time, it will be much easier to breach it again and again and again. And they have nobody to blame but themselves—

Mr. Yakabuski: Right!

Mr. Givens: —and I'll come to that point in a minute—

Mr. Foulds: Failed them again! Watch for the member for Renfrew South!

Mr. Givens: —because there are acts that have been perpetrated by both sides to this controversy which have been inhumane and callous. I'll come to that in a moment, because everybody has been speaking in general terms, and I want to be specific about certain acts that have taken place down the street here which I consider inhumane and callous and which I consider show a lack of responsibility on the part of people who are supposed to have a public responsibility, namely the parties to this dispute.

They have rendered a disservice both to management and to labour in allowing this day to take place, this day that has been referred to as a sad day and which I regard as an historic day. People have taken the attitude, and our friends to the left here take the attitude, that "it has cost millions, so what?" So the Sheraton chain will add another 50 cents or $1 on a hotel room! So the apartment builders will add on another couple of bucks to the rents of the tenants! But who is going to pay for the increases in the long run?

An hon. member: We are.

Mr. Givens: The public: The tenants of the apartments, the people who use the hotel rooms.

Mr. Bounsall: Which one first?

Mr. Deans: How does this change anything?

Mr. Givens: And down the street, Mr. Speaker, there is a hospital being built, the new Sinai Hospital. There has been passing reference made to hospitals; you know hospitals grab people right over here. One of the finest hospitals in the world—668 beds—towards which this government and its predecessors have contributed $31,231,867. The members of the board of governors, of which I was a member, contributed close to $15 million on their own and they have been paralyzed with frustration over the past six months. The opening of the hospital will be delayed for at least another nine months—and the government has that heavy investment in it.

Who is to say how many sick people have been unable to have their illnesses cured because they couldn't get a bed in this hospital? Who is to say how many people have been in pain and couldn't have their pain relieved because they couldn't get a bed in this hospital? Who is to say how many people who have had operations postponed have died because they couldn't get a bed in this hospital? And don't be misled by the name, new Mount Sinai. This is a general hospital which serves all categories, all races, all creeds, all ethnic groups.

Nobody has thought for one moment to go into this hospital and at least have two elevators operational so the construction of the hospital could take place and so that the transfer of the services could mesh and could interlock over the next few months. Everybody has ignored this.

Now if this isn't inhumane, if this isn't callous, if this doesn't indicate that the union and the other side, the management, deserve what has taken place today, then I would like to know what is inhumane and what is callous.

Mr. Stokes: This government is closing active treatment centres.

Mr. Givens: All right. Is that a reason for adding to it?

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Stokes: Right in my own riding—right in Thunder Bay.

Mr. W. Hodgson: Those fellows cooked their goose yesterday.

Mr. Givens: This hospital presently has a waiting list of close to 1,000 people. It currently takes four to six weeks for an urgent patient to be admitted to this hospital due to the lack of beds. The elevator strike has delayed the opening of these urgently required new beds resulting in sick patients waiting at home in stress for a bed to become available.

Mr. Laughren: Where is the Minister of Health (Mr. Potter)?

Mr. Givens: The hospital has made several commitments to specialized personnel from all over the world in order that they would arrive in time for the opening. These commitments will have to be honored, even though facilities in the new hospital will not now be available. And I don't know how long it will take for them to become available.

Because of the strike the new hospital is facing cost increases in equipment. The government is going to be asked for increases to the contribution that it has made because suppliers have already let the hospital know that there have been increases in their prices and they want more money. The government is going to have to face up to that situation.

Commitments have been made by the hospital to the faculty of medicine of the University of Toronto, because this is a high class teaching hospital and commitments have been made to accept increased numbers of undergraduate and postgraduate students for medical teaching in the new facilities. The result of the strike will mean that other arrangements will now have to be made. The ill effects of this strike will be felt in this hospital for many months to come because it has completely disoriented this educational project.

New and expanded programmes—and they to the left over here, are always hollering about new and expanded programmes—of patient care, research and community health are being delayed due to a lack of facilities to begin these programmes.

Mr. R. G. Hodgson (Victoria-Haliburton): Where is the member for High Park (Mr. Shulman)?

Mr. Givens: Let me give you another instance of inhumanity and callousness. The present hospital—the old hospital, which has 350 beds—has five elevators, one of which is designated as the emergency elevator, so really there are four. These elevators must receive regular maintenance and on several occasions two to four elevators including the emergency elevator, have been out of service.

The elevator company responsible for maintenance made the decision that two elevators—that's 40 per cent—would have to be out of service before they would consider this to be an emergency situation, even though one of these elevators is the emergency elevator. And only when an emergency situation occurs would the company consider sending a service man to the hospital.

This loss of 40 per cent of the elevator service has placed great hardship on the hospital and has caused the hospital's personnel to be seriously concerned with its effect on patient care.

Through you, Mr. Speaker, I have pointed out to the minister in my remarks that the provincial government is in hock here for close to $32 million and it is making contributions to other hospitals where the same thing applies. I am more familiar with the facts in this hospital because I used to sit on its board. But the same thing applies, mutatis mutandis, to other hospitals and to an old folks' home up in Sudbury where the government is involved very deeply.

I am appealing to the government. I shall make an amendment at the proper time which I would like the government to add to subsection 11 of section 4, in which I am suggesting with great respect that when the government constitutes this board, and when a collective bargaining agreement has been reached in accordance with the terms that have been set out in this bill, that that won't be the end of it. There is no doubt in my mind that because of the lack of public responsibility indicated, as far as I am concerned by both sides to this dispute, that they will likely continue to be irresponsible.

I am afraid that now that they have gone back to work they will be attracted to the big builders who will be able to offer bonuses under the table and over the table, and who will be able to offer them employment over a period of years.

An hon. member: Payoffs.

Mr. Givens: They will gravitate to these big jobs, and as far as the one-shot jobs are concerned, like the construction of hospitals or the old folks' homes, they will likely be the bottom men on the totem pole. I am appealing to the government that it should adopt my amendment—it can make the amendment its own—that where public moneys are involved, particularly where the province is contributing public moneys, it should insist—since this is compulsory arbitration and it is compelling them anyway—it should compel both sides to the dispute to see to it that when the working men go back on the job and the contractors go back on the job, those jobs be favoured to which the government is contributing many millions of dollars.

I think it is the only fair thing, I think it is the only reasonable thing, I think it is the only decent thing to do in the light of the circumstances of the case that I've outlined to the House. I will be introducing that amendment, through you, Mr. Speaker, and I hope the government will adopt it as its very own for the reasons that I have indicated.

Mr. Gisborn: Mr. Speaker, on most occasions when a member rises in the House to speak and particularly in the Throne debate or the reply to the Throne Speech or the budget debate, he starts off by saying, "I deem it a pleasure," "I am happy" or "I am very pleased to take part in this debate." I can't say that tonight. I don't feel happy about taking part in this debate.

Mr. Haggerty: Is the member happy any time?

An hon. member: Not after the last two by-elections.

Mr. Gisborn: One thing I am happy about though, is that we have a party in this province that can create a balance between the hysteria reaction of the other two parties that exist in this province.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Gisborn: I want to make it clear that the member who just spoke previous to my self rising, he or his party, or the party opposite, has no monopoly on humanity toward the people who need attention in this province. Our party has demonstrated that in other measures that have passed with this party.

An hon. member: The member can't even get his own party excited.

Mr. Gisborn: I sat in our caucus and we debated this issue as other caucuses must have.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Gisborn: There were no divisions, no reservations about the fact that we felt the strike should be terminated.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Gisborn: And we haven't said that heretofore.

Mr. Yakabuski: What does the member's leader think? Did he get the pulse of the people yet?

Mr. Gisborn: We are in complete unanimity that the strike should be terminated in this province, the strike between the companies and the elevator constructors. But we searched ourselves to avoid the dangerous precedent that was going to be established and we thought we could come up with something that could clear that situation up.

We did not think it was necessary to bring in compulsory binding arbitration to get these people back to work. We have enough precedents; we have the American tribunal system where they have 30-, 60- and 90-day cooling-off periods that have worked in a situation like this time and time again. The other parties are not getting the point and they don't try to catch the point that we can and we have settled this thing; we have got them back to work.

Mr. Yakabuski: We have the point all right.

Mr. Martel: The member never read about it.

Mr. Gisborn: But why do members opposite have to look at every question that comes before them with the idea of throwing the baby out with the bathwater, as the Liberal Party always does in situations of this type? There is no in-between. It's just one way down the road.

I guess the only little political quip I'd like to make before my other few comments, is about the interesting remarks from the hon. member for Rainy River when he pounded his chest and tried to relate to us the terrific struggles by workers to form trade unions in this province. I hope when he reads past histories that he reads closely that part where Mitchell Hepburn was involved in the establishment of the industrial unions in this province, and he won't feel so proud about the Liberal Party's position. The ghosts of the galloping hussars still prevail and are ready to gallop across that party when the time arises; let's not kid ourselves.

An hon. member: They haven't held their heads up since.

Mr. Gisborn: It's very prominent.

Mr. Roy: The NDP is worse off than we are. It has problems right now.

Mr. Gisborn: My friend from Scarborough Centre touched the nerve centre of the situation; that the company had tried to maintain the hiring hall provision. He didn't deal in entirety with the union's security position. That caused the companies' adamant position on not just relinquishing some of their past rights, but the companies' adamant position in saying to the union, "We're going to change some of the things that have been a harmonious procedure in our relationship for the past 50 years. This year we're going to change that. We're not going to retain something we've had; we're going to take it completely away from you"—that is, their complete union security provision.

An hon. member: And they knew that would cause a strike.

Mr. Gisborn: No, it's not just the dues and the hiring hall situation, because it's very clear what the company says. As a matter of fact, I'm quoting from their position on the strike. The following statement was issued by A. M. Tuff, chairman of the Canadian elevator manufacturers negotiating committee, on the adjournment of talks in Toronto with the Ontario Ministry of Labour mediator, W. H. Dickie:

As manufacturers we are responsible for ensuring that our product meets the public safety standards required by law for manufacturers' installation, service and operation. The union seeks to deny us this right by demanding control of hiring, training and job progression without any employer say in the matter. At all times we have been prepared to settle on a realistic and reasonable basis with our striking employees. In our view, there is absolutely no reason, beyond union stubbornness, for continuation of a strike that has created so much unnecessary personal and economic hardship.

Now, they have lived with that kind of an agreement heretofore, and when that became the issue in dispute that held the settlement of a strike to this point, that's when the government should have laid down a firm statement saying to that company: "You are now trying to take something away from that union that they have had for the last 50 years. There is no validity in your statement that they are trying to interfere with the quality of workmanship, with the safety factor, because the minute they start to install an elevator in a building it is under close inspection scrutiny. The minute the construction is finished, it's examined and inspected by this government as to its safety provisions and its quality. And when it starts to operate it also falls under the jurisdiction of this government to make sure that it is operated and inspected for its safety factors."

The company's argument completely falls apart in that regard. I am not going to get into that weak position, that is controversial in a lot of reactionary minds, about the hiring hall system.

Mr. Drea: Does the member like the hiring hall?

Mr. Gisborn: I don't like some semblance of it. I don't like the actions of some particular unions and their attitudes, but I have got enough knowledge to know that when the members become dissatisfied with how that operates, they will change it.

Mr. Drea: The same way they did with Hal Banks.

Mr. Gisborn: The member's argument doesn't hold water, because there are so many people who can work on so many jobs. When those jobs are operating in their full capacity, then his argument falls apart. They have for 50 years provided employees and have carried out the operations of the industry.

Mr. Drea: If Local 1005 operated the way that elevator constructors union did, the member would hang a black flag outside the hall, and he knows it.

Mr. Speaker: The member for Scarborough Centre is out of order.

Mr. Gisborn: That's what the member says. I haven't investigated that part of their jurisdiction. I don't make it my business—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Mr. Gisborn: —to delve into the internal workings of an organization. That might be the member for Scarborough Centre's job as a particular member of this Parliament, but I think he would be better off to stick with the dance halls and the beauty parlours.

Mr. Bounsall: That's his natural habitat.

Mr. Gisborn: Mr. Speaker, we have many times in this House debated the pros and cons of compulsory, binding arbitration, whether or not it applied to the public service or the private sector. We have been strongly opposed to that measure. We have also said in argument in those debates, or at least I have myself, that we believe in the least amount of government intervention in industrial disputes.

I am sure that previous Ministers of Labour have accepted those thoughts of the least amount of government intervention being the best, but we realize when we come to a situation like this, then it is the duty of the government to take action. We have said that when we have debated the Hospital Labour Disputes Arbitration Act as being a compulsory measure and when we debated the Crown Agency Act as being a compulsory measure. We said that we could leave those issues, and if an issue arose where the public safety and health was at stake, then the government could bring in legislation to correct the situation, because precedents take place and they are never forgotten.

We support the fact that this strike had to be terminated, but we are just as convinced that there are other measures that this government with its powers could have implemented that did not carry a binding situation. Compulsory back-to-work orders have to be recognized. That step could have been taken. It could have been for 30, 60 or 90 days to give them time to settle down. If they couldn't come to an agreement, then the government has another chance.

But when it comes to a point of making such a serious decision, then you have to take the first best alternate; you don't jump over the cliff. This is the point we are trying to make. We remember quite clearly that the unions said they would go to work the minute the bill was introduced. The government should not have lost track of that fact. The bill should have been introduced on Tuesday.

One has to say to oneself, where does the minister stand in this situation. I observed the minister two or three times on television with a weary face and a cracking voice explaining the agony he had gone through in his efforts to bring this situation to a close. I remember the announcement of the Prime Minister that on Tuesday, March 20, he would introduce compulsory legislation. The Minister of Labour stood at his side and he did look pretty weary. I think it was realistic weariness from the efforts that he had put into trying to bring this thing to a close.

I wonder about the political implications in the timing. Was it the fact that we had two by-elections which took priority over this situation?

Mr. Speaker: Perhaps the hon. member would find this a convenient point at which to break his remarks.

Mr. Gisborn: I will adjourn the debate, Mr. Speaker.

It being 6 o'clock, p.m., the House took recess.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF ONTARIO

THURSDAY, MARCH 22, 1973

The House resumed at 8 o'clock, p.m.

Clerk of the House: The 3rd order, resuming the debate on the motion for second reading of Bill 2, the Elevator Constructor Unions Disputes Act, 1973.

Mr. R. Gisborn (Hamilton East): Mr. Speaker, I can't recollect exactly where I left off before the adjournment hour at 6 o'clock, but there are a few concluding remarks I would like to make.

I feel that party politics have entered into this debate just a little bit too much previous to this point and I want to express to the members that I think the situation is a serious one and should be dealt with in that vein. I and this party do not underrate the seriousness of the subject we are dealing with tonight.

I would like to state some of the things that I have found out in regard to some statements made previously and I will be brief. I found, to the best that we can ascertain, that any American interference is strictly on the part of the American companies. I have ascertained that the international office in Philadelphia has had no part whatsoever in these negotiations. I have also ascertained that the local union officers in Ontario have had no assistance and received no interference from international officers in regard to their situation here in Ontario.

I want to put briefly what the companies call their position and they say this:

The industry's position on arbitration: The elevator manufacturers do not agree that arbitration is a proper method for resolution of the strike and this position has been made clear to Mr. William Dickie, Mr. Vic Scott and Mr. John Speranzini, the Ontario government mediators. Generally unions themselves are opposed to arbitration. We therefore have to regard the elevator union's suggestion for arbitration in this dispute as nothing more than a bargaining ploy.

This union has not defined any terms or conditions of arbitration. We must suspect that the union leaders, having extracted a very rich offer from the companies, through bargaining and mediation, are now setting their sights on gaining still more through proposing voluntary arbitration.

The fact that some interest disputes are arbitrated in the public sector has no bearing here. A great many issues are not even permitted by governments to go to arbitration. Moreover, governments have unlimited resources through taxation and are not running businesses subject to the uncertainties of the marketplace and profit and loss. From the point of view of the companies, there is no real expertise available for arbitration of an interest dispute in the private sector of the economy and little, if any, precedent.

If a mediator of Mr. W. H. Dickie's stature and experience encounters serious difficulties with the issues, there is no prospect that an arbitrator could find an equitable solution. Furthermore and even more importantly, it is the elevator companies, not the union and not the government, who carry the moral responsibility and the legal and financial liabilities for the safe performance of the industry's products. In these circumstances we cannot abdicate and leave to the uncertainties of the arbitration processes the finding of decisions concerning the hiring, training skills and competency of employees, to mention only some of the crucial issues involved. Since these are issues we cannot compromise with the union, we cannot accept the risk of having them compromised by an arbitrator.

Now that statement alone tells this Legislature and the public that they don't want to submit and agree to arbitration. In other words they are saying the strike must continue, in its uncertainties, as we have seen it in the past few months. That is the indictment against the company. They again say on wages and benefits:

Wages, and extensions of the formula by which wages are to be based on the average wage of the top four of the 10 principal building trades, rather than on the average rate of the highest four of the seven trades specified in the previous agreement.

In recent years this has resulted in a 12 per cent wage increase annually.

Now, that statement says absolutely nothing that hasn't been common knowledge ever since the day the strike was called. This formula has been used by these companies and this union, in amicable agreement; this is the way they will settle their wage increases.

This has prevailed for many, many years. I don't approve of that type of formula, but many unions adopt a formula of that nature. We have a plant in Hamilton that is not organized—the Dofasco steel plant—that in policy adopts the wage rates negotiated by the Steel Co. of Canada and their unions through sometimes bitter and lengthy negotiations.

So the companies are not saying very much. There was no grant; there was no real set of negotiations on the money package. A formula was agreed upon. The automatic progression of that formula arrived at a certain amount of money.

So we must agree, Mr. Speaker, that the elevator companies are to blame for the failure of the parties to arrive at an agreement. The company refutes a conclusion of most others that the public health and safety is threatened. That is stated by their spokesman, Mr. E. M. Tuff, who is quoted in the Toronto papers of March 8:

The six month strike against five elevator companies has resulted in inconveniences to the public, but has not endangered them, the chairman of the negotiating committee said Tuesday.

So in a sense he is saying there is no reason for a cessation of the strike—that the strike should continue under the system of collective bargaining with, as we realize, no solution in view.

The companies refused to agree with arbitration, therefore, they must wish the strike or lockout to continue, while the union has some weeks ago agreed to have this dispute settled by some compulsory method.

Now, in conclusion I would appeal to the minister to accept our position not to impose compulsory arbitration, but a back to work order, a cooling-off period, whatever they might want to call it, and provide one more chance for the collective bargaining process to work. We in this House can unanimously make our decision, while we still have time, in the next few hours during this debate.

Mr. Speaker: Does any other hon. member wish to participate? The hon. member for Ottawa East.

Mr. A. J. Roy (Ottawa East): Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have very few comments to make about the bill. I do not intend to discuss the principle of the bill because this has been sufficiently discussed by—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. I. Deans (Wentworth): Then the member had better sit down!

Mr. Speaker: Perhaps the hon. member would wish to take his seat then?

An hon. member: He's embarrassed with the principle.

Mr. Roy: Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Speaker: We are discussing the principle of the bill.

Mr. Roy: Well, according to my friend, you see, there—

Mr. Deans: You don't warn them in advance!

Mr. Roy: Mr. Speaker, I have always attempted to be very straight and honest here and I don't intend to discuss one of the principles of the bill.

Mr. R. D. Kennedy (Peel South): What is the member going to talk about then? What is left?

Mr. P. G. Givens (York-Forest Hill): He's just been ruled out of order!

Mr. Roy: Mr. Speaker, the principle has been emphasized by other members of this caucus, and mostly by my leader (Mr. R. F. Nixon). The point I want to emphasize here tonight—and I don't think it has been emphasized enough—is that attempts have been made here throughout the day to make our friends to the left the culprits of this whole situation, when in fact it is the fellows sitting across from us. They are the fellows—

Mr. Kennedy: He couldn't say anything else, could he?

Mr. W. Newman (Ontario South): They've been wrong before.

Mr. Deans: There's a proud face!

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Roy: At least our friends to the left are standing up for a principle which they feel will bring them some political advantage. Whereas, across the way—

Mr. Kennedy: They have no principles.

Mr. Deans: They have to speak about something other than principles.

Mr. Roy: I just wanted to reply to the member for Scarborough Centre (Mr. Drea).

Mr. R. F. Ruston (Essex-Kent): They admit that they are using it for political purposes!

Mr. Roy: Mr. Speaker, I cannot say that our friends to the left have any principle at all; they just go any way they are pushed.

Mr. J. R. Rhodes (Sault Ste. Marie): And by the Liberals too?

Mr. Roy: I have some difficulty attacking the Minister of Labour (Mr. Guindon)—

Mr. Rhodes: Mr. Trudeau won't like the hon. member.

Mr. Deans: That will read well tomorrow, I'll tell you.

Hon. E. A. Winkler (Chairman, Management Board of Cabinet): They'd better pass this bill.

Mr. Deans: We're not holding it up!

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Roy: Mr. Speaker, if I've done nothing else I've enlivened the debate anyway.

Mr. M. Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): It isn't the member for Ottawa East; it's the time of the evening.

Mr. Roy: I have some difficulty in attacking the—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Roy: Gee, I've really pulled their chain, haven't I?

An hon. member: They're all flushed now!

Mr. Roy: Yes, they're all excited now. I woke them up a bit. Mr. Speaker—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Cassidy: Is this on the principle of the bill, Mr. Speaker? Are these irrelevants relevant?

Mr. Speaker: I am trying very hard to decide that.

Mr. J. F. Foulds (Port Arthur): In 25 words or less.

Mr. Roy: Yes, in 25 words or less. I have some difficulty, Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Cassidy: We know that!

Mr. Roy: Thank you. Is that it?

Hon. A. Grossman (Minister of Revenue): The hon. member knows better than that!

Mr. Cassidy: Say it again!

Mr. Roy: The Minister of Labour, who is sitting across the way in his usual complacent way and, I must say, with a very sympathetic smile, is a very difficult man to attack because he's such a nice fellow. And I really don't think—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. E. W. Martel (Sudbury East): He needs some sympathy.

Mr. J. M. Turner (Peterborough): What is the hon. member buttering him up for?

Mr. Roy: About the whole attitude taken by this government and the minister's colleagues in this, I feel the minister is not quite devious enough to have approached the problem in this way. This obviously was the making of his leader.

Mr. E. J. Bounsall (Windsor West): He is insulting the minister.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Roy: This was patently obvious when his leader attempted to play politics with the issue. Unfortunately, in law the minister is what we would consider a party to the defence.

Mr. Bounsall: Let the minister get up and deny it!

Mr. Martel: He said something about devious!

Mr. W. Hodgson (York North): The member's deputy leader is walking out on him.

Mr. Speaker: Is this a preamble to the principle?

Mr. Roy: Yes, this is just a preamble, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Deans: He told you he wasn't going to speak about the principle.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Roy: We are just going to keep these fellows here longer, that's all.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Roy: Mr. Speaker, the Minister of Health (Mr. Potter), as I understand it, yesterday accused my friends on the left of not caring about the seriousness of the situation—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. W. Hodgson: Order.

Mr. Roy: —of not caring sufficiently about the seriousness of the situation, when in fact the minister's leader attempted to play politics with the whole issue—

Mr. W. Hodgson: The member for York-Forest Hill said that!

Mr. Roy: —by postponing it after the two by-elections. If the matter was as serious—

Hon. G. A. Kerr (Provincial Secretary for Justice): If it was before the hon. member accused us of playing politics.

Mr. Roy: Mr. Speaker, we are talking about a very serious situation, according to the Minister of Labour.

Mr. Cassidy: He has some difficulty.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Roy: My God, I woke them up. I really woke them up, didn't I? Even our friend from Renfrew South (Mr. Yakabuski) is yelling.

Mr. Foulds: Not for the reasons the hon. member thinks he is.

Mr. Roy: Yes, I should ask them what was on the menu tonight. In any event, Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Cassidy: The hon. member for Ottawa East has got everybody in the House puzzled.

Mr. Roy: The attempt to play politics with the issue obviously backfired, as we saw in the by-elections. Obviously they lose their integrity—

Hon. Mr. Kerr: Oh, the hon. member is playing politics. There is no connection—

Mr. Roy: —when they attempt to put the blame on our friends to the left.

Mr. Turner: Is the hon. member talking about the Premier?

Mr. Roy: And I hear my friend from Scarborough Centre attempting to say that the 24 hr. period is most important.

Mr. F. Drea (Scarborough Centre): If he loves them so much, why doesn't he take a walk?

Mr. Roy: He fails to answer. He failed, Mr. Speaker, to answer the prime question. When the chief inspector talked about the seriousness of the situation, why did the Premier not act right away and call the House into session, if time was so important?

Hon. Mr. Kerr: We believe in free collective bargaining.

Mr. Roy: Why didn't the government act three or four months ago on this situation?

Mr. E. M. Havrot (Timiskaming): That is what the member for Sarnia (Mr. Bullbrook) said.

Mr. P. J. Yakabuski (Renfrew South): We had that speech this afternoon. Put one together yourself.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Roy: Why didn't the government act three or four months ago if it was looking at the situation over a 24-hour period?

Mr. F. Laughren (Nickel Belt): Then we would have missed the member for Ottawa East's performance.

Mr. Roy: Yes, you would have. So I suggest, Mr. Speaker, that there is an amount of deviousness, an amount of politics in trying to play on this very serious situation.

Hon. Mr. Kerr: The member has a suspicious mind.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: It takes one to know one.

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Mr. Cassidy: I think the member is obstructing the House. It is a prime example of obstructionism.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Roy: Mr. Sueaker, in closing, really what happened was that I had just written the preamble and I hadn't had a chance to write the closing remarks of the speech.

Hon. Mr. Kerr: The member is playing politics.

Mr. Roy: What I wanted to say basically and what I wanted to emphasize in this House is apparently, and it should be obvious to it now, that the government has lost its credibility. It was obvious during the two by-elections that the government has lost all its former credibility. When it goes before the public and says that other parties in this House impede progress or hamper correcting a situation which is very serious—

Mr. W. Newman: Then why did the member seek the Liberal federal nomination?

Mr. Roy: —the public out there just doesn't accept it.

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Mr. Roy: I can see how this is getting the members opposite excited.

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Mr. N. G. Leluk (Humber): They didn't want him.

Mr. Roy: The government didn't want them. It didn't want those two ministers. In any event, Mr. Speaker—

Hon. Mr. Kerr: We are still big in Ottawa.

Mr. Roy: Pardon me?

Hon. Mr. Kerr: We are still big in Ottawa.

Mr. Roy: —what we are trying to say basically is that we are supporting the bill, but we are trying to emphasize—

Mr. Deans: But the Liberal Party is trying to look as if it is not.

Mr. Roy: —that the Conservative Party is trying to play politics with a very serious issue. It didn't get away with it and it will not get away with it. Just bring on more ministers and we'll replace the government gradually. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Sandwich-Riverside. Order, please.

Mr. F. A. Burr (Sandwich-Riverside): Mr. Speaker, I wish to make two or three points as briefly as possible. Let me say at the beginning that, when the elevator workers' unions asked for arbitration and the companies refused, the unions undertook to return to work when the Ontario government introduced legislation, not after the legislation was passed, but just after it was introduced.

Mr. Yakabuski: Good night! The member can't explain away a horrible mistake.

Mr. Burr: This was a very important consideration for members of our caucus in considering the issue, because we recognized the great inconvenience and, in some cases, the serious health hazards that had been created by this dispute. Knowing that we would not be delaying the return to work one day or even one hour, we felt free to propose an alternative to binding arbitration; this the member for Windsor West (Mr. Bounsall) did today. We realize that we could now debate this bill for weeks, if anyone cared to, without further endangering the public in any way, simply because the elevator industry has resumed functioning.

If we had had to make a decision about Bill 2, knowing that for every hour we talked we might be endangering the public safety, then we would have had a very difficult decision to make. Knowing that the government majority ensured that the bill would pass in any event, we would have been in the unenviable position whereby we might have had to support the bill simply to get the industry back to work. Knowing, however—

Mr. W. Newman: Why don't they support it?

Mr. Burr: The industry is back at work for the information of the hon. member. Knowing, however, that the strike was over—

Mr. Yakabuski: What did his leader say over the supper hour?

Mr. Burr: —with the introduction of the bill, we felt free to introduce a bill of our own that would avoid what all three parties have claimed today that they would like to avoid, namely, compulsory arbitration, and this we did.

If the government has been so concerned with public safety the Premier could have, and should have, called the House together weeks ago. If the return to work was so urgent, and I am inclined to feel that it was, why did the government not introduce the bill two days ago on Tuesday instead of waiting for 24 hours and doing it yesterday?

Mr. Yakabuski: We thought his leader would be back.

Mr. Deans: That is novel. Maybe if we had told them, they would have delayed it indefinitely.

Mr. Burr: The only other point I wish to make, Mr. Speaker, is that this is a strike between an autonomous Canadian union and five American companies. Wages are not at stake in this dispute. Seniority is the main issue over which the strike is being fought. The union is seeking to guarantee that men of 50, workers with 20 years of service, may have job security after the dispute is resolved. This is a recognized Canadian tradition in union-company relationships. American companies are trying to destroy this established way of life for Canadian workers. All parties agree that compulsory arbitration is a last resort.

The New Democratic Party is offering a second last resort and we invite the government, Mr. Speaker, to consider it.

Mr. Speaker: Does any other hon. member wish to enter the debate before the minister replies? If not, the hon. minister.

Hon. F. Guindon (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, I have listened with a great deal of interest to the remarks made by several members of the House and I would like to express my appreciation of many of the contributions made by all members of the House in this debate. Of course, we did not get the consensus of opinion; this was to be anticipated. In any event, I do appreciate the comments that were made here today and I think we have all realized the seriousness and the meaning of the legislation which was introduced yesterday.

I should like, first of all, and I think I owe it to my staff, to congratulate my assistant deputy minister, the chief of the mediation services in my ministry and other officers who have worked for so long to bring about a settlement in what was, in my opinion, one of the most difficult and exhausting experiences in the life of the Ministry of Labour.

As I said earlier today, more than 45 days of mediation talks took place during the present strike and some of these meetings have been going on in the very wee hours of the morning. My staff has kept me informed at all times and I have been in touch with them constantly, including weekends.

One thing that no member has mentioned here today is the fact that our staff has been able to get consensus on almost 90 per cent of the issues. Unfortunately, insofar as the other 10 per cent of issues were concerned, there seemed to be no settlement whatsoever. I, as minister responsible, want to congratulate them for the work they've done. I want to assure them that they will always have my support, because one has to know to appreciate how much effort is made by these experts in the field.

Now, in this particular strike — and it hasn't been mentioned here today — there was a unique experience for our ministry. As you know, this union has been bargaining for over 52 years without a strike. That's quite a record. It's a record to be proud of, and if at times we did perhaps, take more time than some people would have liked, it is because the minister and his staff were trying to preserve the character of this union as bargaining on a national basis.

Mr. V. M. Singer (Downsview): And the public is damned. That's why the government waited seven months to move.

Hon. Mr. Guindon: Not at all, Mr. Speaker.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: The member's leader is a little more responsible than that.

Hon. Mr. Guindon: I would like to remind the hon. member—

Hon. Mr. Kerr: Compulsory arbitration in October — is that what the member wanted?

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Hon. Mr. Guindon: Mr. Speaker, if I may I will remind my hon. friend from Downsview of a similar strike in the United States — with basically the same issues — took 112 days before a settlement could be reached.

Mr. Singer: Yes, but the minister did three times better; three times better before he acted.

Hon. Mr. Guindon: Well, I'm coming to the member's point.

Hon. Mr. Kerr: The hon. member wanted compulsory arbitration in October.

Hon. Mr. Guindon: It took exactly eight months in the city of New York before a settlement could be reached. So, as you can see, it wasn't an easy one to settle.

Now, because of the national character of this union we've had a number of delays. We've had a number of occasions where meetings had to be adjourned or suspended pending court cases; particularly in the Province of Quebec, where they had the decree system, and also in British Columbia on occasions. This has taken time and brought about some suspension of meetings and adjournments. For those of you who have inferred in any way that we were playing politics with this very important strike on our hands—

Mr. Singer: Perish the thought! Bah!

Hon. Mr. Guindon: —I can assure you that in the dying days of the discussion we were indeed trying to obtain a voluntary arbitration as had been suggested by labour. We worked for over a week trying to get this voluntary arbitration instead of compulsory arbitration.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: And the member knows it.

Mr. Singer: One week out of seven months. That's no record. One week out of seven months.

An hon. member: That's last week.

An hon. member: The member's party would never settle anything.

Mr. Roy: Why didn't they call the House into session before the by-elections?

Mr. Singer: All of the time.

Hon. Mr. Guindon: Mr. Speaker, when I listen to members being so critical—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Hon. Mr. Guindon: —I would wish at times they would some day have the privilege of being the responsible Minister of Labour in the Province of Ontario.

An hon. member: We will.

An hon. member: They never will.

Hon. Mr. Guindon: And I think if they look back—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Singer: Let us decide—we'll figure that out too.

Mr. J. E. Bullbrook (Sarnia): We'll manage that. We'll manage that.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: We'll take that.

Mr. Singer: Yes, and credit too!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please!

Mr. Yakabuski: Better be careful, the member for High Park (Mr. Shulman) is coming in tonight.

Hon. Mr. Kerr: The member for Downsview is flush with victory.

Hon. Mr. Guindon: I don't know if my friend is very serious, but if he's talking about resignations—perhaps he's looking for a by-election—but I can assure him it's no use in Stormont. He'd have no chance in Stormont whatsoever.

Mr. Singer: Right, we like by-elections. Let's have a by-election.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Singer: Pick one! Pick one!

Mr. W. Newman: Is the member kidding? Is he playing with people's lives? He's playing with people's lives!

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. W. Newman: The member doesn't care about people. Don't forget that. Let the records show that.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order! I think the hon. minister—order, please!

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Would you please grant the hon. minister the courtesy of paying attention to him and letting him deliver his response.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: Tell the member for Downsview to be quiet.

Hon. Mr. Guindon: Thank you.

Mr. Speaker: Don't pay any attention, but let him make his response.

Hon. Mr. Guindon: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Seriously, I would like to give assurance to the members of this House that we have acted with integrity, honesty and responsibility throughout this strike.

Mr. M. C. Germa (Sudbury): That's something new.

Hon. Mr. Guindon: I can assure you that the motives of the—

Mr. Singer: Nobody is behind the minister.

Hon. Mr. Guindon: —minister, when he intervenes in a strike—and if you look back within the year since I assumed this portfolio, on four occasions I have had to intervene in a strike situation. This is quite unusual, as I'm sure my opponents will admit.

Mr. Singer: If the minister cannot stand it, get out.

Hon. Mr. Guindon: You may question the judgement of the minister as to the timing of intervention. It's not an easy thing to decide the time when the minister should interfere in a strike.

Mr. Roy: The minister's timing is perfect.

Hon. Mr. Guindon: However, I am sure that members cannot question the motive that I have had on every occasion which was, of course, to obtain a negotiated agreement if at all possible or—

Mr. Singer: But he was an honourable man!

Hon. Mr. Guindon: —immediate agreement or, failing this, at least voluntary arbitration. In the present case, it wasn't there.

I should like in closing, Mr. Speaker, to express my appreciation to every member who has participated in the debate because at no time have I heard anyone questioning the credibility of the minister and his staff. For this I am very grateful.

Mr. Singer: The minister has got something there.

Hon. Mr. Guindon: I can assure the members once a Minister of Labour has lost credibility he has lost his usefulness to this province and to the workers of Ontario.

Mr. Singer: That's what my colleague from Sarnia told the minister this afternoon.

Hon. Mr. Guindon: And I do appreciate the fact—

Mr. Bullbrook: It's not a question of personal credibility.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: Would the member tell his colleague to be quiet?

Mr. Singer: Oh, now, come on!

Hon. Mr. Guindon: —there was no question of the credibility and integrity of the minister or even his staff. I certainly would not—

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Guindon: I wouldn't tolerate in any event any criticism or accept any suspicion as to the integrity of the minister and his credibility at all times. If by any chance some of the members don't know my background, perhaps I should have told some of the new members that I have been in this Legislature, Mr. Speaker, for some time.

I have been elected not once, not twice, but five times.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Guindon: Not in one riding but in two ridings of Ontario. In the election of 1971—

Mr. Bullbrook: The minister doesn't have to do that. He is bigger than that.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Guindon: I, too, Mr. Speaker, like my hon. friend from Sarnia, represent a highly unionized city of this province. There are great trade unions.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please!

Hon. Mr. Guindon: If members look back in the records of the last election, 1971— which is just about a year and a half ago— they will find that I have collected and received 60 per cent of the vote—

Mr. Singer: Let's have another by-election next week.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Guindon: —while our NDP friends managed to get about 28 per cent and the Liberal candidate in the Liberal stronghold got 12 per cent of the vote.

Interjections by hon. members.

An hon. member: The member for Sarnia will never get going. He'll never make it.

Hon. Mr. Guindon: I know the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. R. F. Nixon) has—

An hon. member: Calm down!

Hon. Mr. Guindon: —asked me why we did not contact the federal Department of Labour—

Mr. Singer: It was pretty weak, you know. Let's try another by-election.

Hon. Mr. Guindon: Why didn't we ask the involvement of the federal government in this dispute. This I can say, Mr. Speaker—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please!

Hon. Mr. Guindon: —the federal Department of Labour, for one thing, has no jurisdiction over the construction industry.

An hon. member: Why is that?

Hon. Mr. Guindon: Secondly, I doubt if they are geared for it. I can add this—that none of the parties in the dispute, to my knowledge, was in favour of any federal participation in this dispute. That is the reason there was no involvement of them.

An hon. member: No one wants the feds anywhere.

Mr. R. F. Nixon (Leader of the Opposition): What was that reason, one more time?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Nobody wants the feds anywhere.

An hon. member: Because the government didn't want to be involved.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Mr. Stanfield wanted them involved.

Mr. Singer: All the Tories wanted to get the government involved.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Guindon: Mr. Speaker, it has been said by one or two members—

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Downsview does not have the floor. Order!

Mr. Deans: He doesn't have to have the floor.

Hon. Mr. Guindon: One or two members have suggested that one of the parties in the dispute was not bargaining in good faith.

An hon. member: Get the habeas corpus out of here.

Hon. Mr. Guindon: My experience while having discussions with both sides did not demonstrate this. I don't see how they can substantiate this allegation. Both sides, so far as I was concerned, have been negotiating in good faith. It was just one of those situations where you could not get an agreement; you just could not get it. And because of the safety factor for the general public, because innocent parties were victims of the strike, and also because of the impact on the economy of this province, it was felt after six months of strike that the government should no longer be passive but take a forward action.

Mr. Cassidy: Then why did the minister get so angry with the companies if they were bargaining in good faith?

Hon. Mr. Guindon: I am not saying we are angry. We are not angry at anyone. The Minister of Labour is strictly neutral. He knows that he has to walk a very tight rope.

An hon. member: That's not what the unions say.

Hon. Mr. Guindon: We are providing services—

Mr. Cassidy: You open them up and—

Hon. Mr. Guindon: We are providing services and we did our best in this case, as in most cases. And as you know—

Mr. Singer: Seven months later here we are.

Mr. Speaker: Order.

Hon. Mr. Guindon: As you know, if you look over the labour-management relations in this province—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order.

Hon. Mr. Guindon: —we have an excellent record, an excellent record. But you can't—

Interjection by an hon. member.

Hon. Mr. Guindon: But you can't win them all.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. minister will please disregard the interjections.

Hon. Mr. Guindon: That's what I am saying now. So in closing, Mr. Speaker, I would ask my colleagues—

Mr. T. P. Reid (Rainy River): Closing?

Hon. Mr. Guindon: —the hon. members, to support the bill that we have introduced here today.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Up the elevators.

Hon. Mr. Guindon: It was a difficult decision for the minister to make. I hope it doesn't create a precedent, because I've said so before, and I repeat it again, I believe in the collective bargaining process and I'll believe in it in the future as long as I am Minister of Labour for the Province of Ontario. I ask the members to support unanimously the bill they have in front of them, and as they saw in the last section of the bill, once the collective agreements are in operation, this bill, of course, will be repealed.

Mr. Bullbrook: Would the minister consider a question before concluding his remarks?

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Bullbrook: Would the minister consider a question before concluding his remarks?

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Guindon: No.

Mr. Bullbrook: Would the minister care to make response to my comments, made this afternoon, as to the lack of initiative on his part in connection with the Throne Speeches of this government, in connection with general labour legislation, and as to whether he is content to respond to these crises always in an ad hoc fashion?

Mr. L. C. Henderson (Lambton): No. No.

Mr. Speaker: I think the hon. member knows that he was quite out of order and that his remarks were repetitious. No response is required. The motion is for—

Mr. Bullbrook: Is the minister going to answer?

Mr. Speaker: No, he is not. He would be out of order.

The House divided on the motion for second reading of Bill 2, which was approved on the following vote:

Agreed.

Clerk of the House: House in committee of the whole; Mr. R. D. Rowe in the chair.

ELEVATOR CONSTRUCTOR UNIONS DISPUTES ACT

House in committee on Bill 2, the Elevator Constructor Unions Disputes Act, 1973.

Mr. Chairman: Bill 2; there are 10 sections to this bill. Are there any comments, questions or amendments to the first section?

Mr. E. J. Bounsall (Windsor West): On the recital, Mr. Chairman. On the recital or the whereas preamble.

Mr. Chairman: On the preamble? All right. The member for Windsor West.

Mr. Bounsall: I move that the recital to Bill 2 be amended by deleting all that portion of the recital after the words "the Labour Relations Act" in the ninth line and substituting therefor the following: "and whereas the unions have engaged in lawful strikes against the employers since about Sept. 7, 1972, and whereas the unions and their members have already agreed voluntarily to submit all matters that are in dispute between the parties to arbitration and to return to work; and whereas the employers have refused to so agree; and whereas it is not in the public interest that the matters that are in dispute between the parties should continue unresolved."

Hon. A. B. R. Lawrence (Provincial Secretary for Resources Development): As I understand it, the recital is not part of the bill.

Mr. J. A. Renwick (Riverdale): Of course it is part of the bill.

An hon. member: It's the crux of the whole thing.

Mr. I. Deans (Wentworth): Of course it is part of the bill.

Hon. A. Grossman (Minister of Revenue): Bring back the CCF. They knew what they were doing.

Mr. Deans: If it is the opinion of the Chair that this is not part of the bill, then we ask simply that it be stricken from the bill entirely.

Mr. Renwick: That's what we are dealing with in this bill.

Hon. Mr. Lawrence: Mr. Chairman, it won't be part of the bill when enacted.

Mr. Bounsall: Most recitals appear in the Revised Statutes of Ontario. I have quoted a recital today that appears in connection with the Labour Relations Act and it is most certainly there; the whereas is in full measure.

Mr. V. M. Singer (Downsview): Good try, but you're wrong.

Mr. Deans: If you want to take it out, we'll let you.

Mr. Chairman: If you will just bear with me for a moment we'll clarify that point. It is the first time it has come up.

Mr. Renwick: We passed an amendment at the last session, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Bounsall: If it appears it is part of it.

Mr. Renwick: Mr. Chairman, on a point of order, there is no need to consult outside the chamber. In a very recent session we enacted a preamble to a bill as part of a bill and it was the subject of substantial debate. It is the preamble that is in the minister's Labour Relations Act.

Hon. R. Welch (Provincial Secretary for Social Development): That is right.

Mr. Chairman: Order, please. It's before us. In my opinion that is in order.

Mr. Deans: They are trying to obstruct the passage of this bill.

Mr. Chairman: Mr. Bounsall has moved that the preamble of Bill 2 be amended by deleting all that portion of the preamble after the words "The Labour Relations Act" in the ninth line and substituting therefor the following:

and whereas the unions have been engaged in lawful strikes against the employer since about Sept. 7, 1972; and whereas the unions and their members have already agreed voluntarily to submit all matters that are in dispute between the parties to arbitration and to return to work; and whereas the employers have refused to so agree; and whereas it is not in the public interest that the matters that are in dispute between the parties should continue unresolved.

Any comment on this? The hon. member for Windsor West.

Mr. Bounsall: Yes, Mr. Chairman, the present preamble makes it appear, whether it is intended or otherwise, that the public safety and welfare of the province have been endangered by the unions as a result of the strike. All the members of this House have heard today the last steps that have occurred since March 1 in the attempted solution to this situation. Just because the Provincial Secretary for Social Development hasn't read it, or hasn't been here to hear it today—

Hon. Mr. Welch: I have read every word.

Mr. Bounsall: You haven't been here to hear any of it today.

Hon. Mr. Welch: I support the bill because it is in the public interest.

Mr. Bounsall: We are not now debating it in principle. You have missed that whole debate. Let me remind you that we are dealing with it clause by clause.

Hon. Mr. Welch: I am here to serve the public.

Mr. Chairman: Order, please. The hon. member for Windsor West has the floor.

Mr. Bounsall: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. What we have done here by this amendment is simply lay out the situation that has resulted in the last three weeks and that has resulted in this bill coming before this Legislature at all. We have laid out that the unions engaged in a lawful strike, and when they did it. We have laid out that the union members agreed to go voluntarily to arbitration, with the decision to be binding, submitting all matters in dispute to that arbitration. We point out exactly what happened—that the employers refused to enter into voluntary arbitration and to present all matters in dispute, which is what occurs in voluntary arbitration, to that arbitration. We saw what happened last week; what happened prior to black Wednesday. The Premier of this province (Mr. Davis) and the Minister of Labour (Mr. Guindon) threatened the employers with bringing in this very bill which we have before us today.

Mr. Chairman: Order, please. It seems to me that the subject matter you are discussing was debated during second reading of the bill.

Mr. Bounsall: Mr. Chairman, I have to explain why we have introduced this particular amendment in this way. This particular point—

Mr. Chairman: Order, please. This is really on the principle of the bill. We heard all of this this afternoon.

Mr. Bounsall: All right. To deal further with the actual wording, there can be no dispute with any of the sections that are laid out here as being untruthful or not true to the fact; our amendment lays out the actions which occurred over the last three weeks and which brought this bill before the House.

I don't think any of the Labour Ministry officials or the Minister of Labour would quarrel with this layout, which avoids singling anyone out. Whether or not it singles them out grammatically, the bill certainly appears to single out the unions as being to blame for threatening the public safety and welfare in this province. There are two parties to every dispute, not one. This bill spells it out as if there is only one party in this dispute.

Mr. V. M. Singer (Downsview): Question!

Mr. Bounsall: —on that basis, Mr. Chairman, we have entered this amendment.

Mr. Chairman: Any further comments? The hon. member for Port Arthur.

Mr. J. F. Foulds (Port Arthur): Yes, Mr. Chairman. I support my colleague from Windsor West in this amendment on grammatical grounds and on grounds of principle.

Mr. L. C. Henderson (Lambton): It's a good thing somebody does.

Mr. Foulds: I won't go into principle but inadvertently, I hope, although nevertheless it has occurred, in the section of the preamble following the words "the Labour Relations Act" on line 9, there is unfortunately an incipient anti-union bias. The dispute, as we all know, has two sides. Our wording avoids that bias—

Mr. Singer: And transfers it to another one!

Mr. Foulds: Our wording lays out, as my colleague has said, the facts in the situation that have developed over the last few months. My acquaintances in the rump of the Conservative Party on my left seem to think that the word "they" in line 11 is plural and therefore implicates both parties in the dispute. As a matter of grammar, I would like to point out to them that "they" happens to be a pronoun, it needs to have an antecedent—ent, its grammatical antecedent is either, and there is some ambiguity, the word "union" or the word "strikes". I think it is an unfair grammatical construction, and the minister should willingly accept our amendment.

Mr. Renwick: Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Chairman: Yes, the hon. member for Riverdale.

Mr. Renwick: Mr. Chairman, just by way of clarification, the preamble to the bill as presently worded would be as misleading as it would be for the minister to introduce a bill stating that, "Whereas the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland declared war on Germany on Sept. 3, 1939, therefore Great Britain caused the war." The parallel is identical.

Mr. Singer: Not quite!

Mr. Renwick: The inference in the preamble of this bill is that the unions and the unions alone are endangering the public safety of the Province of Ontario.

Mr. Singer: The hon. member has better points than this one.

Mr. Renwick: My colleague's wording is for the purpose of having the preamble to the statute reflect the reality of what took place, which is that the union agreed voluntarily, prior to the introduction of the bill, to submit the matters in issue to arbitration; the companies refused. The reality is stated in the amendment introduced by my colleague.

I submit to the minister that he would agree that it would be unwise to leave on the statute books of this province, where there are but three statutes that I know of that have a preamble, one preamble which creates the inference that the unions involved in these lawful strikes have endangered the public welfare of the Province of Ontario. That is not the reality about what the minister has been debating this afternoon. We ask him to accept the amendment.

Mr. Singer: Question!

Hon. F. Guindon (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, I think it is a matter of interpretation. I do not interpret the preamble of this bill in the same way. I don't think there is any inference as far as unions are concerned, and I cannot accept the amendment.

Mr. Chairman: Ready for the question?

Those in favour of Mr. Bounsall's amendment will please say "aye".

Those opposed will please say "nay".

In my opinion, the "nays" have it.

I declare the amendment lost.

Mr. Deans: Since there are going to be a number of amendments, we prefer to stack them all and have one vote at the end.

Mr. Chairman: This was not to be voted on.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Chairman: I have declared the amendment lost because—

Mr. Deans: We said "aye" and they said "nay". You must at that point then—

An hon. member: You have to stand.

Mr. Deans: We don't have to stand then. There is another procedure. He calls for the "ayes" and the "nays". Learn the rules.

Mr. Chairman: Order! I quite clearly called for the "ayes" and the "nays" and declared the "nays" had it. No one stood up, so I declared the amendment lost.

Mr. Deans: You didn't follow the proper procedure. First of all, you ask whether the amendment carried.

Mr. Chairman: I did.

All right, any comments, questions or amendments on section 1 of the bill?

Sections 1 and 2 agreed to.

Mr. Chairman: Are there any comments, questions or amendments on any later section of the bill and, if so, which section?

Mr. T. P. Reid (Rainy River): Section 3.

Mr. Chairman: Section 3? The member for Rainy River.

Mr. Reid: Mr. Chairman: I have an amendment to section 3, subsection 14, of the bill.

Mr. Bounsall: I have one for 3(6), Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Reid: Section 3, subsection 14.

Mr. Bounsall: Section 3(6).

Mr. Chairman: We will hear from the member for Windsor West first then.

Mr. Bounsall: I move, Mr. Chairman, that section 3(6) be deleted and the following substituted:

3(6)(1) Within five days after the day on which the second of the members is appointed, the two members appointed by or on behalf of the parties shall appoint a third member who has indicated his willingness to act, and such third member shall be chairman.

Then 3(6)(2) of that would read:

Where the two members appointed by or on behalf of the parties fail within five days after the appointment of the second of them to agree upon the third member, the minister shall, upon notice in writing of such failure, given to him by either of them, appoint within 10 days a third member, and such third member shall be the chairman.

This is a very simple amendment even though it is rather lengthy.

Rather than provide for the appointment by the Minister of Labour of the chairman of the arbitration board it simply gives an opportunity for the two parties to agree to appoint a chairman. I might say at this time that I fully suspect that the two parties may well not be able to agree upon a chairman and that the Minister of Labour will have to do precisely as he has done in the shortened form. But here again, Mr. Chairman, I'd like to say that this gives another opportunity for the two parties to reach some sort of agreement.

Although your experiences and the experiences of your staff—who, I might say, in my opinion have laboured very hard and long in this strike and very, very meritoriously to try to settle it—have been such that you may well suspect that this is absolutely impossible. I would like to see them have the opportunity.

Mr. Chairman: The hon. minister.

Hon. Mr. Guindon: Mr. Chairman, I certainly do appreciate the comments of my hon. friend. It is a fact that in most cases the two nominees have the privilege of appointing a chairman. Now, in this particular case we gave the minister the power to appoint the third member, the chairman, for the simple reason that the number of knowledgeable arbitrators in this type of a strike in industry is limited in this province.

As you can imagine, if by any chance they are all rejected by both parties and the minister later on has to appoint a chairman who has been rejected by one of the parties, we wouldn't be in a very good position. That's the reason why we have given the minister special powers in this case.

Mr. Chairman: Are you ready for the question? Those in favour of Mr. Bounsall's motion will please say "aye."

Those opposed will please say "nay."

In my opinion the "nays" have it.

I declare the motion lost and the subsection carried.

The member for Rainy River on section 3, subsection 14.

Mr. Reid: Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. R. Gisborn (Hamilton East): I will have subsection 11.

Mr. Chairman: Subsection 11? All right, we'll have subsection 11.

Mr. Gisborn: I want to raise a question with the minister on subsection 11 of section 3. How does he anticipate that this section can work when the whole application of the section depends upon the word "reasonable"? This section has many implications. I wonder if the minister might explain?

Hon. Mr. Guindon: Yes, Mr. Chairman, I know the term "reasonable time" has been used here because we do need flexibility. However, I would give assurance to the member that it is not our intention to drag out the proceedings, far from it, but we feel that we have to have this precaution, this "reasonable time," although we intend to push ahead as fast as we can.

Mr. Gisborn: I really don't know what's in the minds of the minister or his staff, but certainly it might be an unfair situation in regard to the union and the company. If the board takes as much time as some boards have taken, where it can run into three or four months, and there is no pressure on the board the time element of a decision coming down in the fall or bad weather can in one case be beneficial to management and in another case beneficial to the employees. If the work is caught up in the fall then the management can make up their minds to stall the questions. Don't you think there should be a 30 days, 60 days or some period set as an utmost limit anyway?

Hon. Mr. Guindon: Yes, Mr. Chairman, I'm very much aware of this. I again assure the member that no, I can't just give him a definite date, but certainly as we all understand here today, time is of the essence.

Mr. Chairman: Shall subsection 11 stand as part of the bill?

Mr. Reid: Mr. Chairman, if I may, we have an amendment to subsection 14 that deals with this very subject and I'd like to say a few words about subsection 11. If our amendment is accepted it would strike out the words "reasonable time limit." We are not dealing with general legislation which is going to last, not forever and ever, but for years to come — with suitable amendments. We are talking about a specific bill to deal with a specific problem in a specific time limit.

Therefore, Mr. Chairman, this party will support the idea that there should be a specific time limit within which the arbitration board must report to the minister; and we have suggested that this be 30 days after the end or conclusion of the hearings that are held.

We feel that this is more than sufficient time, given the seven months' that the strike has gone on now and the time that will be expended by the time that the arbitration board has been appointed and has its public hearing. We feel that 30 days from the end of those hearings is sufficient time for that three-man committee to arrive at some kind of decision as to the collective agreement.

And we on this side would hope that the minister would take into consideration a specific piece of legislation dealing with a specific problem and accept a specific time limit.

Mr. Chairman: In the meantime, shall subsection 11 stand as part of the bill?

Mr. J. E. Bullbrook (Sarnia): Mr. Chairman, perhaps the minister would consider a response in this connection.

Hon. Mr. Guindon: I do think that this really would be unenforceable. If, for instance, the 30-day period was extended by one day, 31 days, then we would have to reconstitute a whole board and start all over again. And that's the reason—not that we want to stall things. But supposing it was a case of a day or two extension, then we would have to reconstitute the board and this would delay matters more than it is now.

Mr. Bullbrook: Mr. Chairman, surely the minister finds that argument a little specious; 30 days after the end of the hearing is certainly ample time to begin with. Perhaps the minister could then indicate what he feels himself is a reasonable time limit, after the hearings have been held?

Surely 30 days is more than reasonable?

Hon. Mr. Guindon: Well, if it was left to the wish of the minister, the sooner the better. But we don't want to be in a strait-jacket; really that's what I'm saying.

Mr. Bullbrook: May I add to what my colleague from Rainy River said? We are not in any way putting the ministry in a straitjacket. What we are saying here in effect is that you are dealing with a piece of legislation that's specific and, I think we all agree, that is essentially—as we said that afternoon—reprehensible to us.

It's all right in general legislation, as you have in the Labour Relations Act where you talk about a reasonable time, but we're saying here that the reason for this legislation itself is a need to expedite the return to work of the employer and the return to a responsible position by the employee. We are not in any way, as you notice, fettering the length of time that that board of arbitration will sit. We particularly made it our intention that we couldn't in any way fetter the board in the time of its deliberations.

We're saying that we cannot have such subjective words in this type of legislation. Who is to decide what is reasonable? It might well be that the minister regards six months as a reasonable time. We particularly don't regard six months as a reasonable time. Surely to goodness, no matter what the volume of evidence or other documentation put before that board of arbitration, 30 days is an adequate time for them to come to some conclusions.

That's the only thing we are attempting to convey.

Mr. R. Haggerty (Welland South): We don't want another Hydro strike.

Mr. Deans: Just one comment on the matter, if I may, Mr. Chairman. It strikes me that if all of the matters in dispute which it was possible to make retroactive were made retroactive, then the decision as to the time would not be as important.

If it were possible, for example, to ensure that every single matter in this dispute which could possibly be made retroactive to the starting date of the negotiations was made to be retroactive to that date, then I don't think we would have this discussion about whether or not it takes 30 days, or 40 days or 60 days. I'm just making the point that the problem in this is that there is quite a bit of ambiguity and a lot of latitude as far as the board rendering decisions is concerned.

With each passing day there is a distinct possibility of a continued loss of opportunity both for the employer and the employee. I feel that setting a time limit would, in fact, be beneficial since we are not likely to get the other passed here tonight.

Mr. Bullbrook: I want, if I may, Mr. Chairman, to explain to the acting leader of the New Democratic Party that we entirely agree. If we are able to convince the government to an amendment that would force the board to make its recommendations retroactive to May 1, 1972, there is no need for us to worry about the question of reasonable time.

The problem is that there is an entire congealing of about three aspects of the functions and responsibilities of the board, and we have to take one at a time. As the legislation stands now the arbitration board has no responsibility to make its recommendations retroactive to May 1, 1972, so we must talk about the question of 30 days and reasonable time.

Mr. Deans: I understand. I am only telling you why we feel it is necessary.

Mr. Chairman: We have no amendment before us at this time. We could place it in a moment.

Mr. Bounsall: Yes, further to this same point I recall the last day of the last session in which we were dealing with the amendments to the Hospital Labour Disputes Act. The amendment to that Act was to provide a means by which the whole arbitration procedure was speeded up and decisions rendered more quickly. In that Act, we had the phrase, "within a reasonable time." I argued with the minister — well, the minister and I exchanged views — at that time that a time limit should be put on it as appears in the Police Act of this province. The argument back was that we were dealing with a lot of hospitals and that might hinder it.

What was of concern to the minister at that time, as he saw in certain other arbitration proceedings, was that after the hearings were held the arbitrators went about their normal business and one of them even took a vacation. What we're saying to them by putting a time limit here is, "You do not go about your normal vocation, whatever that may be, and you do not take a vacation. You sit exactly where you are and you bang out your decision."

I think if we leave it open-ended, unless you are willing to put continual pressure on the arbitrators and get them back from their normal employment or forbid them to go away for a weekend or forbid them to go away for a vacation — unless you are willing to do that all the time, it would be much safer and more convenient for you to have a time limit in this bill.

Mr. Deans: Mr. Chairman, let me move something and get it on the floor. I would move that—

Mr. Chairman: We have an amendment pending for 14. If we could just move that section—

Mr. Deans: I think this probably satisfies it and it may, in fact, even satisfy the minister. That section 3 subsection 11 be amended as follows: Delete the words "reasonable time" and substitute the following, "30 days of completion of the board's hearings." The section would then read

Where, after the board of arbitration has been established, either the employers or the unions complain to the minister that it has failed to render its decision within 30 days of the completion of the board's hearings, the minister may, after consulting the employers and the unions and the board, issue whatever order he considers necessary.

Mr. Reid: No, we are leaving it up to the minister and we don't know. Even now, he won't tell us what he considers a reasonable amount of time.

Mr. Deans: Well, I will move it. You can vote against it if you wish.

Mr. Bullbrook: In fairness, would you consider withdrawing it since I think we are of one mind? The Chairman has suggested that perhaps we pass through subsection 11 and go to 14. We have made an analysis of the legislation and the effect of our amendment to 14 would be to wipe out the words "within a reasonable time" in 11. If you would consider going through 11 without voting on it—

Mr. Deans: Well, you were the ones who said you didn't want to do that.

Mr. Chairman: Does the hon. member for Wentworth withdraw the motion at this time?

Mr. Deans: All right. I don't care. I am only trying to get the thing out of the way.

Mr. Chairman: Is there any other comment before subsection 14 then?

Mr. Reid: Mr. Chairman, I would move an amendment to section 3, subsection 14 to read as follows, ". . . which decision shall be rendered not later than 30 days after the conclusion of the hearings."

Mr. Chairman: Mr. Reid has moved an amendment to section 3, subsection 14, as follows: ". . . which decision shall be rendered not later than 30 days after the conclusion of the hearings." That's to be added at the end of the existing subsection 14.

Mr. Deans: May I ask a question?

Mr. Reid: Yes.

Mr. Deans: And if it isn't, what then? If it isn't rendered in 30 days, then what?

Mr. Reid: Well, under this clause it has to be; that's the whole point.

Mr. Chairman: It says, "which decision shall be rendered . . ."

Mr. Reid: I'd like to say a word or two, Mr. Chairman, if I may. I won't reiterate the arguments I have already put forward when we were discussing subsection 11; they simply require the board to bring down a decision within 30 days. I cannot agree with the minister that this unduly fetters the arbitration board. Surely 30 days is soon enough.

We've heard from the member for Windsor West, who has outlined a case where the people went on vacation and never arrived at a decision. The minister sits in his place and will not give us any indication of what he considers a reasonable time.

We are here passing this bill tonight because there are time limits that make this particular situation critical. In this amendment we are defining for the minister what we consider a reasonable time for a collective agreement to be arrived at, and I would hope that all members would support it.

Mr. Chairman: The hon. minister.

Hon. Mr. Guindon: Mr. Chairman, we don't think we can accept this amendment; we don't think we can enforce it. As I said earlier, if the limit of 30 days is exceeded by a day or two, then we would have to reconstitute another board. This would oblige us to start all over again—in fact, three or four times—just for the sake of a day or two.

Mr. Reid: It doesn't. It obliges the minister to have a report within 30 days.

Hon. Mr. Guindon: We know of a case, for instance, where a police arbitration has been taken to court by an employer simply because the arbitration award was issued after the time limit in the Police Act.

Mr. Haggerty: What about the Ontario Hydro strike? That has gone to arbitration and isn't settled yet.

Mr. Chairman: The hon. member for Hamilton East.

Mr. Gisborn: Well, if the minister is adamant in the position he has taken, then he must make a firm statement now in the House or agree that he will send a letter to the board, when it is established, telling the members firmly—you see, they have got to have some direction as to what their responsibilities are.

Mr. Bullbrook: That's true.

Mr. Gisborn: How long are they going to be before they finish their hearings?

Mr. Bullbrook: I told you, didn't I?

Mr. Gisborn: I am not concerned about rendering a decision, but rather how long they are going to take to come to a conclusion. They could play around all summer, having hearings now and a couple of hearings in the next two or three weeks, and then come back next October and say, "We haven't completed our hearings yet".

If the minister lays down some guidelines and says, "Look, we expect that within 30 days you will have concluded your hearings," then he has the right to say, "I can put the pressure on after a reasonable length of time, which should be 10 or 12 days, to get the reports drafted." Then he can put the pressure on. But we want the hearings concluded at some point, because the hearings can be jockeyed to go on indefinitely—right up until the next set of negotiations start—if there isn't something in the Act or a letter to the board or a statement by the minister to give them guidelines to the effect that, "This is the action I expect from this legislation." If not, then we are being foolish about the whole thing.

Hon. Mr. Guindon: I agree with the hon. member. I certainly will be glad to give instructions, although I would not like to have them in the legislation and then find later on that we are in trouble as a result.

Mr. Bullbrook: We are just going to say in closing, in connection with this part, that we have put our position to the minister and defined that position. We find it a sad commentary that the response from the minister and his assistants is some analogy to a police arbitration. This is the tragedy of understanding.

This is a specific piece of legislation, which for the first time in this province deals with the intrusion of compulsory arbitration outside the public sector. When the minister starts analogizing to arbitration of the public sector, which is almost a day-by-day, week-by-week occurrence, we don't accept that at all.

We are going to undertake no further argument in this respect, because we have other amendments that are much more important and that we will be much more vigorous with respect to.

Mr. Chairman: I'll place the question then. Those in favour of Mr. Reid's motion will please say "aye."

Those opposed will please say "nay."

In my opinion the "nays" have it.

I declare the amendment lost and all sections up to subsection 14 carried.

Is there any comment, question or amendment on subsection 15?

Shall section 3 then stand as part of the bill?

Carried.

Any comment, question or amendment on section 4?

Mr. Gisborn: Yes, I'd like—

Mr. Reid: Subsection 4.

Mr. Bounsall: Subsection 2.

Mr. Chairman: All right. Anything before subsection 2 of section 4?

Mr. Gisborn: Well, subsection 2. The same as—

Mr. Chairman: The hon. member for Windsor West.

Mr. Bounsall: Mr. Chairman, I move that section 4 (2) be deleted.

Mr. Chairman: Mr. Bounsall has moved that section 4, subsection 2 be deleted. Any comments on this?

The hon. member for Windsor West.

Mr. Bounsall: I don't know what my colleague had in mind with respect to this; maybe he was proposing a substitution. However, I have a very great problem here. This refers of course, to the arbitration board not deciding on matters that come within the jurisdiction of the Ontario Labour Relations Board.

This might be okay if it weren't for the fact that the arbitration board cannot solve jurisdictional disputes which must be decided by, I believe, the Labour Relations Board. This was a decision which was handed out during the Omega arbitration decision. It was held at that point that the arbitration board could not decide matters of jurisdiction and they should go to the Labour Relations Board. That has been fought, as well, through the courts. I would hate to see that come up here but the matter of jurisdiction certainly is one of the outstanding matters in the dispute.

As you have all read from the material which you have received, one of the items in the dispute is pre-assembly or factory fabrication. This, therefore, is or could be interpreted as a matter of jurisdictional nature. In terms of the pre-assembly and the factory fabrication, to give the history of what has happened—again the minister will know the history of this—for the other members of the House, both sides agree this matter is, more or less, of not very great importance.

When the union was strongly opposed to it and the company said, in words to this effect, "Well, it really won't affect you, so let's put it in," the union replied with, "If it really isn't going to affect us, why put it in?" It was agreed that they would not put it in. They would return to the normal wording of the old agreement which did not have provisions for pre-assembly and factory fabrication.

However, on March 3, when the union proposed voluntary arbitration of all matters in dispute the companies withdrew that offer. Now, according to the bill, it's going to be removed from the jurisdiction of the arbitration board and will end up before the Labour Relations Board and, no doubt, will go through the courts. It's on those grounds, unless the minister can otherwise assure us, that there will be no way that pre-assembly or factory fabrication will be removed from the hands of the arbitration board, that we would move the deletion of this entire section.

Hon. Mr. Guindon: Mr. Chairman, it is my understanding that all matters in dispute will be going to the arbitration board. All of them.

Mr. Bounsall: Are you giving me assurance, then, that in no way, because it might be interpreted as a jurisdictional matter, will the issue of pre-assembly and factory fabrication be given to the Labour Relations Board?

Hon. Mr. Guindon: I give you the assurance that all matters in dispute are going to the arbitration board, which means the same thing.

Mr. Reid: Mr. Chairman: may I ask the minister what purpose subsection 2 serves? What is your reasoning for having that in the bill? Why is it there?

Mr. F. Drea (Scarborough Centre): To protect an awful lot of people.

Mr. E. R. Good (Waterloo North): Well, you get up and tell us, then.

Mr. Reid: I hate to admit it, but you know more about what's going on than the minister does.

Mr. Drea: I know that the member for Hamilton East should be very concerned about this.

Mr. Chairman: Does the hon. minister have a comment to that? Are we ready for the question?

Mr. Reid: Well, why is it there? We'd like an answer.

Mr. Haggerty: Tell us!

Mr. Reid: Did the minister not hear me?

Hon. Mr. Guindon: I answered. I said all matters in dispute are going before the arbitration board. Now, any other matters which could come under this will, of course, come under the Ontario Labour Relations Board.

Mr. Reid: What other matters?

Hon. Mr. Guindon: Well, I can't think of any now, but there could be some that might arise.

Mr. Bullbrook: May I invite the minister's response to a possibly specific example?

Hon. Mr. Guindon: Right.

Mr. Bullbrook: Suppose the collective bargaining unit is ascertained at the present time. The shrinking of the bargaining unit by some type of contracting out, such as the member for Windsor West refers to, that type of thing would eventually come before the Ontario Labour Relations Board, but I take it that it is not going to come before this board of arbitration. Then surely we are entitled to some type of response as to why this section is placed in the bill.

Hon. Mr. Guindon: I can only say, Mr. Chairman, that I think I have made it very clear that all the matters in dispute at the present time are going before the arbitration board. Most of these questions were in the previous collective agreements and they are going before the board. As to any other matters within the jurisdiction of the Ontario Labour Relations Board, there is none at the present time that comes to my mind.

Mr. Reid: Mr. Chairman, let the record show then that the minister has subsection 2 of clause 4 in the bill, and he doesn't know why it is there.

An hon. member: Hurry up with the note.

Mr. Deans: Let's not bother about showing whether he knows why it is there or not. If, in fact, all of the matters that are currently in the dispute are going to arbitration, then this particular section isn't necessary in the bill, because they cannot deviate beyond that without mutual consent of both parties. So I would think the minister ought to be able without any difficulty to withdraw the section from the bill, to delete it from the bill, and renumber all of the other sections.

Mr. Reid: The note writer must be a slow writer.

Mr. Deans: Let me wait until he finishes reading his note, if you don't mind.

Hon. Mr. Guindon: I am informed, Mr. Chairman, that the Labour Relations Board retains exclusive jurisdiction in matters such as unfair practices or legality of strikes. The board of arbitration will not deal with such issues, and that is why the section is in.

Mr. Deans: In answer to that, the fact of the matter is the board of arbitration wasn't going to deal with that anyway. The board of arbitration was going to deal solely with the matters which were in dispute. They were not going to deal with any other matters.

Therefore, if you say that the board shall confine itself to all matters in dispute and other matters of a collective agreement nature which are agreed upon by the two parties, then you don't have to have this section in and you don't then have the worry of the board dealing with some matter which may be within the jurisdiction of the Labour Relations Board and subject to some kind of appeal.

We are liable to find out that the arbitration board will hand down an award. The award will have contained within it something which one or other of the parties will interpret to be within the ambit of the Labour Relations Board and they will apply then for a writ of—which, certiorari or mandamus?

They will apply for a writ anyway which will in fact hold up the—

Mr. Bullbrook: A writ anyway.

Mr. Deans: —I cannot remember which one it is—the application of the award. So what you are really doing is leaving an opening in this particular arbitration legislation which one or the other parties may well take advantage of. They will look through every single section and try to find, if they want, a clause somewhere which can be loosely interpreted to be within the terms of reference of the Labour Relations Board and which therefore could then nullify much of the effort that has gone into it. If it isn't necessary, take it out.

Hon. Mr. Guindon: I didn't say it wasn't necessary. As I see it now I think any matters having to do with unfair practices or legality of strikes certainly wouldn't be dealt with by the arbitration board but would come under the Labour Relations Board—and that is why the section is in.

Mr. Chairman: Shall we place the question now?

The hon. member for Scarborough Centre.

Mr. Drea: Mr. Chairman, I have a question: Can the minister assure the House that in no way will this arbitration award attempt to dragoon people who now belong to unions other than the locals of the International Union of Elevator Constructors into that organization against their will as a condition of employment?

Mr. Deans: That would be a matter for the Labour Relations Board.

Mr. Drea: That is the point.

Mr. Chairman: The hon. member for Hamilton East.

Mr. Gisborn: Mr. Chairman, in a sense I have to support the minister on this. I think it is necessary for it to be there. I think there are several sections of the Labour Relations Act that could be used by either party that would confuse an arbitration board and they would have to go for legal advice as to whether they could deal with the issue or not.

If it is spelled out here that they can't deal with issues that come within the jurisdiction of the board, then they can just take the Act and prove it to themselves. There are three or four sections. There is the one mentioned for fair labour practices; there are charges of failure to bargain in good faith. I can't see the harm in any kind of a time limit that might be involved being in there, as long as we know what it means.

I think the benefit of discussing it in this manner is that the arbitration board that is set up will be able to read Hansard to get some idea of problems they might run into.

I take it that we have a firm statement that they are going to be able to deal with all those things that were in dispute. The things that concerned me were the status quo of the conditions of hiring in order to still have the right to this practice regarding training and the skills and competency of the employee. And if they have a joint training programme, that it will be part of the consideration of the arbitration board. I think those are the things that are in major dispute at this point between the company and the unions—what we call management's residual rights, or management's rights.

Now, can the minister give me assurance that there is nothing in the Labour Relations Act or in the jurisdiction of the board that will forbid the arbitration board to deal with that question of managerial rights?

I can't remember whether there is any specific clause in the Labour Relations Act or in the regulations that says that this decision has to be dealt with by the board; that is managerial rights. Is there anything in the Act that protects managerial rights? Does any section forbid managerial rights from being dealt with in negotiations? That is going to be the major point.

And when you tell us that they are going to be able to deal with all issues in dispute, we have to take your word that it will be those that exist at the present time regarding the status quo position between those companies and that union; so that we know very clearly that the major issues are going to be dealt with.

Hon. Mr. Guindon: I think I've said it three times, and I have made it quite clear; all matters in dispute are going to arbitration.

Mr. Chairman: Any further questions?

Those in favour of Mr. Bounsall's motion will please say "aye."

Those opposed will please say "nay."

In my opinion, the "nays" have it.

I declare the motion lost, and the subsection carried.

Any other comment, question or amendment on a later section?

The hon. member for Rainy River.

Mr. Reid: I have an amendment to section 4, subsection 4. I would like to add:

Provided that if the parties hereto are unable to decide upon the length of a collective agreement, then that term in the decision of the board of arbitration shall not exceed a period of one year after the date of the collective agreement.

Mr. Chairman, I would just like to say a few words in regard to this. The members will hearken back to section 3, subsections 11 and 14. This again is an attempt to limit the arbitrary powers of the arbitration board that we are setting up.

I would remind the minister once again—and I'm afraid that I don't believe he understands the gravity of it—of what we are doing here today in this legislation. We are trying to limit the time in a specific situation for a specific time. We feel that unless we put this limitation on the collective agreement, the arbitration board can arbitrarily set a time of five years, 10 years or 20 years.

The point that has to be made is that this is compulsory arbitration and what this party wants to see is these two parties to the agreement, union and management, back to normal collective bargaining procedures as soon as possible. That, we feel, would be one year after the collective agreement is arrived at.

We don't particularly want to see a compulsory collective agreement lasting for five or 10 or 20 years, because that is a dangerous precedent. We want the two parties to resume normal collective bargaining procedures as soon as possible and that is the reason for this amendment. We hope it would be supported.

Hon. Mr. Guindon: Mr. Chairman, of course we feel the question of term is not a serious issue. We feel that the board needs flexibility and the parties can always agree in writing in the term of the agreement if they prefer not to leave this to the board's discretion. That is the reason why we have that in there. We understand that so far the parties have been talking in terms of negotiating a five-year agreement.

Mr. Reid: May I just pose one question to the minister? Does he think that under this compulsory arbitration we are dealing with it is a good idea to impose on two parties in a compulsory way a collective agreement that lasts more than one year? Should it not be the idea and the end of this legislation to have these two parties resume normal collective bargaining procedures as soon as possible? We are trying to take the sting out of the compulsory aspects of this legislation—

Mr. Deans: It is too late.

Mr. Reid:—as much as possible, and I would ask the minister, does he not feel that this is a reasonable amendment under the circumstances of compulsion?

Hon. Mr. Guindon: No. We think that the board needs that flexibility; and as I said, the parties can agree in writing, they can agree by themselves if they want to have a two-year, three-year or possibly five-year agreement.

Mr. Bullbrook: But we recognize that on this side of the House. We have envisaged this in our amendments, Mr. Chairman, and we hope that it would come to pass that the parties would agree on the term. I would suggest to you that until the parties know what the terms of the collective agreement are, they are not going to agree on the terms, because they are not going to bind themselves to some unknown equation between themselves, for a length of five years or otherwise, until they know what that particular equation is.

Now my colleague from Rainy River has directly and sincerely put the question to you. He says, in effect, we in this House all profess belief in the collective bargaining system in the free enterprise aspect of our economic operations. We said that today. We spent about eight hours talking about that today. We say superimposed upon that—

Mr. Foulds: The House has not sat for eight hours today.

Mr. Bullbrook: Some of us have said that superimposed upon that, the public good demands this compulsory arbitration. We are not going to permit the type of response that the minister made. The minister responds on the basis of the good faith of the board, that is fine; the understanding of the board, that is fine; the intelligence of the board, that is fine. But what is wrong is that we are passing laws here; we are not dealing in good faith, or understanding, or wisdom, or experience.

We are now setting a precedent for future laws in the Province of Ontario that says that we will impose compulsory arbitration, and we will permit that board of arbitration to compel those two parties to live under a collective agreement, that they had nothing to do with arriving at, for an indefinite length of time. That is not accepted by the Liberal Party and it won't be accepted by the Liberal Party.

We don't know who the government will appoint. I would presume in the wisdom and stature of the minister's office, that he will appoint as his representative to this board, someone knowledgeable and experienced, and someone who will write a collective agreement based on the objectivity and integrity of his position. But we are writing laws; we can't rely on that.

We have to write laws recognizing that that law says this is now a collective agreement which will bind the economic relationships between those two parties for as long as that board wants them to be bound. And it is not exaggerating to say that that board can bind them for 50 years. The board won't, but that begs the question. It is not what the board will do, it is what the people through their elected representatives permit the board to do. That is the essential ingredient.

The government can't write legislation giving carte blanche effect to any board, no matter how wise or possessed of no matter what integrity. The board can't say it is going to write a collective agreement for as long as it wants; it is impossible for us to conceive. If the very concept is unattractive, surely to goodness how can we even tolerate the thought of permitting a board to write an agreement for as long as it wants? We have to say to it that public pressure, the good of the public, has dictated that we pass this legislation, that we want to minimize the effect of this legislation, and we want to bring these parties back to collective agreement in good faith as soon as we can.

Again, it is inconceivable that it be for less than a year. It is arbitrary to say that it should be for two years. The position of this party will be set out in another amendment that the board must be bound to bring its recommendations back to the effective termination date of the prior contract, May 1, 1972.

We say that we can't tolerate the concept of leaving this legislation wide open. We say that the best avenue of approach is to say to that board, "Do your best, write a report which becomes a collective agreement binding on these people, but only for one year." Let them go back to their collective bargaining process as much as possible, and please don't give me the response saying we might be back here again next year. So be it! I would hope we wouldn't be, that they would learn their lesson as a result of this exercise, but the answer can't be that shallow response, "We might be back here again next year." So what's the difference? That is what we are here for. If we have to pass another law then we will pass it at that time.

The essential principle that I try to convey through you, Mr. Chairman, to the hon. Minister of Labour is that we have got to minimize the life of that board of arbitration as far as imposing its thought on the parties to this agreement is concerned. Collective bargaining means that people come together of their own volition and arrive at agreement, saying to themselves, "We might not be happy about it, but we will live under it because we agreed to live under it." The government is saying here, "We might not be happy about it, but somebody else will tell you that you will live under it and they will tell you how long you will live under it." We can't accept that.

Mr. Deans: Now we have come full circle, Mr. Chairman. This is where we began this afternoon and we have now arrived at that point where we have decided—the Liberals and ourselves, I think, in all fairness—that the contract should be retroactive to the initial bargaining day. If we were now to adopt this, and we will support it, the termination date for this particular arbitration would be, I think, May 1, 1973.

Mr. Bullbrook: The beginning of the new contract.

Mr. Deans: No, to the beginning of the new contract. It says "at the beginning of May, 1973." It would be one year after the date on which the contract became effective. Therefore, it would begin at the beginning of May, 1973, if we accept the retroactivity feature.

Mr. Bullbrook: No, I am sorry. May I clarify this? Would you permit me to clarify it? The intention of the Liberal Party is this, that the new agreement, when written, would be retroactive to May 1, 1972, and would be effective to the one year after the decision is given. Under the terms of this statute, the decision becomes a collective agreement. This collective agreement might be, for example, two years and 48 days.

We are saying, in effect, that we have a twofold responsibility. One is to make sure that there is retroactivity to the terminal date of the prior contract. And we're saying that the new contract should only be in being one year from the date of the collective agreement, namely, the decision of the board. It might not be two years. It might be 2½ years. It might be two years and 40 days.

Mr. Deans: I don't interpret the amendment to say that. Nevertheless, if that's the intention of it, again, we'll support it. It's certainly better than to be left in the ambiguous position that we're in.

We happen to have thought all along that it wasn't necessary to impose an agreement. I think, in fact, looking ahead, it wasn't necessary to impose an agreement. I honestly believe that, given enough time, we could have come to some understanding on that. I do think that it's unrealistic to impose anything more than a one-year agreement in this instance. I think it's unrealistic to impose it at all. I think it's unrealistic to permit the board even to consider more than one year.

For a number of reasons, not the least of which is that since this is the first foray into the private section with arbitration, we want to make it as short as humanly possible, and in the interval we want to see the minister amend the appropriate sections of the Labour Relations Act to make sure that collective bargaining will, in fact, take place in the Province of Ontario under more reasonable conditions, at least for these people.

I don't think that it's reasonable to talk about a five-year contract imposed by an arbitration board. I don't think it's sensible to talk about a five-year contract imposed by an arbitration board. In fact, I don't care what side of the contract you're on, because there are going to be matters in that award which are totally unpalatable. To impose them for a period of five years would almost certainly create labour unrest which would result in work stoppages, which would result in a great deal of friction and which would not be healthy for the labour relations of the Province of Ontario.

I do think that the minister could, by an appropriate amendment—I'm not too sure this amendment does what it asks, by the way—limit the term of the contract to 12 months after the date the collective agreement is signed, and at that time the parties could then resume the normal collective bargaining process. I don't think that we want to see arbitration in this province exceed the very minimal length of time that it's possible to establish a contract for it. I think a year is about the minimum. I think a year in this instance should be the maximum. I would ask the Minister of Labour to give very serious consideration to this particular amendment. I think, in fact, it makes a lot of sense.

Mr. Chairman: The member for Hamilton East.

Mr. Gisborn: I would rather the situation be left with guidelines presented to the arbitration board at this point. I think that we're too late in trying to decide that. I can't say whether or not one year would be a good term for the board to lay down. I don't know whether two years would be, or whether six months would be. I don't think anybody here can say that. I think that guidelines to the board in relationship to the term of the agreement that is brought down should be decided between the parties, before the board starts to determine the issues. That could properly be done, I think, by a letter of direction to the board to have the parties make their decision first, whether or not they want to agree upon a term for the agreement that will be brought down.

Mr. Bullbrook: They can agree under the statute. That is in there. If they want to make it two years they can make it two years. If they want to make it 20 years they can make it 20 years.

Mr. Gisborn: I don't read the statute as saying anything about the term of the agreement.

Mr. Reid: It says, "any matter they agree to".

Mr. Chairman: The hon. member for Windsor West.

Mr. Bounsall: I was just going to say, Mr. Chairman, that of all the amendments that are likely to come up tonight, this is one which I think the Minister of Labour should give the most serious consideration to accepting.

I don't think the two parties in the dispute have really thought out what term they would be willing to accept under the conditions of an imposed, compulsory, binding arbitration situation. What has been said about their opinion as to whether they would like or dislike the arbitration decision, I think, goes without saying. There are going to be large sections that both parties will not like. Just because they have had a history of five-year contracts, now forced, would cause them to think or feel that five years is the norm. But they have not yet thought about the consequences of living under an agreement, perhaps a third of which both parties find completely abhorrent.

When we are bringing in this legislation, which compels them to accept the decision made by three other persons, we have the opportunity to further underline that we do not want binding compulsory arbitration to become a precedent or a solution to anything in terms of a dispute in this province. We can further underline this by putting a real but short period of time right into the legislation.

The minister may say, or I may say, to an arbitration board, "Handle this with kid gloves, and don't give them too long or too short a time." But I think it would be better, and there is a real obligation on us, to actually state the time in the legislation. I would hope the minister would accept this amendment as part of his responsibility in this matter to spell it out.

Hon. Mr. Guindon: It is a fact that over the years the parties have had five-year agreements. But I think the member for Hamilton East has made a very good point too. We feel that the board needs flexibility. We feel the issues in dispute, such as the duration of the agreement and the degree of retroactivity, are all interrelated. The board would be most effective if it had the discretion to deal with all these matters; that is the reason for it and the reason why I won't entertain any amendment to this clause.

Mr. Bullbrook: Well, the fact of the matter—and I say this most respectfully—is that the minister doesn't entertain this because his advisers don't entertain it. I suggest this with the greatest respect. The question of flexibility is a pure red herring. They have ample flexibility.

If you follow the logic of what the minister is saying, Mr. Chairman, to do a proper job the board must have flexibility as far as two things are concerned. One is the term of the agreement, and the second is the question of retroactivity. The statute doesn't even give them the power to direct the term or retroactivity, because the parties can agree on the terms. It takes it outside the purview of the board. There is no logic in that.

How can the minister say to his colleagues in this House that it's absolutely essential that this board have flexibility as far as writing the term and the question of retroactivity are concerned, when the parties might agree themselves as to the term or as to retroactivity?

We are happy if the parties do that. The fact is that once they do, the board under subsection 10 is no longer vested with the question of term because it only relates to matters in dispute. If the question of term is not in dispute, then the board has nothing to say about it. If the board then has nothing to say about it, how can you stand in your place and say to the members of this House that it is absolutely essential that the board have sufficient flexibility to dictate the term of the agreement?

That is a noxious and unacceptable type of circuitous logic that has no foundation at all. The fact is that it is not a question of the board's inflexibility or flexibility, it is a question of the Ministry of Labour's inflexibility. It absolutely refuses under this legislation to accept the logical premise that under this legislation you are going to permit people other than the elected representatives of the people of Ontario to impose their decision for as long as they want on other citizens of the Province of Ontario, and that is totally unacceptable.

If we said today in this House, and voted on it in this House, that we are going to impose a collective agreement for five years, fine, then the people of Ontario have spoken; they have said through their elected representatives that we are going to bind these people to a five-year contract. But you are not doing that; in this legislation you are not even delegating that authority; you're not even saying that the board must write the contract for five years.

You're saying the board can write the contract for as long as it wants to, and that is not proper. That will never be proper, and this party won't accept that, and we are going to divide the House on that principle, because that principle is absolutely wrong.

Mr. Chairman: The hon. member for Scarborough Centre.

Mr. Drea: Mr. Chairman, once again we are faced with the attempts of a legalistic mind to get into the field of labour relations. I prefer to go along with the member for Hamilton East. He has spoken with his customary insight based upon a good number of years of experience in industrial relations.

Mr. Bullbrook: He has changed his mind, as a matter of fact.

Mr. Drea: Mr. Chairman, to tie the hands of this arbitration board, whether we make it in the form of legislation for six months, or two years, or three years or five years, there is one inevitable consequence, and it appeals to the legalistic mind. They always like to see the customer twice; we'll be back here again doing it all over again: That is the inevitable consequence of that type of very peculiar overview.

If we are going to have an arbitration board, we just got finished, under another section, talking about the fact that everything that is in dispute between the parties is going before that arbitration board subject to conforming with the Labour Relations Act of the province. We have just got done saying that that was a very good idea, and then here we are, into another section and we are saying, "Tie the hands of the board."

Mr. Good: They don't agree.

Mr. A. J. Roy (Ottawa East): The member for Scarborough Centre must have failed law school.

Mr. Chairman: Order.

Mr. Roy: Have you failed law school?

Mr. Drea: I had enough brains not to go there. What's the member for Ottawa East's excuse?

Mr. Roy: You missed the point.

Mr. Drea: What I am talking about, Mr. Chairman, is the fact that this House does not want to be back here within a specific period of time at the expiration of whatever agreement is consummated, either by compulsion or voluntarily during this arbitration. It wants this thing settled once and for all and then after that, the parties will go through the normal collective bargaining procedure. I say to you that to put a time limit on the duration of the contract—and it's not just how many days or how many months it is going to run—takes away the entire flexibility of the arbitrator.

In the end one man is going to make this decision. We are talking about three; two of them are going to be known to the parties; one man is going to make this. Take away his flexibility to produce a package, and that package includes the time, and the time may be very important in this.

Mr. Bullbrook: It doesn't include the time.

Mr. Drea: If you take away the flexibility in this, all you have done is brought them back here in 30 days or 60 days after the time limit imposed by the arbitrator.

Mr. Chairman: Those in favour of Mr. Reid's motion will please say "aye."

Those opposed will please say "nay." In my opinion the "nays" have it.

All right; it requires a vote. Shall we stack this along with any possible future votes?

An hon. member: Yes.

Mr. Chairman: Stacked.

Any other comments, questions or amendments on section 4?

Mr. Reid: Subsection 10 of section 4, Mr. Chairman—to amend subsection 10, section 4 so that it shall read as follows: "In making its decision upon matters in dispute between the parties, the board of arbitration shall provide that any of the terms of the agreement shall be retroactive to the first day of May, 1972, and such decision shall be in full force and effect for a period of one year from the date of the collective agreement unless the parties agree otherwise."

I thought the Premier was making a speech outside there for a minute when I heard that noise, Mr. Chairman.

An. hon. member: As long as he does it there, not in here.

Mr. Reid: Mr. Chairman, this pretty well was in line with the other amendments we presented. The effect of our amendment in section 10 is really to replace the word "may" with "shall." We feel that the collective agreement as reached by the board of arbitration should be retroactive to the end of the last collective agreement that we're dealing with. In the legislation it again gives the board the arbitrary power to decide when the effective date of the agreement shall be. We feel that as a principle of collective bargaining the new agreement should begin immediately after the conclusion of the old one. We would direct the board that this be necessarily so and that the terms of the agreement be retroactive to May, 1972.

Again, Mr. Chairman, I don't suppose there's much sense reiterating the argument. I've been disappointed tonight in the inflexibility of the minister and I think his complete misunderstanding of the collective bargaining process, the free choices that are involved by the parties to these agreements. I would hope that this amendment, if nothing else, would be acceptable to the minister as part of the collective bargaining process as it exists.

Mr. Chairman: The hon. member for Wentworth.

Mr. Deans: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I can well understand and support the intent of the hon. member for Rainy River. I think that all matters which can be made retroactive should be made retroactive. There are obviously matters in this dispute which there is no possible hope of making retroactive, nor would we want them made retroactive. I think if you were going to have such a section it would have to be worded a little differently. We support the intent of the hon. member for Rainy River because, in fact, we too want to see the terms of the contract for which there is either a possibility of retroactivity or a monetary value which can be applied made retroactive to the date of the termination of the last contract.

I think the minister should, in fact, direct the board to find in that way on matters of wages, on matters of pensions, on matters which are in fact capable of being applied retroactively. It should be a decision of this Legislature tonight that they ought to be applied retroactively. We recognize, and I'm sure the hon. member for Rainy River recognizes, that there are things at this point in this dispute for which there is neither a monetary value nor any hope of retroactivity.

So I would like to ask the minister to make the appropriate change. I would suggest that the change might say, "shall provide that any of the terms which can be applied retroactively shall be retroactive to May 1, 1972."

If that is acceptable then I would say that that we had in fact dealt fairly with the dispute and we had left sufficient leeway for the board to deal with all of the other matters.

Mr. Chairman: Order, please. May I point out that the House can no longer sit after 10:30 unless certain action is taken?

Hon. E. A. Winkler (Chairman, Management Board of Cabinet): If there is a disposition on behalf of the members—I'm in the hands of the House—I think we might continue. I would ask that the committee rise and report. I think we have to go through that manoeuvre.

Mr. Deans: May I ask a question of the House leader? Would it be his intention to have the Lieutenant Governor come in tonight and give royal assent if this bill were to pass this evening?

Hon. Mr. Winkler: That is correct.

Mr. Deans: Then the Lieutenant Governor is standing by in the building?

Hon. Mr. Winkler: That is correct.

Mr. Deans: I want to say that we were not happy with the situation which prevailed prior to Christmas, and we made it known that we don't want to sit beyond 10:30 at any time in this Legislature. But tonight, simply because we are near the end of this bill and simply because we, like the government, perhaps want to see the thing completed, we will agree to sit until 11 o'clock if the House leader will agree that that would be an appropriate time.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: As I said, I'm in the hands of the House. I would be delighted to do that.

Hon. Mr. Winkler moves that the committee rise and report.

Motion agreed to.

The House resumed; Mr. Speaker in the chair.

Mr. Chairman: Mr. Speaker, the committee of the whole House begs to report progress on one bill and asks for leave to sit again.

Report agreed to.

Hon. Mr. Winkler moves that the House sit beyond the hour of 10:30.

Mr. I. Deans (Wentworth): I am glad to see the House leader did agree to 11 o'clock.

Hon. E. A. Winkler (Chairman, Management Board of Cabinet): I did.

Mr. Deans: Thank you.

Motion agreed to.

Clerk of the House: Order for committee of the whole House; Mr. R. D. Rowe in the chair.

ELEVATOR CONSTRUCTOR UNIONS DISPUTES ACT

House in committee on Bill 2, the Elevator Constructor Union Disputes Act, 1973.

Mr. Chairman: When we rose, we were discussing Mr. Reid's amendment to subsection 10 of section 4. Is there any further discussion on it before the minister replies? The hon. minister.

Hon. F. Guindon (Minister of Labour): Again, Mr. Chairman, I cannot accept the amendment. For instance, their wage formula certainly does not lend itself to automatic and full retroactivity because, as the hon. members know, there was an increase in July 1972, which I think is binding under the former collective agreement. Therefore, I cannot accept the amendment.

Mr. Chairman: Ready for the question? Those in favour of Mr. Reid's motion will please say "aye."

Those opposed will please say "nay."

In my opinion, the "nays" have it.

I declare the motion lost and subsection 10 carried.

Any comment, question or amendment on any later section of the bill? The member for York-Forest Hill. Which section?

Mr. P. C. Givens (York-Forest Hill): Mr. Chairman, I wish to move an amendment which will add a section, section 11. My amendment is that section—

Mr. Chairman: Just before we get that far—

An hon. member: It's a subsection.

Mr. Givens: Subsection 11.

Mr. Chairman: Oh, subsection 11 to section 4?

Mr. Givens: Yes, adding subsection 11 to section 4.

Mr. Chairman: All right.

Mr. Givens: I move that section 4 be amended by adding the following subsection after subsection 10, to be designated as subsection 11:

The board shall determine an order of priorities of categories of jobs to which the unions and employers shall return to work. Such order of priorities shall give preference to jobs on which public moneys are being expended, with particular reference to the completion of the construction of hospitals, senior citizens' housing, nursing homes and other such public facilities throughout the province.

Mr. Chairman, having regard for the batting average of all the amendments that have been put up here—it is quite evident what's been happening; the boys under the gallery have been sending notes to the minister and there has been a constipation of minds here—I am appealing to the members of the government opposite to try to—

Mr. Chairman: Order please. May I place the motion first?

Moved by Mr. Givens that section 4 be amended by adding the following subsection after subsection 10 to be designated as subsection 11.

The board shall determine an order of priorities of categories of jobs to which the unions and employers shall return to work. Such order of priorities shall give preference to jobs on which public moneys are being expended, with particular reference to the completion of the construction of hospitals, senior citizens' housing, nursing homes and other such public facilities throughout the province.

The hon. member for York-Forest Hill.

Mr. Givens: Mr. Chairman, I am appealing to the members on the other side that this is not a political amendment. This is something I am proposing so that you can achieve the best possible results from what you are trying to do.

Having gone this far to impose compulsory arbitration you should try to see that you get the best benefit out of it that you possibly can as members of the government. Compulsory arbitration means that this gives you an opportunity to apply leverage so that you can achieve what you want to achieve. You couldn't have this leverage as a government if this was simply another collective bargaining agreement which was achieved between the parties because you are being called upon to impose compulsory arbitration. You have leverage so try to get the best deal that you can.

The second factor involved in this amendment has regard for the fact that there is a tremendous backlog of employment. Surely that is obvious to everybody! There is a tremendous backlog of jobs. Can you expect that today or tomorrow 1,200 people who are coming back to work will be able to get into all the jobs across the province?—the Sheratons, the hospitals, the housing developments and so on—and be able to catch up on that backlog in short order?

What is going to happen, Mr. Chairman, is this. There are going to be inducements offered by the big employers in the field, the big contractors, the big builders. They are going to offer bonuses, inducements. There will be inducements over the table. There will be inducements under the table.

The workers will want to go to the jobs and the companies involved will want to go to the big jobs because these jobs recur every month, every year, whereas a hospital or a nursing home is a one-shot proposition. They deal with a hospital board today; when they've finished the hospital they are through with them. They won't see them any more and there will be reluctance on the part of the workers and the companies to go to these particular jobs.

These are projects in which you have money involved. I mentioned in my main speech on the second reading today the 668-bed hospital down the street, the New Mount Sinai Hospital. You have invested $32 million and more in it, and it isn't only the money that you have got invested in it but the delivery of services that you are counting on over the next two or three years. You aren't going to get them if the workers and the companies are going to be busy finishing the Sheraton Hotel and other commercial developments.

Why don't you empower the board that you are setting up under this compulsory arbitration, which you are going to finalize before midnight tonight, and say to these birds, "We want you to finish the jobs in which the public has a direct and immediate interest"? Never mind whether you are going to be interfering with contractual developments; you are interfering with contractual developments anyway merely by imposing compulsory arbitration.

Surely, it is hypocritical to say on the one hand that you don't want to interfere with contractual involvements while on the other hand you are imposing a contractual involvement by compulsory arbitration. Surely, the members of the government, whose vote I have to have to swing this amendment, can see the importance of it. If you want to finish your hospitals, if you want to finish your nursing homes, if you want to finish your housing developments as quickly as possible, you are not going to do it unless the arbitration board is going to tell these people, both the unions and the contractors, that they are to finish these public jobs first and establish that order of priorities.

There is nothing more that I can possibly say to you because if you don't impose this kind of amendment you are not going to get these jobs finished. They are going to be finishing the luxury jobs first. If that is your idea of public duty, of doing duty to the public and of correcting the inhumanity and the callousness that I talked about earlier, I don't know what I have been doing here all day.

Mr. Chairman: The hon. member for Hamilton East.

Mr. R. Gisborn (Hamilton East): Mr. Chairman, I support wholeheartedly the proposition that the hon. member for York-Forest Hill has put before the House. I don't know at this point whether I can support it as being part of the responsibility of the arbitration board. That's out of my field altogether. I just can't envisage how the board could make that determination in any realistic manner at all. But I certainly think the minister should do some thinking. Is there any member over there who could give some assurance—there are three ministers in the House—to the public that senior citizens' homes and hospitals and these places are looked after first as far as inspection and safe operation is concerned? We've talked about the safety hazard and this has been the nub of the whole situation, producing the bill to provide arbitration to look after these people in these homes and institutions, and there should be something done about it.

I agree that they should get priority with the number of workforces available. But I just can't say that I could support a proposition that it would be the responsibility of the arbitration board. But the government has a responsibility. If they believe that the reasons for this bill were valid then the priorities have to be put where they need to go on behalf of the people who need the services first.

Mr. Chairman: The member for Windsor West.

Mr. E. J. Bounsall (Windsor West): Mr. Chairman, on this point, I agree with most of the comments which the member for Hamilton East has just made. I find great difficulty in having this type of priority and dictation of what work should be done under the aegis of the arbitration board, which is going to take some time to set up and some time to get agreement. These are not matters that they should be dealing with. They should be dealing with the matters that are in dispute between the two parties to this dispute. They should not be running around the province gathering material on what buildings should be done first.

I agree wholeheartedly with the sentiment that buildings in which the public funds of the Province of Ontario are involved should be completed first where they involve residences, either for senior citizens or families, as far as OHC money goes, then residences and other buildings in the province that don't involve public funds and then the whole class of commercial buildings. I think this can be achieved.

I said in my remarks this afternoon that the government has a responsibility, having brought this bill in with a view to public safety in mind and the inconvenience to the public, to see that priorities are set. I would say to the government that there are a couple of ways they can do it: As a separate section in this bill, which has nothing to do with the arbitration board, indicating that you the government have the power to set the priorities on what work is to be done; or you now go and you talk to the companies, you review with them what their contracts are, with some flexibility in your own minds as to the length of the possible date they would have got to those contracts anyway, to get the most equitable—in terms of the criteria we have phrased—terms of getting that accomplished. If you meet resistance in that and do not have the power to then enforce those priorities, we would be more than willing to co-operate with you in a short bill that laid out those priorities.

But to give it to the arbitration board is, to me, a bastardization of what the arbitration board should be doing.

Mr. Chairman: The hon. minister.

Hon. Mr. Guindon: Mr. Chairman, I think the member for York-Forest Hill certainly made a suggestion which has a great deal of merit. However, as has been stated by two other members, we don't think that the arbitration board is really the agency that could do that. For one thing, as was stated, the board would probably not sit for some weeks, and I imagine the setting of priorities would have to be made very shortly. However, as I said, this suggestion has a great deal of merit. Perhaps we can accomplish the same thing and obtain the same goal by asking the minister, whether it is the Minister of Health (Mr. Potter) or the Minister of Labour, to get in touch with these people and set priorities for them.

Mr. Givens: What is he going to do? Put salt on their tail?

Mr. Chairman: The member for Windsor-Walkerville.

Mr. S. B. Handleman (Carleton): They are already working—

Mr. Givens: All right, you will hear about it later.

Mr. Chairman: The member for Windsor-Walkerville.

Mr. B. Newman (Windsor-Walkerville): Mr. Chairman, I don't want to prolong the discussion, but I think that the minister should give an assurance to the House that he will introduce legislation or have some directive set out so that there could be priorities set up as to the type of building or buildings that are going to be listed in that series of priorities.

The member for York-Forest Hill certainly has made a real, impassioned plea for the need for the completion of certain very important facilities, such as hospitals that we can't delay. That should have been one of the prime priorities. So should nursing homes and homes that may be dealing with the health of an individual. These are the type. The minister should either come in with legislation or, if you are not able to introduce legislation, issue a directive to the unions and to the management that these be given first priority.

Hon. Mr. Guindon: Mr. Chairman, I don't think legislation is required at this time, but I would certainly be glad to contact my colleague, the Minister of Health, and see what kind of directives we can get.

Mr. Chairman: Ready for the question? The member for Windsor West.

Mr. Bounsall: Speaking further to this, I am sure the Minister of Health can apply to the companies in dispute or to them through the Minister of Labour on the areas that affect the Minister of Health, that is, hospitals, nursing homes, and so on. I think there is a wider scope here than what the Minister of Health deals with. I don't think it is within his jurisdiction to say that senior citizen homes per se affect health if they are not completed. But if he can stretch it that far, I don't think he could say that other OHC family highrises affect the health of those people that are in them unless they are completed. I certainly don't think he can say we should complete a particular highrise that OHC has not occupied yet as a matter of health. So, I think the Minister of Labour needs to take a step further than the one step he has taken in consulting the Minister of Health. He needs to take perhaps a step further himself in indicating the social priorities of construction of elevators that need to occur.

Mr. Chairman: Ready for the question?

Mr. Givens: Mr. Chairman, just one more word, the fact is that I discussed this matter with the Minister of Health. With great respect to the revered gentleman, he ain't got a clue. He is looking to the Minister of Labour for help and the Minister of Labour isn't giving him a helping hand. The responsibility is the Minister of Labour's, and he will hear about it if priorities aren't given in these projects, believe you me. I don't know why the minister can't put this in this bill right now.

Hon. Mr. Guindon: The board is not the body that can do it. It won't be sitting for some time. I think these matters are more relevant through management than they are through the board. I must admit it, and I have already said it, the idea is good; the suggestion is certainly valid. I can assure the member that I will not shirk my responsibility and I will get in touch with these people.

Mr. Chairman: Those in favour of Mr. Givens' amendment will please say "aye."

Those opposed will please say "nay."

In my opinion, the "nays" have it. I declare the motion lost.

Any further comments, questions or amendments to any later section of the bill and, if so, which section?

Mr. Bounsall: Section 5(2).

Mr. Chairman: Anything before 5(2)? The member for Windsor West.

Mr. Bounsall: Just a question of information on this part, I gather that this part in not making the Statutory Powers Procedure Act apply is to ensure, or attempt to ensure, that the arbitration board itself rules on the procedures, and that this would prevent the taking to court under this Act of a procedure that one of the parties to the dispute doesn't like in terms of the way the arbitration board proceeds. My question is, it seems to me, that the same bad procedures that could occur can be challenged under the Judicial Review Act. So why has the minister excluded the Statutory Powers Procedure Act and not the Judicial Review Act? What is the difference between excluding the Statutory Powers Act and not the Judicial Review Act when both of them, I think, could speak to that procedural point of the arbitration?

Hon. Mr. Guindon: I am not quite clear, Mr. Chairman. I think the hon. member will agree that the Statutory Powers Procedure Act is one to which you can always appeal, except that in the case of binding arbitration there is no appeal. That's the reason why this arbitration does not come under the Statutory Powers Procedure Act because you just cannot appeal. It's a binding arbitration.

Section 5 agreed to.

Mr. Chairman: Any comments, questions or amendments on any later section of the bill?

Mr. Bounsall: Yes, Mr. Chairman, section 6(2)(c).

Mr. Chairman: All right.

Mr. Bounsall: I move, Mr. Chairman, that in section 6(2)(c) the words "the rates of wages or" be deleted, and a new section (d) be added which reads, "The employers shall not, except with the consent of the unions, alter the rates of wages that were in operation on July 1, 1972," and further, subsection (d) be relettered as subsection (e).

Mr. Chairman: Any comments?

Mr. I. Deans (Wentworth): Mr. Chairman, before we comment on it, could we hear whether the minister might accept this as a reasonable amendment to the Act?

Hon. Mr. Guindon: No, Mr. Chairman, I don't think you need this amendment. These rights are already guaranteed. They were in the former collective agreement and there was an increase, I understand, in rates of wages as of July 1, 1972. I think this is quite understood. I don't see why you should ask for an amendment.

Mr. Bounsall: Mr. Chairman, if the minister is stating categorically to the House that it is his understanding that the increase in wages that occurred on July 1, post the termination of the contract on April 30, is in fact covered by that contract that expired on April 30, and by making the provision that the employer shall not alter those rates that were in operation on April 30 he has indeed covered that increase that occurred on July 1, then I will certainly have no reason to proceed with the amendment. Do I have your categorical assurance that this will occur and the employees will not suffer a decrease of roughly 50 cents an hour that they had from July 1 until the strike occurred?

Hon. Mr. Guindon: This increase came about as the result of the former collective agreement, and it was agreed that by July 1, 1972, they would. As far as I'm concerned it's agreed.

Mr. Chairman: Is it agreed, then, to withdraw the motion?

Mr. Bounsall: I agree to withdraw it.

Section 6 agreed to.

Mr. Chairman: Are there any other comments, questions or amendments on a later section of the bill?

All right then, we have one amendment to be voted on which was left over from section 4. This we will proceed to do now.

Mr. Reid has moved an amendment to section 4 subsection 4, by adding at the end thereof:

Provided that if the parties hereto are unable to decide upon the length of a collective agreement, then that term in a decision of a board of arbitration shall not exceed a period of one year after the date of the collective agreement.

The House divided on the amendment which was negatived on the following vote:

Clerk of the House: Mr. Chairman, the "ayes" are 22, the "nays" are 53.

Mr. Chairman: I declare the motion lost, and the section carried. Shall the bill be reported?

Bill 2 reported.

Hon. Mr. Winkler moves that the committee rise and report.

Motion agreed to.

The House resumed; Mr. Speaker in the chair.

Mr. Chairman: Mr. Speaker, the committee of the whole House begs to report one bill without amendment and asks for leave to sit again.

Report agreed to.

THIRD READING

The following bill was given third reading upon motion.

Hon. E. A. Winkler (Chairman, Management Board of Cabinet): His Honour the Lieutenant Governor awaits to give royal assent to the measure that has been before us.

The Honourable the Lieutenant Governor of Ontario entered the chamber of the legislative assembly and took his seat upon the throne.

ROYAL ASSENT

Hon. W. Ross Macdonald (Lieutenant Governor): Pray be seated.

Mr. Speaker: May it please Your Honour, the legislative assembly of the province has, at its present sittings thereof, passed a bill to which, in the name of and on behalf of the said legislative assembly, I respectfully request Your Honour's assent.

The Clerk Assistant: The following is the title of the bill to which Your Honour's assent is prayed:

Clerk of the House: In Her Majesty's name, the Honourable the Lieutenant Governor doth assent to this bill.

The Honourable the Lieutenant Governor was pleased to retire from the chamber.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: Mr. Speaker, before I move the adjournment of the House, I would like to say that tomorrow we will continue with, I think it's item No. 1 on the order paper—

Mr. R. F. Nixon (Leader of the Opposition): Or anything on the order paper.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: —and on Monday it will be No. 1, and I suppose possibly No. 1 on Tuesday as well. I would expect if there were time left on either Monday or Tuesday we would do some second readings of the bills that are now on the order paper.

Hon. Mr. Winkler moves the adjournment of the House.

Motion agreed to.

The House adjourned at 11:16 o'clock, p.m.

Statements by the ministry.

COURT RULING ON LAND ACQUISITION

Hon. D. A. Bales (Attorney General): Mr. Speaker, I wish to advise the hon. members that on Wednesday, Mar. 21 last, the Court of Appeal of Ontario delivered to the Lieutenant Governor of this province its opinions on the questions referred to it by an order in council of Sept. 19, 1971. The questions referred to the court related to the effect of certain provisions of the Planning Act on the procedures followed in various types of land acquisition.

The date for the hearing of the argument on the questions referred to the court was extensively advertised in the press and the argument of persons interested in these questions was advanced to the court on Feb. 12 to 16 inclusive last. Counsel was appointed by the court to argue both sides of the questions, and counsel representing interested parties were also afforded the opportunity to make submissions.

The opinion of the court is extensive, covering some 50 pages, and it will provide assistance to those members of the public interested therein and guidance to the government in assessing the present situation. The questions asked of the court and the court's considerations affect the legislation of several ministries. Copies of the opinion have been delivered to those ministries affected for their review as to possible implications for their legislation.

To assist the members opposite I have obtained additional copies of the decision and I'll provide a copy to each of the opposition parties opposite.

Hon. J. Yaremko (Solicitor General): Mr. Speaker, during the last session of the Legislature the member for Downsview (Mr. Singer) asked me about the status of an employee of the Ontario Police Commission, Mr. Herb Thurston. At that same time, several speculative stories appeared in the press concerning the security of criminal intelligence information being gathered and analysed by the staff of the Ontario Police Commission.

I undertook at that time to provide the hon. member and the House with a statement on the matter in due course and indicated on Wednesday that I would do so today.

I should explain at the outset that CISO—Criminal Intelligence Services of Ontario—is an organization made up of representatives from police forces operating in this province and members of the Ontario Police Commission. It is concerned with providing facilities for the collection, analysis and dissemination of criminal intelligence to law enforcement agencies with a view to effectively combating crime.

The 28-man governing body of CISO, to which I will make reference, is composed of the chairman and members of the Ontario Police Commission, the commissioner of the Ontario Provincial Police, the commanding officer of the RCMP "O" division, and the chiefs of police of any municipal police forces in Ontario having participating members.

Part of the role of the Ontario Police Commission since the formation of CISO in 1966 has included the provision of a repository for the information being gathered from various police forces, and staff resources to undertake the analysis of this intelligence data and their dissemination to operating forces in the field.

At a meeting of the governing body of CISO in September 1972, the question of the security of this system was discussed and a special committee of senior police officials was appointed to investigate the matter. At that time a resolution was passed suspending Mr. Thurston, an intelligence analyst employed by the Ontario Police Commission, as a member of CISO pending a review of the matter.

Since this action by the governing body of CISO resulted in Mr. Thurston being denied access to criminal intelligence files that he required in the regular performance of his duties, it was necessary for his employer, the Ontario Police Commission, to temporarily withdraw him from this work and later reassign him to other duties outside the intelligence section.

The review was completed in November and it resulted in a number of recommendations being made concerning the physical security of the files, the control of the repository and the procedures of CISO. This was followed by a series of meetings between the committee of the CISO responsible for the review and members of the Ontario Police Commission, during which agreement was reached on the manner and extent to which these recommendations would be implemented.

During this period Mr. Thurston was approached by the chairman of the federal Law Reform Commission concerning the possible employment or secondment with the commission. Subsequently, arrangements were made with the Ontario Police Commission to second Mr. Thurston to the federal Law Reform Commission where he is currently engaged.

Mr. V. M. Singer (Downsview): Is that "second" or "give him away"?

Hon. Mr. Yaremko: Mr. Thurston remains an employee of the Ontario government and his salary continues to be paid by the Ontario Police Commission under a reimbursement arrangement with the federal government.

I should emphasize that while the matter of Mr. Thurston's judgement was raised during the course of the CISO investigation, I am assured by those responsible for his supervision that his honesty and integrity are not in doubt.

Returning to the broader question of changes in the direction of CISO as a result of this overall review, a meeting was held of the governing body in February of this year. At that time a new set of procedures was adopted providing for the establishment of an executive committee made up of four members of police forces and three members of the Ontario Police Commission. This committee, with the assistance of a co-ordinator, should help to provide more effective direction to the criminal intelligence function of CISO and a greater degree of ongoing participation in the process for member police forces. In addition to these changes, the physical security of the repository has been strengthened considerably and the staff resources allocated to this activity will be expanded. I should point out that these and other improvements that have been made in the system enjoy the full approval and support of the governing body of CISO.

In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, I think it is evident to all those who have been directly involved in these developments over the last year that their efforts will undoubtedly contribute to a more responsive and effective system of criminal intelligence in Ontario, one which will continue to have the confidence and support of all law enforcement agencies.

Mr. Singer: What a whitewash!

Mr. Speaker: Oral questions.

STATUS OF OPP OFFICER

Mr. R. F. Nixon (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, further to the Solicitor General's statement, can he inform the House whether or not the police forces in the various other groups contributing information to CSIO now have had their confidence restored in the security of these files and no longer have that hesitation that evidently had been expressed in forwarding information that would be useful in the control of crime?

Hon. Mr. Yaremko: Mr. Speaker, I give the Leader of the Opposition, the members of this House and the public at large, the assurance that the review has resulted in these specific items that I have told them. It has the full confidence of all of the participating members, which consist of those people to whom I have referred. The review committee consisted of Chief Adamson, the new commissioner of the OPP, Harold Graham, and Commissioner Lysyk of the RCMP.

What has been implemented has the full support of the total governing body. The police forces of this province now have complete confidence in what has been done.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, a further supplementary: Can the minister tell the House whether Mr. Thurston now has been completely exonerated, that is publicly and in the minister's mind, of the minister's suspicion that this is the man who was feeding this confidential information to the member for High Park (Mr. Shulman)?

Hon. Mr. Yaremko: Mr. Speaker, the hon. member has intimated that I had a suspicion relating to Mr. Thurston.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: What were the minister's suspicions?

Hon. Mr. Yaremko: Of course, what was involved was only the relationship of Mr. Thurston and the discharge of his duties and his continuing membership as a member of CISO.

I have reiterated in my statement that, although judgement may have been passed upon him, I am assured that his integrity and honesty are not in doubt.

Mr. Singer: Mr. Speaker, by way of a supplementary!

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Downsview, a supplementary.

Mr. Singer: Could the minister tell us—it was also a part of my question—whatever happened to Gary Ralph? Could the minister tell us if he is prepared to make available the lengthy report that he sat on for four months and let us see what in fact the investigating group said and not the pap statement of three pages that he gave us today? Could the minister tell us if the Association of Ontario Police Chiefs, which withdrew its support from this intelligence agency, is now back, rather than the two or three people that he mentioned?

Hon. Mr. Yaremko: Mr. Speaker, the services of Gary Ralph were terminated. He was a contract employee of the Ontario Police Commission. They were terminated on May 19, 1972.

Mr. Singer: Why?

Hon. G. A. Kerr (Provincial Secretary for Justice): We didn't need him any more.

Hon. Mr. Yaremko: His services came to an end.

Mr. Singer: Why?

Hon. Mr. Yaremko: His services came to an end.

Mr. Singer: That has nothing to do with this.

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Mr. Singer: It has nothing to do with this at all.

Hon. Mr. Yaremko: Mr. Speaker, I should like to point out to you that my interest in the matter consists of two items. One is the status of an employee of the Ontario Police Commission, Mr. Thurston. I have now been satisfied as to that.

My second concern as Solicitor General was as to the effectiveness and security of the criminal intelligence services of this province. I am now assured as to that, and I want to repeat for the hon. member, that what has evolved in terms of the CISO procedures, as I've outlined, has the full concurrence of all the participating members of CISO.

As to the police association—I'm not sure that I can recall the member's exact—

Mr. Singer: It is the Ontario Association of Police Chiefs, which expressed no confidence in that whole system.

Hon. Mr. Yaremko: Mr. Speaker, that is not so. I don't know who makes up the total membership of the association—

Mr. Singer: The police chiefs of Ontario, for example.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please! This sort of debate is entirely out of order.

Hon. Mr. Yaremko: The relevant police forces of Ontario now give their full support to and have confidence in the procedures which I have outlined.

Mr. Singer: Mr. Speaker, by way of further supplementary, because I didn't get—

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for High Park is entitled to the next supplementary.

Mr. Singer: I didn't get an answer. He won't tell us what happened.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for High Park.

Mr. M. Shulman (High Park): Has the minister been able to locate the source of the leak and does he intend to lay any charges against that person or persons?

Hon. Mr. Yaremko: Mr. Speaker, that is part of the internal investigation made by CISO.

Mr. Singer: Oh, sure! We'll never see that. Four months to get three pages of nonsense. Whitewash!

Hon. Mr. Yaremko: Any action that will be taken in that regard will be dealt with by the CISO, which is fully competent in its makeup and experience to do what is necessary.

Mr. Singer: Yes, very competent!

Mr. Speaker: If the hon. member wants to put his supplementary he may have his turn.

Mr. Singer: Will the minister be prepared to let us see the report from which he extracted the three pages of pap that he gave us this morning?

Hon. Mr. Yaremko: Mr. Speaker, that was not a report to the solicitor general. The report was a report to the governing body of CISO. I was privy to the information contained in the report. It was not a report to me. That report is the property of CISO.

Mr. Singer: By way of a final supplementary—

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Riverdale may have the next and last supplementary.

Mr. J. A. Renwick (Riverdale): Thank you, Mr. Speaker. May I ask the minister whether or not Mr. Thurston had a hearing in response to the allegations which were made against him and whether he was given the benefit of the minimum rules of such hearings set forth in the Statutory Powers Procedure Act of the Province of Ontario?

Hon. Mr. Yaremko: Mr. Speaker, the CISO, which is its own organization, made its own investigation and took certain action. The ministry was not directly responsible for the investigation. Our only role was to take whatever action resulted from that investigation.

Mr. Speaker: Does the hon. Leader of the Opposition have further questions?

INVESTIGATION INTO OHIP PAYMENTS

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Yes, Mr. Speaker, a question of the Attorney General.

Has he now received information from the Ministry of Health which he is considering which might lead to charges being laid against certain medical practitioners in the province who have been defrauding the OHIP fund?

Hon. Mr. Bales: Mr. Speaker, certain cases have been under investigation by my senior counsel and the officers of the antirackets squad. I anticipate that the investigation will be finalized shortly and then it will be decided whether charges can be laid. The investigation is not fully complete yet.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: A supplementary: In looking at Hansard yesterday, the Minister of Health made some reference to some delay in the appointment of a judge in this matter. Does the minister know what he was referring to?

Hon. Mr. Bales: No, Mr. Speaker. I read Hansard myself and I asked the minister last night about the meaning of that. The charges have not been laid and until they are—

Mr. I. Deans (Wentworth): What did he say?

Mr. R. F. Nixon: He didn't know either?

Mr. T. P. Reid (Rainy River): What was his meaning?

Hon. Mr. Bales: Well, he was—he made reference—

Mr. Speaker: Perhaps the hon. minister would respond only to the Leader of the Opposition. Someone else was on his feet with a supplementary. He will not respond to the question from a member who is seated.

Hon. Mr. Bales: Mr. Speaker, to be of assistance to the hon. Leader of the Opposition, there was some reference to it yesterday; I was not in the House at the time and that's the reason I checked in Hansard. The investigation is proceeding; and as quickly as that can be finished and I receive the report I will know whether the officers are recommending prosecution and the nature of the charges to be laid.

Mr. Shulman: A supplementary: Is the minister aware of an intervention or a recommendation from the College of Physicians and Surgeons that charges not be laid in one specific case?

Hon. Mr. Bales: My concern is not really with the College of Physicians and Surgeons but rather with what the investigation produces.

Mr. Shulman: My question was is the minister aware of the intervention?

Hon. Mr. Bales: No, I am not aware of that. We are carrying out an investigation independent of anything they may do.

Mr. Speaker: Does the hon. Leader of the Opposition have further questions?

MISSISSIPPI RIVER CONTAMINATION THREAT

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Yes, Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Minister of the Environment.

Does he recall issuing a certificate of approval allowing a firm called Nuclarus Ltd. to build a lagoon in the drainage basin of Mazinaw Lake in the Mississippi River system into which, it is alleged, chemical wastes can be dumped with the threat, if the lagoon is not functioning properly, of contamination of that whole lake and river system?

Hon. J. A. C. Auld (Minister of the Environment): Mr. Speaker, just off the top of my head, as I recall some time ago this firm made an application for approval for a lagoon. They didn't pursue it and I believe they didn't give us all the details that were required, so about perhaps two months ago we wrote and told them that their application was no longer current and that we weren't considering it. I don't think we have heard anything from them since.

I'll get the actual detail for the Leader of the Opposition. I remember having a number of letters from people in that area—I can't say exactly when, but I think it was around the end of September—and I looked into it and that basically was the situation. They had proposed this, they had made an application to us, they had not given us the detail that we required and then we wrote and told them that their application was no longer current and if they still wanted to proceed they would have to make a new application; and there has not been one.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Supplementary: Is the minister aware that the people in the area who are concerned are under the impression that a certificate of approval has been issued by the ministry and that the date was just, I believe, Dec. 28, 1972?

Would the minister, as he has promised, get the details of this so those concerned can be properly informed?

Hon. Mr. Auld: I will.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Wentworth.

METRO CENTRE PLAN

Mr. Deans: Yes, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have a question of the provincial Treasurer and Minister of Intergovernmental Affairs.

What has become of the report which a previous Treasurer, now a parliamentary assistant, indicated would be available to me on June 27, 1972, regarding the ownership of the 55 acres of land which is currently in dispute in the Metro Centre development?

Hon. J. White (Treasurer, Minister of Intergovernmental Affairs): I don't know, Mr. Speaker. I'll find out and inform the hon. member.

While I am on my feet perhaps I could respond to a question asked yesterday by the acting leader of the NDP.

Mr. Speaker: I think that would be in order.

PROVINCIAL AUDITOR'S REPORT

Hon. Mr. White: The hon. member asked what provisions, if any, were being made for those members of the staff of the Provincial Auditor whose jobs were being phased out as the pre-audit function was being shifted to the operating ministries. I have inquired and I have found that most of those so affected have been taken into the civil service through a mechanism established by the Civil Service Commission. There are, I think, something like 16 people left in Mr. Groom's branch and a small number of additional transfers may be anticipated.

More particularly he inquired about Mr. Tom Smith who has apparently attempted without success to find a permanent civil service position within one of the operating ministries. This is no doubt lamentable, but understandable, having in mind that he also applied for a job opening in the NDP caucus office and was found apparently not to be qualified. So—

An hon. member: Great questions members opposite ask!

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Renwick: We have much higher standards.

Hon. Mr. White: However, I am given to understand that the position he occupies within the Provincial Auditor's staff will continue to provide employment for him.

Mr. Deans: Mr. Speaker, I am grateful for the answer. I didn't ask the question. It was asked by the member for Ottawa Centre (Mr. Cassidy) and I'll relay the minister's answer to him.

Hon. A. Grossman (Minister of Revenue): Don't blame it on him.

Mr. Deans: Further to my question, would it be possible to receive an answer in regard to this 55 acres of land within some reasonable length of time, say perhaps shorter than the time it took to get the last answer?

Hon. Mr. White: Oh yes.

Mr. Deans: Good!

Mr. Reid: Not much!

Mr. Deans: Not much. I'd like to ask a question of the parliamentary assistant in charge of energy. Is it within the parliamentary secretary's terms of reference to consider suitable legislation to make mandatory an independent—

Mr. Speaker: Is the hon. member addressing his question to one of the parliamentary assistants?

Mr. Deans: I'm trying to.

Mr. Speaker: It's out of order.

Mr. Deans: Well, I'm asking him in the absence of the Minister of Natural Resources (Mr. Bernier)—

Mr. Speaker: Questions may only be directed to the ministry.

Mr. Singer: They don't speak.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: The Premier refers to him as "my assistant."

Mr. Deans: That's a shame, because I know he had the answer right on the tip of his tongue.

An hon. member: Tell them to get into line over there!

Mr. Reid: He's No. 2, so he tries harder!

Mr. Deans: Okay. I have a question—

Mr. M. C. Germa (Sudbury): The member for Chatham-Kent (Mr. McKeough) is neither fish nor fowl!

Mr. Deans: We thought he had been promoted, to tell the truth. It just shows that he isn't any higher up than he was before.

Mr. Reid: Only the name has been changed!

METRO HOUSING SHORTAGE

Mr. Deans: I want to ask a question then of the Minister of Revenue.

What action is contemplated by the Minister of Revenue with regard to housing starts in Metropolitan Toronto in order to offset the desperate need in public housing and in order to try to provide some balance to the unusually high rate of increase of housing costs in the private sector?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Well, Mr. Speaker, all we can do is find as many locations as is possible to carry out a programme of housing, both so-called public housing and under the new programme which has been announced—I don't know whether the hon. member is familiar with it—of an integrated community housing programme as between the private sector and the Ontario Housing Corp. The hon. member knows perfectly well that one of the problems which has caused the great decrease in housing starts is that there is considerable objection to public housing in many municipalities, particularly the larger ones.

Mr. Deans: That's because they build objectionable houses.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: I wouldn't say we build objectionable housing, Mr. Speaker. There are thousands of people who find the housing not objectionable. It's like many other programmes of government. There is pressure to provide a service for people. As a matter of fact, some people might say that the success of a programme put into effect by government to some extent is measured by the degree of backlash to the success of that programme.

Mr. E. J. Bounsall (Windsor West): Some people would. Intelligent people wouldn't say that.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: The hon. members opposite, Mr. Speaker, are among those in this province who thought the Ontario Housing Corp. should be building more and more public housing in this province.

Mr. Deans: Right!

Hon. Mr. Grossman: We did build more and more public housing.

Mr. Bounsall: They could also do better!

Hon. Mr. Grossman: The great need at that time was to provide shelter for people; it was all motherhood at that time. But now that we have provided thousands upon thousands of people with housing, there is an understandable desire that the community and recreational facilities incorporated in these housing facilities should be of a better quality. We all agree with that.

Indeed, I remember being at the opening of Regent Park, which was a city of Toronto project. That in its day was considered just about the finest in North America. But when we look back upon it now, it's not quite what we would build today.

Mr. Speaker: Anything further, I believe, would constitute a speech. The hon. minister has given his reply.

Mr. Singer: That's not a reply, it's a speech.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: A speech.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Do I take it, Mr. Speaker, that it's more in order to make a speech when you're asking a question than it is when you're answering one?

Mr. Reid: He's not answering. He's avoiding the question.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: In any case, Mr. Speaker, perhaps to clarify it for the hon. member and for the House generally, I will make a statement in this House to explain our new housing programme, which was announced a week or two ago in conjunction with the federal government. It will not, of course, offset the numbers of units that are being blocked from being built now and we have been able to build in the past. There's only so much land; and there are only two ways to go—we can go up and we can go sideways, unless the hon. member or someone else has an idea of how we can go subterranean. There's only so much land in the city—

Mr. Germa: We've got a suggestion for the minister!

Mr. Deans: I suggest if he doesn't hurry up and get finished he is going to go underground.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: —and, of course, we've used a great portion of that land and it has become more difficult. However, as I said, I'll make a statement to the House to explain the new programme which I announced the other day.

Mr. Singer: Let the minister explain now what he said.

Mr. Deans: A supplementary question: How can the minister possibly expect the number of houses that are presently being built in Metropolitan Toronto to meet the need, which is reported to be something over 12,000 units required in Metropolitan Toronto, and only better than 1,000 units built in the year 1972.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: I don't, Mr. Speaker, expect it will meet the need.

I only extend an invitation to the opposition, as I did last year, and add that that question would come better if the members of the party opposite would appear at public meetings where there is objection to public housing and stand up and be counted and say that they are in favour of that housing and do what they can to change the views of many ratepayers' associations which object to public housing.

Mr. Deans: One final supplementary question to the minister, who obviously doesn't follow me around the province because I do attend such meetings. What became of the massive housing project announced in the Throne Speech one year ago? Where are the houses?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: If the hon. member will be specific—I'll wait for him to get the facts—be specific about what massive programme he is talking about, and where he feels we have failed; I'll be glad to answer.

Mr. Singer: Is that the minister's foot in his mouth?

Mr. R. Haggerty (Welland South): Need all those jobs?

Mr. R. F. Nixon: If the minister will stop making a statement, a supplementary question pertaining to the long waiting list here in Toronto, and I believe there is a waiting list in at least one other centre of which I am aware. Why would the minister give the answer he has this morning when in the special review of the financial situation brought out by the Treasurer just before the by-election, in which he found another $300 million, one of the areas where there was the largest amount of unexpended money in government programmes was his own programme, in housing. Money that had already been budgeted for and been made available still had evidently not been spent, and there are no plans to spend it this year.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Well the answer to that is quite obvious, Mr. Speaker. There had been unexpended funds. Because of local pressures we have not been able to proceed with the projects which had been planned.

Indeed I had in my desk at one time, I think at least seven or eight orders in council for approval of projects which may have, in Metro Toronto alone, provided, well I'm just speaking off the top of my head, perhaps 1,000 or more units. Because of local pressures of ratepayers' groups and councils within Metro, these were not signed because of the objections to them.

Now what would the hon. member suggest? This is what has accounted for the unexpended funds by and large.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: This matter is of great importance. I am sure, Mr. Speaker, you would agree. I wish I could remember the specific sum, but I think it's $80 million or $100 million that's been approved for public housing and the minister says now that he can't spend it because he can't find any place to build the buildings.

Why doesn't he use, for example, the land that the government owns and has serviced at Malvern?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: It's been used.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: How could he possibly come forward with a programme and ask us to approve these huge sums of money without knowing where he was going to build the buildings? It seems to be irresponsible. I think that his duty has not been fulfilled.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Mr. Speaker, the hon. member is referring to Malvern. Malvern is going according to programme. The money that was laid aside for Malvern is being used. The first phase is almost completed, some 600 odd units. On the second phase, I should tell the hon. member that the council, the council of North York, has sent back to their Planning Committee—

Mr. Singer: The minister doesn't even know which municipality it is in, it is in Scarborough.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: I'm sorry, the council of Scarborough has sent back to its planning board the plans for the second phase because of some objections it has. The money that was laid aside for Malvern by and large has been used and is up to date.

You cannot build all of Malvern at one time, it would be physically impossible anyway. For the other, I referred to those programmes which we had which had to be stopped because of local pressures of councils and ratepayers' groups. Money that was provided for those projects is unexpended, and I regret it just as much as I take it the hon. Leader of the Opposition regrets it. I regret we have not been able to go ahead with those projects, as I presume the hon. Leader of the Opposition regrets it. I wish he would get up publicly and talk to those ratepayers' groups and those councils and ask them to give us support.

Mr. F. Drea (Scarborough Centre): That'll be the day! Oh, will that be the day.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: I would just like to ask the minister if his chubby colleague behind him, who comes from Scarborough, was at those meetings supposedly bolstering the contention that the minister has put forward, trying to persuade the residents of his area to change their minds?

Mr. Drea: No way! You stay out of my riding.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: It's absolutely ridiculous.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Mr. Speaker, I don't know whether my colleague was or wasn't, but at least he is not getting up in this House and taking me to task for not being able to build in those communities.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order! Order!

Mr. R. F. Nixon: The minister has the power and the money and the need is obvious.

Mr. Speaker: Order! There has been sufficient time spent on this topic. The hon. member for York-Forest Hill.

DIAL-A-BUS SYSTEM FOR TORONTO

Mr. P. G. Givens (York-Forest Hill): A question of the Minister of Transportation and Communications: Whatever happened to the dial-a-bus system that his leader so fervently promised several months ago to relieve the congestion that he created in northwest Metro? Whatever happened to that system?

Hon. G. R. Carton (Minister of Transportation and Communications): Mr. Speaker, it is an excellent programme and it will be in effect next November.

Mr. Givens: Next November? We need the bus system now.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Ontario South is next.

NEW COMMUNITY OF NORTH PICKERING

Mr. W. Newman (Ontario South): A question of the Treasurer and Minister of Economics and Intergovernmental Affairs: I would like to ask the minister if he is still in charge of the North Pickering development project; and if he is, will he be making a statement on it prior to the closing date for briefs on the regional government, which is the end of March?

Hon. Mr. White: I suspect that I am technically responsible, Mr. Speaker, but the fact of the matter is that the Minister of Industry and Tourism (Mr. Bennett) has had this responsibility. Now that he is Minister of Industry and Tourism, the Premier is giving thought to replacing him in that particular role.

In the meantime, without knowing much about it, I have had some conversations with Mr. Basford in Ottawa. I am having another such meeting with him, I think it is next week. I had a conversation with the Premier (Mr. Davis) yesterday on this subject and have undertaken to see Reeve Williams, who has a particular course of action to recommend. I am attempting not to get drawn into this too deeply if somebody else is going to do it.

Interjections by hon. members.

An hon. member: The minister is up to his neck now.

Hon. Mr. White: However, I am holding the breach and pressing the Premier to appoint somebody to take the job from me.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Sudbury.

OIL SPILL IN KELLY LAKE

Mr. Germa: A question of the Minister of the Environment: Is the minister aware of the spilling of more than 30,000 gallons of used automobile oil into Kelly Lake in Sudbury? Is he aware that lack of contingency plans by his department creates certain confusion over responsibility for cleaning up? Is it not incumbent upon the minister to devise contingency plans to alleviate the confusion which is caused when these accidents do occur in the province?

Hon. Mr. Auld: Mr. Speaker, the report that I have on that spill is that vandals victimized the depot owned by Mr. K. R. Thompson last weekend. They were responsible for the release of about 2,000 gallons of waste oil, some of which is presently trapped in Kelly Lake. The oil is contained on the ice in a pool 20 ft wide and in the slushy conditions that applied then it couldn't be removed by pumping equipment.

We conducted an investigation at the site. As in the case of any spill, we carried out an investigation to verify the cause and to determine what measures are required to contain it. The policy of our ministry is not to clean up these spills with public funds unless it is impossible to establish who is the owner of the material that was spilled. My understanding is that the owner has been taking the necessary steps to remove this oil which, as I said, is approximately 2,000 gallons not 35,000.

I might also say, Mr. Speaker, that this is a waste oil operation and we are checking to see just what sort of security precautions there were on the tanks which apparently were vandalized. I can't tell the hon. member whether there were locks and the locks were broken or exactly what was the physical condition of the tanks. I expect to have that information shortly and I will pass it along to him as soon as I have it.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Huron-Bruce is next.

Mr. Germa: A supplementary?

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Sudbury with a supplementary.

Mr. Germa: Mr. Speaker, is the minister not aware that this individual does not have the expertise or the equipment to recover this oil presently trapped in the ice?

Hon. Mr. Auld: The information I have, Mr. Speaker, is that our people put him in touch with people who had the proper equipment, once they could get away from the slushing condition.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Huron-Bruce.

ASSESSMENT OF CHURCHES

Mr. M. Gaunt (Huron-Bruce): Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Minister of Revenue. Why is the assessment branch of his ministry assessing churches? Since this is being done, is it the intention of the government to have the churches pay property tax?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Mr. Speaker, the policy of the government with respect to the taxation and assessment of churches has not changed. If there are members of the assessment staff visiting churches they are probably visiting to find out which portion of the church, if any, is subject to taxation. The hon. member knows, of course, that that portion of the church or any place of worship which is not used exclusively for religious purposes is subject to assessment and taxation. I presume it would be necessary in some instances, if in fact they are doing that, to visit the church to find out precisely what portion of it may be subject to taxation.

Mr. Gaunt: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker: Since my information is that the place of worship is also being assessed, would the minister look into this particular situation, particularly from the point of view of seeing if the assessment people are applying the market value principle applicable to other properties?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: I don't know what the market value of a church would be, but I would hope that the hon. member isn't confusing the assessment with taxes. I mean there is certainly nothing wrong with assessing a church so long as there are no taxes assigned.

Mr. Gaunt: But what is the point?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: If the hon. member is asking what purpose is being served, I think there is a purpose being served. I think it is useful for the citizens of the province to know the value of all the property which is in existence in this province.

Mr. Singer: The minister is adaptable.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: If they are assessing them I don't see any harm in that. The question is, are they being taxed and to what extent? The hon. member has asked me whether there is any change in policy. There isn't, in respect to taxation.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for High Park.

Mr. Singer: Which answer do we believe?

Mr. Gaunt: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: Supplementary.

Mr. Gaunt: Would the minister undertake to review this matter, particularly in the light of some of the assessment figures which have come forth indicating that in one particular case a church was assessed for $80,000 and it was sold for $17,000? Now I simply ask the minister, is this market value assessing?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: If the hon. member will give me the details of that I will be glad to look into that particular case.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for High Park.

TESTING OF MEDICAL STUDENTS

Mr. Shulman: A question of the Minister of Colleges and Universities, Mr. Speaker: Can the minister explain why applicants to the University of Western Ontario medical school are told they must first apply to a US corporation headquartered in New York to take a psychological test to see if they are fit to become Canadian doctors?

Hon. J. McNie (Minister of Colleges and Universities): Mr. Speaker, I am not familiar with the particular test that the member is talking about. I am familiar with such tests, but not with the details; I would be very happy to get the details for him.

Mr. Shulman: If the minister is not familiar with the test, can he explain why we have to go down to the United States to determine if we are fit to become doctors in Canada?

Hon. Mr. McNie: Mr. Speaker, I would just as soon get the details on it before responding.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Welland South.

GREAT LAKES FLOOD DAMAGE

Mr. Haggerty: A question of the Minister of Agriculture and Food: Will ARDA funds be made available for other areas along Lake Erie which are suffering from flood damage? Will the minister indicate that some assistance can be provided for the eastern lake basin?

Hon. W. A. Stewart (Minister of Agriculture and Food): I am not quite sure, Mr.

Speaker, of the intent of what the hon. member is asking. Will he rephrase that question? Is this agricultural land the hon. member is referring, to or cottage land?

Mr. Haggerty: Yes, I am referring to agricultural land.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: I couldn't quite hear the question. Yes, consideration is being given, Mr. Speaker. We are trying to evolve a programme. We haven't as yet got the details on the total cost, but it would be similar to the programme that we have already worked out with the federal government through the ARDA agreement, which would involve some type of diking facilities for agricultural land only.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. Minister of the Environment has the answer to a question asked previously by the hon. Leader of the Opposition.

MISSISSIPPI RIVER CONTAMINATION THREAT

Hon. Mr. Auld: Mr. Speaker, I have just checked with the office, and we have never issued a certificate of approval for the lagoon by Nuclarus. The hearing was held by the environmental hearing board on Nov. 14 and site approval was requested at that time. We asked for more information on the technical aspect of the lagoon, which we have never received. So we advised the company on February 14 that if they wanted to continue they would have to start all over again.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Sandwich-Riverside.

OLD SANDWICH PUBLIC LIBRARY

Mr. F. A. Burr (Sandwich-Riverside): Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Minister of Government Services.

Is the minister considering favourably the request of the city of Windsor that the old Sandwich public library be turned over to the public school men teachers of Windsor to be developed as a school museum?

Hon. J. W. Snow (Minister of Government Services): Mr. Speaker, I have had correspondence from representatives of the men teachers' association in Windsor regarding this property. In fact, I discussed the disposition of this property and the possible future use with Mayor Wansbrough and the staff of the city on one of my visits to Windsor.

Prior to disposing of this property in any way, we went through the normal process of contacting all other ministries within the government as to their possible interest or use for the said property. It was found that this site was considered to be a very excellent site for the construction of a senior citizens' housing project, and consequently the site has been transferred to the Ontario Housing Corp.

Mr. Bounsall: Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: The member for Windsor West.

Mr. Bounsall: Mr. Speaker, did the minister contact the Minister of Colleges and Universities, particularly since this was originally a teachers' college building, with a view to retaining it as a museum of this kind as it ties in with this announced programme of collecting history in the colleges and universities area in this province?

Hon. Mr. Snow: I'm sure all ministries were contacted, but of course this property was originally under the Minister of Education and was declared surplus by that ministry and was turned over to us for disposal.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Windsor-Walkerville.

WINDSOR RACEWAY

Mr. B. Newman (Windsor-Walkerville): Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have a question of the Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations.

When will the ministry make public the results of the hearing of the Ontario Racing Commission into the alleged fixing of races at the Windsor Raceway?

Hon. J. T. Clement (Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations): Mr. Speaker, I'm not sure that the results of that hearing will be made known if any criminal charges flow from it. Those, of course, will be public knowledge when the charges are laid.

Insofar as the detail of the evidence that was given at those hearings goes, I don't think that that will be made public, because there were certain spurious allegations made against individuals which were completely without foundation, and it would be very harmful to the reputations of those people involved.

Mr. B. Newman: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker: Would the minister consider in the future having all such hearings open to the press?

Hon. Mr. Clement: No, I would not consider that at this particular moment in time, Mr. Speaker. These hearings are held, I'm advised, in a very informal fashion, and there has been no clamour whatsoever from the people involved in the racing occupation that they be made public. There have been certain representations made to the ministry by the press. But when this type of hearing is conducted and facts are stated that perhaps do not amount to evidence, reputations can be permanently damaged and no advantage is made. If any criminal charges are laid, then those should be dealt with in the courts, which of course are completely open at that time.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Port Arthur.

NORTHWESTERN ONTARIO RESERVOIR

Mr. J. F. Foulds (Port Arthur): I have a question of the Minister of the Environment, Mr. Speaker.

Is the minister considering making a definitive statement, repudiating the idea put forward by the chairman of the select committee on land drainage for a 14,000 square mile reservoir in northwestern Ontario?

Hon. Mr. Auld: No, Mr. Speaker, I haven't considered that it was necessary; I assume that the select committee will produce a report some time. As far as my ministry is concerned, we are concerned about water quality, but we are not involved in the creation or removal of any of the Great Lakes.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member has a supplementary?

Mr. Foulds: Yes, Mr. Speaker. In view of the fears of the people in northwestern Ontario, which are very active because of the irresponsible statements of the member for Lambton (Mr. Henderson), does this minister not consider those fears worth allaying at this time?

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Auld: Mr. Speaker, I can give this undertaking; I am sure that if there were such a proposal to be carried out, we would hold a public hearing and give an opportunity to speak to those who might be affected. I think the hon. member can allay the fears of anybody who has been in touch with him by saying that this would be a rather large undertaking and would not be done overnight.

Mr. C. E. McIlveen (Oshawa): He has already done it for every newspaper in the country!

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member has a further supplementary?

Mr. Foulds: Is the minister not concerned about the loss of revenue and the loss of water power to Ontario Hydro if such a scheme did take place?

Mr. Speaker: I think the minister gave a proper reply; the question is out of order.

The hon. member for Huron-Bruce.

EGG QUOTAS

Mr. Gaunt: Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Minister of Agriculture and Food.

In view of the fact that the Ontario pullet growers are not receiving any protection under the egg commission quota system, would the minister undertake to make a presentation on behalf of the Ontario pullet growers to see that they do get some protection under this particular system, particularly in light of the fact that many egg producers are now constructing buildings to grow their own pullets?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Mr. Speaker, it has already been done. I don't know how it is going to work out, but I have made representations to the Ontario Egg and Fowl Producers Marketing Board and to the Ontario Farm Products Marketing Board that the pullet growers be established in a marketing plan.

I am not sure what the ramifications are. Quite frankly I think they are entitled to that kind of protection, because when one recognizes the fact that the broiler growers, the roaster growers and the turkey producers are all under a marketing plan for quotas, or will be very shortly, and the egg producers are under quota marketing, then it leaves the pullet growers in an extremely vulnerable position because somebody else can say: "Well, I can't put broilers in for this particular lot; we will grow pullets instead." That to me destroys the responsible position that some of the pullet growers have taken in becoming full-time pullet growers. All their investment is in that particular field. They have their contracts, their outlets, their sources of chicks and their sources of food built up. It could destroy them. I think they should be protected; and I have so advised the marketing board.

Mr. Speaker: The question period has almost expired. There are 30 seconds left for a supplementary.

Mr. Gaunt: A supplementary, Mr. Speaker: May I ask the minister if the egg commission has responded in an encouraging way? Have they indicated that this can possibly be done?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: I haven't heard a word as yet, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Deans: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker, it appears that the Treasurer left the impression—in fact he did leave the impression—that Mr. Tom Smith had applied to the New Democratic Party caucus for employment and had been rejected. I want to make it clear to the House that the minister was mistaken; that in fact Mr. Smith did not at any time apply to the NDP caucus for employment—

Hon. Mr. Stewart: They asked him, but he wouldn't accept!

Mr. Deans: Nor was he rejected by the caucus, since in fact he never did take part in any effort by us or by him to have him in our employ.

Mr. J. R. Rhodes (Sault Ste. Marie): Does that mean he can still apply?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: They would welcome him, though, if he did apply, I gather.

Interjections by hon. members.

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

Mr. Shulman: Mr. Speaker, this particular bill has received the endorsement of persons in the hearing aid industry. There have been numerous recommendations made to the government that this bill be adopted. It is my hope that this particular bill will be passed this session.

Hon. E. A. Winkler (Chairman, Management Board of Cabinet): Why that one more than the others?

Mr. Shulman: That one has a better chance.

Mr. Speaker: An hon. member had a bill. I guess he's left the chamber now.

Mr. Renwick: Before the orders of the day, I'd like to raise a procedural matter with the House, and with you Mr. Speaker, to ask for your guidance in connection with it.

I had expected the member for Victoria-Haliburton (Mr. R. G. Hodgson), might have raised the question. Minor changes in procedure in the House often have substantial consequences and it's for that reason that I'd like the clarification of the Speaker about the question.

Mr. R. G. Eaton (Middlesex South): Yes he can leave now.

Mr. Renwick: On the opening day of the session of the Legislature—

Mr. Eaton: The member for High Park takes up everybody else's time and then leaves.

Mr. Renwick: —at the time when the first bill is introduced, it has been the tradition simply to introduce a bill for the purpose of asserting the right of the assembly, as against the executive, to introduce legislation. Such a bill has, in the past, always been of an innocuous nature, correcting a typographical error or a grammatical construction in a statute. It has been so noted on the list of items of business as the traditional introduction of one bill. Indeed, on the slip of paper which was before us on the day the session opened it referred, in fact, to the matter as being the introduction of an innocuous bill or words to that effect.

The bill which was introduced this year, and in my memory this is the first time this has been done, was introduced by the Attorney General and was in substance, a government measure of substance. It was the Powers of Attorney Act, 1973; and reflected in it, I assume, are the considered conclusions with respect to government policy on the report of the Ontario Law Reform Commission.

I therefore would like to ask the Speaker whether or not that departure, as I believe it to be, from the previous tradition of the House is sanctioned by the usage of the House or if it is within the prerogative of the government to alter the procedure of the House by introducing a bill of substance on opening day rather than the traditional formal bill for the purpose simply of asserting the traditional authority of the assembly to introduce legislation.

Mr. Speaker: Of course, as far as I am concerned as Speaker, I am not in any way at any time going to attempt to determine whether such a bill is innocuous or of substance or what the bill might be. The bill was presented on the programme for the opening day as the traditional bill and, to the best of my knowledge at least, that's what it was.

As to whether or not the bill had substance, it is my understanding that from time to time there have been certain bills introduced on the opening day which, in fact, do have substance and which when passed do constitute a very important part of our legislation in the province. I did not take it upon myself to examine the purported traditional bill nor to determine just what was the nature of the content. I am informed that such bills have been introduced from time to time on the opening day.

Orders of the day.

Clerk of the House: The first order, consideration of the speech of the Honourable the Lieutenant Governor at the opening of the session.

Mr. F. Drea (Scarborough Centre): Sock it to 'em, Margaret.

THRONE SPEECH DEBATE

Mrs. M. Scrivener (St. David): Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to move, seconded by the hon. member for Peterborough (Mr. Turner), that a humble address be presented to the Honourable W. Ross Macdonald, Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Ontario.

May it please Your Honour:

We, Her Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects of the legislative assembly of the Province of Ontario now assembled, beg leave to thank Your Honour for the gracious speech which Your Honour has addressed to us.

Mr. Speaker, I thought I would never come to the point when I would have the opportunity of telling you how very reassuring it is to have you with us on that great Speaker's dais, comfortably ensconced in that fine, historic old throne, conducting the business of this House with your usual wit and humour. I believe that I speak for all members of this House when I say that we have the utmost respect for the excellence and fairness of your rulings—even when we don't like them!

Mr. Drea: Even the member from Owen Sound.

Mrs. Scrivener: At this point I would also like to compliment several members upon their recent appointments to new positions of responsibility. I refer to the hon. Treasurer and Minister of Economics and Intergovernmental Affairs (Mr. White), the hon. Minister of Industry and Tourism (Mr. Bennett), and parliamentary assistant to the Premier with responsibility for energy resources (Mr. McKeough).

Mr. Speaker, as I sat listening to the Speech from the Throne on Tuesday, I could not help but think that a government capable of the imagination, flexibility and leadership as revealed in this address is a strong and skilful government, and one which is serving its people very well.

The comments contained in this speech, and the promises and indications for future legislation, are ample evidence that the government has clearly prepared itself wisely and efficiently, has anticipated the needs of its electorate with considerable skill, and once again has demonstrated its ability to be responsive to the people of Ontario.

Many progressive ideas are outlined in this address, ideas programmed to increase the amenities of life in this province. It is all very well for critics to say that the government has not gone far enough, but the realities of the times insist that the measures taken must be realistic and the objectives attainable.

It is interesting to note the very different approach to meeting the needs of people taken by this government, compared with the arrogance of the federal Liberal Party, for instance, or the high-tax syndrome and "government-do-everything" attitude prevail-ent among the NDP provincial governments in western Canada.

Mr. L. C. Henderson (Lambton): Shame, shame.

An hon. member: Truer words were never spoken.

Mrs. Scrivener: In Ontario we expect government to give leadership, and this is being done—through provincial action in connection with the book publishing industry, in the restructuring of the government administration and, as announced by the Provincial Secretary for Resources Development (Mr. Lawrence), by the prompt action to save the endangered shorelines of our lower Great Lakes from high water levels.

However, the most important single item from my point of view is the fact that organized development as an expression of an emerging land-use policy is the recurrent theme. The speech is heavily laden with a number of matters associated with the environment. I am aware that these too are reflections of long-range programmes which have taken a considerable period of time to develop to their present position and which, when integrated into a major programme now developing, will become part of a total land-use policy which is soundly based on first principles.

Take, for instance, the subject of regional government east and west of Metropolitan Toronto. Much has been said and written about regional government and certainly I have been one of the contributors to the debate, associated as I was with Metropolitan Toronto's regional government over such a long period of time.

I would remind you that political scientists throughout the world consider that Metro Toronto has an eminently workable system and have come here from nearly every civilized country to study its structure and method of operation. And, Mr. Speaker, I would further remind you that the Metro form of government has been highly successful in its accomplishment, permitting as it does local municipalities to maintain their identity and autonomy while settling regional problems on a joint basis in the Metro partnership.

Therefore, consolidation of the regional government system in the more densely urbanized areas will certainly be a means of providing greater flexibility at the local government level, as well as a more effective means of planning, particularly as it applies to the control and use of land.

The speech indicates that the division of planning and administrative responsibilities as between the government and the municipalities has been more clearly defined than ever before. Furthermore, as the land-use policies emerge, it becomes obvious that implementation of those policies will be accomplished more effectively through the instrument of regional government.

Without a strong regional government system in southern Ontario, it would be very much more difficult to implement important planning proposals. Regional governments as the instrument of organization and administration for the urban areas and their surround, in combination with the existing "Baldwin" structure of local municipalities within their county system, should provide the elements of stability and harmony so necessary for the growth and development of tomorrow's Ontario.

The government's interest, as expressed in this Speech from the Throne, is clearly focussed on the major issues of provincial land use, on the designation of urban areas, the preservation of metropolitan greenbelts, the conservation of agricultural lands, recreational lands, wilderness areas and forests, and on ways and means of improving the urban environment.

These are mighty goals, Mr. Speaker, goals which can be achieved only through great foresight, great struggle, and great doses of that leavening agent, understanding. Yet, these goals are basic to Ontario's future development and any government which could ignore their importance in the general scheme of things would be unworthy of its electorate. This government knows and understands its role fully, Mr. Speaker. The Speech from the Throne is ample testimony.

It is my interpretation, Mr. Speaker, that the government's proposals will not only give direction but also provide a common framework for planning to the various ministries of government and to the new regional municipalities alike. This is a major step toward reconciling the conflicts which have existed between provincial and municipal planning goals in the changing scene.

By clarifying important components and the intent of Design for Development, and by declaring the provincial interest in major aspects of land use and environmental planning, I believe that the government is also indicating the planning competence of the municipalities to determine, within the broad and reasonable guidelines necessary and appropriate to a large government, the quality and character of their own communities.

The speech also recognized the need, and promises public involvement in the planning process. In this regard I am sure there will be considerable applause for the decision to review the Planning Act and other Acts related to land development.

At this point, Mr. Speaker, I would like to interject a note about the concern I have for our present limited, computerized information resources. It is well known that one of the important elements of planning and land-use studies is adequate information, information which is usually acquired over a period of time and stored in a data bank.

I would like to see our facilities in this regard considerably broadened, Mr. Speaker. In addition, I would recommend that this government consider the incorporation in its next Throne Speech of an announcement that it will conduct a social census and will survey the province on a five-year basis.

Conservationists, hikers, skiers and many, many others will be pleased, as I was, to learn that protective legislation governing the Niagara Escarpment is to be introduced and that overall planning and administration for this great provincial natural resource will be the responsibility of a Niagara Escarpment commission.

Long years ago I sat as a director of the Conservation Council of Ontario and participated in discussions on how best the escarpment could be preserved for the future. Since then, many people and organizations have associated themselves with examinations and recommendations concerning the escarpment. Slowly the attitudes and interests have been formed to the point that now most people understand its importance and are willing to have the necessary money spent to acquire land crucial to its protection.

Those who have deplored the developmental pressures on choice farmland, such as that contained in our precious fruit belt, will certainly be heartened to discover that this government is seeking new means involving land-use controls where agricultural lands are concerned, so that good farmland may be retained for agricultural purposes. In this same connection, recommendations contained in the interim report of the select committee on land drainage will be implemented through new legislation.

The whole matter of energy resources is attracting considerable attention, not only in this province but throughout Canada. We know that at present Ontario's needs and resources are being carefully examined. Therefore, it is of some significance that we learn in the Speech from the Throne that "new policy initiatives establishing agencies for energy may be expected as well as changes in the role and place of the Hydro Electric Power Commission of Ontario."

This significance is further heightened by the information that new legislation will provide for the establishment of a permanent agency for environmental protection. This agency will fill a much needed role in today's society and will be responsible for the assessment and evaluation of the impact upon the environment of various governmental undertakings and comparable activities in the private sector. Since this is the government which created the Ontario Water Resources Commission and the conservation authority system, both of them unique concepts in advance of the times, it is refreshing to realize that this new agency will be another government first in its manner of dealing with threats to the environment.

Of special interest to large urban areas and especially Metro Toronto, will be the recommendation contained in the report of the task force on solid waste. The government has indicated its intention to introduce new legislation based on these recommendations. Also, it has declared its intention to clean up the Ontario landscape by providing for the removal of derelict motor vehicles, principally cars.

People who object to excessive noise and resent its intrusion upon their right to peaceful enjoyment of their homes will applaud the government decision to institute a noise abatement programme in connection with the municipalities. This is of particular interest to me, since hon. members will recall that during the closing session of the House last December I introduced private member's public bill No. 231 intitled, An Act to establish a Noise Research Bureau.

Since I have the honour to be the first chairman of the noise control group in the Institute of Environmental Sciences and Engineering at the University of Toronto, a group composed of many talented persons contributing their special knowledge and talent to the problem of noise abatement, it seems to me that it would be desirable to provide information and inform the public about methods of noise control.

This government has also expressed its intention to engage in such needed but diverse activities as the introduction of a programme of forest management, the restoration and maintenance of buildings of historic significance—I think members of the Architectural Conservatory of Ontario will be pleased about that—and the improvement of airport and aviation facilities in northern Ontario.

The government has declared that it will develop an intermediate-capacity transit system. This is a subject which I'm sure will be of continuing interest and one which we will continue to hear discussed in future Throne Speeches as the programme develops in the years ahead. Again, this subject holds some special interest for me, Mr. Speaker, since you will doubtless recall that last June I debated with some hon. members second reading of my private member's public bill No. 35, An Act to Provide the Establishment of Regional Transportation Authorities in Ontario.

Since that time, Mr. Speaker, it has been gratifying to hear the Premier of Ontario (Mr. Davis) refer to the need for transportation authorities during his policy statement on urban transportation needs in Ontario at the Science Centre late last November, and also to learn that the provincial government has commissioned a study entitled "Transportation Organizational Alternatives," to consider the feasibility of establishing a regional transportation authority for Metro Toronto.

I mention this bill and the events subsequent to its introduction, Mr. Speaker, in order to demonstrate to the hon. members of this House that we have a government which listens to its elected representatives and isn't afraid to endorse their ideas.

Not only is it a government which listens to people, it is also a government which is interested in opening up opportunities for people to do things themselves. Therefore, it is not surprising to learn from the Throne Speech of the importance it places upon the fact that next November the province will be host to the international conference being sponsored by the Canadian Council of Resource and Environment Ministers. Many citizens of Ontario are involved in preparation for this conference now.

Mr. R. F. Nixon (Leader of the Opposition): Not a single front bench member is listening.

Hon. L. Bernier (Minister of Natural Resources): Oh yes they are!

Mrs. Scrivener: Since I am a member of the Ontario Advisory Task Force on Housing Policy, I was interested in the comments contained in the speech—

Mr. Drea: Good party?

Mr. R. F. Nixon: I was at a meeting.

Mrs. Scrivener:—concerning the structuring of new housing programmes. A number of worthwhile proposals have been presented to the task force during its public hearings, and I haven't a doubt that some of these will be incorporated into the task force report when it is prepared.

Mr. Speaker, the Speech from the Throne reveals that community health centres are being considered by the Ontario Council of Health in conjunction with other health services, in order to "provide a strong blueprint for future policy."

As the member for St. David and the representative of a constituency which is considerably underserved in terms of its medical needs in the downtown area, I am pleased to learn of this intention. The government of Ontario has agreed to finance the establishment of the Regent Park health centre in St. David, which will be operated and used by local residents; and it is expected that this project will open its doors later this year.

However, since populations adjacent to Dixon Hall on Sumach St. and in the Carlton-Parliament area have a considerable requirement, designation of another centre is imperative. Further, it would help reduce the present high death rate, which is 1½ times greater than the average across the whole of the city.

I believe the community health centre concept is a practical means of taking medical services into the community, and I hope that ultimately funds may be made available for many more units throughout the province.

On a more personal note, Mr. Speaker, there is a small comment I would like to add concerning the Throne Speech as it relates to my riding of St. David. The speech places a heavy emphasis on matters relating to the environment, transportation and housing—

Mr. I. Deans (Wentworth): Housing?

Mrs. Scrivener:—and future governmental studies and decisions—

Mr. Deans: The member has the nerve to say that after the minister's statement today?

Mrs. Scrivener: —concerned with these matters will also have a considerable impact upon problems of a similar nature affecting the people of the riding.

As you may know, St. David stretches from the lakefront and the harbour headland north to Davisville Ave., and it straddles the Don River for more than half that distance. Pollution of this river has had a negative impact upon the riding for a very long time. However, now that the Metro Toronto Conservation Authority is creating a lake on the west branch of the Don, perhaps "downstream" residents located in St. David can hope for some improvement in the quality of the lower river.

The riding features some very attractive, historic buildings such as Little Trinity Church, the Enoch Turner school and the Gooderham & Worts' distillery. It is reassuring to know that funds may be made available for the restoration and maintenance of such important and historic buildings.

Canada's oldest public housing project was mentioned earlier today during the question period in the House, and I refer to Regent Park. It is located in the southerly portion of the riding, and I am confident that the leadership which has been displayed by its residents through the preparation and presentation of the Regent Park tenants' brief to the housing task force will lead the way for new thought in connection with this vital area.

Cabbagetown, and the remnants of the old town of York, which nestled around the marshy mouth of the Don River, have a number of dwellings which provide housing for a substantial population of roomers. A report prepared and written by area residents Mary McMaster and Norma Browne, who is editor of the ward 7 newspaper "Seven News," presents a very clear picture of the plight of roomers in downtown Toronto and has also been submitted to the housing task force.

Throughout the riding, residents will herald the municipal noise abatement programme with joy. Major thoroughfares such as the Gardiner Expressway, the Don Valley Parkway, Eastern Ave., and Parliament, Yonge and Bloor Sts. all generate very heavy traffic; the noise is excessive at any time, and on a warm evening when bedroom windows are open, noise is a very considerable disturbance.

Mr. Speaker, the Speech from the Throne is stimulating and exciting, and an excellent portent for the future. I predict that the coming session will be very interesting, and I am certainly proud to be a member of a government capable of providing the calibre of leadership so obviously demonstrated in this address.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: They like it in St. David but they didn't like it in St. George.

Mrs. Scrivener: To conclude, Mr. Speaker, for all of these reasons I am honoured and pleased to move the adoption of the Speech from the Throne, and I would say to all hon. members that those who vote against this speech are in a very real way voting against the best interests of the people of Ontario.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Peterborough.

Mr. Drea: Come on, let it rip.

Mr. J. M. Turner (Peterborough): Well, Mr. Speaker—

Mr. J. A. Renwick (Riverdale): This is enough to keep Walter from coming back.

Mr. Turner: Who? Walter who?

Mr. Deans: Yes, who?

Mr. Turner: I am very deeply aware of the honour and privilege that has been extended to me in this opportunity to second the motion of my hon. colleague, the member for St. David (Mrs. Scrivener), for the adoption of the Speech from the Throne presented by the Lieutenant Governor of Ontario.

The people of this province are indeed fortunate that His Honour continues to display his deep concern and abiding interest in their future well-being.

Mr. Speaker, in my opinion this particular speech from the Throne was probably one of the most inspiring and most imaginative and most visionary that this House has been privileged to hear.

Mr. Deans: This is most repetitive.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Who wrote that? There's no way that these compliments will get the member into the cabinet.

Mr. Turner: I need hardly say that I heartily disagree with the occasional vapid editorializing over its meaning and direction.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: I thought the Globe editorialized.

Mr. Turner: To me, its meaning is clear to anyone who can see and hear, and its direction is new, exciting and challenging.

Mr. Deans: Is the member not embarrassed to say that?

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Turner: Give me time.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Turner: Not really.

An hon. member: You will learn something.

Mr. Turner: We are just gathering steam.

New, because to my mind it signals a shifting of overall responsibilities and priorities; exciting and challenging because of all that that entails. A good many years ago this government properly anticipated the burgeoning demand for educational facilities brought about by the postwar population explosion. In the intervening years we have built the broadest and best educational system in the world, from the elementary to the post-secondary and post-graduate levels. A few years ago this government embarked on a programme of universal health care which is the envy of people everywhere.

Mr. Deans: He will confess that there was a degree of reluctance?

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Doesn't he feel any shame at all?

Mr. Turner: These were the major priorities of the Fifties and Sixties, Mr. Speaker. They will continue to involve the most earnest attention of this government in the future, but the basic challenges have been met and successfully overcome. It is time now to turn our creative talents and abilities to other pressing problems faced by our society. This Speech from the Throne heralds our willingness to meet and resolve these problems.

Further evidence of this government's ability to provide effective solutions to the staggering complexities of modern living is contained in the early paragraphs of His Honour's speech. The remarkable success of the province's measures to combat the economic malaise of the past years demonstrates statistically the futility of the federal government's solution to the same problem.

The simple fact that Ontario is the only region in Canada to experience a decline in unemployment in the past year in spite of a rapidly growing labour force demonstrates clearly that Ottawa's determination to spend its way out of crises just will not work. Moreover, they do it by using expanding revenues which should more properly and equitably be distributed to the provinces rather than squandered on ill-conceived short-term schemes.

Mr. Speaker, we told them it wouldn't work and it hasn't worked.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: This government found $300 million it didn't even know it had.

Mr. Turner: Ontario's budgetary deficits are the price we pay for Ottawa's fiscal mismanagement.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Mr. Stanfield is going to support them though.

Mr. Deans: How about the corporate rip-off?

Mr. Turner: The member can tell me.

Mr. Deans: Let him tell us about his position on that.

Mr. Turner: I think it is fair, Mr. Speaker, to say that the major thrust of the Throne Speech is our government's determination to come to grips with the issues of ecological and environmental protection in the general public interest. While measures designed to preserve the historic and ecological integrity of the Niagara Escarpment and the establishment of the parkway belt system do not directly affect my constituents, the concept of land-use control is vital to the residents of Peterborough, both county and city.

As most of the members are aware, Mr. Speaker, Peterborough riding is made up of a rural and an urban area, consisting of a northern portion which is divided from the southern portion by the Canadian Shield, or part of the Canadian Shield. The northern part probably has some of the finest recreational and tourist areas not only in Ontario but possibly in Canada. The southern part of this riding of Peterborough is made up of rolling agricultural farm land in the midst of which is situated the city of Peterborough. The rugged northern natural vacation land is designated in the Toronto-centred region plan as a recreational area and serves, as I said before, all of Ontario as a tourist area.

These three distinct areas have unique planning priorities and considerations, and each must have a high proportion of local participation in the planning process. I am heartened therefore, as is my colleague from St. David, that the major review of the Planning Act and related statutes will encourage and facilitate this local initiative. The protection of prime agricultural land from ill-considered development through land-use controls is an ideal to which everyone will subscribe in principle.

Mr. F. Young (Yorkview): That is not what the Tories are saying in British Columbia right now.

Mr. Turner: However, because of the delicate balance between the common good and individual rights, its successful realization demands the fullest citizen consultation and co-operation in the farm community. I single out the farm community particularly because in the rural areas of Ontario land-use planning is of major importance and of major concern. As is well known to you, Mr. Speaker, people operating farms look on the sale of that farm land as being their future retirement fund and this government must be very careful not to trample on the rights of individual citizens over the disposal of their land.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: I hope they listen to that as well as all those compliments.

Mr. Young: They can have it both ways, eh?

Mr. Turner: I hope so. Mr. Speaker, I would be remiss in my duty and responsibility to my constituents if, given this opportunity, I did not urge this government to act as quickly as possible on the recommendations of the Canada-Ontario-Rideau-Trent-Severn study. The Trent canal system, a significant portion of which lies within my riding, is an invaluable recreational water route from Georgian Bay to Lake Ontario. It is a unique resource of great potential which must be preserved. I am not speaking here only of the lakes and rivers that form this Trent canal system but, more importantly perhaps, of the land abutting the system. There is a clear and imminent possibility that within a short time much of this land, if indeed not all of it, will be controlled by the private sector. If public access to the water is to be secured and controlled, action must be taken now.

I endorse the concept of strengthened local governments and welcome the proposal to transfer broader authority and responsibility to them. The restructuring of local government in Peterborough, and I speak here of both the city and the county, can and should be initiated at the local level. There is indeed plenty of time during which this process can be encouraged and developed, since this government is not at this particular time considering any plan for the introduction of any form of regional government in the Peterborough area.

I am gratified to learn of the government's initiatives in the field of noise abatement. It is a matter of vital concern to everyone, if perhaps more directly to the urban residents. Of particular concern to me, Mr. Speaker, and I would like to emphasize this, is the effect of the high decibel levels on workers inside manufacturing and industrial buildings. The increasing incidence of industrial deafness is an alarming public health problem. While present solutions, involving ear muffs and plugs, in the short term perhaps are effective, I think they should be regarded as a strictly temporary measure. We require more efficient methods of muffling and silencing industrial machinery.

I would just like, if I may, to take a minute to point out to you, Mr. Speaker, that 80 decibels apparently are what is regarded as a noise factor. Also, this magic number of 80 decibels is the beginning of permanent hearing damage. I think that we in this government must take cognizance of this fact and take the steps required to bring about more efficient and quieter-operating machinery.

As a member of the select committee on the Ontario Municipal Board I am encouraged by the undertaking to make the institution a more effective vehicle. I would hope that this government would adopt those recommendations of the committee, the aim of which is to return more authority to the municipal level. I know that it is a matter of great concern to municipal officials and to do so would not seem to be inconsistent with the present policy.

Another area of concern to me, Mr. Speaker, is the proposed Livestock Medicines Act which will be awaited with considerable anxiety and anticipation by the farmers, not only in my riding but in the whole of the province. Very real concern has been expressed to me during meetings I have attended in the farm communities in my area.

The hon. member for St. David has quite properly hailed the urban transportation policy announced last November and for which plans are now proceeding. I, too, commend the principle and envision its considerable impact on the problems of urban congestion. Although there is still a dinosaur element in this House which does not yet see the light, the automobile is not a reasonable or rational solution to the movement of people within cities. Indeed, Mr. Speaker, for many of the same reasons it is becoming a less credible mode of intercity movement. In my view, we must consider fast and alternative means of interurban transit of goods and services as well as people.

I congratulate the government for proposing adjustments of benefits under the Workmen's Compensation Act. There is no doubt that this is an area of great concern to many people in this province, and I hope that the changes will occur without undue delay.

I would also congratulate the government in general, and the Ontario Housing Corp. in particular, for its excellent building and development programme, not only in Peterborough but throughout the province, and we look forward to a continuing spirit of co-operation. I hear so much criticism of this agency, of the minister and of the ministry, Mr. Speaker, that I feel it is incumbent on me to extend to them my heartiest thanks. During 1972 construction was commenced on 221 units in the city of Peterborough.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Was that land bought from the member's predecessor?

Mr. Turner: From Walter?

Mr. Speaker, I said at the beginning of this speech that the Speech from the Throne was visionary. The courageous initiatives in the field of environmental protection, land-use control, alleviation of urban congestion and strengthening of local institutions; in short, measures to improve and protect the quality of life in our province are designed to benefit not only our generation but many generations yet to come. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Statements by the ministry.

SOLANDT COMMISSION

Hon. A. B. R. Lawrence (Provincial Secretary for Resources Development): Mr. Speaker, I would like to inform the House that the duties of Dr. O. M. Solandt, chairman of the commission which was established by the government of Ontario in June, 1972, to inquire into the routing of transmission lines from Nanticoke to Pickering, have been extended by order in council to include inquiry in like manner into the routing of transmission lines between Ontario Hydro's Lennox generating station and the proposed Oshawa area transformer station. The study will include consideration of transmission line connections to the proposed power plants at Wesleyville and Bowmanville, and so will cover the entire area from Napanee to Oshawa.

The terms of reference note that particular attention will be given to social, environmental and economic factors.

As with the proposed transmission of power from Nanticoke to Pickering, the Lennox to Oshawa connection involves the siting of the 500 kv transmission lines that will supply the increasing growth of electrical power requirements in the southern areas of the province over the next decades.

In an interim report of Oct. 31, 1972, following on the commission's public inquiry into the proposed routings for the Nanticoke to Pickering transmission line, Dr. Solandt recommended that a full environmental study involving public participation was necessary to determine the best routing for this line. This study is being undertaken by Mr. Bruce Howlett, environmental consultant, through his Toronto company, BHI Ltd. Area inventories are under way and the second series of regional open meetings to encourage area public participation are being held for four outlying regions this week.

In the spirit of these recommendations, Ontario Hydro independently retained the environmental consulting firm of Commonwealth Associates Inc. in October, 1972, to do a similar detailed siting study of the proposed 500 kv line from the Napanee area to Oshawa. This line will convey power to the Toronto area load centre from the existing Lennox generating station and the proposed stations at Wesleyville and Bowmanville.

This study is being undertaken with the assistance of Ontario Hydro and every effort is being made to include the citizens of the area in each phase of the study, so that local plans and priorities may be given full consideration. Initial public meetings have already been held with a number of municipal officials and citizens.

Ontario Hydro proposes to have a report ready by the late summer of this year based on these studies. This report will then be submitted publicly to the Solandt commission. At that time Dr. Solandt will invite submissions on the report and hold public hearings under the terms of the Public Inquiries Act, so that full opportunity may be given to all interested individuals and organizations to make their views known to the commission.

Mr. Speaker, I warmly endorse the study being undertaken by Ontario Hydro and Commonwealth Associates Inc., and particularly the opportunities for public contribution. The open, full and continuing co-operation of all parties throughout the course of the study is to be highly commended.

It is to be hoped and expected that the main discussion concerning details of choosing the best route will take place at the informal sessions being held locally during the study by Ontario Hydro and Commonwealth Associates, so that only unresolved difficulties need be raised at the formal commission hearings.

PUBLIC HOUSING RENTS

Hon. A. Grossman (Minister of Revenue): Mr. Speaker, a number of questions were asked by hon. members in regard to the recent increase in the combined old age security and maximum guaranteed income supplement payments and how this may affect recipients living in Ontario Housing Corp. senior citizen dwellings.

Because of the confusion surrounding this matter, created essentially I must say by the unclear observations made at the federal level, I would like to make the following statement.

Mr. R. F. Nixon (Leader of the Opposition): That will clear it up.

Mr. V. M. Singer (Downsview): Yes sir, clear it now!

Hon. Mr. Grossman: By way of background, Mr. Speaker, I would point out that on May 19, 1972, Ontario Housing Corp. wrote to Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. pointing out that a task force within OHC had been discussing rental scales with tenants and housing authority members. The letter requested a meeting to consider some of the points that arose during the task force discussions. Again, on July 8, 1972, OHC requested a meeting, but to date no meeting has been held.

In February, 1973, the federal minister responsible for housing made certain public statements in regard to senior citizen rentals as a result of which Ontario Housing Corp. wrote on March 1, this year, asking for clarification of these remarks so that our housing authorities could be informed.

Mr. Speaker, under our agreement with CMHC all increases in income, apart from those exemptions under the rent scale, must be included for the purpose of calculating rent. On March 15, I sent a telegram to the hon. Ron Basford, Minister of State for Urban Affairs which said, in part:

DURING THE RECENT FEDERAL-PROVINCIAL-CONFERENCE ON HOUSING, I MADE THE POINT THERE SHOULD BE NO UNILATERAL CHANGES IN THE NATIONAL RENT-GEARED-

TO-INCOME SCALE WITHOUT PRIOR CONSULTATIONS WITH THE PROVINCES AND THEIR MUNICIPALITIES WHO PAY HALF OF THE SUBSIDIES. THERE WERE RECENT ANNOUNCEMENTS ALLEGED TO HAVE BEEN MADE BY YOU TO THE EFFECT THERE WOULD BE NO INCREASES IN SENIOR CITIZEN RENTS IN LIGHT OF RECENT PENSION INCREASES IN ACCOMMODATION WHERE THERE WAS FEDERAL GOVERNMENT INVOLVEMENT. OHC, FOR WHICH I AM RESPONSIBLE, WROTE YOUR STAFF ON MARCH 1, 1973, FOR CLARIFICATION AND HAVE NOT RECEIVED AN ANSWER IN THIS REGARD. METRO TORONTO HOUSING CORPORATION TODAY ANNOUNCED IT WILL INCREASE RENTS FOR SENIOR CITIZENS. IN LIGHT OF THE CONFUSION CREATED BY YOUR STATEMENT, IT MAKES IT DIFFICULT FOR OHC TO NOTIFY OUR HOUSING AUTHORITIES AND DISTRICT MANAGERS THROUGHOUT THE PROVINCE AS TO WHAT ACTION THEY SHOULD BE TAKING IN REGARD TO THE RENEWAL OF ONGOING LEASES WITH SENIOR CITIZENS.

I AM QUITE SURE YOU ARE AWARE THE RENTAL SCALE BEING USED FOR SENIOR CITIZENS IS THE SCALE ORIGINALLY DESIGNED FOR FAMILIES. IN FACT THERE HAS NEVER BEEN A SPECIFIC RENTAL SCALE FOR SENIOR CITIZENS.

THEREFORE, I WOULD STRONGLY URGE A DELAY IN APPLYING THE PRESENT SCALE FOR SENIOR CITIZENS DURING WHICH TIME A SPECIAL NATIONAL SCALE FOR SENIOR CITIZENS CAN BE DEvised. THIS SHOULD BE DONE IN CONSULTATION WITH THE PROVINCES.

On March 19 I received a letter from Mr. Basford which called upon the provinces to do what, in effect, Ontario had already decided to do; that is not consider the pension increases for the purpose of rent.

He suggested further that this should apply "until March 1, 1974, or an earlier date if our respective staffs have by then completed a study of the rent scale as it relates to senior citizens and the recommendations are acceptable to both of us."

On March 22 I again wrote Mr. Basford confirming Ontario's decision and suggesting a speedy resolution of the new scale. I suggested September or October of this year would be a more reasonable target date for this task than would March 1, 1974.

NON-PAYMENT OF TRAFFIC FINES

Hon. D. A. Bales (Attorney General): Mr. Speaker, I wish to announce on behalf of my colleague, the Minister of Transportation and Communications (Mr. Carton), and myself, that Bill 212, An Act to amend the Highway Traffic Act, will come into force on Monday, April 2, 1973, by proclamation.

This amending Act adds a new section to the Highway Traffic Act providing for the possible suspension of the drivers' licences of motorists who are in default of payment of fines incurred as a result of convictions under the Highway Traffic Act, the Public Vehicles Act and the Public Commercial Vehicles Act or any regulations coming under these Acts. The Act does not apply to parking violations covered by municipal bylaws.

The present method of assuring payment of outstanding fines has become increasingly less effective in recent years. Unpaid fines levied by the provincial courts are today approximately $13 million, compared with $3.4 million in 1968, and the bulk of this relates to fines levied under the above Acts.

It is our estimate that there are now some 100,000 Ontario motorists who have avoided payment of fines levied under these Acts. To leave this situation uncorrected would be a disservice to Ontario's 3.6 million motorists.

Motorists convicted of violations on or after April 2 will be given or sent a notice showing the amount of the fine to be paid, the court to which the remittance must be made and the deadline for payment. Motorists convicted prior to April 2 who have failed to pay their fines will be sent a reminder notice containing the same information. These notices will go by first-class mail to the motorist's address as listed in the drivers' file at the Ministry of Transportation and Communications. Failure to pay the fine may result in a court order to suspend the driver's licence.

A driver's licence, once suspended, will remain suspended and will not be renewed until full payment is made and a court order for reinstatement has been issued.

It is imperative that details of this legislation and regulations become public knowledge as quickly as possible. To do this, advertisements will be appearing in newspapers in Ontario.

It must be understood that these arrears, having accumulated over a number of years, will take some time to eliminate. This legislation will assist us in eliminating the large amount of arrears which has accumulated over the last few years and hopefully will prevent a similar situation from recurring in the future.

Mr. Speaker: Oral questions.

PUBLIC HOUSING RENTS

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, for further clarification of the Minister of Revenue's statement, are we to understand from this that it was the federal government that raised the payments to the senior citizens by way of their pension fund? Secondly, even if the minister at the provincial level were going to make use of those funds—which he said on Friday he had not been able to use—to provide housing on a rent-g geared-to-income basis in the province, it will be possible that they will not have their rents raised; the increase in pension would be nullified under those circumstances?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Mr. Speaker, I am sorry that the hon. Leader of the Opposition has unfortunately added to the confusion by talking about unused funds again. He made the statement the other day in the House, and talked about $80 million or $100 million.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: It was 15.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: I was puzzled where he got that figure. There is no such figure. I'll be making a statement, probably tomorrow, to clarify that situation which has been confused by the hon. Leader of the Opposition.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. D. C. MacDonald (York South): Between the two of them, the members will keep each other busy all the time.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: I didn't say anything about unused funds. It was the Leader of the Opposition and we will clarify that tomorrow.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: All I can do is again assure him that, insofar as the senior citizens are concerned, we have not increased the rents at this time; as we did not indeed the last time there was a pension increase.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. Leader of the Opposition.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: For further clarification: It is the federal government that gives them the extra money and it is the provincial government that decides, with its usual generosity, that it will not raise the rents.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Mr. Speaker, I have pointed out to the hon. member that we have agreements with the federal government in which there is rent geared to income, as soon as the income of a person goes up a portion of that is generally required to be taken in an increase in rent. It doesn't make any difference where the money comes from. The point is that this is the agreement with the federal government and we have been trying now for over a year to get a review of that scale—

Mr. MacDonald: It's the fault of the federal government!

Hon. Mr. Grossman:—and to date it has been impossible to do that. As I pointed out in my statement, the federal minister has now agreed that we should have such a meeting.

Mr. S. Lewis (Scarborough West): Finally!

Hon. Mr. Grossman: He has talked about a year from today and we are trying to encourage him to make it a lot sooner than that so that there won't be the kind of confusion which apparently exists in the opposition ranks.

Interjections by hon. members.

SUNDAY OPENING OF RETAIL STORES

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Premier.

Is he prepared to make a policy statement with regard to the Sunday opening of commercial enterprises—which apparently is becoming a matter of some concern—since one chain of supermarkets remained open in Toronto this past Sunday by way, it appears, of a test of whether the province is prepared to enforce the legislation or whether there is some new policy in the offing?

Hon. W. G. Davis (Premier): Mr. Speaker, the government isn't prepared at this point to make a statement.

There are two matters related, I think. One is the pause day as it is referred to in Mr. McRuer's report; the other is the question of store hours. They are not directly the same, but they are interrelated.

The justice policy field, if memory serves me correctly, met with some representation from a group, I think from the industry itself, from the Federation of Labour and others not too many weeks ago. It is a very complex matter and one on which we hope to come up with some policy suggestion. I would expect, Mr. Speaker, we will be in a position to do this, hopefully, in two or three weeks.

As I pointed out to the Leader of the Opposition, I think it probably relates both to Sunday observance and to the question of store closing hours. As I say, it is complex. We would like to find some better solutions to it and hopefully within that period of time we shall have some policy suggestions to make.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: A supplementary, Mr. Speaker: In the meantime, what instructions are being given to the various police forces as far as the enforcement of the present law is concerned?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I personally haven't instructed the police forces. Perhaps the Leader of the Opposition might like to redirect that to the Solicitor General or the Attorney General.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, with your permission, I would do so.

I would ask the Solicitor General what instructions are being given to the police forces?

Hon. J. Yaremko (Solicitor General): No specific instructions, Mr. Speaker. I am not aware of any specific instructions one way or the other. It is just that the law is there to be enforced.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: A question, then, of the Attorney General: What steps would he see necessary in order to enforce the legislation since a large number of stores are staying open, apparently in contravention of the law of Ontario?

An hon. member: Of the Lord's Day Act.

Hon. Mr. Bales: Mr. Speaker, this comes under the provisions of the Lord's Day Act. The charges are laid; they come to me for consent to prosecute for violations on Sundays. I have been consenting to those requests for prosecution.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: A supplementary: The request must come from the police or citizen in that case, and no initiative is taken by the Attorney General through the police to control this matter which is beginning, apparently, to mushroom in contravention of the law?

Hon. Mr. Bales: It's done through the police. Sometimes complaints are made to police. Sometimes police lay charges themselves. When it is a matter of a prosecution for an offence on a Sunday, they must come to me for consent. I have been consenting to those matters. For example, in relation to driving trucks on the highways on Sundays, store openings, et cetera, they have been submitted to me regularly and I've dealt with them in that way.

Mr. Singer: Mr. Speaker, by way of supplementary, could the Attorney General advise us if the incidence of requests to him for consent to prosecute has increased materially in the last three months? Perhaps he has some figures that would indicate it.

Secondly, can the Attorney General advise us whether or not he is consenting to all requests to prosecute or is his consent a selective process?

Hon. Mr. Bales: I don't have any figures before me at the present time. I'd be glad to get them for the member.

It isn't an automatic consent, but a very large percentage of applications or requests to me is consented to. I can think of very few that have not been consented to of late, but I go over each one independently.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Riverdale.

Mr. J. A. Renwick (Riverdale): By way of a supplementary question, doesn't the minister think that when there's a deliberate plan to violate a statute in force in the Province of Ontario that the minister is obligated to take some initiative in connection with those violations?

Hon. Mr. Bales: Mr. Speaker, the initiative is really taken through the police forces. I agree with the member on that, and I'm attempting to assist them in that regard.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. Leader of the Opposition.

KINGSTON PENITENTIARY RIOTS

Mr. R. F. Nixon: A further question of the Attorney General: Now that the official report on the riots in the Kingston Penitentiary has been made available, does the Attorney General contemplate any further changes based on the findings of the report?

Hon. Mr. Bales: Mr. Speaker, that involved the federal government as well as ourselves. The matter is being studied.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: A supplementary: In the case of the original charges laid against certain prison guards, if my memory serves me correctly the Attorney General acted alone in laying those charges, and it was considered at that time his sole responsibility so to do. Would not the same application be correct now?

Hon. Mr. Bales: Maybe, but I think there should be co-operation between the federal government and ourselves on these things by way of consultation.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Scarborough West.

METRO HOUSING SHORTAGE

Mr. Lewis: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. A question of the Minister of Revenue: Would he be kind enough to name for the Legislature those ratepayers' groups and those specific projects, which he referred to both inside and outside of the House on Friday, which had managed to prevent the construction of between 1,000 and 1,500 units of geared-to-income housing in Toronto?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: The area residents, whether they are in organized groups or otherwise, sir, will be named. I will name the projects which have had to be postponed or cancelled, as the hon member opposite has asked. We've been asked, as a matter of fact, by some other outside group and by the press. I think I gave them a statement this afternoon. They're asking for the list, so I'm just hoping I'll be able to get them to the House before they're published. We haven't finalized them yet. I'll be glad to give that information.

Mr. Lewis: By way of supplementary, does the minister have any instances which come readily to mind, so we're not pre-empted by press stories of projects which were stopped either at the council level, or by citizen obstruction as he called it?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: A number of them come to mind, Mr. Speaker, but I don't see that any purpose is served. I will give a complete statement in the House and members will have the whole picture.

Mr. Lewis: By way of supplementary, when does the minister intend to do that?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Oh, perhaps tomorrow, Wednesday or Thursday—sometime this week.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: A supplementary: Would the minister tell the House if those 1,500 units which were not built had, in fact, been funded previously by vote of the Legislature or by funds made available to the housing corporation?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Oh, indeed they have.

Mr. J. E. Bullbrook (Sarnia): Were they unused funds?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: They were—

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Scarborough West.

Hon. Mr. Grossman:—funds which were not used for those particular allocations.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: They're not used yet?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: They were not used for public housing.

Mr. Bullbrook: Unused funds; right?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please! The hon. minister is attempting to answer a question which was an interjection and was not proper.

Mr. Bullbrook: Certainly!

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Scarborough West.

Mr. M. Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): I'd like to ask a supplementary question: Would the minister also table the projects and the number of units which were offered by builders under the proposal call system and which were rejected by OHC, in order that we can put this into perspective?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: I thought that was the original question of his leader and I offered to do that. Is that any different from the question that he asked?

Mr. Cassidy: By way of supplementary, Mr. Speaker, I'm seeking the proposals which were rejected by OHC and not turned down by ratepayer groups. Would the minister also table those with the number of units involved?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: What I am concerned with, Mr. Speaker, is if there is a difference between the information which the hon. member has asked for and the information which his leader has asked for. I can't distinguish any. If there is, I'd like to know, so I'm not misleading the House. It seems as if he's asking for the same thing.

Mr. Lewis: By way of supplementary, there is a difference, which may have escaped the minister, between those houses the building of which is prevented by ratepayers' groups and the building of which is prevented by OHC. We are now asking for different pieces of information: First, the proposals which were prevented from completion by the intervention of ratepayers' groups and city councils; second, those proposals from builders which were rejected by the Ontario Housing Corp. itself.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: I don't know that that's important, Mr. Speaker. There is a tremendous number of proposals made, which for various reasons aren't satisfactory. They may not be in conformity with the requirements of OHC; they may indeed not be in conformity with the requirements of the municipality, they may be a proposition which the municipality hasn't asked for. I'll look at that and find out how practical that is.

Mr. Cassidy: By way of a supplementary, Mr. Speaker, is it correct that the minister seems to be saying that perhaps 10,000 or 15,000 or 20,000 units have been turned down by the OHC, however he is turning on ratepayer groups and blaming them for turning down thousands?

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Mr. MacDonald: Good point, though. No wonder the members opposite howl.

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please!

INTEGRATED COMMUNITY HOUSING PROJECT

Mr. Lewis: A question, Mr. Speaker, of the Minister of Revenue: Can he tell us how much money he expects to spend in the extraordinary contribution which he is making to the developers of Ontario in what he calls his integrated community housing project, that one-third of the plan by which the ministry will provide up to 95 per cent by way of mortgage financing? How much does he anticipate spending?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Mr. Speaker, we anticipate spending a portion of whatever we have within the budget of OHC for public housing. Wherever this kind of housing is made available to us, we will spend those funds.

The money in our budget for public housing does not, as far as I can recall from the top of my head, stipulate the kind of housing within the public housing funding that these funds are to go to. So if the hon. member really is asking what we have in the budget for public housing, because within that budget I think—and I stand to be corrected if it is not so—we have the ability to move about from one programme to another so long as it is public housing, if the hon. member is asking what we anticipate, I hope it is a lot more than it appears at the moment.

Mr. Cassidy: That's a pretty confusing answer.

Mr. Lewis: So do the developers. They hope it's a lot more, too.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Well, good!

Mr. Lewis: It's outrageous! It's a gift to the developers.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: I am very glad to hear that they are interested, because the more they are interested the more housing we will be able to put up.

Mr. Lewis: Does the minister realize, by way of supplementary, that what in effect he is saying is that no developer who participates in the plan need place any consequential equity of his own or his company's into the building of housing? Why was it not, therefore, possible to say that 25 per cent of the units will be provided for geared-to-income housing which the Province of Ontario will underwrite, rather than giving all this additional money to the developers? Why was it necessary to do it that way?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Is the hon. member suggesting that it would be an attraction to a builder to accept from us merely a proposition that we will underwrite the rents for 25 per cent of their houses?

Mr. Lewis: If the minister would guarantee 25 per cent of occupancy, of course it would.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Of course not! As a matter of fact, Mr. Speaker, if the hon. member had done his research into the housing programme, he would know that's precisely what we're doing under our rent supplement programme, and we cannot get sufficient of them. I think the last year we had about 1,100 which we were able to get across this province, in which we have practically an open-ended invitation to owners to provide us with accommodation where we could place our tenants. They would be integrated with other people in the rest of the building, so that hopefully people wouldn't recognize those who were subsidized and those who were not. Under our rent supplement programme, we would pay the difference between the required rent, provided it is a reasonable one of course, and what the proposed tenant is able to pay under the rent-geared-to-income programme. That is in existence now, but we haven't had sufficient response because it isn't attractive enough to a builder. He wants to have a certain amount—

Mr. Lewis: He wants to have everything paid by the public purse, and that's what this government is doing!

Hon. Mr. Grossman: That may very well be, but what we want to do is to provide as much housing as we can in practically any way we can do it.

Mr. Lewis: By selling out to the developers!

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order, order! This has developed into argumentative debate.

Mr. Singer: No, I'm not debating. I just want to ask a simple supplementary question.

Mr. Speaker: Does the hon. member for Scarborough West have further questions? If not, the hon. member—

An hon. member: Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Speaker: No further supplementaries! It is an argumentative debate at this point. We are finished with that topic. There will be no further questions on that topic.

Mr. Lewis: I apologize for introducing argument into the debate, Mr. Speaker. May I ask a question of the Minister of Health—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please! The purpose of this period is to elicit information from the ministry, not to debate.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Lewis: Well because the former is impossible, the latter is desirable.

Mr. Speaker: Don't get out of order!

STUDY OF PAYMENTS FOR MEDICAL SERVICES

Mr. Lewis: May I direct a question to the Minister of Health? The committee of the Ontario Council of Health, which was referred to in the Throne Speech to look into questions of medical care insurance, is composed entirely of doctors. Am I not right in that?

Hon. R. T. Potter (Minister of Health): There was a committee established in the Ontario Council of Health—

Mr. Singer: Oh yes, that one!

Mr. R. F. Nixon: He has so many!

Mr. Singer: I remember—a committee to investigate committees!

Hon. Mr. Potter: A task force of the Ontario Council of Health was established of doctors from all over the province and from all the various fields of medicine to recommend changes to us. Their report was submitted to the Ontario Council of Health, which, as the hon. members know, has very few doctors itself. The council, in turn, has submitted its recommendations to me from that report.

Mr. Singer: And that is going to be investigated by another committee!

Hon. Mr. Potter: No, no. But we did have—

Mr. Lewis: He'll just give it to his civil servants to mutilate.

Hon. Mr. Potter: No, no. We did have an internal task force at the same time—

Mr. Singer: A task force?

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Potter: —which the hon. member is very well aware of, and I know the Leader of the Opposition is very well aware of it too. We have now had these reports submitted and we are in the process of reviewing them.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Lewis: By way of supplementary, Mr. Speaker: In view of the public clamour and the political reality for the minister, does he not think that it's a very great distortion to have solely doctors commenting on the medical care insurance plan and the recommendations for its revision, and should he not have opened that to the public?

Hon. Mr. Potter: Mr. Speaker, we have many other people besides doctors commenting on this. This is just one aspect of the study that's going on.

Mr. Lewis: But the minister is acting on those recommendations!

Hon. Mr. Potter: We are acting on all of them.

Mr. Lewis: Did the minister say he is acting on none of them? Was that what he blurted out?

Hon. Mr. Potter: No, I said we were acting on all of them.

Mr. Lewis: By way of supplementary question, where is the report from the Ontario Council of Health? It is, after all, a public body.

Hon. Mr. Potter: I have it, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Lewis: I'm glad to hear that! When does the minister intend to release it?

Hon. Mr. Potter: I will release it just as soon as I have an opportunity to do the proper studies and make a presentation to this House, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Cassidy: Oh come on!

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Lewis: Well, I wouldn't applaud. We didn't win them, but you lost them.

Mr. W. Hodgson (York North): The hon. member should have been here!

Hon. E. A. Winkler (Chairman, Management Board of Cabinet): Is that why he went away?

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, plus ça change.

One last question of the Minister of Health and then, feeling good that everything is the same, I will take my seat.

Mr. P. J. Yakabuski (Renfrew South): The man from Wentworth has a lean and hungry look!

Mr. Speaker: Order!

$55 MILLION ERROR

Mr. Lewis: Is the minister aware that the gentleman who headed the Ontario Hospital Services Commission at the time of the $55 million error, which the Treasurer aptly described as grossly deficient, is now the minister's deputy minister, and how does he feel about it?

Hon. Mr. Potter: I think I have a very efficient deputy minister, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Oh he does!

Hon. J. White (Treasurer, Minister of Inter-governmental Affairs): Mr. Speaker, in that my remarks have been quoted I think perhaps I owe it to the Legislature to provide—

Mr. Singer: Order!

Mr. Speaker: The hon. minister may rise on a point of order or privilege.

Mr. Singer: Order!

Hon. Mr. White: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker, since my name has been mentioned by the leader of the NDP, I would like him to know that my off-the-cuff reply prompted certain information to come to me—

Mr. Singer: Mr. Speaker, that is not a point of order. Call the minister to order. Surely he is not going to get away with that?

Hon. Mr. White: —and I have today initiated an investigation and will be making a statement to the House this week concerning that very substantial sum of money.

Mr. Singer: Ridiculous.

Mr. Speaker: Order! Does the hon. member for Scarborough West have further questions?

Mr. Lewis: I don't think so, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: If not, the hon. member for York-Forest Hill.

Mr. P. G. Givens (York-Forest Hill): Mine is a question designed to elicit information from the Premier.

Hon. Mr. Davis: The member must have taken several weeks preparing it!

PRE-CLEARANCE OF CUSTOMS

Mr. Givens: Does the Premier intend to make representations on behalf of the people of Ontario to the government of Canada and to Air Canada with respect to the vexing question of the imminent cancellation of pre-clearance of customs and immigration, which is a matter of federal jurisdiction which will inconvenience and affect hundreds of thousands of Ontario travellers and will affect our tourist industry?

Mr. Lewis: A burning issue!

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I will be very frank and very specific with the hon. member. I hadn't really thought of this, but it might be a very good idea. I shall certainly consider it.

Mr. Lewis: That was a shining jewel in the otherwise cluttered heap.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for High Park.

LCBO MARKUP ON WINE

Mr. M. Shulman (High Park): A question of the Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations, Mr. Speaker: Will the minister consider breaking one of the traditions of the Liquor Control Board by reducing their punitive markup on wines so as to prevent next week's forecast price rise of up to 125 per cent on certain wines?

Hon. J. T. Clement (Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations): Mr. Speaker, I wish I did have the power to set the price of all alcoholic beverages within this province. I conferred with my people. They advise me that the international money markets right now have required certain studies.

The other matters referred to by the member might all be within the ambit of the Treasurer of this province when it comes to the time of the budget. I read an article in the paper this morning dealing with certain problems relating to increased costs being requested by exporters from foreign markets into this area. I don't think we can turn a blind eye to those increased costs, and it may well require some additional consideration.

Mr. Shulman: A supplementary if I may, Mr. Speaker: Would the minister agree with me that the 109 per cent markup he is now charging is somewhat excessive? And would the minister furthermore agree that he will continue to make the same profit because of the higher prices if he reduces his percentage markup?

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Yakabuski: Buy Canadian, buy Canadian!

Hon. Mr. Clement: I am sorry, I couldn't hear the member's question.

Mr. R. F. Ruston (Essex-Kent): The minister didn't miss anything.

Mr. Speaker: Order.

Mr. MacDonald: The minister's own colleagues are so noisy.

Mr. Shulman: They have been imbibing too much of it, Mr. Speaker.

Would the minister agree with me that a 109 per cent markup is excessive? Secondly, would he not also agree that he would make exactly the same profit by reducing his percentage, because of the increased price of the wines? If he is buying a wine for $5 that he bought before for $2 and he has a 50 per cent mark up he will get the same profit.

Hon. Mr. Clement: I do not agree with the hon. member that it is excessive. I agree to this extent that I think it is high. I am also not blind to the fact that we have domestic wines made within this province and we cannot lose sight of that industry either, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Kent.

HOSPITAL CUTBACKS

Mr. J. P. Spence (Kent): I have a question of the Minister of Health. Is the minister aware that the cutback in hospital beds and the limiting of the budget to a five per cent increase this year is affecting the smaller hospitals in a much more severe way than the larger hospitals. Is the minister going to do anything that will assist these smaller hospitals so that they may continue to operate efficiently?

Hon. Mr. Potter: Mr. Speaker, the information we have back so far from the hospitals is that the vast majority of them are finding it very easy to live within the constraints. There are one or two isolated cases where we have asked the hospitals to get in touch with us and if the member knows of any specific cases we would be delighted to deal with them.

Mr. Cassidy: Hear no problems, see no problems!

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Scarborough Centre.

LAYOFFS AT RYERSON INSTITUTE

Mr. F. Drea (Scarborough Centre): A question of the Minister of Labour: Will the Minister of Labour order his director of employment standards to launch an immediate investigation under section 10, subsection (f) of the Employment Standards Act to determine if the proposed layoffs by Ryerson Institute are merely a scheme to defeat the true purpose of the Act?

Hon. F. Guindon (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, I would be glad to ask our director of the employment standards branch to look into this case and report to me.

Mr. Bullbrook: May I direct a supplementary to the Minister of Colleges and Universities in connection with that question?

Will he give an undertaking to this House that he will, tomorrow, make himself available to the delegation coming to the Parliament buildings to meet with him and others in connection with these proposed layoffs?

Hon. J. McNie (Minister of Colleges and Universities): Mr. Speaker, if I can change an appointment I have tomorrow noon I will be very happy to.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Ottawa Centre.

STRIKE OF FRENCH-SPEAKING STUDENTS

Mr. Cassidy: A question of the Premier, Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the Provincial Secretary for Social Development (Mr. Welch) and the Minister of Education (Mr. Wells):

In view of the government's repeated commitment to the principle that French-speaking students have a right to receive education in their native language, and in view of the Premier's own commitment as Minister of Education to students in Cornwall that they would have a French-language high school, what steps is the government prepared to take to resolve the impasse that now exists in Cornwall which has driven French-speaking students out on strike?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, this is a very difficult matter in Cornwall. I think the member for that area and also the Minister of Labour met with representatives of the people interested on two occasions over the weekend. I intend communicating, in a formal sense, through the Minister of Labour to the people concerned, the government's commitment, that was stated in the Throne Speech, with respect to the establishment of the commission, the function of at least a part of which will be to deal with matters of this kind.

I am hopeful that we can get the legislation into the House and discussed here some time within the next six to seven weeks. It is relatively complicated legislation.

I am, as head of the government, making this commitment to them in hopes that this might resolve the situation, because this is really what the Symons commission report envisaged as being one of the functions of the commission they suggested and that the Throne Speech says this government will introduce.

I am hopeful, Mr. Speaker, that this will help resolve the problem.

Mr. Cassidy: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker: In view of the fact that legislation would come too late to allow students to choose a fully French-language high school in 1973 and for it to be created by September of this year, is the government prepared to intervene in Cornwall in order to ensure there is a commitment to have a full French-language high school at St. Lawrence School in September of this year, rather than having yet another delay until 1974?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I am not sure, really, that the time involved in introducing the legislation and establishing the commission would preclude this being assessed by the commission in time for the fall of 1973. Of course, at this stage I don't want to preclude the assessment by the commission of this particular matter, so that to give a commitment of this kind would, I think, be premature. I say that in the spirit of the discussions that are presently going on.

Mr. Cassidy: A supplementary, Mr. Speaker: Isn't the situation serious enough that the government could at least find taxi fare to send Tom Symons down from Peterborough to look into the situation?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, now that I have been asked this I am sure that Mr. Symons might be available, although I have to be very frank—and this may take me a little longer to answer, but I was asked the question. It may be somewhat difficult to prevail on Mr. Symons to become involved in matters of this kind again—

Mr. Lewis: Which would be a great pity!

Hon. Mr. Davis: And the leader of the New Democratic Party has said it—and I hope the record shows it. He himself says it would be a great pity—

Mr. Lewis: Yes it would. He did a first-rate job.

Hon. Mr. Davis: —and I think it would be a great pity.

I take no issue with the Provincial Auditor's report, nor with the way the press has reported what was in the report, but I think it is important for the integrity of Professor Symons that there be a greater degree of understanding by members of this House of the facts in this matter. I say, Mr. Speaker, it disturbs me. We can argue amongst ourselves—we're here to defend ourselves—but it is sometimes difficult when people outside the House are referred to in this manner. Professor Symons is releasing a statement today, and I think the facts will show, Mr. Speaker, that the term taxi fares, and the amounts of money involved, really do not reflect the situation that existed.

So in answer to the member for Ottawa Centre, may I just describe for him the circumstances—

An hon. member: He asked a question.

Hon. Mr. Davis: —whereby we requested Professor Symons to act, in a matter that I think could be agreed as being of some very real urgency as it related to the Franco-Ontarian community in that particular riding; and I would be very surprised if the member for that riding didn't echo those sentiments.

Mr. Lewis: Except the Premier should have done this before the orders of the day. The Premier should have defended him days ago, not today.

Interjections by hon. members.

An hon. member: Where was the leader of the NDP last week?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, to get back to the question that was asked—

Mr. Speaker: Please; order please!

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please! With respect to the hon. Premier, I must point out to him that the rules do forbid a ministerial statement during the question period. If it's of a lengthy content, then it would be out of order, sir.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I agree with you completely, but I am only referring to that part of the question that related to taxicabs, because the actual arrangement did not relate to taxicabs in the traditional sense of the word. Professor Symons did not use a taxicab with a meter to travel from place to place. He had a rental arrangement with car and driver that amounted to $3,100 or $3,200 for six months' work—

Mr. Cassidy: The Premier is out of order.

Hon. Mr. Davis:—which, if you calculated it on the basis of any other sort of arrangement—

Mr. MacDonald: The Premier is out of order. Why does he make a bad situation more embarrassing?

Hon. Mr. Davis:—for the calibre of work that was done and the importance of the work related to the total involvement of the commission, then I say, with respect, the terminology that has been used and the feeling that has been generated in the public related to taxicabs, is not a true reflection of the situation.

So if we were to prevail upon Professor Symons to assist in Cornwall, I would say with respect to the member for Ottawa Centre, the word taxicab would really not be appropriate.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Cassidy: A supplementary, Mr. Speaker.

Interjections by hon. members.

Some hon. members: Sit down! Sit down!

Mr. Cassidy: Mr. Speaker, obviously we would be pleased to have Dr. Symons or the Minister of Education intervene, but—

Mr. Speaker: Order please!

Mr. Cassidy:—my question though is, if the commission of linguistic rights is set up by June or July of this year, does the Premier believe that is sufficient time in order to ensure that French-Canadian students do not suffer yet another year of second-class schooling, in shifts, starting in September of 1973?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I can't give a firm commitment as to whether this would be the case or not. I can only say I would hope they would have an answer.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Windsor-Walkerville.

ELIZABETH GARDENS PROJECT

Mr. B. Newman (Windsor-Walkerville): Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have a question of the Minister of Revenue.

Will the minister undertake an investigation into the alleged poor quality of construction and the many complaints of all of the 25 occupants of the 28-unit first development in Elizabeth Gardens in Windsor, as outlined in a two-page article of the Windsor Star this last Saturday, Mar. 24?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: I will take a look at that, Mr. Speaker; and of course if it warrants an investigation, it will get one.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Riverdale—a supplementary?

Mr. B. Newman: Supplementary, on the same topic: May I ask of the minister responsible for the inspection of Ontario Housing projects: Is that a municipal responsibility or Ontario Housing responsibility?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: I am not too sure, Mr. Speaker, as to what particular project the hon. member is referring. I don't know whether it is an OHC project. Is it a HOME programme, a lot lease programme?

Mr. B. Newman: It is the Elizabeth Gardens project.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: There are quite a few projects under way at the moment so I don't know whether we have a responsibility in the field of inspection there or not. If it is a lot lease one, or course, we don't.

I'll have to find that out. I'll get whatever information is necessary. I'll take a look at it, and of course advise the hon. member.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Riverdale.

Mr. F. A. Burr (Sandwich-Riverside): A supplementary, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: A supplementary?

Mr. Burr: In this condominium project, is it not the minister's intention to have any inspection whatsoever on behalf of the people who buy these houses?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Mr. Speaker, the hon. member already asked me that question.

Mr. Speaker: Surely, the previous answer was sufficient to answer that.

The hon. member for Riverdale.

INSURANCE RATES

Mr. Renwick: Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations.

Having regard to the preliminary figures of the general insurance business, including the automobile business, concerning the substantial losses which they are reporting for last year, will the minister take whatever steps—legislatively or otherwise, or by proclamation—to make certain that any anticipated increases in automobile insurance rates or in fire insurance rates will be the subject of a public hearing and will be subject to the agreement of the minister?

Hon. Mr. Clement: Mr. Speaker, I received a memo today from the Superintendent of Insurance who advises me that any increases in rates are to be submitted to him. He will study them and make recommendations to me as minister. I, in turn, will advise the House, once I have received his recommendations and have a chance to consider them.

Mr. Renwick: By way of supplementary, Mr. Speaker, would the minister give a clear indication to the House as to whether or not he will have public hearings with respect to those anticipated rate increases?

Hon. Mr. Clement: I don't know what the recommendations will be. I'll have to wait and see whether there would be any advantage at all. If the recommendations of the superintendent were to the effect there would be no increase there would be no point, sir, in my undertaking to have public hearings as to no increases; so I'll just have to wait and see. I see by the member's smile that he does agree with that answer.

Mr. Singer: By way of supplementary—

Mr. Renwick: If there are to be no increases, there will be no need to have public hearings.

Hon. Mr. Clement: Yes.

Mr. Singer: —in the superintendent's investigation of the rate, is he, for the first time, going to get his own actuarial advice or is he blindly going to accept the actuarial advice submitted to him by the insurance companies?

Mr. MacDonald: Passively, not blindly. He always does it with his eyes open.

Hon. Mr. Clement: I don't know. I have always been under the impression that he did obtain his own actuarial advice. I presume that will continue in the future. I would hope that no one in my ministry would accept blindly the advice or recommendation of any industry reporting to the ministry.

Mr. Singer: By way of further supplementary, could the minister tell us what was the first year when the superintendent sought independent actuarial advice?

Hon. Mr. Clement: I can't tell the member offhand because—

Mr. Singer: No.

Mr. Shulman: He never has. That's the problem.

Hon. Mr. Clement: I can go back six months, and I am under the impression and advice that he has been getting it for that period of time.

Mr. Singer: We have been trying to get him to do that since 1965.

Mr. R. G. Eaton (Middlesex South): Get them to review lawyers' fees at the same time.

Mr. Speaker: Does the hon. member for Downsview have a new question?

COMPLAINT ABOUT OMB

Mr. Singer: I have a question of the Attorney General. Could the Attorney General advise us if he has received a letter from a Mr. Don Weitz who was complaining about the kind of treatment he got before the Ontario Municipal Board; whether the minister has had a chance to review the complaint of Mr. Weitz; and whether or not he has as yet replied or is prepared to inform the House as a result of his investigations?

Hon. Mr. Bales: Mr. Speaker, I think that letter from a gentleman named Weiss—W-e-i-s-s—

Mr. Singer: W-e-i-t-z.

Hon. Mr. Bales: There was a letter from a gentleman whose name was spelled the way I referred to a minute ago, but I'll look into that matter. I don't recall that particular spelling.

Mr. Singer: The letter is dated Mar. 13.

Hon. Mr. Bales: I'll look into it and see what the situation is.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Yorkview.

INTEGRATED COMMUNITY HOUSING PROJECT

Mr. F. Young (Yorkview): Mr. Speaker, a question of the hon. Minister of Revenue:

In establishing the 95 per cent of the value of projects referred to a little while ago this afternoon, in respect to the land portion of that value, is that land value established on the original purchase price plus reasonable interest, or the present inflated value of the land?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: I presume that when we are dealing with financing of a project, one would have to take into consideration present value of land and buildings.

Mr. Lewis: Present value—oh boy!

Mr. Young: Supplementary question, Mr. Speaker: Is the minister aware, then, that 95 per cent assistance may well mean more than 100 per cent of the actual cost to the person doing the project?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Well, Mr. Speaker, I would presume if I were going to get a mortgage on my house today, I would probably get a mortgage well in excess of what I paid for the whole house—probably twice as much, because I've had the house long enough.

Mr. Cassidy: It's speculation the minister's government is encouraging.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Elementary economics!

Mr. Lewis: This is land speculation that the minister is funding from public money.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Well, Mr. Speaker, the hon. members on the one hand decry what they claim is the lack of success of this government in providing sufficient housing—

Mr. Lewis: The government legislates in other areas.

Mr. Young: Let's be fair.

Hon. Mr. Grossman:—and they do everything possible to make sure it is more difficult to provide that housing.

Mr. Lewis: Not at all!

Hon. Mr. Grossman: What the hon. members opposite really want us to do, is to say that if some developer or some builder is going to make a fast buck out of a development, and even if it is going to provide us with good, legitimate housing at reasonable cost having regard for today's market, we shouldn't do it because—

Mr. Lewis: How does the minister know? The minister doesn't have to give him a fast buck. The minister doesn't have to pay the housing—

Hon. Mr. Grossman:—the man is making money on it.

Mr. Lewis: The minister doesn't have to pay for that. He can say he wants 25 per cent for geared-to-income housing.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: And we are not paying it all. The hon. member—

Interjection by an hon. member.

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Hon. Mr. Grossman: The hon. member—

Mr. Lewis: The minister can do it by regulation.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: The hon. member knows perfectly well that at the present time builders have 90 per cent mortgages on their buildings from CMHC. Now they get 90 per cent, that means they are investing 10 per cent. What we are doing is holding out a carrot so that they will accept this housing programme; hopefully when they do, it is providing an additional five per cent of mortgage money.

Mr. Cassidy: And they don't put a nickel of cash into it.

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Hon. Mr. Grossman: I don't care how much a man makes on his land, provided it's a good proposition—

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Rainy River.

Hon. Mr. Grossman:—for the taxpayer.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Rainy River.

Mr. Lewis: It's a lousy proposition.

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Lewis: It is money thrown away.

Mr. Speaker: Order! The hon. member for Rainy River.

USE OF GOVERNMENT AIRCRAFT

Mr. T. P. Reid (Rainy River): Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have a question of the Provincial Secretary for Resources Development.

Will he table in the Legislature the log-books of the government aircraft which have been used by cabinet ministers to transport themselves and their families both within and without the province? Could he perhaps today explain to the Legislature what kind of trips a cabinet minister would take outside the province and take his family with him, pleasure or business?

Hon. Mr. Lawrence: This doesn't fall within the purview of my responsibilities, Mr. Speaker. I would suggest that the question be addressed to the Minister of Natural Resources or to the Premier.

Mr. Lewis: It certainly is within this minister's expertise.

Mr. Reid: We thought the minister was the expert.

Mr. Singer: The member for Grey-Bruce (Mr. Sargent) asked for this four months ago and never got it.

Mr. Reid: By way of supplementary, if I may: Does the minister not feel, because the Ministry of Natural Resources comes under his policy field, that this is a matter of government policy particularly within his field, and that he should be aware of it and should be able to report to the Legislature on this?

Mr. Singer: I think it's a good question.

Mr. Bullbrook: Answer it!

An hon. member: What does the minister do?

Mr. Bullbrook: Answer it!

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for York South.

Mr. Bullbrook: The minister cannot absolve himself of that policy responsibility.

Mr. Singer: The Premier undertook to answer that question some months ago, to the hon. member for Grey-Bruce.

Mr. Speaker: Order! Order!

Mr. Singer: Yes, he did.

Mr. Speaker: Order.

ALBERTA NATURAL GAS

Mr. MacDonald: Is the Prime Minister, or any other representative on behalf of the Ontario government, planning to meet again with the Premier of Alberta with regard to gas prices? If so, when, where and on what specific phase of the subject?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I intend to be in Alberta next Tuesday, a week tomorrow I believe. Whether I will be meeting with the Premier of that province I can't inform the hon. member at this point. If I were to, of course, I would expect there might be some informal discussions related to matters of energy policy.

I will check to see if any other members or ministers have discussed this with officials of the government of Alberta. I think perhaps there have been some informal discussions, but the next date that I know of when some discussion might take place is a week tomorrow. I cannot tell the hon. member whether or not I shall be discussing it with the Premier of Alberta.

Mr. W. Hodgson: Does the member for York South want to go along too?

Mr. MacDonald: A supplementary question: In view of the fact that Premier Peter Lougheed has informed the Legislature that he would be meeting the Premier of Ontario in Edmonton next week, is it possible to answer my question? Is the Premier going to be discussing the gas price issue; and if so what phase of it? Will he be taking his parliamentary assistant and adviser on gas along with him?

Mr. Reid: They are all experts in gas!

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I could have some observations as to the contributors of gas, but I shan't make them! I shall only observe this, that quite obviously if I do meet with the Premier of Alberta next Tuesday we will be informally discussing that among other problems. I can't inform the hon. member whether the parliamentary assistant to the Premier will be going next Tuesday. I don't know at this point.

Mr. Reid: They haven't forgotten about him!

Mr. Speaker: The time for oral questions has now expired.

Mr. MacDonald: This trip sounds as well planned as that one to Cuba last year!

Mr. Lewis: What is this love for Alberta?

Mr. Speaker: Petitions.

Presenting reports.

Motions.

Hon. Mr. Davis moves, seconded by Mr. R. F. Nixon, that Mr. Rowe, member for the electoral district of Northumberland, Mr. Hodgson, member for the electoral district of North York, be appointed chairman and deputy chairman respectively of committees of the whole House for the present session.

Motion agreed to.

Hon. Mr. Davis moves, seconded by Hon. Mr. Winkler, that a select committee of 13 members be appointed to prepare and report with all convenient dispatch a list of members to compose the standing committees ordered by the House. Such committee to be composed as follows: Messrs. Henderson, chairman; Allan, Deans, Gilbertson, Hamilton, Hodgson (Victoria-Haliburton), Leluk, Nuttall, Smith (Nipissing), Smith (Simcoe East), Stokes, Worton and Yakabuski.

Motion agreed to.

Mr. Lewis: That gives the member for Lambton (Mr. Henderson) two select committees simultaneously. I'm not sure he's up to it.

Hon. Mr. Davis moves, seconded by Hon. Mr. Winkler, that standing committees of the House for the present session be appointed as follows:

1. Procedural affairs committee.
2. Administration of justice committee.

Committees 1 and 2, combined under the chairmanship of the chairman of the administration of justice committee, will function as the private bills committee.

3. Social development committee.
4. Resources development committee.
5. Estimates committee.
6. Public accounts committee.
7. Regulations committee.

Which said committees shall severally be empowered to examine and inquire into all such matters and things as may be referred to them by the House, provided that all boards and commissions are hereby referred to committees Nos. 1 to 4 in accordance with the policy areas indicated by the titles of the said committees.

Public accounts for the last fiscal year are hereby referred to the public accounts committee and all regulations to the regulations committee.

All standing committees shall report from time to time their observations and opinions on the matters referred to them with power to send for persons, papers and records.

That there be no duplication of membership among any committees No. 1 to 4 inclusive, or between committees No. 5 to 7 inclusive.

That substitution be permitted on any committee while considering estimates referred to it, provided that notice of the substitution is given to the chairman of the committee prior to the meeting.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. Leader of the Opposition.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: There are one or two matters that I would like to refer to on this motion. I'm sure we all agree that the work of the committee system in some sense has improved over the last two years when specific matters from this House have been referred to it. We have the precedent established by the Premier in the matter of the Workmen's Compensation Board that certain committees under certain circumstances can have the addition of specific and expert advice having to do with legal affairs, economic affairs and so on.

I want to bring to your attention, sir, a matter that might not be of concern in all parts of the House but certainly concerns me. We hope in the next few minutes to bring in two new members to join our caucus and, if the Speaker will recall, I believe that because of the complex mathematical arrangement last year our party was left with approximately 19—I am not sure of the number, but I believe it was 19—committee appointments.

I would hope that the select committee that was struck by the previous motion recommending membership for these committees will see to it that every member of the House has access to at least one committee for service associated with an area of special expertise or interest. This may require a small bending of the mathematical appropriation but it does occur to me that, on behalf of the very large group of Progressive Conservatives present, my experience is that the whips used to have some difficulty in getting sufficient numbers of those worthies to attend committee meetings. I think the whips might even jump at the chance to reduce their membership by perhaps one or two in certain committees so that the opposition can have a larger role to play.

I simply mention this to you, sir, so that all members of the striking committee will know my views in this regard, and I hope they will give them at least some earnest attention.

I would also like to say to you, sir, that as far as the striking of these committees is concerned, I hope that the attitude of the Premier in going over the names of those on the committees will not be unduly restrictive. He knows that I and others in the House have felt that the standing committees could very well perform a special function, if not in the control of certain costs and prices, at least by close observation and by providing pressure for changes.

It is not my intention to launch into an argument in this regard. Again, sir, I know you have heard my views that a standing committee of this Legislature should have a special responsibility to have referred to it those matters pertaining to changes in costs, whether they be for services or products that come to the attention of this House and certainly to the people of the province from time to time.

There is no suggestion that the committee itself would have the power to roll back these prices, but simply to hold open hearings whereby the justification for the price change could be attempted on the part of those who were putting it forward; and a defence against the price change, usually on behalf of the consumer, could also be put forward. The recommendation of such an all-party standing committee would then be made to this House, and more specifically to the government, which could then take the appropriate action under our system of responsible government.

I simply raise this matter briefly at this time, Mr. Speaker, because I feel that it has been of importance and will be of growing importance, particularly as we see the cost of living moving upward with even new pressures in particularly sensitive fields.

Mr. MacDonald: Mr. Speaker, I want to address myself to only one aspect of this motion, and I am renewing an old plea. I want to raise with the Premier the question of whether or not he will extend that right to substitution on all four of the omnibus committees, the first four committees, whether or not they are sitting to consider estimates.

The brief history, Mr. Speaker, for your consideration and more particularly perhaps for the Premier's consideration, is that this was the original recommendation of a committee of this Legislature which was chaired by the hon. member for Victoria-Haliburton (Mr. R. G. Hodgson). Quite frankly I have never yet been able to find out why, but somewhere along the way there was a monkey wrench thrown into the works so to speak.

The Premier's argument is that he wants continuity and therefore we can't have substitution except in the instance of when we are considering estimates. Well, I remind the Premier that last year's experience reinforced that of previous years—that we don't get continuity; we get absenteeism and the whips hounding members to come to a committee where they don't happen to have a topic of interest.

Surely it is just plain common sense that we place upon the person who has permanent membership in that committee the obligation that if he is not interested in the topic on any given day, to find one of his colleagues who is perhaps not only interested but who is clamouring to get on the committee because he is so interested in that topic. And you would get a real kind of continuity, namely a continuity with presence and participation.

I don't see why the Premier is being so stubborn; and I am going to use that word and not any other kind of word on this particular point. But would he reconsider it? And what would his response be now, rather than six months from now, so that we might have it effective for this session.

Mr. Singer: Mr. Speaker, I want to address myself to one phrase in the motion: "That the committee will pay attention to those matters referred to them by the House." Unfortunately, those of us who have served on these committees in the past recognize that to a greater and greater extent every year that matters that might be of very substantial interest to the members very seldom get referred to the committee. The committee on the administration of justice often gets bills referred to it, but never gets referred to it the problem of organization within the office of the Attorney General.

What is currently of great public interest is the problem of the difficulties in the Ontario Police Commission. There is no ability, as I understand it, within these committees to determine by themselves that they could examine the chaos that exists in the health ministry. I believe the government intends and wants to keep these committees under wraps and that the role of a private member is very limited because of the inclusion in this motion of the phrase, "those matters referred to them by the House."

This plea has been made many times before and in view of the contents of the Auditor's Report, I suggest there is going to be a strong move—the initiative was put forward the other day by the Minister of Health—that the public accounts committee could examine health costs. But surely it is also the duty and responsibility of the committee on natural resources to look into various matters relating to the functioning and expenditure of money by the Ministry of Health; as it is the responsibility, or should be, of the committee on the administration of justice to look into police matters and re-organization matters within the Attorney General's department.

We have mentioned this time and again and the minister gets up and repeats almost by rote the same kind of motion that "private members be damned." We have got the Camp commission that is investigating the role of the private members, but when the Premier gets up year after year—as did his predecessors—and introduces a motion almost in exactly the same words, it shows that he really is doing nothing more than to pay lip service to the role of the private member and his ability to really inquire into what is going on in government.

Mr. Speaker, I would urge the Premier to withdraw those words from the motion and let the committees themselves decide what kind of investigations and what kind of studies they are going to embark on. Otherwise, again, we go through the facade of creating committees which really by and large are not going to do the job that the members want them to do and that the public wants them to do.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Wentworth was attempting to gain the floor previously.

Mr. I. Deans (Wentworth): Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

What I want to say about the committees is a very personal thought. When I first got elected to the House some 5½ years ago, the committee structure didn't work at all. Over the last 5½ years, it has hardly improved. The only time that I can recall when a committee has worked effectively was in fact the investigation into the Workmen's Compensation Board. As far as the other committees that I have been a member of, they have been extremely remiss—perhaps not through any fault of their own—but they have not had the opportunity to look at matters which were of concern to members of the House. It was virtually impossible to have matters of general public concern brought before the committees.

I want to suggest to the Premier there are two reasons for this problem. One is that the work load of the House during the time that it is in session is sufficiently onerous that to have the committees sitting concurrent with the House means that there are fewer people involved in any particular aspect of the work of the Legislature and therefore you don't get as much done.

I think frankly that the committees ought to be sitting—since the Premier chooses not to have the Legislature sitting very long during the year—that the committees ought to be sitting while the House is not in session; that the standing committees of the House should be given the power to look into matters of public concern when they are not in fact required to be in the Legislature dealing with matters here; with bills and the like.

It is impossible for a member of this Legislature to be in the House dealing with bills if the committee that he is a member of is sitting, dealing with estimates.

I find it extremely difficult as I have an interest in a number of different topics. I am sure every member of the House has the same problem. I have to be here in the Legislature much of the time in order to do my job properly. But the fact is that I also want to be in the committee asking all kinds of questions about the estimates that are going through the committee and the expenditures of the government, and it is absolutely impossible to do this.

I frankly feel that we are going to have to take a look at the problems. I didn't hear the minister say it, but I assume we are going to be using Wednesdays again as a committee day. Further, I think we should set aside mornings for committees and that committees ought not to sit concurrently with the House, other than under special conditions where there is perhaps legislation to be considered that requires public scrutiny outside of the Legislature. I think we have got to try to apportion the time more equitably in order to ensure that every single member is able to fulfil the functions that he is sent here to fulfil, and that is to take part in every single thing that goes on in the Legislature in order that we can properly understand the effect it will have on our constituents.

For those reasons, I frankly feel that we are drifting backwards. The exercise we went through in dealing with the Workmen's Compensation Board matter was an important one, and it ought to have set a precedent in the Legislature. It ought to have set a precedent that would allow us to continue to deal with those kinds of matters in that way.

When I was a member of what I think was called the government commission committee, or a committee that investigated government commissions, we used to call those commissions before us and we used to hear them explain what they had been doing during the year and question them in depth. I would love to get my hands on Ontario Hydro right now, for example; but recognizing that the private bills committee will be sitting for the first half of that session, and recognizing that the other committees will be dealing, hopefully, with legislation, the chances of coming to grips with what I consider to be problems in the area of Hydro are pretty difficult and pretty hard to imagine.

So I really do feel that if we are going to make this place worthwhile, the Prime Minister should consider allowing committees to sit all year and providing the kind of expenses that will enable them to hire the staff they need to investigate matters of public concern. Let's do away with select committees altogether. Let's deal with all of those matters through standing committees.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Yorkview.

Mr. Young: Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the Premier, through you, whether the wording of the motion means that most, if not all, the regulations which are drawn up in the various departments will be vetted by the regulations committee prior to gazetting; otherwise the committee has no function.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I don't believe that this is the practice. To have them vetted by the committee prior to gazetting, I think would be impossible; certainly in those times of the year when the House isn't sitting.

I think the function of the regulations committee is for members opposite to assess the impact. If a member has any observations to make, nothing prevents one doing this. But I think to have them assessed by the regulations committee prior to being gazetted is not really a practical approach.

Mr. Young: It is useless after.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, while I am on my feet, just to deal with the two or three matters that have been raised, firstly I want to make it quite clear—and I appreciate the observations of the Leader of the Opposition that we have made some progress—I am not saying here that we have reached perfection in the functioning of standing committees. At the same time, Mr. Speaker, I am not prepared at this time in an ad hoc fashion substantially to alter the present functioning of the standing committees, because this is really why this House voted—and I think with some degree of unanimity—to appoint Mr. Camp, Mr. Oliver and Mr. Fisher to assess, amongst other matters, the involvement of the private members, and their functioning within the Legislature.

Mr. Singer: We never voted to appoint them. They were appointed.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Well, the House voted, I think on a resolution or a motion, as I recall. I think that that was the procedure that was used, Mr. Speaker, if memory serves me correctly. So the hon. member for Downsview may be technically correct, but I think really I have indicated what, in fact, happened.

I think in light of that, and hopefully of the report being forthcoming in the not too far distant future, to start making variations at this precise moment would not serve a useful purpose.

To answer the question about the functioning, say of standing committees or the form of standing committees when the House isn't functioning, Mr. Speaker, I will express a personal point of view. This idea has some appeal. I think there is some merit in this.

I would also say to the hon. member that if he is concerned about the length of the time that the House is sitting, really he should disabuse himself of this. I think when we are finished this spring and start relatively early this fall, and who knows just how soon before Christmas we will finish, he may find that in actual sitting days or length of time we are not too dissimilar to legislative assemblies dealing with the same size of programme and budget, and related to other years. I am not saying just when we are going to finish—I don't know. But I think he will find that the length of time involved is not dissimilar.

I will be very frank about it, Mr. Speaker. I would hope that perhaps out of Mr. Camp's observations, or some consideration we are giving, that we could come up with, not a precise day, but perhaps a rather traditional day for the opening of the House—whether it be in the latter part of February or the early part of March—with some understanding that we would sit till the latter part of the end of June, and we would start again for a precise period in the fall, so that all of us could plan our activities, the government included.

Some of this relates, Mr. Speaker, to the complexities of government operation—the need, I think, really to give meaningful work to the members of the House, the need to have budgets here fairly soon after the House starts, because this is part of our responsibility.

As I mentioned to the press on the day the Throne Speech was read, the Treasurer has been considering—and there may be some very real practical reasons why we can't do this—the development of the budget with a fiscal year similar to that of the municipalities and others, which I think might expedite the date that we could have a budget presentation to the Legislature. To me it is somewhat incongruous that we are going to deal with a budget on April 11 or 12, when some of the municipalities have already set their mill rates and some their expenditure programmes. This is something that, as a government, we want to avoid. Yet it is a very substantial departure for us to move to a calendar year rather than the traditional fiscal year that we have been experiencing.

But these are things that are presently being considered by the government.

I would just say on the one other point, Mr. Speaker—the suggestion the member for York South made again this year somewhat related to what he suggested last year—I don't say it is completely illogical. I can't agree with him here this afternoon, but I say this quite seriously, I shall give it consideration, but I really want to think it out very carefully, and I cannot see my way clear to altering the motion here this afternoon.

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, the Premier—I didn't see that as a windup.

Mr. Speaker: I regret very much that there cannot be further debate on the motion, and that no member may speak twice. The reply has been given.

Mr. Lewis: Well, just by way of a point of order, Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Speaker: I hardly think there is a point of order, but I will stretch the point and listen to the hon. member.

Mr. Lewis: Yes, I appreciate that, sir.

The Premier rose in response to what I thought was a question from a member. In the process of answering the question he said "while I am speaking", and then went on to deal with other matters. I didn't know that the debate had been terminated; I didn't hear the Speaker ask, "Are there other speakers?"

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member is quite right. I didn't call for any further speakers, so I will permit the hon. member to go on.

Mr. Lewis: I want to add a footnote, not to pre-empt the Premier's right to reply. He can speak last on anything and everything inside or outside the House, as he unfailingly does.

I wanted to make the point that the Premier has taken a very long time to come to some resolution of the obvious. There is no point whatsoever, other than the mounting frustration of all members in the House—government and opposition—in removing from us the right of substitution in the various standing committees. It is an appropriate, intelligent, useful thing for members of the House to have. The Premier's refusal to bend on this issue is very bewildering, frankly.

Mr. Speaker, further, I appreciate that the Premier can always have reference to the Camp commission; alas, some of us have feared that. Some of us—with the Premier himself—who know the workings of the Camp commission know that the first report is still a little time off, that it deals with matters rather unrelated to committee structures, and that what the Premier is in fact saying to the House is that we will operate through this entire year on the rules that applied before.

This means that the investigative powers of the committees will be negligible. It means that we will not be able to look, for instance, at a way of establishing more appropriate payments than those of fee-for-service to bail out the Ontario Health Insurance Plan because it will never be referred from the House; it is a contentious issue. It means that all the standing committees will do, other than that of public accounts, is the old matter of looking at legislation and examining estimates, rather than giving members of the House some sense that they are moving toward an investigation and resourceful function.

Why we have to wait yet another year, when it is clear in the mind of every back-bencher in this House, of whatever party, that it makes sense to give the committees some investigative power, is beyond me. I really don't understand the inflexibility, the rigidity, with which the House is viewed by the Premier, which forces us to again have this straitjacket.

It would serve you nothing, sir, no problem, no anxieties, no difficulties to withdraw this motion and make it tomorrow; take out the clause that was referred to which is the cause of so much difficulty; give committees investigative power on their own capacity to move to inquire into matters.

The Tories suffered grievously at the hands of the electorate recently, but the government still has a majority under the committee system. It can still run them if it wants to. So, I hardly think that the Premier has anything to worry about other than this refusal to grant the private members the rights which they wish. So we wait another year; and in the process there will be angry and anxious moments which can be removed.

I guess I'm getting nowhere, but I want the Premier to know that this is one of the ways in which his personal intractability is resulting in disservice to the government as a whole, this is one of the very minute ways in which the public gets a sense of a government that is removed from issues which are real. I think that's a very critical mistake which the Premier is making. Others of us make other mistakes—he is making that one.

Mr. Speaker: Any response?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, to very briefly reply, I would just observe to the leader of the New Democratic Party that this government is just as anxious as he is to have a meaningful involvement of the private members. I will be very frank about it—it's easier to say than to bring about. I think we did have—and it wasn't always easy for the government—relative, positive response from the standing committee dealing with the Workmen's Compensation Board.

Mr. Speaker, I am not opposed to some moves in this direction, but I think that really—and I'm not hanging my hat on the Camp commission—but I would say to the leader of the New Democratic Party that I don't think we will go through a full year. I would anticipate that we will have some indication prior to that—perhaps for introduction by the fall session. But I think to move into sort of ad hoc decisions when this matter is being assessed is not the wisest course to pursue. But I would say to the hon. member really, we're not that inflexible. We would like to see some alterations ourselves, but I still feel there is great merit in waiting for the report of the Camp commission, because after all this is one of the responsibilities given to them.

Mr. Speaker: Shall the motion carry?

Motion agreed to.

Mr. Speaker: Introduction of bills.

LABOUR RELATIONS ACT

Mr. Drea moves first reading of bill intitled, An Act to amend the Labour Relations Act.

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

Mr. Drea: Mr. Speaker, the purpose of the bill is to remove from the protection of the Labour Relations Act any union that sends dues, or other moneys to the United States.

Mr. Lewis: Do we have to go over all that again?

Mr. Drea: The member got it once; he can have it again!

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. MacDonald: The red Tories ride again—and in the wrong direction!

Mr. Drea: The member wouldn't even show up the other day.

ADMINISTRATIVE COMMISSIONER ACT

Mr. Singer moves first reading of bill intitled, An Act to provide for the Appointment of a Commissioner to Investigate Administrative Decisions and Acts of Officials of the Government of Ontario and its Agencies and to Define the Commissioners Powers and Duties.

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

Mr. Shulman: There's a new idea!

Mr. W. Ferrier (Cochrane South): That's a little late!

Mr. Lewis: In this House, there's an idea whose time will never come.

Mr. Singer: Oh, no! It nearly came before the former Attorney General left. He had it on his desk. Now he's got to convert the new Attorney General, if he's still going to be there for a while.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: No fear of that.

Mr. Singer: Mr. Speaker, this is the eighth successive introduction of the bill to create an ombudsman in the Province of Ontario. Perhaps this time the idea's time has come and perhaps this time the government will see fit to enact this kind of legislation at the present session of this Legislature.

INTRODUCTION OF NEW MEMBERS

Mr. Speaker informed the House that the Clerk had received from the chief election officer, and laid upon the table, certificates of by-elections held since the last session of the House:

The electoral district of St. George: Mrs. Margaret Campbell.

PROVINCE OF ONTARIO

THIS IS TO CERTIFY that, in view of a writ of election dated Jan. 29, 1973, issued by the Honourable Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Ontario, and addressed to Mrs. Theda Burton, returning officer for the electoral district of St. George, for the election of a member to represent the said electoral district of St. George, in the legislative assembly of this province in the room of Allan F. Lawrence, Esq., who since his election as representative of the said electoral district of St. George, has resigned his seat, Mrs. Margaret Campbell has been returned as duly elected as appears by the return of the said writ of election, dated March 21, 1973, which is now lodged of record in my office.

(Signed)

RODERICK LEWIS

Toronto, March 26, 1973.

The electoral district of Huron: Jock Riddell.

PROVINCE OF ONTARIO

THIS IS TO CERTIFY that, in view of a writ of election dated Jan. 29, 1973, issued by the Honourable Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Ontario, and addressed to Russell Bolton, Esq., returning officer for the electoral district of Huron, for the election of a member to represent the said electoral district of Huron in the legislative assembly of this province in the room of Charles S. MacNaughton, Esq., who, since his election as representative of the said electoral district of Huron, his seat, Jack Riddell, Esq., has been returned as duly elected as appears by the return of the said writ of election, dated March 20, 1973, which is now lodged of record in my office.

(Signed)

RODERICK LEWIS,

Toronto, March 26, 1973.

Mrs. Margaret Campbell, member-elect for the electoral district of St. George, having taken the oaths and subscribed the roll, took her seat.

Jack Riddell, Esq., member-elect for the electoral district of Huron, having taken the oaths and subscribed the roll, took his seat.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present to you Mrs. Margaret Campbell, member-elect for the electoral district of St. George, and Mr. Jack Riddell, member-elect for the electoral district of Huron, who have taken the oaths and signed the roll and now claim the right to take their seats.

Mr. Speaker: Let the hon. members take their seats.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I don't know what the rules provide for, but if I could presume upon the good-natured feeling in the House, on behalf of the government—I won't say with some regrets—I would like to extend on behalf of the government and personally our very sincere congratulations to the new member for St. George, the new member for Huron. There are some of us who might have wished it had been another way, but the by-elections are over; the people in those constituencies have made their determination.

I would like to make it very clear to both of the new members that we appreciate the contribution that they will make. We recognize the degree of sacrifice that is required in public life. We respect the positions that they have taken; and we certainly welcome them here as members of this House.

I might casually observe, and not facetiously, that I expect they will become very involved over the next few weeks. I even sense the member for St. George in the past few days was almost unable to restrain herself under the gallery, anxious to ask certain questions; and I would only say to her that some of us have really been preparing the answers in advance, and we look forward to them.

But once again, a welcome to both the new members.

Mr. Lewis: Knowing, Mr. Speaker, that in the protocol the Leader of the Opposition would wish to make the final word of welcome, may I say, in the spirit of effusive generosity, that we are pleased to have both the new members in the House. I have no doubt of their contributions. They will make the government profoundly uncomfortable, that is obvious. Why cannot we thereby share in that discomfort at least, Mrs. Speaker, and wish them well in their tenure in the Legislature.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, if I may be permitted to speak on behalf of my party, as well as on behalf of the two new members, in extending not only a welcome to the new members but our appreciation for the very thoughtful and broadminded compliments paid by the leader of the government and the leader of the NDP, then I would now do so.

I would like, of course, to associate myself personally and directly with both those victories, but I must point out to you, sir, that the outstanding quality of both the new members has been apparent on all sides, and I don't think it needs reiteration. I can simply assure you, sir, that having already worked with both of these outstanding Canadians on a number of projects recently, I can assure you and other members of the House that they will give a good account of themselves here and in the province in the years to come.

Mrs. M. Scrivener (St. David): Mr. Speaker, before the orders of the day, may I add my personal congratulations to the new members. I have a long acquaintance with the member for St. George, and I am sure my colleague, the Minister without Portfolio (Mrs. Birch), would wish to join me in extending our welcome to her in this House.

In addition, Mr. Speaker, I would point out to her that the member for Scarborough East and I can assure her there is a very rich, masculine environment here and that she won't find the proceedings dull.

Mr. Speaker, I believe it must be apparent—

Mr. Lewis: A little sexist, perhaps!

Mrs. Scrivener: Mr. Speaker, I believe it must be apparent to all members that, apart from the obvious we three members share one special thing, and that is our Christian name.

Mr. Ruston: It is a hat trick.

Mrs. Scrivener: However, there the similarities cease, inasmuch as alphabetically our surnames appear to sandwich that of the new member, and politically of course we outnumber her. However, Mr. Speaker, in conclusion I would say that I can assure the hon. member for St. George of the best possible representation in this House, since after all she is a constituent in the riding of St. David. As her member, I wish to welcome her.

Mr. Speaker: Orders of the day.

THRONE SPEECH DEBATE

Clerk of the House: The first order, resuming the adjourned debate on the motion for an address in reply to the speech of the Honourable the Lieutenant Governor at the opening of the session.

Mr. R. F. Nixon (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, this is the seventh time that I've had the responsibility to reply on behalf of the official opposition since I took over the responsibility of the leadership of this party. I can't recall an occasion when I was more enthused and full of optimism, political and otherwise, than today. You have just met our two new members, and while we certainly appreciate the welcome extended on all sides of the House, I think it might be appropriate, sir, if you would allow me to take just a moment to say a bit more about them.

The new member for St. George (Mrs. Campbell) is well acquainted with elected responsibility in that she has served in many important capacities in the government of the municipality of the city of Toronto, and is well accepted in her own community as a philosophical leader as well in all things democratic—those things that would lead the community to a more active participation in control of its own affairs.

The hon. member for Huron (Mr. Riddell) has a record that is interesting as well, having been elected just a few months ago to the Huron County Board of Education. I'm sure that this part of his background will serve him well when we are discussing matters pertaining to education here in the House. He comes from a family well associated with the agricultural industry of Ontario, and many people from the western part of the province would have known his father who was agricultural representative in Middlesex county for many years.

Of course, Mr. Speaker, you must realize that the election results in Huron county place you, sir, in a particularly vulnerable situation. Representing a part of Waterloo, as you do, and with Liberal representation now in Huron, Huron-Bruce, Perth, Waterloo North and Kitchener, the red tide is moving toward you, sir. And with your undoubted abilities here, I would suggest that you had better concentrate on the old concept of a permanent Speaker if you are going to withstand this tide that is moving in your direction.

Mr. H. Worton (Wellington South): Not to mention Brant and Wellington!

Hon. W. G. Davis (Premier): I thought the Leader of the Opposition was going to suggest himself for that position!

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Well, perhaps before I finish my remarks, Mr. Speaker, the Premier's interjection might have some more force when he considers me as becoming a permanent Speaker, because I do have a good many items that I want to bring to your attention, and specifically items that I felt had some application and implication in the results of the by-elections on March 15.

The Premier, in his comments on the resolution establishing the committees, made much of the thoughtfulness he had given to the fact that there should be some date, perhaps late in March, when the Legislature would meet almost by tradition. The indications were that this was as a result of careful consideration on his part but, from the subjective point of view of those of us involved in partisan politics, his off-the-top-of-the-head comment to a representative of the Globe and Mail, I believe—it was reported in that newspaper—that he didn't want the Legislature in session to interfere with the by-election campaigns is a bit closer to the truth.

Mr. V. M. Singer (Downsview): Yes, indeed it is!

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Somehow or other the Premier has the idea that politics should not be discussed in this chamber—

Mr. Singer: Just the Premier!

Hon. Mr. Davis: I never do!

Mr. R. F. Nixon: —that nothing that might affect the opinions of the electorate of any by-election area should be brought to the fore. He knows, and it's regrettable that it's true, that when this chamber is not in session there are special difficulties to private members—leaders of opposition parties and even backbenchers—in getting views expressed to the community at large.

Mr. F. Drea (Scarborough Centre): The hon. member can be sued if he doesn't tell the truth!

Mr. R. F. Nixon: When the chamber is not in session it is not possible, through questions and other devices, to prod the ministry to take certain courses of action.

In my opinion, Mr. Speaker, the protraction of the elevator strike, which was brought to an end just last week, was specifically caused by the Premier's decision that he didn't want any waves emanating from this chamber that might rock the placid waters—or what he thought were the placid waters—of the communities in Huron county and St. George in the heart of Metropolitan Toronto. As a matter of fact, he was prepared to go to great lengths indeed to protect his two hand-picked candidates in those particular areas.

He even had his new Treasurer (Mr. White) announce that because of the important matters brought down by the Minister of Finance for Canada, it wouldn't be possible to have our budget available until April 12, many weeks after the federal budget was made available and read to the members of Parliament. This, too, was a matter of some concern for him, which I will deal with more specifically in a moment, because he realized that his Treasurer had already made the threat that Ontario might well raise the level of our personal income taxes so that our budget be brought more nearly into balance. This threat had been made publicly and he realized that there was a political connotation there which would not serve him well in the by-elections. Certainly, he was proved to be correct in that particular fear.

These two by-elections, of course, were hot contests indeed. The Premier abandoned the role of the leader of the government in the past, when perhaps one official visit to the by-election situation was all that was permitted. I don't think Mr. Frost took part at all. John Robarts from time to time would make some appearance although, having been elected in a by-election myself during Mr. Robarts' time, I don't believe he showed up in the Brant constituency at all. He sent a number of his ministers to take pot-shots at us!

The present Premier in these two by-election situations threw himself into the fray completely. I mean, he was there flipping pancakes in Goderich at 7 o'clock in the morning, and he was carrying a tin tray—

Hon. Mr. Davis: On a point of order, I was eating them, not flipping them.

Mr. Nixon: He was carrying a tin tray, Mr. Speaker, in the lineup down at the Toronto General Hospital. He wanted to associate himself with the nurses in training because he felt that they would forget he had raised their tuition by something like 300 per cent, or had raised it to over $300, and that his hand-picked candidate, Roy McMurtry, would have an overpowering influence on those young girls and they would all turn out and vote for him.

You know, they are a lot brighter than either the Premier or his candidate gave them credit for because they turned out en masse to protest recent policies of this government.

It is interesting to note that the polls of the University of Toronto went completely against the government as well. There is one lesson for the Premier and his Minister of Colleges and Universities (Mr. McNie) in that connection. The students in those areas feel they have not been dealt with adequately or fairly.

Mr. Speaker, there is a matter that does concern me and that is that the Premier tried to indicate that there were no valid issues; that anything which was raised in the by-election campaign was somehow misleading or unfair or the typical exaggeration that he, with his urbanity, would have to set right. It was the concept that by-elections are somehow a passing on of the mantle from good old Charlie to good old what's-his-name—who is now evidently looking for some further employment; we may see him under the gallery as a matter of fact before too many days go by because he used to be under there serving good old Charlie and he may in fact come back to serve some other good old boy who needs help here!

The situation in St. George was a bit different because Roy McMurtry was accepted on all sides as a person who was needed by the government. The Globe and Mail, in a small editorial hedged away at the bottom of the editorial remarks, decided to support both the Conservative candidates. The paper said that the government needed them on the front bench. Well, frankly, Mr. Speaker, nothing could be closer to the truth, because you see the Premier has absolutely no support on the front bench except for the Solicitor General (Mr. Yaremko) down there.

Mr. T. P. Reid (Rainy River): With friends like that, he doesn't need any enemies over here.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: I recall on Friday when the hon. member for St. David (Mrs. Scrivener), sitting as she does in the back row in all her charm, got up to move the motion for a humble address to His Honour, she kept talking about the government that listens. And as she was speaking, every one of those seats was empty—there was a mass of blue emptiness—and I thought it was a good indication of how carefully the government listens. They don't listen at all.

Now as far as the issues in the by-elections are concerned, there is one that I thought raised the point of sensitivity, as far as the Premier is concerned. Frankly, I appreciate the fact that he, practically alone in the whole ministry, has seen fit to stay and listen to my remarks. I appreciate that. I feel that that's probably one of the things he is paid for, and I hope that in my remarks that I can put forward some alternatives as well as criticisms that will assist him in making some of the decisions that will be pressing on him in the immediate future, and one of them has to do with the famous deficit.

The Premier, in one of those meetings that he had—I think they had them in telephone booths mostly—was indicating that there was something wrong with my arithmetic when I said that under his leadership the government of Ontario was going to have an $800 million deficit. He said, "There is something the matter with Bob's arithmetic."

I want to comment on that because his own Treasurer announced in this House just about a year ago that we were going to go into debt by about $600 million—I think maybe $5 million less than that—and he was concerned that this high expenditure was necessary in order, let's say, to correct some of the federal policies which he said were leading us to doom and ruin. The indication was that while he regretted such a large deficit it was federal policies that were forcing this decision upon the reluctant Treasurer of Ontario. Six hundred million dollars.

But it was December, just a few months ago, when the House reconvened briefly and we were informed that another $205 million would be necessary, basically because of the serious underestimation of the costs of our Medicare programme, $50 million specifically for that purpose, so that the doctors, who had not been provided with enough money—we had voted only $540 million—would have an extra $50 million so that the Minister of Health could see us through the year.

There were other programmes as well, but an additional $205 million was voted—albeit reluctantly on this side—by the Legislature and no new programmes were announced which by any stretch of the imagination could possibly improve the revenue side of the accounts of this province. So for my part, the arithmetic came from the specific figures provided by the Premier's minions, particularly the Treasurer, who seems to have a lot of figures up his sleeve these days. So it was $600 million to begin with, then another $205 million. I didn't want to exaggerate so I just said that it appeared the deficit would be $800 million—and what could be simpler than that arithmetic?

As a matter of fact, if one is to examine the actual cash deficit that was predicted for the province—because the members understand we are also investing huge sums of money in capital projects which, over the next 40, 50, 60 years, will return some of this investment—one will see that we would in fact go behind by $1,055,000,000 on the basis of the government's figures that come from the budgetary predictions.

Well, members will remember that Mr. MacNaughton—and we have been talking about him a bit because he was the member for Huron up until his resignation just a few weeks ago—was plunged into the thick of this morass by the sudden departure of his predecessor, the member for Chatham-Kent, Mr. McKeough, if you will permit me to identify him by name, Mr. Speaker. The new Treasurer, Mr. MacNaughton, a very worthy gentleman indeed, had to accept the responsibility for the administration of the largest budget Ontario had ever seen. It was even larger than our budget a year ago, which was close to $550 million.

And, Mr. Speaker, just to bring it home to you, who from time to time wears that button in your lapel that shows that you are a friend and supporter of the present Premier, the next largest budget before the present Premier took over the management of our affairs two years ago was back in 1968, when John Robarts put us behind by a paltry $119 million. So the worst—or perhaps the best—that John Robarts could do was the $119 million. But when the present Premier took over, the first year it was $550 million; the second, a prediction of $800 million.

Those were the predictions that the new Treasurer grasped and waved like a red flag on his first official duty as Treasurer, and that was to go to Ottawa to convince the government of Canada, particularly the Minister of Finance, how desperately we needed special funds, voted by the Parliament of Canada to assist Ontario in keeping away from increasing deficit positions.

The new Treasurer is not in his place, and I regret that because he carries a very heavy responsibility indeed. With the House leader on one side of the Premier, with the kind of advice he can give, the Treasurer on the Premier's left in fact assumes the role, whatever the order of precedence on the official list, of chief spokesman for the government in the absence of the Premier—and he is often absent as we all know.

So the Treasurer, talking about his deficit position—a gloom and doom predictor, to go back to the phrases that were often used in the early sixties—went to Ottawa and declared that unless special assistance was forthcoming for Ontario, he would have to recommend the revenues for our province would be expanded by increasing the income tax base and the income tax rate. This was a threat that was made in his position as Treasurer.

He thought, I suppose, that by crying poor mouth, and going up to that conference, banging on the table, and being as vociferous as only he can, that somehow or other the government of Canada would be convinced that this province, with more than a third of Canada's population and more than half of Canada's wealth, should have some special assistance beyond what is already forthcoming.

You know, Mr. Speaker, that we already share the income tax pie with the government of Canada. This year we are going to get $1.2 billion from them, with no strings attached, to pay for our provincial programmes.

You know, Mr. Speaker, that this money is our right by agreement. But we also must not forget that it is collected by the government of Canada, with all of the political ramifications that that involves.

You've heard Mr. Stanfield, and even Mr. Diefenbaker, getting up and complaining about how difficult it is for the poor little man on the street to pay his income tax, and they are right in this connection, there is no doubt. But the hugest share of that money, the largest single individual source of income for Ontario, is sent down from Ottawa for our purposes with no strings attached.

In addition to that, as you know there is well over $1.3 billion that comes into Ontario to support the shared cost programmes that have become so much a part of the fabric of life in Ontario and the other provinces. It bears half the cost of post-secondary education, close to half the cost of Medicare and hospitalization, and a very, very large share of the costs of social and family services.

These matters have often been forgotten by our Treasurer. Certainly they were forgotten by the Treasurer when he went up to Ottawa, pounded the desk and waved in the air the tremendous deficit position.

You know, in a sense he reminds me of an iron butterfly. He was flapping and clanking but he couldn't get off the ground, because while he was listened to, I presume, with careful interest by the Minister of Finance, when the budget was brought down there was no additional money for this province.

Whether or not there was, that is a shame. We have been told once again that, if we cannot keep our fiscal house in order, then it is the responsibility of the government of the province to raise the taxes. The Premier knows we have every right, and in fact duty, to do so if our fiscal affairs cannot be adequately managed, to keep them within the bounds of proper balance, with a deficit which can certainly be accepted if it is needed in order to stimulate our economy.

Then the by-elections came along, Mr. Speaker, and, all of a sudden, while that deficit didn't quite disappear like the melting snow up in Huron before the hot sun, it did recede considerably. As a matter of fact, two press conferences were called. A special publication was brought out, which the Treasurer said he was going to make a quarterly publication, but which appeared just three weeks before the by-election, in which the Treasurer found in the pocket of his other pants $290 million. That is a conservative estimate, because he now found that our deficit was going to be less than $500 million. If you accept the fact that it might well have been in excess of $800 million, then well over $300 million had been found unexpectedly by the advisers to the Treasury.

So the Premier was able to go up to Huron and say, "Things are not as bad as good old Bob is telling you. We have found a lot more money. As a matter of fact, our economy is booming."

How different from their predictions when they were trying to help Bob Stanfield last fall. They found $160 million extra from corporate taxes alone that they didn't know had been funnelling into the Treasury during the year. They found that $45 million extra, that would be paid by the government of Canada through our tax-sharing programme and which they weren't aware of, were being channelled into the Treasury on a regular basis.

Mr. Speaker, you know that we have several acres of experts in the Treasury building—the Frost building—and that we have the finest computers that money can buy. As a matter of fact, they may even be finer than that; I don't know. Surely there should have been the capability of predicting, on a quarterly basis or perhaps even a monthly basis, the revenues and the changes in those revenues over that period of time. In my opinion, the results of the special press conferences called by the Treasurer were intended to mislead either the electorate in St. George and Huron or to mislead the officials of the finance ministry in Ottawa, and more probably both. It is a serious criticism surely that the staff advising the Treasurer—or more properly a criticism of the Treasurer himself—were so off the mark in their predictions that, in fact, the budget and its forecasts are practically meaningless.

Mr. Speaker, I said before the by-elections that because of the confusion on these important figures, at least in the minds of the government, the Treasurer should state specifically whether the situation had improved to the extent that we no longer need fear the imposition of special and extra provincial income taxes as had been predicted by the Treasurer. I felt that it was his duty to the electorate to indicate clearly whether or not it was now necessary for the Province of Ontario to cancel out the reductions in personal income taxes and the proposed reductions in corporation income taxes which were designed on a federal initiative to stimulate the economy of the whole of Canada. Because of that stimulation and the fact that we in Ontario are fortunate in having the largest share of the economic activity, those initiatives are bound to benefit us more than any other province, and I felt that the Treasurer should have made a statement in that connection. Failing that, the Speech from the Throne would have been an appropriate time, many weeks after the federal budget had been brought down, for the government to clarify its mystifyingly opaque position on the budget and the ramifications that the budget predictions would have for the tax situation in our own province.

Mr. Speaker, the second point that I felt was an important issue, at least in the Huron by-election, had to do with regional government. At the nomination in Hensall, when my colleague, the member for Huron, won the nomination over four opponents—and an excellent meeting it was—I made the statement to the assembled gathering—and I think there were 600 or 700 there—that the Conservative government would be looking very carefully at the vote in Huron because if a Conservative were returned we might be sure that it would be construed by the government as a support for the regionalization policies.

Now, I believe that to be true. The Premier said there is no plan for regionalization in Huron. As a matter of fact, you can be darn sure there wasn't Mr. Speaker, because Mr. MacNaughton was not going to let regional government come close to the place, in the same way that the present parliamentary assistant to the Premier was not going to let regional government come close to Chatham.

The concept set out by the former Premier in his Design for Development, and the thrust of the member for Chatham-Kent's policy as far as regional government was concerned, was that before 1975 the areas of Ontario between Kingston, at least, and right through to Windsor would be subject to the advantages, as they called them, of regional government.

It is interesting that the Conservative candidate in Huron said, "Even if there is regionalization, I am going to try to get the government to restrict it to Huron county." He had forgotten, of course, that the guidelines for regionalization insist that a minimum of 150,000 people be involved in a region. The Premier is shaking his head but when I asked specifically in this House whether or not those guidelines still applied, I was informed that they did. They must certainly have forgotten that Huron county has a population of only 65,000—52,000 I am informed by my trusty adviser from Huron-Bruce (Mr. Gaunt).

Mr. Speaker, it was an issue because while there were no concrete proposals put forward for the regionalization of Huron, the good citizens of that area felt very much like a man marooned in a flood on a small island. The man could see the water advancing upon him and, according to the Premier, he should not call out until it was up around his neck.

The citizens of Huron were much too sensible for that. By electing a Liberal to this House they showed that among other things they disapproved of the policy of the imposition of regional government that has been experimented with by this administration during the present Premier's term of office and for a number of years before.

I want to say something quite specific about this because we are told in the Speech from the Throne that we are going to have legislation concerning probably three areas, if not four, presented to us this session.

The first one will undoubtedly have to do with a large area east of Toronto, that we used to call the Oshawa-Whitby study. Mr. Speaker, I am sure you will recall that the former Treasurer, Mr. MacNaughton, went down to that area to present the government's programme and plan. Out of the blue he indicated to the citizens who had been invited to the meeting that the regional government that he was going to enact—and this policy has apparently not been changed—was going to be extended considerably beyond the original boundaries of the study to include Cobourg and Port Hope. I would draw to your attention, sir, that no study nor recommendation had been made which would have included these two large communities with the surrounding rural areas and many smaller towns, with Oshawa-Whitby.

Mr. MacNaughton at the time was questioned about the extension of the purview or the boundaries of the proposed regional government and had indicated that it had simply become a matter of policy. They would hear objections, if objections there were, but there was every indication that the government was going to proceed with the enlarged concept for regional government.

As a matter of fact, one of the strongest and earliest objections was made public by the federal member for the area, a friend of us all, Al Lawrence, MP, who evidently was sitting in the front row while Mr. MacNaughton was presenting his programme for regional government and, as soon as the meeting was concluded, he got up and rushed over to the reporters with their tape recorders and said that he was going to fight this nefarious scheme with all of the power and influence at his disposal.

Mr. Singer: That's typical.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Actually, I think it was a fairly safe thing to say because, I would say to you, Mr. Speaker, that Al Lawrence probably has no power nor influence up here. I think that was even indicated before he made the decision to leave this chamber and go to another.

Mr. Singer: That was one of the reasons he left.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: I sometimes feel a bit sorry for Bob Stanfield with John Diefenbaker on one side and Al Lawrence on the other, because while Al may have expressed his concern for the extension of regional government, I have the feeling that like so many of his pronouncements lately, it was voiced simply for the political impact it might have in consolidating his home base, because he envisages being rather busy on several other bases in the next few months and years.

I would suggest to you, Mr. Speaker, that if the government brings forward the bill encompassing Cobourg and Port Hope it will be making a very serious mistake indeed. The Premier is surely aware of the local feelings toward that extension to the east and that, if they are lumped in with Oshawa and Whitby, it will be an error indeed. It will, in fact, snuff out the local participation—

Mr. R. G. Hodgson (Victoria-Haliburton): The member will want first chance to oppose it too, won't he?

Mr. R. F. Nixon: —in our reform of local government that can be brought forward, if the government does not enter into this programme without reviewing the statements put forward by the former Treasurer.

As far as regional government is concerned, I want to turn just briefly to a meeting that the Premier and I both attended. I'm not sure he knew I was there but certainly we all know that he was there, because the whole thing—

Hon. Mr. Davis: I knew the member was there.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: —had been staged, Mr. Speaker, by one of those small little $100,000 public relations contracts in the large auditorium of Mohawk College on the hill at Hamilton. Once again, the festivities were by invitation only. I appreciated receiving one as a member in the immediate area and decided to attend just to see what went on at these little clambakes, these shindigs.

You know what it's like, Mr. Speaker. I'm sure that you have participated in these things yourself, with all the tension and excitement of spotlights and the television cameras, people scurrying around, shaking hands with their political cronies, and looking for the best possible seat, if possible within range of the television camera.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Did the member find one?

Mr. R. F. Nixon: But, you know, there's a hush that falls upon the gathering and the Premier himself comes out and allows as how he doesn't usually attend these functions, he usually leaves it for his ministers to explain to the assembled municipal gathering, but since this particular meeting did involve Peel he himself was there so that his own good people would realize his immediate concern.

I shouldn't be paraphrasing in this way, because you know how excellent he is when he shifts that monotone into operation. He can pacify any kind of querulous group, except maybe the ones in this House, by simply expressing with his usual urbanity that there's nothing to fear except, maybe, fear itself.

It's interesting, because I sometimes feel it myself. When the Premier floats on to the stage with the spotlights upon him—

Mr. Worton: Like another Emmy Awards show!

Mr. R. F. Nixon: —there's something very awesome about it. But one of the healthy things about municipal government is that the reeves and the councillors and the mayors are not so easily overawed perhaps, as some of us who've seen the manifestations of power that have come from this particular gentleman, because his remarks were punctuated with some very—well, let us say—

Mr. S. Lewis (Scarborough West): Rude!

Mr. R. F. Nixon: —rude interjections, hisses, boos, suggestions that he take himself off the platform—and, as a matter of fact, he eventually did, but not until he had presented to the gathering his new Treasurer.

And the Treasurer, who as is well known is shy and self-effacing—ingratiating, everybody's friend—had a smile painted on his face. It was very much like the one I had on my face the night of the by-elections.

Mr. Lewis: No doubt.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: I just couldn't get it off. He indicated that he was a new Treasurer, that in fact he was not an expert in these businesses of regional government, but they had somebody who was and that was his colleague, the member for York East (Mr. Meen). And the member came out and—

Mr. D. C. MacDonald (York South): That is what you call passing the buck.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: —the mantle of responsibility was passed down to this gentle chap whom we all know so well and who is not in the House today. He came out and took his place behind the podium and described in great detail the programme for regional government that was going to be presented to Peel county, Halton county and Wentworth-Hamilton.

Mr. J. R. Breithaupt (Kitchener): It's like the Marx Brothers.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: It's interesting that the member for York East has an entirely different philosophy to this matter than—well in a sense his predecessor, the member for Chatham-Kent. We always thought the latter was ready to wield the axe at any moment and that he was prepared—as I believe was Mr. MacNaughton—to simply present it to the people and say: "It's okay, you can complain about it for one month but that is the way it's going to be."

In other words, he had the axe there and was ready with one strong blow to settle the arguments—and that was it. And I have even heard him express these views. He was much more prepared to take the arguments all at once than to be picked to pieces over a long period of time. He may very well have been right in this particular area, because with the member for York East it's more like slow death.

He is prepared to go to every meeting that is called—perhaps now with a few exceptions—in order to answer every possible question on regional government. He is so convinced at the rightness of the Conservative cause that he simply believes that through the sheer force of his own good spirit and reason he will carry the day.

I've been present at at least one of those meetings and it sounded to me like a former Minister of Finance trying to convince people through sheer good feeling and rationality that his white paper proposals should be accepted—the more he explains them the more they are rejected. But one thing the member for York East has said and that is, that if he feels that there is, let's say, an atmosphere of non-acceptance in any one of these programmes that it will not go forward.

Well, the first question that came from the audience was: "How are you going to determine that? Are you going to have some kind of a referendum?" Of course not! "We can't have a referendum because we are elected to govern." We have heard that phrase before.

How then are you going to determine whether your approach to regional government is acceptable?

Mr. Breithaupt: Cheese and wine parties!

Mr. R. F. Nixon: My hon. friend interjects something that may be the new procedure for the Conservative Party to determine whether or not it's acceptable, because they don't like votes—that's plain. The whole approach toward determining acceptability is one that—

Hon. Mr. Davis: Is the Leader of the Opposition suggesting that it should be done by vote?

Mr. R. F. Nixon: —I believe that there should be a statement on it from the Premier himself; because the people in Ontario are not satisfied even though two proposals have been put forward. We have to look at Peel, Halton, Wentworth-Hamilton as a package; and for all the talk about consultation we know what there were just two meaningful consultations.

The first were the Tory bigwigs in Peel, because there is no doubt they have to be satisfied. The warden of Peel county said: "You know, it was just as if I had written this regional government proposal myself." I thought that that was an interesting reaction for him to make. But the other consultation—and I don't know how this one became so important—

Hon. Mr. Davis: Does the hon. member know the one-time Liberal candidate supported it?

Mr. R. F. Nixon: The only other consultation that was of any effect at all was the Provincial Secretary for Justice (Mr. Kerr) and the golf club mafia in Burlington. And there was no doubt Burlington had to be included with Halton. That was just one of the "givens"—pardon me—that the member for York East said was not negotiable.

Mr. Speaker, I want to say to you that I feel it would be a tragic error indeed if the disposition of Burlington in the regional government programme were not carefully reviewed. Every authoritative study and commission that was anything other than crassly political has come to the conclusion that Burlington should be included with the city of Hamilton.

Many, if not most of the people—

Hon. Mr. Davis: Bluntly denied.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Many, if not most of the people living in Burlington work in Hamilton, and there is no doubt in my mind that the decision to exclude Burlington from that regional government is a serious mistake that the government must not be permitted to make. Does the Premier want to say something about that?

An hon. member: Give him a hand.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Just as a matter of information, Mr. Speaker, this matter goes back certainly in the era I know best—well before the proposal. It goes back some six or seven years when, with the initiative of Peel County Council and I think with some involvement of Halton, probably the first report on regional government in that whole area was the Plunkett report. I am sure the hon. member for Downsview recalls this. With respect, as I recall, that report did not recommend the inclusion of Burlington and Hamilton. That was, shall we say, one of the very early reports on regional government in that area, including Peel and Halton.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Right. The Premier is correct, except that the basic recommendation of Plunkett was to draw a line separating the lakefront communities, so that there would be one urban area, and leaving the top parts of the counties in a rural organization. Since that particular concept has been rejected, then surely the Plunkett recommendations cannot be referred to as having any meaning whatsoever, since the government is not even considering making an urban region along the lakefront.

In this connection, Mr. Speaker, I just want to say that there are so many errors creeping into the imposition of regional government, as has been expressed by these plans, that the government should certainly consider a moratorium on further regionalization until we see the effects of our experiments up to the present time. Certainly I don't intend to take time to review the regional governments that have been previously imposed and the problems that they have experienced—the high costs of those governments, the remoteness from the people who have to be served, and so on.

I am aware that the Treasury is examining the effects of regional government, but it seems to me that we in this House should not be asked to proceed with further regionalization until we can have a careful reassessment, with public hearings in those areas that have already been affected.

To tell the truth, I feel that the commitment to the old Design for Development and the member for Chatham-Kent's regionalization concept is already seriously out of date. The Premier must surely be aware that we can achieve the kind of reforms which he has frequently said we are looking for, without simply disrupting what has been working very well in many areas.

I would suggest to him that if he pursues the policy of paying an ever larger share of the costs of education—we are now up to 60 per cent and approaching the goal of 80 per cent, which has been our policy for many years—we can, through this mechanism alone, reduce the pressure on smaller municipalities to grab at any kind of assessment that comes along, whether it's a glue factory or Archie McCoy's foundry—it doesn't make any difference.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Where's that?

Mr. R. F. Nixon: It's right in Beverly township. You almost gave it to him, don't you remember?

Hon. Mr. Davis: He switched.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Oh, yes. Well, Mr. Speaker, I am talking about this as one alternative to relieve the local taxpayers of a much larger share of the costs of education.

Mr. Worton: That's the real McCoy!

Mr. R. F. Nixon: And while the Premier is shaking his head, he knows full well—

Hon. Mr. Davis: I was not.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Well, I'm sorry; I thought he was shaking his head. But he knows full well that in fact, this is going to come about in the next five years.

The second thing that does form a part of the Speech from the Throne, but I sense it is going to be inadequate, is the true transference of authority for the implementation of official plans back to the municipalities—counties in some areas, regions in other areas—which have established official plans.

I am sure you are aware, Mr. Speaker, that even in the Niagara region, where so much money has been spent on reorganization, the mayor of Niagara Falls is still waiting for the community planning branch and the Ontario Municipal Board to recommend, and in fact to decide for it, where a certain new shopping centre will be located. In other words, no matter whether or not we have reorganized government on a regional basis, the decisions still are made here at Queen's Park.

I will admit that the present speech indicates that the government is at least recognizing that the municipalities, the local people, deserve the right to make those decisions. But we have been talking about this new partnership ever since John Robarts convened that provincial-municipal conference up at the Science Centre. We have heard this repeatedly from Premiers, Ministers of Municipal Affairs, latterly Treasurers, but still nothing has come to pass that would indicate the government means business when it says it is going to relinquish its authority to decide on severances and the establishment of the decisions to bring about the implementation of official plans.

Frankly, there is the feeling—and I have to express this to you, Mr. Speaker—that, like the school boards established on the county basis, there is a terrible error when we talk about efficiency and even a more general application of a fair and equal approach to the good things that the government can put forward through its grant programme. If, even now, you go into the various counties you will find the feeling in many communities that under the present county board system, for all of the good intentions of the people elected and working hard in the county boards, there is still a remoteness to the needs of the people in the communities rather than in the counties. People regret to lose this sense of community need and do not want to lose it in other aspects of their municipal government. So I would say again that the Speech from the Throne is lacking in that it does not announce a moratorium on further regionalization until there is a full review of the fiscal and democratic implications in the experiments that we have already undertaken.

The next subject that I want to discuss, Mr. Speaker—and I'm afraid it's not going to be a brief one—has to do with the announcement in the Speech from the Throne that great new initiatives are going to be taken in land-use planning. This, in fact, could be the most important announcement that we have had from the government for a long time. There has been some editorial comment about, "Is Bill Davis serious about this? Are we heading for the kind of confrontation that Barrett is having in BC?" and that sort of thing.

I can assure you, Mr. Speaker, that among every aspect of the community there is a new acceptance of the need for planning with teeth in it. That has been the fear of almost everybody in the province up until now. I can tell you that for the last 10 years, going back to Wilf Spooner's day, there has been the feeling that the government has been afraid to take planning decisions itself, that it has left the decisions to the municipalities where the reeve and his council have to fight through some kind of zoning provisions, if not an official plan, and take the political flak that goes with it.

There has been many a reeve and councillor who has lost his seat, Mr. Speaker, because he simply responded to the threat, from the former minister largely that, "If you don't do the planning, we will do it for you." Frankly, this has been nothing but a threat up until recently. As a matter of fact, it still is nothing but a threat. The government has left the responsibility up to the local people to implement a plan which the province might or might not support.

The reference to the Niagara Escarpment is very acceptable indeed. Editorialists and columnists have pointed out that this has been referred to specifically in the last four years—if not in the Speech from the Throne itself, at least in government pronouncements. John Robarts, as far back as 1967, was talking about this. I can well remember suggesting and putting to the government—I believe it was in 1968 in my reply to the Speech from the Throne—that the responsibilities of the Niagara Parks Commission could very well be expanded to include the escarpment. I would still suggest to the Premier, rather than establishing another commission, that the Niagara Parks Commission's responsibility could go along the north shore of Lake Erie and up the escarpment, and that could be the body that could implement many of the policies that are at least hinted at in the Speech from the Throne.

The parkway belt is once again an old story, extending from Dundas around to Pickering, or something like that. I remember that was a part of the MTART study, which was presented, once again with fanfare and a $100,000 public relation programme out at the Queen Elizabeth building, where Mr. Robarts occupied the centre stage and, as the lights darkened and the pink spotlights picked him out, he carried the MTARTS proposal and later the Toronto-centred region plan to the assembled group of municipal officials.

Land-use planning then, in my opinion can be supported by almost every group within the province. There have been fears expressed that the farmers are not going to support any concept of land-use planning. I think the hon. member for Peterborough who seconded the address in reply made an excellent point—and I want to commend him for it—when he said that the farmers are quite prepared not only to accede to but to support concepts of firm planning decisions which, in fact, will put arable land out of the development ambit. They are prepared to support that only if it is part of the policy that they do not have to pay for the programme themselves.

If the province or any other level of government says to a farmer, let use say in the Niagara Peninsula, "We consider your land to be of a special value and that from here to eternity it will do nothing but grow fruit trees or grape vines," the farmer is prepared to accept that as long as he does not personally have to pay the specific costs of putting the use of that land on ice in perpetuity. I would suggest to you, Mr. Speaker, that there are a number of alternatives available.

There can be tax concessions or, as has been put forward by the Federation of Agriculture, the development rights in those specific areas can be separated from the land itself—just like mining rights have in the past been separated—and bought and paid for. The alternative is to have the farmers carry the financial responsibility and I will say to you now, Mr. Speaker, that that is not an acceptable alternative.

I want to say to you that when I talk about the inadequacies of planning in the past there is one specific case that I want to bring to your attention. Perhaps before I do so, I should say that because of the business which went on in the Legislature before I began my remarks, it will not be possible for me to complete them by 5 o'clock. I don't know whether you wish to continue with private members' hour at that time or have me proceed with my remarks and finish this afternoon rather than go ahead tomorrow? I mention it so that those people who might be concerned with ordering the business will think about it.

I have been talking about land-use planning and I have a specific case which I want to bring to your attention.

Hon. Mr. Davis: I wonder, Mr. Speaker, on that point if we could get the agreement of the members? As far as the government is concerned, in fairness, we would suspend the private members' hour so the Leader of the Opposition could finish, or at least go into the private members' hour. Certainly from the government's standpoint, we would have no objection to that.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: It is agreeable with us.

Mr. Lewis: Does the member want that?

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Yes.

Mr. Lewis: Fine.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Thank you, Mr. Speaker; I appreciate the agreement as I would like to finish my remarks at this time.

I am referring to a situation that occurred in Chatham township and many people may be aware of this situation. The reason it is significant is that it is at the back door of the former Minister of Municipal Affairs who used to trumpet, "If you don't do your planning, we will do it for you." Chatham township has always been without an official plan for land use and even zoning bylaws have been effectively absent from any control of development in the area.

The township is well known for having some of the best arable land anywhere in Ontario and the land value for agricultural purposes is as high as it is anywhere, with the exception of some areas here in the Toronto area and in the Niagara Peninsula. Even under the shadow of the member for Chatham-Kent's political statements over the last many years and his willingness to impose the decisions of Queen's Park on huge areas such as the whole of the Niagara region, the township of Chatham was held up in the establishment of an official plan.

Its original proposals came forward in 1968 but the ministry, then under the operation of the member for Chatham-Kent himself, delayed in its acceptance particularly because of its concern that the official plan still allowed certain developments to use septic tanks for waste disposal. The plan was aimed at maintaining the largely agricultural nature of the township and would have specifically prohibited the developments which attract large numbers of people, such as highrise apartments, shopping plazas and so on.

As a matter of fact, during that period of time any farmer who wanted a severance under any circumstances was and still is delayed up to 18 months while the community planning branch in Toronto gives its consideration. Approvals from the medical officer of health and the delays in soil testing by the Ministry of the Environment often add many months to the final approval.

Yet this is what is happening in Chatham township at this very time: An organization known as Multi-Malls Developments Ltd. has purchased land a short distance outside the city of Chatham, in the township, and is undertaking to build a $7.25 million shopping plaza with a complex of offices, apartment buildings and townhouses, the whole concept of which is a negation of even the most elementary planning principles that are accepted across the province.

Without an official plan and zoning bylaws the township is powerless to stop the development, except by not issuing a building permit or by holding up the approval of the medical officer.

The facts in this particular case are incredible. The building permit was issued apparently without the knowledge of the reeve or the approval of council, and the approval through the Health Department—which in other circumstances always requires a lengthy delay for soil sample—was attained within three days of the original application. This is how efficient the provincial Ministry of the Environment can be under special circumstances. The earth movers were busy on the land and observed from the highway before any of the residents of the largely farming community had any inkling of what was to be built.

Multi-Malls intends to provide water for this large complex by drilling wells, and experience in the area would already indicate that such a huge draw of water would lower the water table to such an extent that the water supply of the area's farmers would be seriously endangered. Most ironic of all, the sewage from the whole complex is to be treated by septic tanks with the approval of the Ministry of the Environment.

Mr. Speaker, the matter is of grave concern when you see what a large corporation can do when it goes down into an area like that and gets that sort of approval. The Premier, I know, winces when we talk about Fidinam, but he does not answer when we ask about certain corporations which contribute to his campaign fund. All we can do is look at the facts. The farmers in the area have no way of getting these approvals and yet within three days a large corporation in this province can go in and get the approvals necessary to move into an agricultural area and build a $7.25 million complex and service it with wells and septic tanks.

Mr. E. R. Good (Waterloo North): Unbelievable. Absolutely unbelievable.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: The total environmental effect of the complex is clearly disastrous, and with its official plan still held up after five years by the government at Queen's Park, and apparently with the co-operation of the Ministry of the Environment and other provincial authorities, the township is powerless to prevent it. As a matter of fact, under the circumstances there is not even a means whereby a public hearing can be called under the auspices of the local municipality, the Municipal Board or any other group, so that residents who are watching this situation are without power to affect it in any way.

Many of the farmers in the community have appealed through every political resource available to them for help, and as a matter of fact it was Charlie MacNaughton on the very day of his resignation who announced a freeze on the development in Chatham township. But of course it was too late. The orders, signed by the then Treasurer, prohibit commercial or industrial use of land in the township or the construction of multiple dwellings. Although this was a good move, it was unfortunately ineffectual. The project has received prior approval and is now under way. Although work has apparently been discontinued because of weather circumstances—it may in fact be under water with the flooding problems they are experiencing — the Treasurer's order cannot legally stop nor obstruct the building.

I only bring this to your attention, sir, to indicate the inadequate muddle that planning in this province has been subjected to up until now. As a matter of fact, there are very few students in the field who would believe such a chaotic condition to exist anywhere, let alone in Chatham township which is one of the areas of the best arable land in Ontario and, as I say, under the direct scrutiny of the former Minister of Municipal Affairs himself.

Our profligate and wasteful concepts over the past many years have destroyed for all time some of the best agricultural land in Ontario. While in many areas of food production we have surpluses, still when we look at the problems of the future in our own country and the world, it is obvious that only fools would permit the continued destruction and loss of our agricultural land resources by the kind of unplanned development that has gone on for the last 25 years.

Mr. Speaker, when I say that we are prepared to support the concept of planning laws with teeth in them, I must of course refer again to the unquestioned needs of the farmers to have the assurance as a matter of government policy that they are not going to have to pay the whole bill, and that we must also have as a part of that statement of policy one associated with a plan on the provincial level.

For all of the urging that has gone forward from the province to the municipalities, there has never been a concept, other than the Toronto-centred region—which is amorphous at best—as to the role the province itself should play in deciding the goals for the large areas and regions in Ontario. It is my firm conviction that the decision to abandon the 10 provincial planning areas that had been set up following the war, replacing them with five planning districts, can only be effective if in fact a plan for the province is based on that regionalization.

My opinion is that the development of industry from henceforward should, by government initiative, be fostered around those areas where there are plentiful supplies of power. I specifically refer to Nanticoke, Lambton, Bruce, Lennox and the Ottawa Valley, where we have various power sources. The northern part of the province can as well be included specifically in this regard.

I feel that as a part of an Ontario plan we should be prepared, in the establishment of our power projects on the Great Lakes, to oversize the water intake and the sewage disposal systems so that we can by government planning provide areas for heavy industry properly serviced at public expense, which then can be recouped from those industries moving into the area. Through these five regions we can obviously take ourselves out of the day-to-day oversight of planning decisions made by local municipalities, counties and regions. I would suggest to you, Mr. Speaker, that without that kind of alternative the comments in the Speech from the Throne are absolutely meaningless.

Mr. Speaker, in moving forward I want to refer briefly to the educational situation in the province. I do not intend to spend a long time on this, but simply to bring to your attention, sir, and to the attention of the former minister, an area of growing concern. Our approach from the Ministry of Education is setting up a cafeteria of curriculum pablum in the various schools of this province, so that we are in fact doing a serious disservice to the young people in the province who may opt for courses which are not preparing them, even to a minimum level, for the kind of responsibilities that they are going to be asked to accept as citizens, breadwinners, taxpayers and residents here in Ontario.

In my view and the view that our party holds, we must return to the concept of a core curriculum—the Premier may recall the phrase being used some years in the past—which can in fact establish, once and for all, that in the schools that we support we will insist that our young people have an opportunity to study English, conversational French, and Canadian history, and that they will not have an opportunity to opt out of that core curriculum unless, for reasons having to do with their personal abilities, it would be a waste of time.

Hon. Mr. Davis: At what levels?

Mr. R. F. Nixon: The levels, in my view, should be from one end to the other, particularly for conversational French. I notice, Mr. Speaker—

Hon. Mr. Davis: You'd have to include math.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: I notice, Mr. Speaker, that the Speech from the Throne refers to the concern of the government to provide French language as the language of instruction in various areas of the province. I am convinced that that battle—if battle there was—has, through this announcement and the report of the Symons commission that was discussed previously this afternoon, been fought and won. We believe that French as a language of instruction has got to be accepted in French communities, but where this government is still dramatically falling down in its responsibility is providing French as a second language in English communities.

The Premier is saying we are going to have to include math. I would think obviously that most young people ought to be urged to take math and science. But once you start moving out of what is in my view the skeleton, the real core of the curriculum, you are soon dictating a whole spectrum of compulsory subjects—for example, phys-ed. There is a good argument there that no student should be allowed to go through without taking phys-ed.

Well, I am not prepared to enter into that argument, but I am prepared to tell you that in my opinion no student from grade 1—or whatever you call it these days—up to at least level three in high school should be permitted to opt for the list that my esteemed number two son brought home for my approval the other day: consumer education, bookkeeping, man and society, instrumental music. All of these are excellent subjects, broadening subjects, but what if the decision were left to him—because all of the fellows are taking this, and nobody wants to take French, nobody likes history, math is too tough. Okay, the decision is left to me, and I can say, “All right Harry”—his name is Harry—“this is what you are going to take.” We fixed it all up.

Mr. Drea: Will the hon. member tell us what he took?

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Now, perhaps that might be just a little authoritarian, maybe a bit too paternalistic; but I will suggest to you, Mr. Speaker, that it is a responsibility that I am prepared to take on his behalf—and I will predict to you, sir, that he will thank me for it.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: He didn't want to take that tripe anyway.

Mr. Drea: Come on, will the member tell us what he picked!

Mr. R. F. Nixon: So, just to get back to this business of—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Just to get back to this business of history. I can well remember the Premier, before he ascended these vaunted heights, establishing a committee to look into the teaching of history in the province. He had a very competent group of two or three people gathering submissions from teachers and others all across the province in order to advise them on this. And there were a lot of kudos and credit accruing to him.

Mr. Drea: What did the hon. member take?

Mr. R. F. Nixon: If the member really wants to know, I took English, French, physics, chemistry, Latin; I took it all, I took it all.

Mr. Drea: No, no. What did the member pick this time?

Mr. Lewis: Why doesn't the member leave the House and discuss it afterwards.

Mr. Speaker: Order, order please!

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I wanted to satisfy the member because it is very difficult to continue with him there.

Mr. I. Deans (Wentworth): What difference does it make? It is kind of a stupid question.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Anyway, certainly in the teaching of history there can be no question that if we are going to reduce the core to the basic minimum, there is not a young person who should go through our system without an appreciation of Canadian history.

If he wants to opt for American history, Mexican history, British history, there are all sorts of arguments that could be made for their relative importance—particularly British history. But surely we must insist that they have an understanding of the development of our governmental institutions—responsible government particularly—and for us to say, "You can study that if you want to," is just ridiculous. I don't have to comment on English; but if a person cannot adequately use English, then his usefulness to himself and to the community is reduced.

And let's just spend a moment on French. I notice the Minister of Labour (Mr. Guindon) is nodding and looking at me when I talk about it, but I am sure almost everybody would agree with me on this. We have a tremendous advantage in living in Canada where we are multi-cultural and we are bilingual. And for our young people to go through the schools without having an opportunity—and something more than an opportunity—to have a good grasp of the conversational language is just simply an abdication of our responsibilities right here. But it should begin at a very early stage indeed.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Now if you want to look at it as money in their pockets, obviously it is. There is no other country in the world that I am aware of, except perhaps the United States, which discredits and discounts language education the way we do in Canada. And there is no reason we should have that attitude. We are a bilingual country, except in fact in the educational system here in Ontario and in a few other provinces. I put this to you most sincerely.

I credit the government for mentioning in the Speech from the Throne some initiatives in Indian education; not just for the Indians of course, but for the whole of the school community, so that we can involve ourselves in the lessons of Indian culture.

I would like to spend some time talking about religious education in the schools, because the government has never yet come to grips with the recommendations of the MacKay report and it appears that it never will. It is going to pussyfoot through that particular patch of willows because of the problems that it has in coming to grips with the old-fashioned approach to religious education no longer is what our young people or even their parents are looking for. Obviously we can assist them through the school system in establishing a basis of morals and ethics, but the approach to religious education that was first established by George Drew in 1943 is out of date. I do believe that we can do much better than we have during recent years when the government simply has not come to grips with it either on the basis of George Drew's approach or, more latterly, that of the Keiller Mackay.

Mr. Speaker, there is another issue in the by-elections, and I do want to refer to it at some length. It has to do with our problems of financing Medicare, which have been discussed so frequently in this House and in the community.

As you are aware—I hope that you are aware—a former high official of the Ministry of Health in one of his last acts before moving to the Province of Quebec with a similarly high responsibility with the Department of Health and Welfare there, came to me and the leader of the NDP and gave us a good deal of information about the operation of the Ministry of Health, particularly associated with the escalating costs of Medicare.

Dr. David Kinloch is the person I am referring to, and I want to deal for a period of time specifically with the matters that he brought to my attention, because I believe it is my responsibility to pass them on to the House and to the interested citizens of Ontario at this time.

I want to begin by quoting from a letter that was addressed to me and which was the covering letter for the information he made available. It was dated March 9 and was signed by D. R. Kinloch, MD, director of the medical services branch of the Ministry of Health. It reads in part as follows:

Dear Mr. Nixon:

I am writing not so much to offer a defence against what appear to me to be absurd charges by the Hon. Dr. Potter, but to suggest that the Ministry of Health is deteriorating as an effective vehicle for the administration of $2 billion of public funds.

The combination of a well-intentioned but poorly informed and impetuous minister, of an entrenched senior bureaucracy resistant to change, and of an environment within the ministry that is hostile to integrity, imagination and initiative, does not augur well for intelligent administration.

My public humiliation was only the most clumsily handled of manoeuvres to purge or to sequester those who asked, or wished to respond to, embarrassing questions.

I continue from a later paragraph in the letter:

OHIP data do not support the hypothesis of significant patient abuse; indeed, they point to physician-generated overservicing for misrepresentation as the basis for the overwhelming proportion of "excess costs".

Mr. Speaker, I simply refer to the covering letter because we are aware that in a statement in this Legislature, in response to a question from me in December, 1972, the Minister of Health indicated that Mr. Kinloch was being removed from that particular responsibility—not being fired, but being given other responsibilities because of certain inadequacies in Dr. Kinloch's service.

In order to defend himself against that charge, Dr. Kinloch has provided me with certain manuscripts and documents which I feel it my duty to put before you and which I will read to you. I quote from a speech that Dr. Kinloch prepared for the then Minister of Health (Mr. Lawrence) in April, 1971. Dr. Kinloch came on the staff in February and was considered an important acquisition by the ministry at the time. This was in response to a request for an assessment of the problems that OMSIP, as it was then, was experiencing in meeting its financial commitments to the provision of medical services. I quote from his paper dated April 9, 1971:

Physicians' incomes are . . . undeniably rising and this should elicit an inquiry into the manner in which OHSIP incomes are derived to ascertain what we are getting for our $400 million annual expenditure for medical care.

I would like to bring to your attention, sir, that while this was in April, 1971, now in March, 1973, we are not talking about $400 million but close to $600 million commitment for the same programme. That is a commentary on just how ineffectual the controls have been since that time. I continue to quote from his paper:

In setting out the statutory basis for OHSIP, the medical profession was accepted, on trust, to provide a payment schedule for a public programme that would provide reasonable income for the physician while protecting the public programme from unwarranted or excessive billing. For its part, the government withheld intensive scrutiny of physicians' practices during the early phases of OHSIP; instead concentrating on the efficient processing of claims. It appears that this trust was misplaced for not just a few but many physicians had been regularly and increasingly exploiting their own fee schedule to wring maximal payments from the programme.

Those are very tough allegations made two years ago when most of us were still concerned that OMSIP payments would be paid on time. You remember, we used to be phoning Dr. Aldis' office regularly to speed up the mailing of those particular cheques. At least the department was aware that the real problem was not so much getting the cheques written but to put some control on the cheque-writers so that the payment for the medical services under OMSIP would not escalate at the rate at which, unfortunately, it has risen in recent years.

Dr. Kinloch then provided a list of areas of billing abuses, none of them themselves corrupt, but all leading to over-servicing on the part of the doctors. I intend to table these papers and any member of the Legislature would then have access to reading this material in detail. He sets it out in detail listing the areas which, in his experience, the doctors were using, not in any way to defraud the fund, but simply to maximize their participation in it. A further quote from his statement:

Undoubtedly, government must bear some responsibility for these excesses for in not exerting tight control we have encouraged a few to set bad examples which have, unfortunately, been followed by the many.

A very significant statement indeed. Most doctors undoubtedly were prepared to bill for services rendered but only for those services fairly rendered. Over the last two years, as they have talked with their colleagues in the staff rooms and read the reports in the newspapers, it's become abundantly clear that they would be fools if they did not follow the habits—bad habits we would call them—of many members of the profession in billing for services which actually should not have been billed for. We have really allowed a bad example on the part of only a few doctors to creep through a large proportion of the billing procedures of the medical profession.

I now quote, Mr. Speaker, from a memo written by Dr. Kinloch to Dr. Aldis, who was in charge of the OMSIP procedures and the OMSIP programme at the time, following a discussion which established a constraint package. The government of the day—Mr. A. F. Lawrence was the minister—had decided that it could not continue with the escalation rate which was then apparent.

They were instructed, as officials of the Ministry of Health, to prepare a constraint package which was designed to reduce the expenditures by about 15 per cent or $50 million. The constraint package was approved by the Policy and Priorities Board of cabinet and then the ministry found that it was having serious difficulties in implementing that package. In quoting from this memo dated May 31 you will see the problems were well understood by Dr. Kinloch:

In order to set out our current position in relation to the proposed constraint package, I have, in the accompanying draft material, commented on each of the 36 major items within the constraint package, sometimes not kindly. It's clear from reviewing our progress that there has not been much and that the prospect of achieving the $50-million savings is a fantasy. I hope, however, that we may be able to salvage some of the potential gains by aggressively pursuing the recommended policies.

So on May 31 the man in charge said that the $50 million savings prospect was a fantasy. This was less than two months after the budget was presented on March 28 of that year, in which the savings of $50 million had been predicted.

Mr. Speaker, I hesitate to read too much of the writings of Dr. Kinloch but some of them simply must be put before you because of their importance, particularly in the situation we now find ourselves in, with our Medicare payments still completely out of control and no programme designed to constrain them. I quote now from a statement made by Dr. Kinloch to Mr. Stan Martin, then Deputy Minister of Health, dated May 23, 1972, and entitled, Our Five-Year Financial and Programme Forecast. It goes as follows:

The administration of our health insurance programme has shown a lamentable lack to date of any meaningful planning or evaluation activities and has exercised a level of administrative control that would have bankrupted any other enterprise. No organizational goals have been articulated, no priorities have been established. The only measures of success have been the rapidity with which cheques have been processed and the relative absence of complaints about payments. In its short life the medical insurance programme has misled the public and seduced the profession into patterns of behaviour that are as expensive as they are generally non-productive in terms of ultimate benefit to health.

I have suggested in previous papers the urgent necessity for a thorough evaluation of the services included in the programme and of the methods of financing such services. The non- or counter-productive elements within the programme must be purged and any new service added only after consideration of our ordered priorities and of our administrative and financial capabilities. If there is any feeling within the ministry that by prodding the college into belated action there is a lessened need for control mechanisms within the plan, I should like to note that the college can only be as effective as our capability is to support them, and that our ability to support them is just about zero. It will take a massive sustained effort to develop our planning, evaluation and control mechanisms to the level that should have been maintained since the inception of the plan. The incredible myopia of starving these areas, of providing a free hand to the cheque writers, while stifling those who hope to bring relative order to the programme, borders on criminal malfeasance.

Very strong words indeed, I'm sure you will agree. These come from a top official in the department to his deputy and undoubtedly were forwarded to the minister. Yet, although the constraint package had come from the department and had been approved by the policy and priorities board, still on June 18 in a submission to the management board of cabinet, the following was imparted:

Last year the policy and priorities board approved a $50 million constraint package for health insurance in order to lower the rise in health costs. The constraints were approved for implementation in 1972-1973. [In parenthesis, I indicate to you, sir, the very year in which we are now paying for these bills.] Instructions have been received from the minister's office not to proceed with implementations of the constraints. In addition, longer lead times are necessary than were available. Consequently the programme will require a reinstatement of the $50 million for the 1972-1973 fiscal year.

The ministry requires the reinstatement of $50 million to the medical plan budget in order to meet the expected costs. Specific direction to proceed with implementation would yield the savings for 1973-1974.

I simply bring to your attention, Mr. Speaker, that there has been no announcement of such constraints, only a further statement in the Speech from the Throne that various committees, task forces, and other groups responsible to the ministry are going to make further recommendations.

Still the drain on our resources continues and it has been publicly announced that the doctors are billing for the months that are now available on the computer printouts at an astounding rate. Many of them are billing more than $10,000 a month, the average billing for pathologists being in excess of $13,000 a month, the outflow of funds from the OHIP treasury being well in excess of $40 million a month.

Mr. Speaker, this matter is of grave concern to us all, because it is up to us not only to provide quality medical service and to see that the doctors are appropriately and fairly paid, but also to see that the public interest is served. We have seen, Mr. Speaker, that in recent days, the auditor of this province has brought to our attention that $55 million in premiums was lost and, just last December, that because of the ineffectual leadership in the Ministry of Health, an additional $50 million had to be voted to keep the plan afloat—a $105 million discrepancy, rather than the one cancelling the other, as was indicated by the secretary of the Ontario Medical association in his release over the weekend. The $55 million lost by the former Hospital Services Commission had nothing whatsoever to do with the need for an additional $50 million simply to pay the doctors the fees that they demand under that ridiculous fee schedule that we are tied to in our statute for their services.

So, Mr. Speaker, I conclude my remarks in this regard by quoting from a letter from Dr. Kinloch addressed to Premier Davis and dated Dec. 21, 1972.

I quote in part only those parts that I feel are significant to our particular concerns here this afternoon, although the letter, in my opinion, is a public letter. I quote:

I feel constrained to document events from the two years I have spent in the service of the government of Ontario that bear upon hon. Dr. Potter's recent public comments regarding my performance and competence and, by implication, that of colleagues.

In October, 1971, plan officials were directed on short notice to prepare proposals that would achieve savings over estimated expenditures of 15 per cent. The specific proposals arising from the analysis of options were reviewed and accepted by the policy and priorities board and the projected savings incorporated in budget forecasts. But implementation floundered through belated, time-consuming, and essentially non-productive discussions with the OMA executive, and action on critical elements of the constraint package was suspended by newly appointed Health Minister Potter. Budget overrun thus became inevitable.

The request for additional staff was approved on Nov. 8—

Perhaps I should interject here out of the quote that there are those who have indicated that Dr. Kinloch more or less talked a good game but was not giving the kind of statistical advice that was necessary to the minister or his chief advisers. The papers that he made available show without doubt that there was a freeze imposed on the acquisition of new professional staff and that, in fact, he was not given the staff that was needed in order to supervise, using the computer data, the escalation of these costs.

I quote once more from his letter to the Premier:

The request for additional staff was approved on Nov. 8; the first qualified analyst for the branch was recruited Nov. 20; on Nov. 22 I was informed by Mr. Martin that I was to be relieved of my responsibilities. Mr. Martin indicated that the council of the College of Physicians and Surgeons and the Ontario Medical Association executive had made their "continued co-operation with the ministry" contingent upon my dismissal and that the minister had acceded.

An hon. member: Shame. Shame.

Mr. R. S. Smith (Nipissing): Who runs the government?

Mr. R. F. Nixon: I further quote:

Dr. Potter has stated that morale in his ministry is at a low ebb. But unless he is prepared to consider and act upon the possibility that the current malaise is related to his own actions, including public disparagement of his own officials and undue sensitivity to the interests of the professions rather than to those of the public, I suggest that worse is yet to come.

We are not here, Mr. Speaker, to decide upon the worth of Dr. Kinloch, but we are here to consider the charges that he has made, borne out by the additional $50 million voted by this Legislature to maintain the payments to the doctors and the loss of $55 million in premiums under OHSC. These matters are of grave concern to us all. I have suggested and will continue to suggest that the only decent and appropriate way to deal with these charges, particularly the loss of confidence in the ministry by the public related to the $105 million deficits that we have had to deal with, is to refer the matter to the standing committee on human resources so that the members of that committee, with representatives of all parties, can examine into the charges, can call before them Dr. Kinloch, the Ministers of Health who served during that period and the representatives of the OMA and the College of Physicians and Surgeons. Surely this would not set a precedent in this House?

The charges are not those of corruption, but simply the inadequacies of the controls that have been imposed on this particular programme, inadequate though they may be, by the present Minister of Health and his predecessors. There is no nice way to call for the resignation of a minister. There is no nice way to point out publicly that a man who, in a position of criticism to the then policies, has himself failed when he has the responsibility to implement those policies.

In my considered opinion the usefulness of the present Minister of Health is at an end and I believe that the Speech from the Throne should not only have announced his successor, but also a referral of this whole matter to the careful investigation of the standing committee that I have already mentioned.

Mr. Speaker, the whole matter pertaining to the responsibilities of the Ministry of Health does not, unfortunately, end there. I recall, in the present minister's freer days, before he was encumbered by the responsibility of cabinet office, that he called for the elimination of premiums, that we should pay for our medical programmes on our tax bill—an excellent concept. As a matter of fact, his predecessor advocated the same thing at one time.

Mr. Deans: In January and February of that year.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: As a private member Mr. Potter spoke about amalgamating the functions of the Ministry of Health and the then Department of Social and Family Services—an excellent concept that would do away with a great deal of overlapping. He called for the establishment of district and regional health councils—a concept that would be and must be supported on all sides, particularly if, in the minister's words then, these regional councils and district councils would in fact have some powers to decide the goals and the achievement of goals for the provision of medical services in their own communities.

Yet when the present Minister of Health, the same man who was talking about the regions and the districts, decided to cut back on active treatment beds he didn't consult with either the regions or the districts that were established. He simply did it by authority of his own office and simply did it from the centralized approach without any use of the community involvement that might have been a part of it.

The Minister of Health as a private member called for the use of community health clinics, which is supported on all sides. The very idea that the communities could establish such a health service, hire doctors and pay salaries and have the Ministry of Health meet that cost and escape at least in part from the disastrous fee-for-service basis that is ruining the finances of our plan, was a good one.

Yet in Ottawa itself—and I believe it was instituted by the former Minister of Health, himself a member from Ottawa—a community health centre was established, or at least the planning part was established. Many thousands of dollars were voted to assist in the planning, and it was moving forward, but then the present minister unilaterally cancelled it. There is no doubt in my mind he did so because of the insipid objections of two or three medical practitioners in the area who thought it might be the beginning of some kind of an undercutting of their ability to earn what they consider a living wage, which in those days averaged $30,000 net and these days probably averages $45,000 net.

In my opinion, Mr. Speaker, the minister has shown that he has abandoned the principles we supported when he was a private member and himself very critical of the attitudes and policies of the government.

One other area that I must mention is the programme to establish the training of nurse practitioners who can go out into the field as something between a fully trained medical practitioner and a nurse; in other words, to use their special skills to expand the ability of a medical doctor to serve a community that might otherwise be underserved. I feel that this is an excellent concept. The medical school at McMaster has proceeded with that, and actually has nurse practitioners available to go into the field; and they would have been used in the Ottawa medical centre if it had proceeded.

But once again the minister has drawn back from those policies that he supported in his own day as a critic of the government. And he has not fully utilized, nor even partly utilized, what was a good concept when it was implemented by his predecessors.

It is a shame, I feel, that the present minister has let us all down. We felt that this was a fresh approach and that the good doctor from Belleville was going to move into a position of authority and confidence and make the changes that so many of us could see were obviously necessary if we were going to have a Medicare programme that we could support and finance, as well as new initiatives that would improve the whole situation here.

He has not been able to achieve success in any of those areas. That is why it is with regret, but firmly, we must demand that he be replaced; and the ministry must be shaken up from top to bottom, because I do not feel that the minister or even his predecessors have been well served by the senior officials.

I would also point the finger of criticism at those members of the front bench, almost entirely absent except the previous minister, who have not gone out of their way to support the present minister in the problems he has faced.

The policy minister turns away from him when he needs his help, and the Premier's contribution is simply to say in response to questions from myself that he has full confidence in the minister. That is not sufficient defence when obviously this is an area where the whole cabinet must join forces, enunciate a new and powerful policy which might in fact offend a few medical practitioners, see that it is implemented fairly and evenly so that the doctors will be properly paid, either on a fee-for-service basis or in some other way, for their services, and see that Ontario once again gets into the mainstream of some of the initiatives that have been lacking in this regard.

In closing this section of my remarks, I believe that not only do we need a new Minister of Health, we also need a reference to the standing committee and an examination into what happened to that $105 million specifically. We also need a new Medicare financing policy which will establish a salary basis for those specialists who are presently billing in excess of $10,000 a month and whose services must be made available to the communities across Ontario. I believe we could do this in fairness to the practitioners involved and in fulfilling our responsibilities to see that we do get value for the hundreds of millions of dollars we are expending.

I further believe that we can continue with the fee-for-service basis for most of the practitioners who choose to stay in that category but that, in order to put some control on the outflow of dollars, we as a Legislature—and with the leadership of the government—approve a lump sum that should be sufficient to cover these services and that that sum be prorated among the doctors who are going to call on the sum for payment for their services. In my opinion, there would be nothing unfair about this. It would be eminently fair.

We could administer it without undue difficulty and in fact it would not undermine the initiatives of the doctors to carry out their duties to the limit of their own desires and to the limit of their own efficiency. There have been those who say, "Let's pay all the doctors $45,000 a year. Surely, they would be satisfied with that?" I am quite sure that there would be some practitioners who with the present fee-for-service basis, could make that much money in three months and spend the rest of the time out of the country, in fact, living on their earnings from a very short period of time.

I suppose that doctors have every right, as have we all, to work as hard or to take it as easy as they choose.

It seems to me that if we had a rational fund that could be set after consultation with any medical group or any other group and approved by the Legislature, we could prorate it in a fair and effective way and finally bring some order out of the chaos that has resulted from the decision taken by John Robarts some years ago that, in fact, Medicare was not a Mechiavellian fraud; that in fact, it was a programme that was essential to the continuation of the development of the social fabric of this province.

Mr. Speaker, there is one other matter pertaining to health that I want to bring to your attention. It has to do with the situation in a number of our public hospitals which, in fact, have constituted themselves as closed shops. For the sake of convenience, I refer specifically to the North York General Hospital, a class A teaching hospital, one of the finest hospitals in Ontario.

The board of that hospital has the power to admit specialists to the staff of that hospital or reject them as it sees fit. It takes that decision only on the recommendation of the medical advisory committee of that hospital. I have been told that doctors applying for staff status at that hospital—and I am sure it is the same at many other hospitals—are informed by the medical advisory committee of the success or failure of their application before the board of the hospital even knows what the recommendation in fact is!

It seems to me that under various amendments to the Public Hospitals Act in recent years these medical advisory committees have usurped most of the authority for operating our public hospitals. In this one case the result, as I have already said, has been a closed shop to the benefit of a small number of very competent doctors, particularly specialists, who practice therein.

One case in particular that I want to bring to your attention concerns that of Dr. Jack Sheriton, who for eight years has been put off by the board of North York Hospital in a variety of applications to be given staff and admitting privileges. I consider it completely unconscionable that after that lengthy time, including a government inquiry and an amendment to the Public Hospitals Act, Dr. Sheriton, who is an obstetrician living in North York, has not yet had a hearing to get hospital privileges at the North York General Hospital.

Despite the fact that each obstetrician on the staff of that hospital earns approximately $71,000 annually from hospital work alone, the hospital claims that there's no room for another obstetrician on staff. The hospital medical advisory committee challenged the right of the newly established Ontario Hospital Appeal Board to hear Dr. Sheriton's appeal, which had been scheduled for Feb. 20. Its reason is that section 48 of the Public Hospitals Act limits appeal to physicians who have had privileges, but lost them or had them altered, but does not apply to physicians seeking privileges for the first time. For those reasons the hearing into Dr. Sheriton's case was postponed and I have already submitted an amendment to the Act to set that matter straight, sir, and I hope it will be accepted by the government.

The Act was amended as a result of the report of the Grange committee of inquiry into hospital privileges in Ontario, which recommended that the appeal board hear appeals from the decisions of boards of trustees "of rejected applicants for first appointments."

I would like to point out to you, sir, whether it concerns you or not specifically, that to have a baby delivered by an obstetrician at North York General a woman has a choice of only eight specialists named by the hospital. These eight men are thus assured of an almost guaranteed number of patients in the area surrounding the hospital.

Because of their monopoly, their charges for a delivery vary from $225 to $300, well above the OMA fee schedule of $175 for specialist services. It is apparently impossible to have the service of a specialist for the recommended OMA fee and I know, sir, that concerns you as much as it does me.

Not only patients are being penalized for the closed-shop policies of the hospital. Local obstetricians like Dr. Sheriton, whose patients live in the vicinity of the hospital, are being denied the right to earn a living in their own community.

I would like to point out to you, sir, that the same charge applies to anaesthetists in a number of hospitals in Metropolitan Toronto and elsewhere and in that particular case the patient obviously often does not have even the right of choice. The North York Mirror, having done a great deal of research into this matter, recently published an article that indicated that these particular specialists simply do their work on a roster and that none of them accept the OMA charge—that in fact they have their own fee schedule.

In my opinion, Mr. Speaker, it is a serious matter that public hospitals are thus restricted in the Province of Ontario, that the OHIP contribution is made at 90 per cent of the OMA schedule, and that every one of the patients in those hospitals is presented with an additional bill up to the level that these doctors think the traffic can bear. I believe that we have stood this long enough and that we must take legislative action if necessary to open up these public hospitals so that people can get the services of specialists without paying some special premium based upon the restricted attitude toward the admission of more specialists.

So, Mr. Speaker, I have dwelt at length on the problems that are experienced in the Ministry of Health, and by the minister involved. It used to be regrettable as far as I was concerned to have to specifically attack an individual with such high responsibilities. No one questions the man's motives, but we simply cannot afford to allow the ministry to be subjected to the disability of the kind of leadership that it has had in recent months. I know that the government must make immediate consideration for his replacement.

There is one last matter that I want to bring to your attention, sir, which involves the auditor's report. I think the time will come when we in opposition will be spending a good deal of time in complimenting Mr. Spence on the contents of his last report. I have a feeling that the new auditor, Mr. Groom, had a large part to play in the inclusion of specific paragraphs—I think there were about 80 of them in number—where criticisms of the manner in which public business was conducted by various Crown agencies has come to public attention.

You will recall, Mr. Speaker, that last year's report had no more than two pages of specific indications of where the government programme had not been adequately ordered in the expenditure of public funds. This year's book contains many specific criticisms where public funds have been spent incorrectly with inadequate authorization, or perhaps with the loss of public funds because the decisions made were not in the best public interest. There is an area, however, not specifically covered in the auditor's report that I want to talk about. It has to do with the high cost of the provision of certain public buildings on what has come to be known as the proposal procedure.

I want to refer specifically to the new head office for Ontario Hydro, which is presently under construction at the corner of University Ave. and College St. I know that my good friend and colleague, the member for St. George, knows, or at least some of her supporters know, about that place, because her charming picture was stapled up around that corner and to great effect. Every morning when I drove past coming in to work it used to cheer me up to see her picture there.

This building is presently under construction. It is going to be well in excess of a $40-million building. The decision was made, apparently with the approval of cabinet, that Ontario Hydro would use that land and would build a new head office in the heart of downtown Toronto. Personally, I believe that that decision was wrong; that we have all sorts of problems of the transportation of the working force into the centre of downtown Toronto and that there were many other sites that could have been utilized for a new headquarters for Hydro. Nevertheless, that is not what I am concerned with specifically. The contract was let on the basis, not of competitive bids, but on the basis of proposals.

There were, as a matter of fact, five companies invited to make proposals. The successful proposal was made by a company called Canada Square Corp. Its chief executive officer, or at least moving force, is Mr. G. W. Moog, who, I am told, used to be a real estate salesman in Sarnia—is that not so?—and has come a great distance since then and is now one of our more successful entrepreneurs and is known to be a close and personal friend to the Premier himself. I think we should recall that among Mr. Moog's other business activities is a company called Swiss Granada Ltd., which had the contract to build the Ontario Institute for Studies in Education headquarters on Bloor St., also a lease-back corporation. The rent from that particular building is, I believe, $2.1 million a year for 30 years.

An hon. member: With caretaking services.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: He also owns something called Transortium Realty, which is the company that got the leaseback contract to build the Ontario Educational Communications Authority, otherwise known as TransAmerica building. I am not just specifically aware what the rental is in that connection. So Mr. Moog through his various companies has built and now rents to the government of Ontario the OISE building, which is probably the most imposing public edifice in Toronto, except for the John Robarts Library, and he now leases to the Ontario government the TransAmerica building and is presently building the $40-million plus new headquarters for Ontario Hydro.

I emphasize to you, sir, that no tenders were called, only proposals. Proposals were requested from five developers for the new Ontario Hydro building and four were received. Canada Square got the contract, apparently because it met the criteria laid down by Ontario Hydro. This list of requirements includes previous experience in lease purchase arrangements, the capability to handle the complexity of the project, minimum other commitments, willingness to retain an outside consultant firm, and ability to maintain a good working relationship between the parties.

Interjection by hon. members.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: I am not quite sure whether Mr. Moog's friendship with the Premier is noted on all applications, but I have no doubt that he has the ability to maintain a good working relationship with at least one side of the party. Incredibly, cost was not a criterion.

If these rather subjective evaluations were to be the criteria then one would expect that the government could do a screening in advance to ensure that all asked to make a proposal met those criteria. Under the tendering process all criteria would be spelled out in advance and all firms who met those criteria could then be judged solely on cost.

I must also point out that Canada Square's previous experience in lease-purchase arrangements includes the OISE building and the educational television building. If this keeps up, only one developer in the whole province will have the experience to deal with the Ontario government.

The agreement signed between Canada Square and Ontario Hydro is an extremely complex leaseback arrangement involving four separate leases. The simplest is the ground lease—and Ontario Hydro, I guess, owns the ground—whereby Ontario Hydro leases land valued at $7 million to Canada Square for 30 years at $1 a year. Of course, it is pointed out that this is taken into account in establishing the rent, but even at that it appears that Mr. Moog has quite a deal.

During the construction period of three years, Canada Square will invest by way of interest on construction loans a total of about $6 million. In return, Canada Square is rewarded by a rental income of $6.1 million every year for 30 years. That is almost $183 million in total income over the term of the lease.

In terms of profit Canada Square will recover its original $6 million investment in less than two years, double its money in less than four years and continue to pile up profits over the 30-year life of the lease. Now, of course, a condition of the lease is that they are going to provide janitor service and paint it at least once during the 30-year period.

I saw a picture of this building in a recent Ontario Hydro News and I don't know where they are going to paint it, because it looks as if it is all made of mirrors; it may be that the people up in this part of the government complex will be able to look down at this shining jewel that has been built for them by Mr. Moog for that lengthy period of time.

I have asked the Premier, using the order paper of the legislature, if Mr. Moog or any of his companies had made any contribution to the Conservative Party, but the Premier was unable to answer. I recall that the Premier was unable to tell me if Mr. Saunderson, president of Fidinam, had been a fund raiser for, or a contributor to, the Conservative Party when I asked that question last March, just a year ago. It was six months later that the Fidinam scandal became public.

Mr. Speaker, I am sure that in my remarks there are the kinds of allegations and innuendoes that the people in government don't like. But, of course, there is no possible way for us to get at the facts unless the Globe and Mail finds a Telex communication somewhere hooking up the Moog enterprises with the Conservative Party fund-raising project. It is impossible for us to know what the connection is.

Surely, Mr. Speaker, when this province is going forward with the establishment of tremendously expensive new buildings — and members are aware that the decision has been announced to make a large new public project on a whole block of land to the east of Bay St.—we simply cannot countenance a further use of this kind of building and financing procedure.

Just as Medicare is heading us toward bankruptcy if we don't do something about bringing it under public control, the same is true of the proposal method for building these great edifices of government.

Mr. J. E. Bullbrook (Sarnia): Try a tender once in a while!

Mr. R. F. Nixon: It is obviously in the best interests of the province and the taxpayers therein that we examine more fully the method of proposal building and find an alternative, based on competitive tenders, which will be in the best interests of the taxpayers.

At the time, the people from Hydro said they couldn't possibly get office space this cheap if they went out in any other way to rent it. Well, I think that is ridiculous. As a matter of fact, I think it is ridiculous that the Ministry of Labour is paying $11 a foot, or something like that, for the use of that beautiful new building farther down University Ave. If we are compelled to pay those high prices we should be building our own buildings or locating them elsewhere. I just don't believe that the public purse can continue to sustain this sort of incompetence in the administration of our public responsibility.

As a matter of fact, Mr. Speaker, the government is riddled with incompetency. Its fiscal controls are non-existent. Our deficit and the auditor's report confirm that. The planning function is confused, unfair and lacking direction from the top. The formulation of policy has become a fiasco as the so-called policy ministers seem to consider their jobs equivalent to some kind of provincial Senate. The Premier seems to be overcome with his own bland urbanity and finds himself leading a cabinet of no talent while the people of Ontario, the taxpayers, suffer.

The Globe and Mail was entirely right when it said or implied that the front benches needed new talent. The House leader (Mr. Winkler) is looking at me with his upside-down smile. Believe me, there has never been a time in the last 11 years when the administration of this province was so vulnerable to the accusation that it lacks people of top talent planning and administering our affairs. The by-elections are not just localized disaffection with the Conservatives. The results show clearly a deep-seated disillusionment with Conservative policy and the Premier's leadership.

I want to say something more about that because I can remember when the Premier was gloating over the great victory of October, 1971. He said "It wasn't money that did it. It wasn't any of those things that you, in opposition, are talking about. It was just good Conservative hustle." Frankly, I don't like the word but I hope that right now, when he is looking at these by-elections, he will remember that he was hustling. I've already made some references to the pancake parties and all the rest of the involvement that he himself undertook. And still the people rejected him. They rejected the Premier. They rejected his candidates and they rejected the Conservative Party.

I am not here to say they voted for the Liberal Party because of Bob Nixon's leadership. I recognize the outstanding capabilities and qualities of our candidates. But at least the people, the electorate in those constituencies, turned to us, the Liberal Party, as having the viable alternative that Ontario is seeking as it becomes disillusioned with the Conservatives.

It's been 30 long years—it will be exactly 30 years on Aug. 4 this summer—since the Conservatives came to power. There is a famous philosopher in political affairs who has said, "There is a turning in every long road." It seems to me that March 15 was the turning in the political road in Ontario. For 30 years the Conservative Party through its patronage structure, has been establishing its bonds and connections in every community through this province and the people are getting sick of it!

Mr. P. G. Givens (York-Forest Hill): Like an octopus.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: An interjection here refers to it as an octopus. Well, the tentacles are being cut off one by one. If any of the Conservative members want to resign to make a further test of the disaffection of the people with the Conservative Party, we'll take them on any time, anywhere.

Hon. E. A. Winkler (Chairman, Management Board of Cabinet): The Liberals are very brave now.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, as we look at—

Mr. Singer: We'll start with the hon. minister!

Hon. L. Bernier (Minister of Natural Resources): The first time the Liberals get the opportunity—

Mr. Singer: Who is the first volunteer? Let's see!

Mr. R. F. Nixon: As we look at this political turning—

Mr. Singer: Great noisemakers, that's all.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Singer: Which one of them is the first?

Hon. Mr. Winkler: Why doesn't the member try?

Mr. Bullbrook: We weren't Ministers of Health and wasted all that money. Why should we resign? The Tories are the ones who did that.

Hon. A. B. R. Lawrence (Provincial Secretary for Resources Development): The member should resign.

Mr. Bullbrook: The Tories are the ones who lost the $50 million, under the minister's portfolio, his ministry.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Bullbrook: He should resign.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, we as the Liberal Party, are prepared to accept the confidence of the people of Ontario as they turn to the Liberals as a reasonable and a rational alternative.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: No other way.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: We are continuing to work in that connection and, you know, probably the best people working in our favour are those people right over there.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: It's been a long afternoon, I'm sure, for us all, and we have just begun the valid criticism of the inadequacies of this administration and putting forward the alternatives which we propose, but for these reasons, Mr. Speaker—

Mr. J. R. Rhodes (Sault Ste. Marie): Does the member have another blueprint?

Mr. R. F. Nixon: I move, seconded by Mr. Singer, that the following words be added to the motion:

But this House condemns the government:

1. For its failure to bring order and efficiency to the financing of our health insurance programme;

2. For its costly lack of planning in providing hospital and other public facilities at great expense which are now by ministerial decision declared to be redundant;

3. For proceeding with the imposition of high-cost, democratically remote regional governments without pausing for an assessment of the usefulness and cost of the ones already in operation; and,

4. For fiscal extravagance, mismanagement and lack of financial control leading the Treasurer to threaten higher income taxes that would cancel the federal tax reduction initiative so necessary to bolster our economy.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Rhodes: By God, the Leader of the Opposition has got the NDP with him too over there.

Mr. Bullbrook: That will no doubt carry.

Mr. Lewis moves the adjournment of the debate.

Motion agreed to.

Hon. Mr. Winkler moves the adjournment of the House.

Motion agreed to.

The House adjourned at 5:50 o'clock, p.m.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF ONTARIO

---

TUESDAY, MARCH 27, 1973

The House met at 2 o'clock, p.m.

Prayers.

Mr. Speaker: We are pleased to have visitors with us today. In the Speaker's gallery we have students from the Niagara College of Applied Arts and Technology of Welland; in the east gallery students from David Maxwell Public School of Windsor and the Bayview Secondary School of Richmond Hill; and in the west gallery students from Our Lady of Perpetual Help School of Toronto.

At 2:30 in the east gallery we'll be favoured with students from Kincardine High School of Kincardine; and at 3:30, in the east gallery also, students from Lansdowne Public School of Sarnia.

We are pleased to have these visitors with us.

Statements by the ministry.

Oral questions.

Mr. R. F. Nixon (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, on a point of order, the minister responsible for the Ontario Housing Corp. said he was going to make a statement on his responsibility today. Does he want to revert now that his—

Hon. A. Grossman (Minister of Revenue): No, I haven't had an opportunity to get it ready. I'll probably have it Thursday. Tomorrow is Wednesday. I shall probably have it Thursday.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. Leader of the Opposition.

QUARTERLY REPORT ON FINANCIAL STATUS

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to put a question to the Treasurer concerning the first edition of the special quarterly report on the financial status of the province.

Can he explain why the OHIP premiums were $14 million higher than expected? Was the coverage more extensive or is this just a reflection of a change in the premium status?

Hon. J. White (Treasurer of Ontario): I'd like to get a more definitive answer, but my expectation is that this will be within plus or minus one per cent. My expectation is that this is within the range of accurate forecasting. But let me get a more precise answer for the Leader of the Opposition.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: A supplementary: If the minister is concerned with a plus or minus of one per cent, then he feels that the $14 million comes within that ambit. Will he, at the same time he is getting that further information, report to the House the results of his studies into the apparent loss of $55 million in premiums through old hospital services, which was brought to our attention by the auditor?

Hon. Mr. White: Mr. Speaker, I tried to shout over the member for Downsview yesterday, I think without success, to explain that I had made certain off-the-cuff remarks last week with regard to this $55 million—

Mr. V. M. Singer (Downsview): The minister was out of order; that's why.

Hon. Mr. White: —which I now have reason to believe were not appropriate. I am comforted by the fact that the Leader of the NDP may have fallen into the same trap.

Yesterday, I commissioned an investigation into this matter—

Mr. S. Lewis (Scarborough West): What a trap!

Hon. Mr. White: —and I hope to make a statement to the House later this week.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: A supplementary and for clarification: Did the Treasurer say that he hoped to report to the House later this week the results of the investigation into the apparent loss of the $55 million?

Mr. M. Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Not apparent, it is real.

Hon. Mr. White: Mr. Speaker, "apparent loss" is not the wording. There was a change—

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. White: —in the timing of coverage which resulted in a bookkeeping alteration.

Mr. T. P. Reid (Rainy River): A shortfall!

Hon. Mr. White: As I understand at the moment, although I must confess the investigation is not complete, the Provincial Auditor's remarks related only to the authority of the OHSC to do this in the absence of an order in council. But as I say, I will have full information by the end of the week and I will be making a statement to the House.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Supplementary: Wouldn't the Treasurer consider it a very serious matter that a public servant, even the chairman of the then OHSC, would move toward a policy change that would lose the province $55 million when no one in government had approved it or evidently was even aware of it?

Hon. Mr. White: It doesn't lose anybody $55 million. The question is—

Mr. Lewis: Of course it does. He's the only man who could say that and get away with it.

Hon. Mr. White: Oh, thank you!

Mr. Lewis: He tells us it is a loss and then says he has lost nothing.

Hon. Mr. White: I think I will not make further remarks on this subject, except to say that one set of lawyers thinks the OHSC was right and one set of lawyers thinks the Provincial Auditor is right.

Interjection by an hon. member.

Mr. Lewis: Is the provincial Treasurer suggesting that the investigation so far suggests to him that the $55 million shortfall was subsequently recovered?

Hon. Mr. White: This is a complicated technical matter.

Mr. Singer: Oh, it is very technical.

Hon. Mr. White: It hinges around the fact that one of these two health plans was payable one month in advance while the other was payable three months in advance. They had to synchronize the two. My understanding to date is that no money is missing; no money was uncollected with respect to the term of the coverage. But I say, it's a technical matter and I'm getting into deeper waters than I would wish. I would like to make a statement to the House by the end of the week.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. D. C. MacDonald (York South): A supplementary question: Why would as sophisticated a person as the Provincial Auditor misrepresent the situation when it's only a bookkeeping entry or a change?

Mr. Lewis: He didn't understand the synchronization of the dates.

Mr. Singer: I'll buy that!

Hon. Mr. White: Well, I don't think he'd ever once again. Would the members mind waiting for a day or two until I have the statement ready?

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. Leader of the Opposition.

STATUS OF HEALTH OFFICIAL

Mr. R. F. Nixon: I would like to ask the Minister of Health the status of Dr. N. H. McNally, director of emergency health services division. Is he employed by the ministry or has his position been vacated?

Hon. R. T. Potter (Minister of Health): As far as I am aware, Mr. Speaker, there has been no change in his present status.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: I wonder if the minister can explain why the Ontario Ambulance Operators' Association is writing to a number of people, myself included, protesting the fact that he has been removed from his responsibility? If the minister is not aware of this I wonder if he would look into it and give us a report at an early date?

Hon. Mr. Potter: I haven't had any correspondence with the ambulance association, Mr. Speaker, and I'm not aware of any changes at the present time.

Mr. Lewis: The minister's department very seldom makes him aware.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Another question—

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for High Park has a supplementary.

Mr. M. Shulman (High Park): Is it not correct that Dr. McNally has been having some problems in getting along with a number of the ambulance operators and this might be a reason to move him to another less sensitive post?

Hon. Mr. Potter: Well, there is no—I'm very leery of making any statements in the House any more, Mr. Speaker, concerning—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Supplementary: Does the minister imply when he says he is leery of making statements that in fact there is some information pertaining to the employment of Dr. McNally that he could give the House if he chose to?

Hon. Mr. Potter: Mr. Speaker, as far as I am aware there is no intention and never has been any intention of dispensing with Dr. McNally's services.

Mr. Lewis: Supplementary: Does the minister mean dispensing with Dr. McNally's services in his present post?

Hon. Mr. Potter: In the reorganization of the ministry, Mr. Speaker, we now have—

Mr. Lewis: Oh come on now! Sort of the Kinloch shift, they call it.

Hon. Mr. Potter: —we now have consulting services and health delivery services. Under the old programme Dr. McNally had a dual responsibility and under the new programme he will have one responsibility.

Mr. Singer: What is that?

Hon. Mr. Potter: Well, quite frankly I think he is much more qualified to be a consultant in the delivery area—

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Potter: —but whether or not he agrees with this of course—

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Supplementary question: Is the minister now saying to the House that he is aware—and in fact was aware when I asked him the original question—that the present director of the emergency health services division has been assigned new responsibilities?

Hon. Mr. Potter: No, he has not, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Well, is it the minister's intention that he be assigned new responsibilities? Or would the minister simply like him to be reassigned?

Hon. Mr. Potter: No, at the present time it is a question of filling the vacancies in the ministry as they come up. Both of these—

Interjections by hon. members.

An hon. member: Well, we can think of one—

Mr. Reid: How about starting with the the ministers?

Mr. Speaker: Order, order!

Hon. Mr. Potter: Both of these positions will be filled, Mr. Speaker, and I anticipate that Dr. McNally will fill one of them.

Mr. Cassidy: Why not start at the top?

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Well, Mr. Speaker, I would say to you that the minister's answer has every indication of being a misleading one—

An hon. member: Right!

Mr. R. F. Nixon: —but we shall see what the information is as it develops.

An hon. member: Right!

Mr. Speaker: Order, order.

OTTAWA HEALTH CENTRE

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, I have another question of the Minister of Health.

Can he explain to the House why he decided to cancel the programming and planning that would have established a community health centre in the city of Ottawa—in Nepean township, I believe?

Hon. Mr. Potter: Mr. Speaker, it would take too much of the question period to answer that at the present time. I'll make a statement in the House at a later time.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: A supplementary: Will the minister make it clear in his statement as to whether or not it was because of the objections of a few medical practitioners in the area who felt that their position might be undermined if this policy that the minister had previously supported was carried forward?

Hon. Mr. Potter: I most definitely will, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. A. J. Roy (Ottawa East): A supplementary, Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Speaker: Well, the hon. minister has indicated he will make a statement; there has been one supplementary for clarification. There will be no more supplementaries.

ONTARIO HYDRO HEAD OFFICE

Mr. R. F. Nixon: I have a question of the Premier, Mr. Speaker.

Can he explain to the House the role that he or any member of the cabinet played in the decision of Ontario Hydro to accept the tender put forward by the Canada Square Corp. in the building of their new headquarters just down the block?

Hon. W. G. Davis (Premier): Mr. Speaker, no role whatsoever.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: A supplementary: Can the Premier assure us then that he was not aware that this decision was being made at the time that Ontario Hydro announced it?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I was aware that Hydro was in the process of solving its problems with respect to head office accommodation. There is no need under the legislation, or as a matter of policy, for it to come before cabinet or myself. Neither the cabinet nor myself were involved in the decision process whatsoever.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: A supplementary—and there are a number that come to mind: Can the Premier further assure us that he discussed this matter with no individual outside the government before the decision was taken? And can he further assure us that Mr. Moog, who is the chief executive officer of that company and others that have done extensive work with the administration and for various ministries, was not at any time a contributor nor a fund-raiser for the Progressive Conservative Party?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, it is not my intention to get into a discussion of who contributed to this party or to the party of the Leader of the Opposition. We have enunciated a policy—

An. hon. member: We don't mind!

Mr. Reid: We don't hand out million-dollar contracts!

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Hon. Mr. Davis: Well, the member's federal colleagues do.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order, order!

Mr. Cassidy: It is a relevant question.

Mr. Speaker: Order, order!

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I have no intention at all of getting into a discussion of who contributed or who did not contribute to the Conservative Party.

Mr. Lewis: Of course not!

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. MacDonald: That was the purpose of the new policy; to close the door on the past.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: A supplementary: Does the Premier then indicate to the House that he does not feel that the utilization of that block of land, valued at $7 million, admittedly owned by Ontario Hydro but responsible to this House through the cabinet, was an object at least for consideration on a policy basis by the Premier or one of his policy ministers, or the minister reporting for Hydro?

Mr. Lewis: Not at all!

Mr. R. F. Nixon: The transportation problems alone should have concerned the Premier, who is well known as a person concerned with these matters.

Mr. Lewis: They are putting that office complex in—

Hon. Mr. Davis: Well Mr. Speaker, we are quite concerned with transportation problems—

Mr. R. F. Nixon: The Premier is not showing it!

Hon. Mr. Davis: With great respect, I would say to the Leader of the Opposition that if there is a man in the House less concerned than himself about transportation, it would only be the hon. member for York-Forest Hill (Mr. Givens) or the hon. member for Downsview, I guess; and their concern is of a different nature.

I would say, Mr. Speaker—

Interjections by hon. members.

An hon. member: I'm glad he has brought money away.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: If one could only trust all of his friends!

Hon. Mr. Davis: I would say, Mr. Speaker, as it relates to the policy for Ontario

Hydro to go ahead with the head office, this was really determined, I think, some three or four years ago, perhaps five years ago. The determination not to move ahead was related then to a relatively healthy economy. The chairman of Hydro and members of the commission have had this under advisement for several years. The government knew that Ontario Hydro was going to develop a building on that site. The question of who was to do it and the terms of it were matters entirely within the purview of the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: A further supplementary: Why, then, was it not put out to tender? Why was the operative part of the proposal that those submitting proposals must at least have had experience with government business previously; which Mr. Moog obviously had, having built the OISE building, which the Premier was so concerned with when he was Minister of Education, and the educational television authority building?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Well to be really specific about it, the ETV authority building is not in the same technical or legal situation as either Hydro or the institute, it is a straight lease. The institute is a lease-purchase whereby the public becomes the owner for $1 at the end of a stated period, the same way as with Hydro.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: After he collects $180 million!

Mr. Lewis: After a quarter billion dollars for both.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Well Mr. Speaker, when I have an opportunity to reply to the Leader of the Opposition, I will point out: (a) that his own mathematics, as calculated on that great graph of his, were factually incorrect. And of course he also missed two or three rather relevant points, which will indicate that once again his mathematics was many, many millions of dollars in error.

Mr. Reid: What's a million?

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Hon. Mr. Davis: I say many millions of dollars, and apparently to the Leader of the Opposition they are relatively insignificant. All I can say is his calculations are all wet.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Davis: They are all wet.

Mr. Speaker: Order please!

Mr. R. F. Nixon: A supplementary.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Scarborough West has a supplementary.

Mr. Lewis: A supplementary Mr. Speaker: I am providing the Premier with the opportunity I know he wants to exert. Since he has now apparently examined the nature of the contract entered into by Ontario Hydro in the building of the head office, can he explain to the House where the calculations presented yesterday were incorrect? And as an additional supplementary: Is he satisfied about the contractual arrangement that was entered into by Ontario Hydro, given his present assessment of it?

Mr. Speaker: We have had seven supplementaries, which will be sufficient.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, to comment on the actual contract, and I am sure some of the members opposite have studied it in some detail, it is a very complex legal problem and I cannot comment in any meaningful way on that aspect of it, I shall, in my reply on the Throne Speech, and in relation to the mathematics, be prepared to point out rather conclusively the rather large errors in the mathematical assessments made by the Leader of the Opposition.

Mr. J. E. Bullbrook (Sarnia): The Premier doesn't have the answer.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Yes, I shall.

Mr. Speaker: Order, order! Surely seven supplementaries are reasonable.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Surely seven supplementaries are reasonable. The hon. member is out of order.

Does the hon. Leader of the Opposition have further questions? The hon. member for Scarborough West is next.

TAX CREDIT FOR MACHINERY

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, I would like to direct a question to the provincial Treasurer. Can he tell me how much he anticipates the manufacturing sector will use of the investment tax credit on machinery and equipment provided by this government in the fiscal year which is about to end?

Hon. Mr. White: Mr. Speaker, I was given a figure a month or so ago. I think it was $80 million. I would like to double check that, but I think it was $80 million. I would like to double check that and inform the House later in the week.

Mr. Lewis: By way of supplementary, the additional income received from the corporate revenue, of which the Treasurer spoke just prior to the by-elections, is explained in considerable part, is it not, by the money the manufacturing sector did not use from the investment tax credit.

Hon. Mr. White: I am sorry, I cannot be exact about these figures, but it seems to me that when the plan was announced by the Treasurer of the day a couple of years ago, we expected the cost over two years to be about $200 million.

Mr. Lewis: $250 million!

Hon. Mr. White: And it seems to me that a month or so ago I was given an estimate for that 24-month period of something like $80 million; but I would like to refresh my memory and give the exact figures to the House.

Mr. Lewis: By way of supplementary: In the first year they used $36 million of it, which was an error of $90-odd million in the Treasurer's estimate; and given his figure, this year they will have used about $44 million of it, an error of another $90 million in the provincial Treasurer's estimate. Can he tell us, then, how many jobs were created by this tax credit system which was the single greatest incentive to the economy introduced by his distinguished predecessor.

Hon. Mr. White: There's no question that it's hard to push on a string. When one uses fiscal policy it's easy to pull and hard to push.

Interjection by an hon. member.

Hon. Mr. White: No doubt the Treasurer had high hopes for that particular stimulant which were satisfied only in part. How many jobs did we create? I think 150,000 last year.

Mr. Lewis: No, by the programme.

Hon. Mr. White: I think we've got a seasonally adjusted unemployment figure of 4.1 per cent, compared to 6.5 or thereabouts for Canada. I suspect if our numbers were omitted from Canada, we'd be looking at seven or eight or nine per cent for the balance of the country—18 per cent unemployment in Newfoundland. We must be doing something right.

Mr. Lewis: Not the industrial tax credit! That was $80 million to corporate profits, not the creation of jobs.

Mr. J. A. Renwick (Riverdale): Because the tax figures are not that bad it doesn't mean the government is doing it right.

Mr. Speaker: Order, order!

APPOINTMENT OF WOMEN TO ARBITRATION PANEL

Mr. Lewis: A question, Mr. Speaker, of the Minister of Labour: When is he going to appoint women to the arbitration panel to be chosen by this government, as chairmen of the various arbitration disputes which come before the minister?

Hon. F. Guindon (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, as my hon. friend probably knows, we had one woman on our list of arbitrators who has now been honoured by becoming a member of this Legislature, and we have no other women on our list. However, I would certainly welcome submission of names from all members to see if we can have some of them appointed to our list.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: A supplementary—

Mr. Lewis: By way of supplementary—I have two or three supplementaries—as I understand it correctly there are over 40 people on the arbitration panel and the member for St. George (Mrs. Campbell) is the sole woman on that panel. Can the minister explain to me how it is conceivable that in the Province of Ontario until now he has not been able to appoint an equivalent number of women to that area; and—

Interjection by an hon. member.

Mr. Lewis: —further, can the minister explain to me why in the arbitration of hospital disputes in this province—the majority of the employees affected are women—he has so far appointed 23 men as chairmen? When is he going to change the discriminatory policies of his own department?

Hon. A. B. R. Lawrence (Provincial Secretary for Resources Development): Gee!

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Guindon: Mr. Speaker, I have a very easy answer. For one thing there was only one application from a woman—

Mr. Lewis: What does the minister mean, application?

Hon. Mr. Guindon: One woman who came forward to be appointed.

Mr. J. F. Foulds (Port Arthur): What did the minister do, advertise in the Globe and Mail?

Mr. Cassidy: Does the minister appoint men by application?

Hon. Mr. Guindon: And she wasn't qualified.

Mr. Lewis: What does the minister mean by application?

Hon. G. A. Kerr (Provincial Secretary for Justice): Oh, be quiet. Why doesn't the member have women as candidates?

Hon. Mr. Guindon: I have already told my friends opposite if they want to give us some names we'll look at them.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: The member is supposed to be sex blind, not colour blind.

Mr. Lewis: By way of a supplementary: Perhaps the minister will comment tomorrow on the dozen names which I submitted to him by way of letter today. Perhaps he can shake up his ministry in this regard.

Mr. W. Newman (Ontario South): Today!

Mr. R. F. Nixon: A supplementary, Mr. Speaker: I trust that the Minister of Labour's comments do not mean for a moment that the new member for St. George is suddenly disqualified for some reason from continuing on that panel of arbitrators?

Mr. Lewis: Well, surely not.

Hon. Mr. Davis: There probably would be a conflict of interest.

Hon. Mr. Guindon: If she is, Mr. Speaker, it's not because of the minister, that's for sure.

Mr. Lewis: By way of supplementary: Is the hon. member for St. George now disqualified? Is there a conflict?

Hon. Mr. Guindon: Pardon?

Mr. Lewis: Pardon?

Hon. Mr. Guindon: I didn't hear the question.

Mr. Lewis: Is there a conflict, in fact, in law? Is the hon. member for St. George disqualified from sitting on the arbitration panel?

Hon. Mr. Guindon: Mr. Speaker, I will have to check on this. I think the hon. member is no longer a member of the board. I'm not sure. I will have to check.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: A supplementary: We do trust that the minister is wrong and if the minister is in doubt about this I hope that he will get advice on it. We'd be pleased to proffer some.

Mr. J. E. Stokes (Thunder Bay): She was probably fired the day she got the Liberal nomination.

Mr. Speaker: Does the hon. member for Scarborough West have further questions?

An hon. member: No more questions!

SUPPORT FOR PHYSIOTHERAPY INTERNS

Mr. Lewis: Just one, Mr. Speaker, of the Minister of Health. Has he decided on the additional support to physiotherapy interns that they have been requesting?

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Hon. Mr. Kerr: The member knew there was a gallery.

Hon. Mr. Potter: Mr. Speaker, I have been quoted before as saying I'm very sympathetic to their cause, and I hope within a very few days I will be in a position to make a statement to the House on this matter.

Mr. Speaker: Does the hon. member for Scarborough West have further questions? If not—

Mrs. M. Campbell (St. George): A supplementary, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: A supplementary. The hon. member for St. George.

Mrs. Campbell: Mr. Speaker, when the Minister of Health says that there is to be a statement in a few days, having promised a statement to these students in mid-February, does he bear in mind the fact that they must make their decision as to summer employment within five weeks?

Hon. Mr. Potter: Yes, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for York South.

Mr. MacDonald: Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Minister of Agriculture and Food.

With regard to the price increase in milk that is to take place next week, what conceivable justification is there for the distributors taking a larger cut of this two-cent price increase—

Mr. Reid: It was our turn to ask a question.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. MacDonald: —than they took of the price increase—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please!

The hon. member for York South, I am sure, will oblige me if he defers, because the hon. members from the Liberal Party are complaining that I called the member out of turn. I will assure him that I will call him next, if he doesn't mind.

Mr. Reid: He is usually out of order.

Mr. MacDonald: I was almost going to insist in holding the floor now, Mr. Speaker, in view of that rather cheeky interjection there.

Mr. Speaker: I asked the hon. member for York South if he would mind deferring.

Mr. MacDonald: Since you have asked me, I will do it.

Mr. Speaker: I must admit that I did not first call properly on the Liberal Party for its first question. The hon. member for Windsor-Walkerville is first.

LICENSING INCOME TAX CONSULTANTS

Mr. B. Newman (Windsor-Walkerville): Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations.

In light of the explosion in the numbers of individuals and concerns now involved in filing of income tax returns, and as a result of the wide variation in the filing of these returns as illustrated by the recent article in the Toronto Globe and Mail, does the minister plan on protecting the public against such practices either by licensing control or some other method, that is protecting the public by licensing and control of income tax consultants?

Hon. Mr. Kerr: Even the government makes those mistakes.

Hon. J. T. Clement (Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations): Mr. Speaker, I read with interest the article referred to by my friend from Windsor-Walkerville. No, I have had no requests that such controls be imposed. I have not in truthfulness considered it. I read that article with interest and I wasn't aware of the problems that existed until I did, in fact, read it the other day.

Mr. Roy: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: Supplementary.

Mr. Roy: After reading this article, Mr. Speaker, has the minister consulted at all the combine section of the federal Department of Consumer and Corporate Affairs? Does the minister not feel that there might well be an infringement of the misleading advertisement provisions of this section; and has he consulted with the federal government about the laying of charges on the advertisements of these companies?

Hon. Mr. Clement: Mr. Speaker, I presume with reference to those particular types of ads that the federal authorities have had them brought forcibly to their attention. I have not personally brought those to the federal minister's attention. I did meet with my counterpart in Ottawa in January, along with the consumer minister from Quebec. Among the things discussed was misleading advertising, which I might add causes great concern to my counterpart in Quebec over the TV.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for York South; and I want to thank him very sincerely for the courtesy extended.

An hon. member: He is so gracious.

MILK PRICE INCREASE

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. A question of the Minister of Agriculture and Food. With regard to next week's price increase in milk, what conceivable justification is there for the distributors taking a larger cut of this price increase, namely one-third of the two cents, than they took of the January price increase, when they took only a quarter; particularly, if I may add, when this price increase is to compensate the farmers for having been shortchanged in January?

Mr. P. J. Yakabuski (Renfrew South): It is all going into increased labour costs.

Hon. W. A. Stewart (Minister of Agriculture and Food): Mr. Speaker, my friend has made certain allegations about the farmers being shortchanged. That's a matter of debate and opinion.

Mr. MacDonald: The minister doesn't think they were?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: With regard to the price increase, there is no price control in the Province of Ontario on consumer goods that I am aware of. This is a matter for the processors, to set their price at the retail outlets. The price of milk, as I am sure my friend knows, varies considerably between home deliveries and between store purchases in various types of stores. As far as I know, Mr. Speaker, the 50-cents-per-hundred increase that's coming April 1 to producers for class one milk means about  $1\frac{1}{2}$  cents to the farmer. I am not sure what the processors are intending to sell milk at—

Mr. MacDonald: Generally two-thirds of a cent.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Well, I have heard that figure mentioned. I have also heard that some of them are simply passing it on as a straight increase of  $1\frac{1}{2}$  cents. I have heard also that some of them may be adjusting it on the three-quart plastic jug container pack—the three individual quarts—up to four cents or five cents. Three times  $1\frac{1}{2}$  cents is four cents, but I am not sure what the retail price will be. I have heard some say that it will be five cents, so it's not really determined as far as I know.

Mr. MacDonald: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker; I have one or two supplementary questions. The minister is correct in stating there is no control at the consumer level. In view of the discussions in Ottawa, does he not feel there is a role for this government to get into the picture and protect the consumer from the extra gouging on the part of the distributor?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Mr. Speaker, I think it is singularly noticeable that my hon. friend is always talking about the person who is in the middle-man role—and I am not defending him particularly. But there is never a reference made by that group, nor was it made to the food inquiry committee at Ottawa by the CLC, with regard to salary increases for those people who are involved.

Mr. MacDonald: Will the minister answer my question?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: I'll deal with that some time. He is always talking about gouging.

Mr. MacDonald: What's the answer to my question?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Always talking about gouging. Now who is doing the gouging? It is a matter of some concern.

Mr. MacDonald: Mr. Speaker, I asked the minister a question. Since the distributors are taking one-third of the price increase this time when they only took one-quarter of it in January, what justification is there for that extra gouging; and does the minister think this government has some obligation to stop it?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Mr. Speaker, for many years we have not been in the field of milk pricing at the consumer level. We were in it a great many years ago, and because of the very great difficulties that were encountered at that time, the Milk Industry Board, I understood,—

Mr. E. Sargent (Grey-Bruce): The government controls the price of booze; why not milk?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: —recommended that we pull back out of it and get out of it entirely. Frankly, I think that's the place for us to stay, because the free competition within the industry itself does, in my opinion, act as a very effective control.

Mr. E. W. Martel (Sudbury East): Oh, nonsense.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Now with regard to what my friend has suggested about the last price increase, which was effective Jan. 1 and was based on 35 cents per hundred; there was, I believe, a greater than one-quarter increase taken by some processors. If memory serves me right, and I don't have all the figures here, to say that it was a strict quarter at that time and there will be one-third more now, I think begs the point a bit. I don't think it is quite accurate.

Mr. MacDonald: The minister is just trying to confuse the issue.

Mr. Lewis: Sure he is.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: I am not trying to confuse the issue. I am simply saying that different processors took a different markup. Now are we to suggest that everyone should take the same markup? I don't think that's what my hon. friend wants.

Mr. MacDonald: I have a final supplementary question. Would the minister explain to me what conceivable justification or rationale there is for the milk commission this time accepting an increase when it refused it in January?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Yes, I will. Yes, I welcome the opportunity to do that.

Mr. MacDonald: Fine.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: For the simple reason, Mr. Speaker, that the milk commission was honouring the milk formula pricing structure that has been evolved over a great many years.

Mr. MacDonald: Is the minister suggesting the OMMB had breached it?

Mr. Yakabuski: Quiet. Let him answer it.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Now just let me answer the question if I may, Mr. Speaker. My hon. friend thinks he knows everything and he knows very little, obviously.

Mr. MacDonald: I perhaps know more about this than the minister does at this point.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Well, the member always thinks he knows things that everybody else doesn't.

An hon. member: And most of the time he's right.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Let me say, Mr. Speaker, that the Milk Marketing Board came forward with the presentation. At the time it calculated the increase requested, it was based on the price of all of the factors that go into the formula pricing structure. These figures were established on a price basis from Jan. 1, 1972, to Sept. 1, 1972, before the major increases had taken place in feed prices, and particularly high protein feeds, that took place after that. Based on the figures that were available to the milk commission in the formula pricing structure they made their decision that it be 35 cents a hundred instead of the 56 to 57 cents.

Mr. MacDonald: That is not what the Milk Marketing Board says, and they happen to be involved in the thing.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: That is very true, but the chairman of the Milk Marketing Board admitted to the chairman of the milk commission that the decision they made covered the formula pricing structure at that time.

As a result of concern that I had and that I'm sure every other person in the Legislature who was knowledgeable about the costs facing the producer had, I made a statement at the time of the annual convention of the Milk Marketing Board in early January. We suggested that while the formula had worked well in the past, there was one problem that we felt was a criticism of the formula and that was that it did not reflect accurately enough the changing price structures of those factors that make up the formula—that is there was too long a lag.

I wanted it brought up to date so it would be kept more current, because the increases in prices for feed products and for other costs, hydro and so on, they had gone into the farmers' cost of production. I felt they should be given greater consideration and suggested that the milk board might explore the possibilities of coming back, based on more current figures, with another presentation to the milk commission. That is what has been done and the milk commission, in its wisdom, has approved the application.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Speaker: The hon. leader of the Opposition with a supplementary.

Mr. MacDonald: That is a laboured and elaborate answer. We will deal with it later.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Can we now expect the commission and the Milk Marketing Board to work more closely in any changes of milk prices, that obviously will be forthcoming if the price is going to be tied as closely as the minister describes to the cost of the input, such as hydro?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Yes, I'm quite sure of that, Mr. Speaker. We've had conversations with both groups. There is an honest effort being made by them, and I believe the processors and distributors as well, to improve the formula to make it more accurately reflect current pricing structures.

But I think we have to recognize that there is some lead time required, because the time the figures are compiled until they are properly reviewed and put into a presentation to the milk commission does represent some time lag. With the incredibly fast-escalating costs that have characterized the dairy industry this winter particularly, it would be difficult to keep it right up to date. Fortunately some of those feed prices are coming down more in line. I have every hope that they will come back to a more reasonable level shortly.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for St. David.

RYERSON RADIO STATION

Mrs. M. Scrivener (St. David): Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Minister of Colleges and Universities.

Can the minister inform the House if it is true that the licence for the Ryerson radio station CJRT will be up for review by the CRTC next year and that it is unlikely that this licence will be renewed, and further, that it appears probable that a French-language station will obtain the right?

Mr. Roy: The member should ask that in the federal Parliament.

An hon. member: She would have, had things gone well.

Mr. Lewis: How can he predict the—

Hon. J. McNie (Minister of Colleges and Universities): Mr. Speaker, answering the first part of that question: It is up for review next year; there is no determination yet as to whether it will be renewed or not. We are looking at it very closely as a government, not only as a ministry, because we have some very considerable interest in the whole question of educational broadcasting and this is only part of a study that is being done right now.

With regard to the second part of the question: No, we've no information with respect its being considered even tentatively as a French broadcasting station.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker: Is the minister implying in his statement that if the radio station cannot continue with the regular grants through his ministry, then some other ministry, like Education, or perhaps some other source might channel funds in there to keep it operating simply as an educational television broadcasting unit, responsible to some minister?

Mr. Singer: Or authority?

Hon. Mr. McNie: Mr. Speaker, I wasn't implying anything particularly. I was saying that the government is studying the matter and it shares the concerns that the member opposite and members of the public have with sustaining the radio station if it fits into our overall policy with regard to broadcasting.

As you know, Mr. Speaker, the actual educational content of that radio station is very nominal; it is only about 8½ hours out of 133 hours of broadcasting. There are other considerations, obviously, that make it of interest to our ministry—the cultural aspect of it.

We are looking at its very seriously, and I think I can assure the hon. members of the House that we are not going to see the station abandoned lightly.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Ottawa Centre with a supplementary.

Mr. Cassidy: Mr. Speaker, the minister subsided, saying, "We will not see it abandoned lightly". I wish he hadn't said that. I would have been quite satisfied—

Mr. Speaker: Will the hon. member ask a question?

Mr. Cassidy: Will the minister assure the House that it is the government's intention to keep the non-commercial service of CJRT in operation, either through Ryerson or through some other means?

Mr. Bullbrook: He has just answered that he would not.

Hon. Mr. McNie: Mr. Speaker, I find that I have to choose my words very carefully.

Mr. E. J. Bounsall (Windsor West): The minister should tell us how far he has cut back.

Mr. Speaker: There are four minutes remaining in the question period.

Hon. Mr. McNie: Mr. Speaker, I can assure the hon. members that the matter is going to be given very serious consideration.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. Minister of Revenue has the answer to a question previously asked.

Mr. Reid: That's a switch.

Mr. Sargent: Give us the answer to something.

ELIZABETH GARDENS PROJECT

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Mr. Speaker—

Mr. F. Drea (Scarborough Centre): Stall them.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: It's their time.

Mr. MacDonald: Go ahead; don't be so easily stopped.

Interjections by hon members.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: I'm always a gentleman to the opposition.

Mr. Speaker, in reply to the question from the hon. member for Windsor-Walkerville —yesterday, I believe it was—respecting complaints from occupants of the Elizabeth Gardens condominium project in Windsor. Ontario Housing Corp., I should advise, as second mortgagee, has the responsibility for inspections relating to the release of mortgage funds. In addition to the inspection of foundations, plumbing, electrical installations, framing, roofing and insulation carried out by the municipality, Ontario Housing Corp. has been carrying out regular inspections of these units as construction proceeded.

I am advised that during that time a number of deficiencies, as normally found in a project of this kind, were noted. The developer has been informed of these deficiencies and is in the process of correcting them. As a matter of fact, OHC had an inspector on the site last week and I am also informed that two more senior inspectors are on the site today to check on the progress of this work.

OHC is holding back $345,000 in mortgage funds, and will continue to hold them back until the deficiencies are corrected to the satisfaction of OHC.

Mr. B. Newman: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker: May I ask of the minister if it is his intention to have an inspector on site up until the completion of the whole project?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: I couldn't answer that off the top of my head, although I would imagine it would be very costly for OHC to have inspectors permanently on very project until they were finished.

Interjection by an hon. member.

Mr. Speaker: Order.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: However, if there appears to be a necessity for it, of course we will do it. At this moment I couldn't give a commitment to the hon. member in that regard.

Mr. Speaker: There are three minutes left and there is another minister who has an answer to a question. We will take one supplementary.

Mr. Bounsall: Since the problem with Elizabeth Gardens has been imputed to relate partially to the design, did OHC play any part in approving the type of design for this condominium housing in Elizabeth Gardens?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: The hon. member has given an opinion as to the design of the project, and I am not familiar with that. I'll go into that matter for the hon. member and get him an answer to that question.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. Minister of Colleges and Universities has the answer to a question previously asked.

TESTING OF MEDICAL STUDENTS

Hon. Mr. McNie: Mr. Speaker, I would like to reply to the hon. member for High Park, who asked the following question the other day:

Can the minister explain why applicants to the University of Western Ontario medical school are told they must first apply to a US corporation headquartered in New York to take a psychological test to see if they are fit to become Canadian doctors?

First of all, there is a test employed by all English-speaking medical schools in Canada called the MCAT—the Medical College Admissions Test. It isn't a psychological test. As I understand it, it is essentially an objective measure of academic achievement that has proved to have a high degree of success in predictability in academic areas, and I think all of us will agree it is only one of the criteria for measuring what makes a good doctor.

Mr. J. R. Breithaupt (Kitchener): Why go to the States?

Hon. Mr. McNie: According to Dr. Shute, the chairman of the Council of the Faculties of Medicine:

The weight given by the selection committees in Ontario schools to the MCAT is small, probably less than five per cent. The test, however, identifies the calibre of students applying to various schools throughout America. All medical schools in Canada are jointly accredited by the Association of Canadian Medical Colleges and the Association of American Medical Colleges.

This is the important thing, Mr. Speaker: He went on to say:

This permits our students access to post-graduate training facilities in the United States without examination.

Mr. Speaker: The oral question period has expired.

Petitions.

Report agreed to.

Mr. Speaker: Motions.

MOTION FOR INTERIM SUPPLY

Hon. Mr. White moves, seconded by Hon. Mr. Welch, that the Treasurer of Ontario be authorized to pay, and the Provincial Auditor be authorized to approve, the payment of the salaries of the civil service and other necessary payments, pending the voting of supply for the fiscal year commencing April 1, 1973, such payments to be charged to the proper appropriations following the voting of supply.

Mr. Speaker: Shall the motion carry?

Hon. E. A. Winkler (Chairman, Management Board of Cabinet): Mr. Speaker, I wonder if I could rise on a question of privilege for just one moment. It's been brought to my attention that we have a group of visitors in the gallery, a study group from Japan, and they are members of International Rotary visiting the chamber this afternoon.

Mr. Speaker: If I might speak to the point of privilege, the hon. members of this House are aware of the fact that the Speaker's gallery is reserved for important visiting persons—not that these people are not—but the important visiting persons are usually parliamentarians. I might further advise the House that the visitors are my guests and that I received a previous indication that I overlooked introducing them. I did not so overlook introducing them. They are not parliamentarians.

Mr. Reid: The House leader is wrong again.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, the motion put forward authorizes the Treasurer to spend, I would suppose, $7 billion, a tremendous sum of money, which means that through this motion the auditor can approve the expenditure of the sums that will eventually be discussed item by item and approved by the Legislature. Obviously there is no way that we are going to stand and obstruct such a motion, but it occurs to me there are a number of practices associated with this motion that the Treasurer and probably the Chairman of the Management Board of Cabinet ought to take under consideration.

The first, surely, is that interim supply should become more meaningful in this House than it has been, and as it is in many other Parliaments and Legislatures; that in fact we should only be asked to vote supply to carry the government through a month, or at the most three months of the fiscal year so that we are not giving carte blanche to the government to proceed with the total expenditure of the billions of dollars which eventually will be authorized by this House.

The second thing has to do with the authority of the cabinet itself to approve expenditures that are not approved by this House, nor in fact reported to them for final approval. I refer to the Management Board payments that have been mentioned by the Provincial Auditor in his most recent report. The auditor, as you know, indicated that half the costs of Ontario Place, as far as its construction was concerned, were met by these special authorizations from the Management Board.

I would simply say to you, sir, that we should not be asked to continue, year after year, with a procedure that I know everybody in the House finds so compelling, that in fact by the passage of this resolution we give carte blanche to the government to spend probably $6 billion to $7 billion. It simply means that for the rest of the session in the consideration of our work we become rubber stamps. They should obviously, in my opinion, bring forward interim supply only, and also announce to the House that they are going to bring—

An hon. member: Right! Right!

Mr. R. F. Nixon: —under some reasonable control the practice that has been growing inordinately of approving certain expenditures through Management Board orders only.

Hon. Mr. White: Mr. Speaker, if I may just reply very briefly—

Mr. Speaker: We have a motion before the House and I think if there are any other members who wish to speak it might be well to have them all speak.

Mr. MacDonald: Mr. Speaker, the only comment I would like to make, without getting into an extended debate on this, is I don't know how we're going to avoid the anomaly—and that's putting it mildly—of this kind of blank-cheque arrangement to the government when we have a sessional schedule beginning so late that we don't get a budget until we're into the new fiscal year.

I go back to the comments of the Premier yesterday or the day before with regard to what he envisages as the appropriate and the ideal pattern. It would seem to me that the ideal pattern would at least be to have the budget down before the new fiscal year begins. If we're going to delay as long as we've done for the last year or two in terms of getting the session going, we're getting almost as confused in our handling of the situation as the Liberals have been for years when they were lucky if they got the estimates passed by the end of the fiscal year in which the expenditures had been made.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Well, at least they had interim supply.

Mr. Renwick: Mr. Speaker, I have one comment to make. There are the obvious anomalies that have been drawn to the attention of the Treasurer, but I would like some assurance from the minister that it is the intention of the government to complete supply before the House rises for—whatever one wants to call it—the summer recess or whatever the other name is, and that we will not be dealing with supply at the end of this year when we should be completing supply as rapidly and efficiently as possible before the House rises for the summer adjournment.

I would also like the minister to comment about whether he sees any resolution to this kind of anomaly in his proposal that we should move to a calendar year for the fiscal year of the government rather than continue with this rather old fashioned fiscal year ending on March 31.

Mr. Reid: Mr. Speaker, if I may say a few words on this, I think this whole procedure is circumventing the responsibilities of the members of this Legislature. We arrived at the present system of responsible government through a long historical process in which the king, before he could receive the approval of his lords, had to listen to their grievances. The government is coming here year after year to ask us to vote interim supply with little explanation of what it has done in the interim between the sittings of the Legislature.

Perhaps the Treasurer or some of the members opposite who are on the select committee on the rules of the Legislature, might recall that the committee suggested that at the beginning of each session the Premier would rise in his place and give an accounting of the business of the government in the time between the last sitting and the present sitting of the Legislature.

My leader has referred to the matter of Ontario Place and the millions of dollars that were voted without any direct application to the Legislature to give approval for these public moneys to be spent; nor has there been any justification from the Premier or the cabinet benches for the amounts of money that were spent under Treasury Board orders.

I say to you, Mr. Speaker, that this practice is circumventing the Legislature as a whole, denigrating our responsibilities and is directly inimicable to the whole legislative process. I, for one, Mr. Speaker, am not prepared to continue with this practice of voting interim supply without some kind of justification or defence or explanation from the government side in regard to these funds to which I am asked to give approval when I have been given no reason to approve such funds.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: Mr. Speaker, I would like to—

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Grey-Bruce.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: I don't mind.

Mr. Speaker: I think it might be as well to let everyone speak and the hon. minister may reply. We'll not cut them off.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: I'm not going to wind up now.

Mr. Sargent: Mr. Speaker, my point is with regard to the public accounts standing committee. I would like to bring this to the attention of the House leader or the Treasurer in view of the fact that, progressively, the public is focusing on public accounts.

I feel, watching last year's performance of that very important committee, a great job was done by my two colleagues from this party on that committee. One of them is the chairman and one is a member so we only have one vote on that committee. In giving them tribute, I also pay a great tribute to the former Treasurer of Ontario, the member for Haldimand-Norfolk (Mr. Allan) for the fair-minded approach he took on this committee. Mr. Speaker, to me, having only one member of the Liberal Party as a voting member on this very important committee is not representative nor right nor fair.

I would like to ask the Treasurer or the House leader if they will rethink the fact and that there should be more representation on this committee than the 12 members who have been appointed.

Mr. Speaker: The motion has to do with the voting of supply.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: Mr. Speaker, I would like to say a few words before the Treasurer answers the questions that have been put forward.

I think it is very safe to say that this year the situation has arisen primarily because of the reorganization of government which will become apparent as we present the estimates to the House. It is not, in the future, the intention of the government to have to go through the procedure we are going through today; and we are doing it, as I say, simply because of the new method we will use in the presentation of estimates. In answering the question from the member for Grey-Bruce—

Mr. Bullbrook: What the minister is saying is completely wrong.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: Pardon?

Mr. Bullbrook: The minister is completely wrong.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: I am?

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Does the minister mean that this is a new procedure?

Hon. Mr. Winkler: No.

Mr. Bullbrook: They do it every year.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Does the minister mean that we won't have to do it again?

Hon. Mr. Winkler: No, no.

Mr. Reid: What's it got to do with government reorganization?

Hon. Mr. Winkler: Well, it's just that I cannot give the members the rest of the plan today. I don't think the Treasurer is in a position to tell them, unless he wants to. That's his prerogative.

But we will change the routine this year to reflect the change in the organization of government. And if the members will possess—

Mr. Reid: This is the last time the government votes supply?

Hon. Mr. Winkler: And if they'll possess their souls in patience for a few days, they'll find out.

Mr. Reid: Is this the last time the government votes supply?

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Hon. Mr. Winkler: And in regard to the question posed by the member for Grey-Bruce—

Mr. Speaker: Who was out of order.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: —I may have sympathy for his point of view, but I think he'll find that it is a formula that has been developed by the members of the committee; and certainly under the rules of the House we can have a look at it.

Mr. Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak? If not, the hon. minister.

Hon. Mr. White: Mr. Speaker, the hon. member for Samia suggested that we always vote supply. The difference is that we usually have the estimates in front of us. We haven't got the estimates in front of us this year because, unlike Ottawa, we have attempted to embrace the expenditure side as well as the revenue side in presenting our budget statement every year. And the reason the budget statement isn't available before the end of March, as indeed is our custom—

Mr. Reid: March 15.

Hon. Mr. White: —is because the Treasurer assumed this responsibility Jan. 15 and wanted another short while to come to grips with certain fundamental considerations.

So this is the sequence which leads to the expression of dissatisfaction we hear from the members of the opposition. I quite understand this, but this is the background to it. Certainly I would expect to bring in a budget before the end of March next year. This is an unusual year because of the change in ministerial responsibilities.

Funnily enough, I got a Teletype just a short while ago, just a few minutes ago, which says that Newfoundland Finance Minister John Crosbie says he will introduce his provincial budget in the Legislature on Friday. The last time a budget was introduced before the end of the fiscal year, March 31, was in 1968, and certainly it is true in many Legislatures that the budget does not come in before the end of the year.

As the Chairman of Management Board has touched upon, we will—

Mr. MacDonald: Newfoundland doesn't give us a pattern for duplication.

Mr. Drea: Tory government.

Hon. Mr. White: We will be presenting the estimates this year in several separate booklets relating to the new policy field committees.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: That is going to simplify things just like the telephone book.

Mr. Reid: Simple to the minister.

Hon. Mr. White: We think this will make the estimates more intelligible to the members of the Legislature, and equally important, more comprehensible to members of the public who have an interest in the area of resource development, or social development, or justice and so on. The Chairman of Management Board will be providing full details on that some time within the next couple of weeks.

The possibility of changing to a calendar year which the Premier has mentioned and which was drawn to our attention by the member for York—

Mr. R. F. Nixon: South!

Hon. Mr. White: —York South, is something that is very interesting to me personally. I mentioned the prospect to the members of the municipal liaison committee last Friday and their initial response was that to bring our fiscal year into synchronization with the 882 municipalities is the best thing we could do.

This possibility will be dealt with at greater length in the budget, with certain of the technical advantages and disadvantages being enunciated. Following public comment from those affected, a decision will be made.

I rather think that having a fiscal year which was coincident with the calendar year would fit better into a more balanced legislative session, with perhaps half of the workload in the fall and half of the workload in the late winter and spring. We believe it would fit in better with our own internal budget-making process and the rather sophisticated techniques we have developed in the last year or two for scrutinizing expenditures microcosmically and macrocosmically. So I think that deals with the various matters—

Mr. Singer: Oh, is that how they do it? Microcosmically and macrocosmically?

Hon. Mr. White: —which have been broached here in this short debate, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Lewis: As long as it's cosmic.

Mr. Singer: Yes, that certainly solves that. There will be no questions from here on in.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: The member for Downsview is right.

Mr. Speaker: Shall the motion carry? Those in favour of the motion will please say "aye."

Those opposed please say "nay."

In my opinion the "ayes" have it.

Motion agreed to.

Hon. Mr. Winkler moves that commencing tomorrow, and until further ordered, this House will not sit in the chamber on Wednesdays, such Wednesdays being reserved for meetings of the standing and select committees.

Mr. Bullbrook: It is to facilitate the cabinet, that is all.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, surely it would be reasonable and acceptable on all sides if the House leader would recognize the fact that the committees are not yet organized and that if they choose to organize tomorrow, which I presume is possible but has not been announced, there will be little or no work for them to do and many people have come a great distance to be in Toronto for the session which began very late indeed. Why don't we work tomorrow?

Mr. I. Deans (Wentworth): Mr. Speaker, further to the points raised by the Leader of the Opposition, I dread the thought of trying to make up those three hours immediately prior to the budget being introduced. I don't really relish the idea that we might be sitting at 3 or perhaps even 6 in the morning in an effort to make up the time. We don't have really enough time between now and budget date to complete the Throne Speech debate. I think there is a sufficient number of members who have indicated a willingness and a desire to speak in the Throne Speech debate that we should try to make available as much time as is humanly possible.

To my knowledge there is only one committee that is meeting tomorrow, and it is meeting at 10 in the morning. There is no reason why other committees can't meet in the morning or prior to 2 o'clock in the afternoon for the purpose of establishing themselves and choosing a chairman. I think that we should make better use of that time, even if it were only to deal with second readings of some other legislation the government has brought in; we could make better use of those hours than to have the afternoon free to sit in the sun or the rain or whatever happens to be outside.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Grey-Bruce.

Mr. Sargent: Mr. Speaker, I believe that this Legislature progressively sits less than any other Legislature in Canada. Further, to bring members here from all parts of Ontario and to say that there is a day in the middle of the week when we don't work because there is only one committee, I agree with the member for Sarnia that it is simply to facilitate the cabinet. I think we should get back down to business, get the business finished and get out of here.

Mr. Bullbrook: So that we formally record this, I say to the government House leader, through the Speaker, that nobody is fooled by this. He recognizes that the organization of those standing committees tomorrow is burdened with about 10 minutes' onus; that's all.

Mr. Singer: To confirm what the cabinet has already decided!

Mr. Bullbrook: That's all they'd have to do tomorrow.

The point that the hon. member for Wentworth makes is a completely valid one. Harken back, if you will, to last November and December, when night after night we were on our own, not sitting in this Legislature, and then at the 11th hour we found ourselves, in one circumstance of trauma, sitting from 2 o'clock in the afternoon until 10 o'clock the next morning.

The fact of the matter is that we have come long distances to do the business of our constituents. But we want to do it while this House is in session. We understand quite fully—although I shouldn't say quite fully, Mr. Speaker—

An hon. member: Withdraw the motion!

Mr. Bullbrook:—the impossibility sometime of reconciling the meetings of standing committees, especially during the time of the estimates, with the sitting of this House. But there's no answer. I invite a reasonable response now saying that there is business to be done by us tomorrow—public business, not direct constituency business that warrants that this Legislature should sit.

Mr. Lewis: Withdraw the motion.

Mr. C. E. McIlveen (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, I'd like to make a statement. The member for Wentworth said that there was only one committee sitting—

Mr. Lewis: Then why doesn't the—

Mr. McIlveen:—at 10 o'clock. Our committee on the utilization of educational facilities is sitting tomorrow afternoon at 1 o'clock.

Mr. Martel: Well sit in the morning then.

Mr. Lewis: Well, Mr. Speaker, with respect that is a committee which in fact probably shouldn't have planned to sit on a Wednesday, which is reserved for standing committees—

Mr. Stokes: Or presume to dictate to the House.

Mr. Lewis: —or to pretend that the House should abide by the whims of a select committee; although at least two very distinguished members sit on it.

But I would say, Mr. Speaker, that the House leader should simply withdraw the motion and reintroduce it again when we have productive work a week from tomorrow. We are wasting another day. Surely that's not necessary.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: Mr. Speaker, in consideration of what has been said, I want to say that I recognize the time required here to budget for people making a contribution to the Throne Speech debate. I have asked for the list of names of people who wish to make contributions. I'm prepared to adjust the business of the House accordingly. We will start sitting nights next week. And I think as a matter of courtesy I will withdraw the motion and reintroduce it next week. And we will sit tomorrow afternoon—

Mr. Bullbrook: Very good!

Mr. Lewis: Okay.

Mr. Deans: Excellent!

Mr. Singer: Now we'll see what the next—

Hon. Mr. Winkler: —but not subsequent Wednesdays.

Mr. Speaker: The motion then is withdrawn.

Mr. Lewis: That is greater flexibility than was shown in the last two years.

Mr. Speaker: It is agreed that the motion be withdrawn?

Agreed.

Introduction of bills.

ONTARIO BUREAU OF STATISTICS ACT

Mrs. Scrivener moves first reading of bill intituled, An Act to establish the Ontario Bureau of Statistics Act.

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

Mrs. Scrivener: Mr. Speaker, this bill repeals the present Statistics Act and establishes the Ontario Bureau of Statistics with a view to promoting a provincial social census at five-year intervals and with a view to broadening the data collecting process.

CHARITABLE INSTITUTIONS AMENDMENT ACT

Hon. Mr. Brunelle moves first reading of bill intituled, An Act to amend the Charitable Institutions Act.

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

Hon. R. Brunelle (Minister of Community and Social Services): The main purpose of this bill is to amend the Act to make provisions in it consistent with those in the Homes for the Aged and Rest Homes Act.

Mr. B. Gilbertson (Algoma): Mr. Speaker, before the orders of the day, I have a pleasant announcement to make, as I usually do each year about this time. We have maple sugar that the pageboys are now going to distribute to every member of the Legislature and the clerks as well, and the Hansard girls and so on. Mr. Speaker, this is with the compliments of the Algoma maple syrup producers.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Orders of the day.

Clerk of the House: The first order, resuming the adjourned debate on the amendment to the motion for an address in reply to the speech of the Honourable the Lieutenant Governor at the opening of the session.

THRONE SPEECH DEBATE

Mr. S. Lewis (Scarborough West): Mr. Speaker, as I rise, the House leader (Mr. Winkler) asks me sotto voce across the floor, "How long, Stephen, how long?"

An hon. member: Oh Lord, how long?

Mr. Lewis: Oh Lord, how long? Right. That's what he said. I may say that I have no idea, sir. But my preamble should take me to the adjournment hour and I'll get into the serious matter tomorrow.

I'm going to break the pattern of Throne debate speeches in this House: This is going to be a political speech, Mr. Speaker; not jovial, endearing or generous. Well, as a matter of fact, I'll amend that—it will begin by being generous. I'm sorry that not all the Treasury benchers are here. In a while I will have little vignettes to express of their un-failing character, but maybe they'll wander in.

In one respect I want to be generous, if that's the word, and say to the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. R. F. Nixon), or have his colleagues say to him in his absence, that particularly as he drew his remarks to a close yesterday, in the final part of the address which dealt with health care and builder proposals, I thought he was dead on and splendid. It was a very worthy contribution to the Throne debate.

I may say that I start in a mood as ebullient as he began with; an equally excellent frame of mind. We too draw extreme comfort from the by-election results, rather more comfort than the party opposite. Well, some of the members may think I'm reaching—

Hon. G. A. Kerr (Provincial Secretary for Justice): Reaching! He is straining.

An hon. member: I think he's retching.

Mr. Lewis: —but the fact of the matter is that those seats were profoundly difficult for us, we didn't kid ourselves. I think the outcome demonstrates a scenario in Ontario which is absolutely clear and now predetermined. I would think that 1975 will be purely a ritual exercise: the Liberals are likely to win most of the seats in which they came second in 1971; we will win all of the seats in which we came second in 1971: ipso facto, there will be no Tories left in the Legislature.

Thereafter we will vacillate between the forces of progressive and enlightened socialism and the reaction which is so well exemplified by the Liberal Party. As a matter of fact, the Liberal Party continues philosophically to be rooted in pre-Keynesian days, so variable in its responses as to be without equal. Mr. Speaker, the most significant thing about the Liberal wins in Huron and St. George is that they will now have 22 positions on every issue.

Mr. V. M. Singer (Downsview): The NDP was left with seven on the elevator issue.

Mr. Lewis: I disagree partially with the leader of the Liberal Party about the talentlessness of the government. I think they are fairly able by and large—the Solicitor General (Mr. Yaremko) will be relieved to know that—

Mr. J. E. Stokes (Thunder Bay): As he peeks through his fingers.

Mr. Lewis: I think that's the first nice thing I've said in 10 years to the Solicitor General and I will amend it as quickly as possible. Actually they are pretty able—

Hon. J. Yaremko (Solicitor General): I'll try hard to keep the member that way.

Mr. Lewis: I knew it. They lack coherence or discipline or cohesion. They have no esprit de corps, that's pretty obvious; as a matter of fact they have no corps, to be spirited. They are at times bumbling, addicted to error occasionally, ineffectual in many ways—surprisingly so, for a government of such time.

You know, Mr. Speaker, as with you, sir, I have a fondness for children's books and for children's illustrators and for fantasies. On the—

Mr. J. E. Bullbrook (Sarnia): Is this a policy statement?

Mr. Lewis: This is a policy statement.

On the walls of my office I have a favorite illustrator of children's books. His name is Maurice Sendak. One little section of the pictures is called "Where the Wild Things Are." It is a fantasy because the characters portrayed have luminous eyes, horns, tails, teeth that are filed—a little reminiscent of the House leader, although not an exact depiction—they all start off all right on every conquest, do these wild things, and then they collapse in disarray.

What has happened to the government, in the same way, is that the COGP revision of the cabinet I think has probably ruined the cabinet and every member of the cabinet now has serious difficulties. I love them all. I don't want to be unkind or uncharitable. I just want to choose a representative sample of some of them to suggest the difficulties which they are experiencing and why the weaknesses continue to flow. Then I want to get down to matters that are right at the core of the problem.

Mr. Speaker, as for the Minister of Health (Mr. Potter)—he was in here a moment ago and I hope he returns, because a large part of my remarks will be devoted to him.

Was there ever so beleaguered a man as the Minister of Health? Was there ever so botched a ministry? The Legislature thought that we had let loose a cat amongst the chickens and, like some Orwellian Animal Farm, the chickens devoured the cat. The Minister of Health is in profound turmoil.

The Minister of Education (Mr. Wells) is not here. Well, he is not so namby-pamby now as he used to be. He has more strut to his jaw, you will notice, but so do I. He is impeccably dressed. He is usually in the front row, his eyes darting almost uncontrollably as if drawn by magnets to seat No. 7. His aides are telling him that that is the destiny of all Ministers of Education; but he is in trouble. His tough and arbitrary application of the ceilings is winning opposition throughout Ontario. Some day he will speak out about cutbacks in the education bureaucracy; but as long as this Minister of Education continues to apply the ceilings that he presently exercises his road will be strewn with thorns.

Mr. Speaker, beside the Minister of Education is the Provincial Secretary for Social Development, Bob Welch.

Mr. R. F. Ruston (Essex-Kent): We never see him.

Mr. Lewis: "Bob whom?" they now say. "Where?" they now say. "What does he do?" they now say.

Whatever happened to the little giant of a man whose rhetoric rolled like the doyen of Prince Albert? Where is he in this Legislature? When he speaks, he speaks only of grapes. That's all, just of grapes—which, I admit, are a matter of considerable interest to him personally but not exactly within his purview of Social Development. He has withdrawn. He is unavailable. Dare I say it? It is said of the Social Development minister that he is indolent. In the corridors of his ministry they talk of the grapes of sloth.

I would like to speak, Mr. Speaker, for a moment of the provincial Treasurer (Mr. White)—an elegant, regal aristocrat he, preening with self-confidence. Look at him in question period. It is just a pleasure. He never suffers fools gladly. As a matter of fact, he never suffers anyone gladly. He has a fertile, imaginative mind; an acid, inflammatory tongue; a querulous, provocative temperament. I would predict that before the tenure of the provincial Treasurer is over, someone on the opposition side, probably the member for Grey-Bruce (Mr. Sargent), will invoke the Nova Scotia precedent to settle the debating point.

The provincial Treasurer is probably the only man in this House artful enough to say that the $55 million wasn't a loss; it just wasn't collected—and that will be further dealt with. He will be a splendid Treasurer, Mr. Speaker, but he will cause this government whole weeks of remorse.

Then there is the Provincial Secretary for Resources Development (Mr. Lawrence). I am sorry he isn't here—I am sorry they are not all here.

One begins to feel left out in the Throne Speech reply. It wasn't my place to say anything—maybe you know, Mr. Speaker, that as leader of the third party in the House, one can't be afforded any particular repute—but I'll tell you, sir, when the Leader of the Opposition in this House speaks in the Throne debate, those benches should be filled out of respect and interest. As a matter of fact, they should be far more filled—and the Speaker nods in agreement—when any member of the opposition is participating in this debate.

However, the Provincial Secretary of Resources Development is again a mystery, a sort of dismembered talent in the Legislature, relegated to leading the Group of Seven around the province, drawing on his vast experience in the taking of trips. Even the Parliamentary Assistant to the Premier (Mr. McKeough) removed energy resources from his purview. To this provincial secretary one is inclined to say: "Forget your private anguish of Cuba. Let it stop haunting you. Every politician has that experience once in his life. It is over. You are a respected politician. Come into your own again."

I have no idea whether he will accept the advice or can.

The Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Stewart), who was just here, demonstrated today with his acerbic responses to the member for York South (Mr. MacDonald) why we have a new reverence for his capacities as a man whose agricultural policies managed to disaffect almost all the farmers of Huron county.

To the Minister of the Environment (Mr. Auld) one can only see a truly startling metamorphosis from what went before. He is turning environmental preservation so far back in time that his entire ministry moves counter-clockwise.

Mr. Speaker, the Provincial Secretary for Justice (Mr. Kerr). I want the Solicitor General to tell him that he's a man of pathos. There is real poignancy in the social policy minister for Justice. There is the stuff of which Eugene O'Neill would have written if he had lived in Burlington! Oh for the olden days when the minister crunched his fist into his desktop and determined to lay low the corporate polluters! Now he is himself a slightly more corpulent shadow of his former self. He's had a series of degrading demotions, sapping his spirit and effectiveness. The greatest injustice to the member I suppose is that he is now the Provincial Secretary for Justice. One is reminded of F. Scott Fitzgerald's quote in "The Great Gatsby" that by the age of 48 he had "achieved such a limited excellence that everything after savoured of anti-climax." Not exactly an epitaph perhaps, but good reading for the Premier (Mr. Davis) some day.

Then there is the hon. Attorney General (Mr. Bales). I want to tell you something about the Attorney General. Never was the Attorney General more transformed, more enthused, more excited and more voluble than on the night of March 15 when Margaret Campbell won St. George. On that night the Attorney General breathed the greatest sigh of relief that he's breathed in a long time. Having arranged rather effectively for the defeat of Roy McMurtry and the maintenance of his post, he then went on to pretend to establish himself further in the ministry. I may say about the Attorney General that the public is still not secure that his department means business or speaks with authority in many of its undertakings.

Then, Mr. Speaker, the pièce de résistance of the cabinet, the Solicitor General.

Then, Mr. Speaker, the Minister of Natural Resources (Mr. Bernier). A well-intentioned bear of a man. Here is a minister destined to become the centre of controversy as no other. He heads a ministry so totally in the grip of the resource industries that it's difficult to extract one ounce of the public interest. Single-handedly this minister may provide all of northern Ontario for the opposition in the next provincial election and we welcome his compassion.

Who dares exclude the Minister of Revenue (Mr. Grossman) from any litany of luminaries? The Minister of Revenue once described himself as the father of citizen participation. Some of us thought he was the father of Larry Grossman and gave him no further credit to other claims. He is surrounded by trouble daily, sinking into the quicksand of his own argument and still he hurls defiance into the teeth of the mob. Later this week we will hear another orgy of self-congratulation by this minister of apologia. He'll find more infidels to blame for the absence of housing than there are houses.

He's like the little tailor striking seven at one blow. You have to admire him. But all the admiration in the world doesn't compensate for the failure of one housing policy after another during his tenure in the ministry, and while the programmes roll on the waiting list grows.

So there is an amiable dozen, and collectively they are enough to bring the government down. But they have at their head the Premier. They stand like the old pre-French Revolution aristocracy and they are headed by a man who could appropriately be characterized as Louis XIV.

I have to be extremely careful, Mr. Speaker. Once when I was criticizing the Education estimates, when the Premier was Minister of Education, I used the analogy of Louis XIV and I said that he was followed by a retinue of sycophants. In Hansard it came out as "a retinue of psychopaths." I was profoundly embarrassed. I have since learned the distinction and I appreciate its validity although there is sometimes confusion.

The Premier has lost contact with mortal man. He has become too political, a most remarkable transformation from the days of John Robarts when one said otherwise. The barefoot sharpshooters of Bay St., as they are called affectionately, have surrounded him and he has surrendered ultimate judgement to a group of political professionals isolated from the cabinet, isolated from his party, isolated from the Legislature, infatuated by power and their own sense of mortal rightness. The problem is that group around—

Mr. B. Gilbertson (Algoma): The member has got to be kidding.

Mr. Lewis: Now, now! The member made his most incisive contribution of the session before the orders of the day. Don't let him spoil it now.

I want to say, Mr. Speaker, that it is the old philosopher-king business, and even the newspapers are now picking it up with that rather painful cartoon in the Globe and Mail the other day about fiddling while Rome burned. The Premier is in difficulty, in very great difficulty, because he has so drastically isolated himself from the people of the province and from those who are best equipped to give him advice. The old regime is cracking. They know it over there, those countless hordes—sure they know it. They know it. They feel it in their bones.

Mr. F. Drea (Scarborough Centre): Never more confident.

Mr. Lewis: The member laughs nervously.

Mr. Drea: Me?

Mr. Lewis: The interjections from the hon. member for Scarborough Centre are even more incoherent than usual, if that is possible, Mr. Speaker. A little too much heckling. A little too boisterous; stopping me in the hall, Mr. Speaker, grabbing my forearm and begging for reassurance. I won't give it to them, because I believe that the—

Mr. Drea: Not me.

Mr. Lewis: Not the member for Scarborough Centre. Not him. Good Lord, no.

Mr. Drea: Good. Let's have that clear.

Mr. Lewis: In that sense, Mr. Speaker, the by-elections were critical and there is no need to pretend or dissemble about them, neither for us nor the government.

Never before in 30 years did two Tory seats fall simultaneously. It was a singular achievement for the Premier. It speaks of a deep malaise, inarticulate in public, hard to pick up from time to time, but there. It was much more than a traditional slap on the wrist and every member of the Tory party knows it and is anxious about it and is apprehensive about the future.

Now, they probably want me—I know if they had the opportunity they would ask me—to outline the reasons for the underlying discontent in Huron and in St. George and in the province now as we see it. They would want me to deal indirectly with the Throne Speech and I will deal only indirectly with it, Mr. Speaker, because it is really indigestible prattle. I would much prefer to deal with the issues which are alive and current in the province today. Some of this may be old ground and some of it may be new. At the end I want to raise a matter which seems to me to strike right to the heart of the Tory regime, and why it is gradually deteriorating in power and influence in the province.

First, Mr. Speaker—I did not believe it before but I believe it now—the conflicts of interest cut deep in the electorate. I was very sceptical about that but I had a feeling, as one knocked on doors and sounded public opinion and tried to understand what was happening, that the conflicts of interest have gone deep for the government. I have to admit that the opposition did rather less than at least one of the newspapers. You see, the government must say to itself "It wasn't just John Zaritsky who was after our hides." He is out in Leningrad or Paris, or somewhere of that kind.

Mr. R. F. Nixon (Leader of the Opposition): Is he attacking the government there?

Mr. Lewis: He is exhorting the masses to revolt. It is really a sort of secret society of whom the sole members are Richard Doyle and Clark Davey who have joined to sink the Conservative ship; they have not done badly and they continue to do reasonably well and, uncharacteristically, I salute them for it. It is the last salute I'll provide.

The second thing, Mr. Speaker, is that the Fidinam affair cut deep, it seems to me. What is more the deep public suspicion continues. One of the problems is that there have been no subsequent disclosures. The Premier's performance in the question period this afternoon will not do him credit. It is another chink in the armour. It is another feeling, vague in the electorate, that there is much to hide and that they refuse to speak openly. What the Leader of the Opposition revealed at the end of his speech yesterday about the Ontario Hydro building, and about the associated interests in OISE and the Educational Television Authority cannot but develop the sense, publicly, that there is something profoundly wrong in the corporate relationships in the Conservative Party. And the refusal of the Premier to discuss political disclosure of financial support when he already moves in that direction reinforces that suspicion. That suspicion is reinforced on every front.

Mr. Speaker, some little time ago, Warren Gerard of the Toronto Star wrote about the member for Chatham-Kent (Mr. McKeough): "The Quiet Comeback of a Cabinet Star." He talked about his new powers and authority in the field of energy resources and he talked about what a heavy day the member was having and how, in the afternoon, and I'm now quoting: ". . . he had a private meeting with Davis and executives of Imperial Oil Ltd. It was a long meeting and attending was Bill Kelly—"

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Shameful!

Mr. Lewis: "—a behind-the-scenes influence in the Davis government and the chief bag man for the Ontario Conservative Party."

Mr. Speaker, you will forgive my language when I ask what the hell was William Kelly doing at a meeting of Imperial Oil and the Premier and the assistant on energy to discuss energy policies? He wasn't pouring drinks, I'll let you know.

Mr. I. Deans (Wentworth): Answer that!

Mr. Lewis: And one would like to know how the government expects to dispel the suspicion about the involvement of the Tory Party and the financiers in the corporate community if it engages in that kind of thing.

Do you remember the Premier before the Tory convention when he said: "I want the processes of politics and government in Ontario to be open and above cynicism, suspicion or reproach." Well, he doesn't achieve it by inviting his chief bag man to high level meetings on energy policy with Imperial Oil.

Again to my surprise — because I was skeptical, a little cynical myself, Mr. Speaker — I have to concede that the Fidinam affair cut deep, that it is probably a permanent wound and unless the Tories are willing to talk in advance of their legislation in itself about those who support them, the legislation in itself will not be sufficient to rescue public admiration.

The third area I want to discuss, Mr. Speaker, is one to which the member for Brant (Mr. R. F. Nixon) alluded yesterday and that is the question of regional government. I myself knocked on many a door in Huron county—with apparently not quite the influence of success one would have wished—but regional government for this government has become a very serious Achilles heel.

It is conceptually valid, and in principle those of us who supported regional government did it because it made sense to amalgamate a vast number of municipalities into more efficient units. But, in the process we went all wrong in the implementation and the people in Huron, and now all over the province, demonstrate their apprehensiveness on what regional government portends.

The word filters through, Mr. Speaker, into every area of Ontario. I'm surprised, as a travelling politician who does occasional open-line shows, does occasional interviews, who does occasional press conferences in remoter parts of the province, to be beset by questions about regional government.

I am surprised to be asked questions about why St. Catharines wanted to secede, to be asked questions about the cost of the police force in the Niagara region subsequent to the introduction of regional government. I am surprised to be asked about costs in Muskoka and York and the bills subsequently to defray those costs, to be asked about what has happened in Ottawa-Carleton.

The only study that has emerged, and a kind of quiet study, called "The Investigation of Financial Impact of the Introduction and First Year's Operation for the Regional Municipality of Ottawa-Carleton" says, as its main conclusion: "Changes in the rates of taxation in particular municipalities were much higher than was anticipated at the time the legislation was introduced."

Word filters through about regional government west of Metro and about the abdication of the Steele report and the use of crude political muscle to satisfy the needs of the member for Burlington (Mr. Kerr) and the member for Halton (Mr. Snow), who sits now in the House as Minister of Government Services and, above all, the Premier himself. They drew the boundaries of regional government west of Metropolitan Toronto with a profound contempt for the economic and social realities of that region. In the area east of Metro, Mr. Speaker, there has been enough clamour that it has penetrated even to the north.

I remember quite vividly a public meeting at Port Hope High School when a number of members of the NDP caucus and myself attended to discuss with citizens questions of regional government. I have never experienced, as a politician, such a range of feeling and passion and sensitivity as came from that meeting that day of more than 100 people, at any given time in the room, presenting briefs and making observations.

I had not realized for a moment the depth of feeling that was involved. And the Tories are so insensitive to what they are doing about regional government in those parts of the province that they even publish it openly.

*Mr. Speaker, there was recently printed in the March 8 issue of the Port Hope Guide a quite amazing series of questions and answers about regional government. The answers being given by the parliamentary assistant to the Treasurer, the member for Grenville-Dundas (Mr. Irvine).

And I want to read you some of the questions and some of the answers because I don't know of anything more illuminating of government policy than what is reproduced here.

Question from the people in the area: "Why was there no consultation in this area prior to the announcement of this specific proposal?"

Answer from the member for Grenville-Dundas: "The province felt and still believes that discussions are bound to be more productive if they focus on a specific proposal."

There is a man who takes the bit in his teeth. He says, "to the devil with discussion with you in advance." He'll make a specific proposal and that will be the basis of the argument.

"We therefore made," said the member, "the proposal to the whole area at once and after a week or two began an extremely intense round of meetings with local representatives. We are now involved in an equally intensive set of follow-up meetings and public discussions."

"Is it possible," questioners asked, "for citizens or citizens' groups to talk directly to cabinet members?"

Answer: "Within reason it is quite possible. For the purposes of this proposal probably more can be accomplished if you speak with your MPP."

Well, can you imagine speaking to the MPP from Durham about regional government for Port Hope-Cobourg?

Interjection by an hon. member.

Mr. Lewis: "And if you can't speak to your MPPs first, and the minister is not available, they will arrange that you meet one of his parliamentary assistants."

Mr. Worton: That is what you call passing the buck.

Mr. Lewis: How the hierarchy grows.

And then the question: "We are told that anything we say will have little effect; then why do you ask for submissions, letters and briefs?"

Answer: "Again, I do not know who told you that anything you say will have little effect. When good, sound and rational arguments are represented, the government will make changes."

Well, I'd like to know where the government has made changes and where they will make changes. The only change in terms of regional government east of Metropolitan Toronto is in the extension of deadlines for briefs until the end of March—and that is the sole change that has been made.

And then the question: "Why is it not possible to follow this sequence: planning, government restructure, and development?"

And the parliamentary assistant answers in part: "If local government is reformed so that the resource space of a large region is made available to every constituent municipality, the need to compete so madly for assessment is greatly reduced and the incentive to develop a rational land use plan is greater."

I would suggest that the process should go: general provincial planning, local government restructuring, local government planning, co-operative implementation of the two levels of plans.

Last question: "Why doesn't the government come out with its overall plan for the province, the all-area, all-region concept?"

Answer: "We are now beginning to develop such a plan. It will not be ready for discussion for at least two years. But the areas of high priority for reorganization have now had reorganization and we can now try to get away from the piecemeal approach."

Well, you know Mr. Speaker, in those questions and answers the entire Tory philosophy is exposed. And Mr. Speaker, it means that regional government has been profoundly mutilated in this province. I know if you could, sir, you would agree with me—but you're not wont to intervene in an obstreperous fashion.

The government has hanged itself on its own strangled logic. It's a kind of political self-immolation. Many people have written feelingly about regional government and strongly about regional government. And the people in Port Hope-Cobourg, and the people in Streetsville, and the people in Dundas, and the people in Wentworth county generally feel that there is a sort of calculated duplicity in process.

Mr. Speaker, let me tell you how the New Democratic Party feels. We supported the principle of regional government, and we still do, and we are not interested in trading off moratoria in return for certain views on regional government. But we are no longer prepared to support regional government in this province until four essential conditions are fulfilled in every case:

First, that the government makes known its overall intentions without, may I say, however, harshly, the dishonesty that was inherent in what was said during the Huron by-election; second, that there is appropriate and adequate consultation in advance with the people who are affected; third, and most important in a very real sense, that fiscal reform accompanies the introduction of regional government in every case; and, fourth, that there is a guarantee of subsequent evaluation written into the legislation.

Mr. Speaker, those are the only conditions on which we will in the future be willing to support regional government in this province, because regional government is serving to dis-affect vast numbers of people, to make them cynical and abject about the political process and to develop a kind of hostility in the hinterland of Ontario, which is not appropriate in the field of politics. I will have more to say about that in a short time.

Next Mr. Speaker, I want to speak about the question of health. This is a difficult field, as it were. No words are strong enough, Mr. Speaker. The Health Ministry is what can be described as a disaster area. Every day rings down the curtain on yet another wretched scene played in this seemingly endless drama.

I shall try to be as little repetitive as possible, but I think certain points have to be made.

First, Dr. Kinloch's charges and the documents which accompanied them, all of which were in the hands of the minister and the Premier, have never once been refuted by this government.

An hon. member: They can't be.

Mr. Lewis: Not once, and that is extraordinary. I cannot remember in my political experience in this Legislature a cri de coeur of the kind that came from Dr. Kinloch, an attack on a minister and on the government that was so unsparring, a rapier-like dissection of the ministry, with all kinds of charges and documents produced, and not a single defence coming from the government.

It is inconceivable that the Minister of Health didn't stand before the orders of the day and say what he would say. It is inconceivable that the Premier doesn't consider this serious enough—or perhaps he does quietly to himself—to stand in the House and respond to the charges that were made by Dr. Kinloch.

May I say, Mr. Speaker, that the reason there has been no response is that Dr. Kinloch's charges are irrefutable. OHIP is a shambles and the $50-million constraint package was flushed down the drain by irresponsible neglect and obstinacy.

Mr. Speaker, Dr. Kinloch's suggestions should go on the record because they are fascinating. I hope the House will bear with me. Perhaps my sense of fascination and theirs differ. But amongst the documents which Dr. Kinloch submitted, or circulated, to the Leader of the Opposition and myself was something that I never dreamed to get hold of, and that was the actual accounting of how the savings would be made.

We talk in broad terms about a $50-million constraint package; we talk in broad terms about 15 or 20 per cent cuts. But what Dr. Kinloch did in his submission to the policy and priorities board was to make an actual number of specific suggestions with percentages tied to them, which suggestions were in large measure accepted by that committee of cabinet. What Dr. Kinloch did in the summary of his conclusions at the end of 1971, is that he said:

It will be seen that it is quite impossible for OHSIP to effect a 15 per cent saving over present costs without either a radical switch away from fee-for-service for at least half the doctors, or introduction of deterrent fees or deductibles, or a considerable reduction in the percentage of the fee schedule paid by OHSIP, or very strict and rigid limitations of payments to basic necessary medical care.

It was largely the latter, the strict and rigid limitation of payment to basic necessary medical care, that was submitted and that was approved. I want to put it on the record, Mr. Speaker, because as I stand here on behalf of this party, when the constraint package is introduced these will be its components.

First, Dr. Kinloch suggested the implementation of computer rules, strict adherence to fee schedules and OHSIP'S interpretation thereof by all agencies. The accurate estimate was not possible, he said, but it would be in the range of a saving of three to five per cent of present costs. It was approved by the policy and priorities board.

Second, he suggested strict unilateral enforcement by medical adjudicators of the clause permitting payment for medical necessity only, which refers to individual extra visits, unnecessary full assessments, bogus consultations, etc. The estimated potential savings—if every doctor was paid for one fewer routine visit a day—would be $17 million a year, that is, four per cent of the cost. Again, it was approved by the policy and priorities board.

Third, he suggested greatly stepped-up production of profiles, detection of over-utilization, and the imposition of formula payments on high-cost doctors. The savings—if five per cent of the doctors were put on a formula payment of 60 per cent of schedule instead of 90 per cent—would be $5 million a year, that is, 1.5 per cent. Again, it was approved by the policy and priorities board.

Further, Dr. Kinloch went on to suggest replacing existing fee-for-service benefits for immunizations, outpatient laboratory services, well baby and certain psychiatric services, and to establish any new services—such as dental—with public programmes budgeted through the Ministry of Health. The savings, he said, would be considerable, perhaps one per cent of total cost. Again, it was approved by cabinet.

Fifth was the limitation of certain investigation and treatment services to those based upon standards for care developed jointly with appropriate professional groups. Sizeable savings, he said, could be 2.5 per cent of the total cost.

Then there are the last two suggestions which he ultimately made about salaries or sessional payments where work volume is steady, that is, chronic care, emergency rooms, community clinics, health centres, pathology services, etc. He says, under savings:

In the 10 or 12 places where these new projects are in effect, there is always a saving over fee-for-services payments, generally about 15 per cent, plus administrative savings applied to all facilities; they might save one per cent of the total cost.

Finally, with budget payments for laboratory and radiology departments in hospitals, for both inpatients' and outpatients' services, savings would be considerable and could be as high as 30 per cent of lab costs—two per cent of total cost. All of that together came to the 15 per cent saving which Dr. Kinloch had been requested to arrive at.

Mr. Speaker, may I point out that all of those approaches save one, and it's not consequential, were approved by cabinet. This key committee of cabinet went on to make further recommendations itself to bring the level to 15 per cent.

Can I point out to you, Mr. Speaker, what one of the things Dr. Kinloch did—and, again, it's the first time I have ever seen it; we discussed it in caucus as a matter of some fascination—is that he discussed salary in a broader sense. He suggested, as a possible approach, salary or partial salary for all doctors or specialists only or for hospital work only. He pointed out that the advantages show predetermined costs; an average net income can be determined; and it would be publicly defensible to administer.

He pointed out that the disadvantages would likely be an outcry from the medical profession. He gave an estimate: An average gross of $45,000 to the 8,000 active doctors would cost $360 million, a saving of about 25 per cent plus administrative savings.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I may say that to those of us in the New Democratic Party a gross income of $45,000 on the average for doctors in this province is a perfectly acceptable income. And we think they can handle it quite comfortably. It would undoubtedly be a reduced income for a number of medical practitioners, but in terms of the public imperative it seems to us a proposal which the government should seriously have considered.

Mr. Speaker, I'm going to get to that in a little while. In his memo to Dr. Charron, the deputy minister, dated Dec. 22, 1971, Dr. Kinloch said, and I quote:

As we prepare for implementation of a constraint package aimed at ensuring more appropriate and economical use of provincial health insurance programmes, we should keep in mind the combination of factors which produced the current level and rate of increase of expenditures. The most important of these are:

(1) Lack of planning forced by the precipitate decision to enter Medicare and the consequent compromise administration.

(2) An operations orientation which placed primary, almost exclusive emphasis upon prompt payment of submitted claims.

(3) Acceptance of the OMA fee schedule without adequate safeguards, and inability or unwillingness to elaborate upon, modify or define items in that schedule.

(4) Inadequate communication with both public and profession regarding the aims, limitations, policies and procedures of the plan.

(5) Political meddling with the organization administration and benefit structure of the plan.

(6) Failure to recognize that hospital and medical care programmes must be integrated.

May I point out to you, Mr. Speaker, that what in effect Dr. Kinloch is saying—and what we in the New Democratic Party have said for a number of years since the implementation of this plan—is that these kinds of savings should have occurred at the outset. And that these reasons enumerated by Dr. Kinloch imperilled the entire plan and have brought us to this sorry pass.

We learned almost by accident, because of a supplementary estimate, of the question of doctors' incomes and the additional $50 million. And we learned from Dr. Kinloch of the 15 per cent constraint package.

Mr. Speaker, if that 15 per cent had been applied to the total expenditure in this field since Oct. 1, 1969, when it should have been applied—a total expenditure of $1,508 million—we would have saved $233,741,000 in the interim. And that money, Mr. Speaker—not the $50 million but the nearly quarter of a billion dollars—is what this government has squandered through maladministration of the plan since Oct. 1, 1969; and one need make no mistake about it.

As a matter of fact, Mr. Speaker, to get the full sense of that, if you apply that kind of figure to the 1972-1973 estimates we could have covered the cost of the Ministry of the Attorney General, the Ministry of Consumer and Commercial Relations, the Ministry of Industry and Tourism, the Ministry of Labour, the total for the office of the Lieutenant Governor to the office of the Provincial Auditor, and an entire dental care plan for everyone in this province between the ages of two and 12. And as the final exemplary capping feature, all the indemnities for every member of this esteemed Legislature.

Let me take it a step further, Mr. Speaker.

Well, the number of Tories to whom I speak affects one little—

Mr. R. F. Nixon: If the Solicitor General were to leave, the Tories would be all gone.

Mr. Lewis: I know that at least the cabinet is awesomely represented.

Mr. Speaker, I want to take it further. The refusal to accept Dr. Kinloch's suggestions and the implications for the entire plan cannot be lightly dealt with by this Legislature. But the third area to which I make reference is the unfolding of the administrative bungling. The $55 million which was referred to in the Provincial Auditor's report, which is not a matter of "synchronization", or whatever word it was the provincial Treasurer used—that man has an infinite capacity for Fowler's English Usage—but $55 million was not collected. The only—

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order, I would like to bring to your attention, sir, that there is only one member of the government of Ontario present in the Legislature at this time—

Mr. Bullbrook: Arrogance. Arrogance!

Mr. R. F. Nixon: —to listen to this aspect of the opening of this debate—

Hon. Mr. Yaremko: That is no point of order!

Mr. Deans: It is a point of order!

Mr. R. F. Nixon: —and I feel that it should be recorded in Hansard, because it is going to be a matter of considerable debate in the future. The arrogance of this government is nothing but open conceit!

An hon. member: Exactly!

Mr. R. F. Nixon: It stinks; it absolutely stinks!

Mr. Bullbrook: One cabinet minister to listen to the leader of the New Democratic Party! That's what they think of the people of Ontario!

Mr. Lewis: As I look at the treasury benches, I have never seen them more open or receptive than they are at this time.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Here comes one balloon floating in!

Mr. Lewis: I am not sure I consider this adequate compensation, Mr. Speaker. I may say that aesthetically it was almost more pleasing—

Mr. Bullbrook: It gives it a degree of balance though.

Mr. M. C. Germa (Sudbury): They're called the anchor men—like two bookends.

Mr. Lewis: I know that my words unfailingly reach the populace. Who cares of these mere transient representatives of the public weal? They will come and go.

The third area of administrative bungling involves the $55 million outlined in the Provincial Auditor's report. I may say, Mr. Speaker, that was a decision, almost an inconceivable decision, which was born of the shambles which confronted the ministry at the time. And although the Minister of Health was immensely sanguine about the stewardship of Mr. Martin, his deputy minister, over this $55-million miscue, the fact of the matter is that it says something about the Ministry of Health.

Fourth, Mr. Speaker, I want to point out to you that medical incomes have passed all reason. I am sorry to put that point again, but if they are to be continued without immediate intervention on the part of this minister, they will bankrupt the plan. Medical incomes were increasing in the latter years of the 1960s by 8.8 per cent per year; in the first year of the plan by 10 per cent; and in the second year of the plan by 12 per cent. If they continue even at the 8.8 per cent rate, they will cost us $1,272 million more than should be the case through the period of the 1970s.

Fifth, as one looks at this Ministry of Health, which is falling apart before our very eyes—and I may say that the hon. member for Muskoka (Mr. Miller) knows the respect we have for him in this party; I don't know why he is lost in the middle of the rump to my left—

Mr. C. E. McIlveen (Oshawa): He is not lost.

Mr. D. C. MacDonald (York South): He is the leaven in that unleavened loaf.

Mr. Lewis: —because he clearly has capacity—but perhaps he will convey for me to the minister—

Mr. R. F. Nixon: That's a fate no one deserves!

Mr. Lewis: I didn't think it needed to be drawn attention to. I felt, Mr. Speaker, that the parliamentary assistant to the Ministry of Health might draw to the minister's attention that the entire department is falling apart; it's not just a question of OHIP and of hospitals.

I want to point out, Mr. Speaker, that the arbitrary five per cent limit on the operational budget and capital expenditures of hospitals in the province is nonsensical; it has been employed often without thought, and it has done destructive damage to many little communities.

I don't often receive this kind of thing from this particular source, Mr. Speaker, but very recently, I received a petition of 2,900 signatures from citizens in Pembroke, protesting the cutbacks in the Pembroke General Hospital. Before the cutbacks, Pembroke General Hospital had 156 active treatment beds; then 30 beds were removed. Pembroke Civic Hospital had 121 active treatment beds; then 27 beds were removed. These 57 beds represent 20 per cent of all the active treatment beds in Pembroke; and they were removed without providing any alternative care.

And that area needs right now 23 psychiatric beds, because it has an excellent department of community psychiatry. There are none. It needs 11 rehabilitation beds. There are none. It needs 22 more chronic beds. In other words, at the moment, it needs 55 beds in addition to the original complement and it was cut by 20 per cent. And when you look at the ratios for Pembroke, which serves a catchment area of 90,000 to 100,000 people, you find that the number of beds per 1,000 is somewhere in the two to three range whereas it is in the four to five range in most of the rest of the province.

It shows the extent to which an absence of planning destroys basic health care.

It is not only that, it is not only the foolhardy arbitrary ceilings on the five per cent administrative cutback which the minister applied, it's also what it's doing, Mr. Speaker, to questions of hospital bargaining and hospital negotiations.

Mr. Speaker, we in this caucus will never be able to convey to the government what we feel about the plight of the hospital workers in this province. But let me tell you, sir, that when the Minister of Health stood on his feet and said that he would apply a five per cent ceiling in the next fiscal year, he imposed a brutal wage control on hospital workers, a selective wage control on hospital workers unlike any other group in the province. Now they are all going to hospital arbitration boards—all of the hospitals are going that way—because they can't possibly bargain under those circumstances. Let me show you what happened after the minister made his statement.

The hospital workers, in this case represented by the London and District Building Service Workers Union, were in bargaining with the Norfolk General Hospital in Simcoe—I think that's the right hospital—and in the midst of the bargaining the minister's statement came out. So the consultant representing the hospital wrote to the Ministry of Labour and said as follows:

In light of the general guidelines restricting hospitals to a maximum of five per cent in wage increases, as announced by the Ministry of Health, the seven per cent average increase as offered by the hospital in negotiations is hereby withdrawn. The hospital is prepared to grant a five per cent increase to the employees in accordance with the above-mentioned guidelines.

So the hospital workers, already the worst-paid group in the entire public sector, have the offer from the hospital lowered as a result of the guidelines imposed by the Minister of Health.

But it is not only the question of the hospital workers and the effect it has on hospital beds. Every day there is a new absurdity.

A couple of days ago on radio station CFRB in the city of Toronto, the Minister of Health made reference to dental care for children. No discussion of how it's to be financed. No discussion of the plans. No discussion of possible fee for service. No discussion of whether it would be done by nurses or by dentists—the kind of irresponsible public announcement which cannot possibly be made in the midst of this shambles of a department.

Further, Mr. Speaker, the story of community clinics is equally depressing. It will be interesting to hear what the Minister of Health has to say about the Ottawa experiment, because in fact the Provincial Secretary for Resources Development guaranteed to the community association in Ottawa that the government would support the clinic; the government put $60,000 of public money into that clinic and then the Minister of Health turned his back on it.

On Nov. 10, 1972, the Ministry of Health tried quietly to scuttle the financial viability of the clinics at the Soo and at St. Catharines and it was only because it was discovered that the position was reversed.

Last night, Professor John Hastings, at a public meeting on community clinics discussing the Hastings report, said that at the recent meeting of health ministers, eight ministers of eight provinces had approved his report, one province had given conditional approval and the only province which was equivocal, Mr. Speaker, was the Province of Ontario. Professor Hastings made the point that the view of community clinics in Ontario largely depends on what side of the bed certain people get out of in the morning. And everyone gets into the act, Mr. Speaker, everyone gets into the act.

Not very long ago, earlier this month, the Provincial Secretary for Social Development emerged from his catacombs and announced something called "Community Living for the Mentally Retarded in Ontario, a New Policy Focus." Mr. Speaker, let me tell you something about this, because it really bothered me at the time and I want to get it off my chest now.

This document is a hoax and it's cruel and it's irresponsible, when so many people in this province who are personally affected lean on every word about the mentally retarded, to put out a document like this kind—spurious, inconsequential, totally irrelevant—and pretend to call it a new concept of living—community concept of living for the mentally retarded.

The document said, as though it were some kind of blessed revelation, that the government had introduced a number of Acts during the 1960s and then says, "despite these changes there has been little overall improvement in the actual pattern of care received by the retarded." Well that's for sure. That's certainly true in this province.

Then the document goes on to say, "in either case—" referring to various forms of treatment, "—services geared to the needs of the retarded are being neglected." Then it goes on to say that "they should be provided in an institutional setting," and there is a lot of nonsensical gobbledy-gook.

That's all, that's all they say in this policy paper—that community support for the mentally retarded is more desirable than institutional support.

My colleague from Parkdale (Mr. Duksza) could have told you that 20 years ago. And when Dr. Franks was superintendent of the Ontario Hospital School at Smiths Falls, as long ago as 1963, he begged this government to go to community support for the mentally retarded.

The government outlines the survey of needs—they've been outlined a hundred times—they have this specious, vacuous, trifling document, produced by a task force, saying community care is necessary. Then they have the audacity to produce the Williston report recommendations, which came down, Mr. Speaker, in August, 1971 and have not been acted on to this day, and which advocate everything that is in this document.

It is this kind of really insubstantial material flowing from the Ministry of Health which truly plumbs the depths of its disarray. I would have been ashamed, as a minister of the Crown, to stand at a press conference and produce a document of this kind and raise the hopes of people across the province as though there is anything in this of any kind—not a single undertaking. Another document for discussion inviting opinion and review.

I could go on for ever. The per diem rates for psychiatric hospitals remain low. The staff problems in psychiatric hospitals remain the same. We now have more than enough doctors in the Province of Ontario, according to the Ontario Council of Health. Why then are there so many under-doctored areas?

We are going to have a Throne Speech bill to strengthen the College of Physicians and Surgeons. That's the last thing which this province needs. Public health is not functioning appropriately in this province because there's no commitment to preventive medical care.

The ministry in every single aspect is in a hopeless mess. I don't doubt that we have a highly sophisticated medical apparatus in the province, but I don't know how long it's going to last.

One hardly knows where to begin or what to suggest. After all, we've had endless reports—the Commission on the Healing Arts, the Council of Health. We probably should have a standing committee to look into the discrepancies in payments in OHIP and Dr. Kinloch's charges, but that isn't going to solve the problem. I therefore make these observations on behalf of my party.

This session there must be a plan produced for the next five years which shifts totally away from hospital care to alternative patterns of delivery or we will never be able to control the costs. That doesn't mean we won't have active treatment hospitals, but unless there is an alternative plan for delivery we will never be able to control costs.

Further, Mr. Speaker, we have to deal with the medical profession. I guess there is really only one way to deal with them. The government will have to decide on an appropriate percentage of the gross provincial budget. I don't set it arbitrarily. There are many more capable of arriving at the figure than we who do not have the expertise at hand. The government should arrive at an appropriate percentage of the gross provincial product to cover all health care in this province that presently exists, plus dental care and plus drugs, and within that overall percentage the money is distributed to the medical profession and to those areas where the cost must be covered, and not a penny more.

Mr. Speaker, may I say to you that in many western countries that percentage is roughly five per cent. It is interesting to note that in the Province of Ontario we now spend almost exactly five per cent of our gross provincial product for medical care costs of all kinds, and we do not now cover drug costs and dental costs. So if a clear implication of what I am saying is that doctors' incomes will be reduced, then that is a legitimate implication to draw.

Let me go further, Mr. Speaker. When sorting out the method of payment of this sum, determined in that fashion, we will simply have to sit down with the doctors themselves. I think they should be consulted—after all they are the recipients of public funds—and work out the method of payment that they find congenial within the maximum determined by government. This means that the government will have to set the fee schedule itself as a public responsibility through the Ministry of Health; and that the government will pay 100 per cent of that fee schedule within the limits of the money arranged.

Gradually some doctors will clearly go on salaries, as we extend salaries to those who service hospitals and as we extend salaries to those who work in community clinics. There may be some who choose capitation grants, but the fee schedule will be set by government. We will pay it all, and no more, and the only way in which a doctor can operate outside the plan is if he operates or she operates wholly outside the plan, which means that the patient pays entirely and cannot claim from OHIP.

Mr. Speaker, that seems to us to be the only way to handle it. As we see it, the problem with the suggestion put forward by the Leader of the Opposition yesterday is, if you are going to have less money to pay in the last quarter of the year, what you are really saying to the doctors is, to overservice the population during the low service period of the year in the spring and summer and do not be available to service them during the high demand period of the year during the fall and winter. It just won't work.

The money has to be taken out; you have to have the fee schedule set by government and you have to relate that fee schedule to the total amount of money and to the participation of the doctors. I think that puts us pretty clearly on record. We would wish that every doctor in the province operated within the plan. But they will not have one foot in and one foot out. They will have to remove themselves entirely, if they don't want to participate.

Further, Mr. Speaker, the senior civil service must be changed. It is now a case of bureaucracy run amuck. It is obstructing, impeding, hindering. It provides every obstacle known in the bureaucracy to the provision of adequate health services.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, and I am not quite as reticent as the Leader of the Opposition, I say categorically that the Minister of Health must step down for three specific reasons: One, whatever his intentions, he has failed to produce order in the chaos of the health delivery system in this province; two, he doesn't understand finances or costs.

That used to be a matter of merriment in this House. I can remember when we asked the Minister of Health at the time he introduced the nursing home legislation about questions of cost. I asked him myself where the $30 million was in the estimates on home care. The minister replied: "As I said, Mr. Speaker, it is just like a cat's breakfast—all spread through there somewhere. I don't know, but we'll find it somewhere." He says earlier, "The only way I can figure this one out—and members must admit that as far as money is concerned I don't know too much about it." That's a pretty succinct statement. When we talked to him about the figures involved he said:

I agree with the member and I'm concerned that the figures are that far out of line. Certainly, there is no way I can explain why we are that far out of line but I must reiterate that this is a service that has to be provided.

The Minister of Health understands nothing about finances or costs. That's his problem. That's not a problem to be visited on the people of the Province of Ontario.

At the time it was one of those earthy boasts which everybody chortled about; this strong impetuous doctor, who had wandered in from Quinte to take care of health in the province, admitted that he didn't know anything about costs. Little did we know that there would flow from that a financial disaster.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, the Minister of Health has to go because he has become an orderly for the medical profession. There's something about doctors as Ministers of Health. I don't know what it is. I really can't figure it out. One can successfully have a lawyer as Attorney General but one can't have a doctor as Minister of Health.

Mr. J. F. Foulds (Port Arthur): Right on.

Mr. Lewis: In the final analysis they are totally seduced by their own profession. There is some kind of mystique at work which makes it impossible for the minister to resist the wiles of his profession. I may—

Mr. Bullbrook: There goes the fleeting hope that the member for Parkdale had.

Mr. Lewis: If the member for Parkdale had it, we'd have a health system the envy of the world but—

Mr. Bullbrook: It would be costly, mind you!

Mr. Lewis: The member for Parkdale is biding his time. He's a man of patience and insight.

Mr. Foulds: He'll be a super minister.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Here comes somebody now in the field for contention.

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, the Ontario Medical Association and the College of Physicians and Surgeons still run the Ministry of Health. I know it is fashionable to say that the minister has alienated some of his colleagues. Let's not kid ourselves. Precisely at the moment that he is alienating them, Ross DeGeer is sending around a letter asking them all for contributions, and pretty confident that he'll get the contributions he wants. Someday we might learn how much he actually received from the doctors in the Province of Ontario. But a doctor simply can't be a Minister of Health.

The last time there was an equivalent shambles was in the festive days of the member for Ontario (Mr. Dymond) which some of us remember and would rather prefer to forget.

It shouldn't have been Kinloch who went. It should have been somebody else in the civil service who went, but Dr. Kinloch went because the Ontario Medical Association and the College of Physicians and Surgeons demanded it.

You know, Mr. Speaker, the minister was a little bashful with me yesterday when we talked about who had been appointed to review medical care insurance from the Council of Health primary advisory group on medical care insurance. Perhaps some of the members of the House and my colleagues would like to know who is on this group, whose views will be the primary views in the determination of government policy, other than those which were advocated from within the ministry.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Who is the chairman?

Mr. Lewis: Dr. K. C. Charron, chairman; Dr. H. C. Baumer; Dr. H. O. Beck; Dr. A. Bodrug—I didn't know he was on it but that is an exemplary appointment—Dr. John R. Brook; Dr. William H. Bryant; Dr. Donald F. Butt; Dr. H. Hoyle Campbell; Dr. Donald R. Clark; Dr. Robert W. Cornett; Dr. E. W. Dowd; Dr. Arthur J. Dunn; Dr. Robert G. Elgey; Dr. Donald Fraser; Dr. John H. Fraser; Dr. Reynold H. Geld; Dr. J. Edward Gibson; Dr. Douglas J. Grant. It goes on—

Mr. MacDonald: It is a balanced selection.

Mr. Lewis: —for twice that number and not a single member of the task force, the primary advisory group on medical care insurance review, is other than a doctor.

You know, Mr. Speaker, it just cannot be allowed to continue. I think that the Minister of Health should go elsewhere. We'd all like him to stay in the cabinet. I don't want to be ill-spirited as to pretend he should lose cabinet stature. I think that the Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations (Mr. Clement), or maybe the Minister of Transportation (Mr. Carton), might be excellent gentlemen to occupy the post of Minister of Health.

Mr. P. G. Givens (York Forest Hill): Whom does the member want to kill off?

Mr. Lewis: Well, I'm really not willing or anxious to, quote, "kill any of them off"—

Interjection by an hon. member.

Mr. Lewis: No, no. I want this health care plan rescued, Mr. Speaker. All of us want it rescued and we don't need any more studies. We don't need any more legislative inquiries. We don't need any more commissions. We have them all, the material is available. If you shake up that civil service, antiquarian as it is, and if you replace the minister with perhaps one of the appointments suggested—and I probably seal their political doom with that suggestion—then I think you can begin to sort it out along the line which many of us in this House have recommended.

Let me turn, Mr. Speaker, so that I go on not too long, to another matter which gnawed away during the course of the by-elections as a matter of some general public anxiety—a certain vague disquiet through the electorate about the government handling of and response to energy problems.

I'm not going to deal with the member for Chatham-Kent's three-tier price system and I know that the Premier is about to make a statement on energy matters which may at some point be debated in this House. I think we should point out, Mr. Speaker, that we in this caucus were profoundly disturbed at the way in which this Premier capitulated to Premier Lougheed in his trip to Alberta.

It was abject and total. Rather than take the bit at that time and make the statements that should have been made at that time, he in effect gave the Premier of Alberta carte blanche to ask the people of Ontario to pay the two-price system which would increase the coffers of the oil companies in that province.

My colleague from York South, in two excellent articles—at least two that I can recall—in the Globe and Mail, has outlined the background to the two-price system and what it implies for Alberta and Canada, and I need not go into that now. But I do want to go into certain other observations because I think they are important.

No one, Mr. Speaker, questions the world-wide preoccupation with the shortage of energy or the rapacious lust of the United States in the energy field, but Ontario need not be panicked with false assumptions just because the member for Chatham-Kent needs a job. We'll find something else for him to do.

The advisory committee on energy report—I'll call it the Ace report—was a gloomy one. It estimated natural gas usage in 1970 of 440 billion cubic feet and then estimated a jump in 1990 to 1,400 billion cubic feet and the total energy demand was comparable to that.

The solutions within that report were clearly those that frontier gas should be turned to. That is, the report was saying quietly, "Let's have the Mackenzie Valley pipeline and as much government support as possible and increased consumer prices."

Well Mr. Speaker, it's time for one party in this Legislature to say—my colleague from Riverdale (Mr. Renwick) has been urging us to say this often and loudly—that we are not going to be panicked into the conventional wisdom about an energy shortage. There is an enormous scepticism to be exercised about the advisory committee on energy report—an enormous scepticism.

The composition of that committee raises one's suspicions. There were representatives on the committee from the Ontario Natural Gas Association, the Canadian Gas Association, the Ontario Petroleum Institute, the Bituminous Coal Institute of Canada, the Propane Gas Association of Canada and the Petroleum Association of Ontario. In addition, there were two representatives of the electrical energy sector, one from the nuclear energy sector and one from a manufacturing industry closely related to mineral fuel.

A clear majority of the committee was drawn from the energy industry. Now, may I say, Mr. Speaker—

An hon. member: I'd say a pretty objective group.

Mr. Lewis: Well there was a very objective group. As a matter of fact there was somebody on it from Pollution Probe and there was one person on it from the Consumer Association of Canada and the rest were government appointments. It was not unnatural that this group of people, a clear majority of whom belong to the energy industry, decided that they would produce conclusions favourable to the energy industry. And so it becomes a self-serving document.

Let me go further, Mr. Speaker: They made an extraordinary error in the content of that document, and I quote:

Of importance to the forecast for energy needs is a significant slowing down of population growth. The average annual growth rate over the past two decades in Ontario has been 2.7 per cent, while the outlook for the next two decades suggests an average annual growth rate of at most two per cent and quite likely somewhat less.

And yet that statement, that the population growth over the next two decades in Ontario is quite likely to be less than two per cent, is followed by this amazing statement:

On the basis of a high assumption of a two per cent average growth rate, the Ontario population would be in the neighbourhood of 11 million in 1990.

In fact, the Ontario population will not be 11 million in 1990. Incredible as it may seem, the fertility rate in Ontario this year will be below the replacement level. Population growth in Ontario is levelling out. The population of this province, as demographic studies show, will not be more than 9.5 million in 1990, which means that the report made an error in the estimate of 1.5 million, at the very least; and that makes for a 15 per cent change in the way in which they computed their various targets. We could then exist on 600 or 650 billion cubic feet, which is not a great deal more than current usage. Certainly gas usage figures of that magnitude would greatly lessen pressure to develop frontier gas resources.

Mr. Speaker, what we are saying is that it is possible for Ontario to pace itself. It is not necessary to turn to frontier resources, and it is not necessary for us to advocate the development of the Mackenzie Valley Pipeline, as one expects.

Population is the crucial variable in the estimation of future energy requirements. I find it simply incredible that the advisory committee on energy chose a future population figure without bothering in any way to justify its validity.

The committee undertook 16 internal research reports and commissioned another 16 reports from outside consultants. Not one of these reports deals with the probable size of Ontario's population over the next two decades.

The failure to consider carefully the crucial population variety raises serious questions about the validity of many of the committee's conclusions.

That is one area which we will question as closely as possible in the House so that we are not immediately involved in an increase in consumer prices to satisfy the alleged problems which some in the energy industry put forth.

The report goes on, however, to point out that uranium will be crucial to the Province of Ontario in the years ahead; that in fact we have 15 per cent of total world reserves—190,000 tons of uranium—which can be produced at prices of less than $10 per pound.

Mr. Speaker, world annual demand for uranium by the mid-1980s is expected to be 140,000 tons, according to the committee, so one can imagine the pressure that will be on in the area of uranium just as it is on us now from the United States and world markets for natural gas. Therefore, in order to preserve uranium as a basic energy resource, it is the submission of this party that we should take the uranium reserves in this province into public ownership.

I may say, Mr. Speaker, that we are expropriating the Sandbanks for Stephen Roman; I don't see why we shouldn't expropriate the uranium reserves as well on the same basis of adequate compensation. There may be some constitutional difficulties, which can be worked out with the federal government, although I think not. I think it is well within the power of the provincial government under the British North America Act. But if that is so important an energy source, then it should be taken into public ownership.

That leads me to another point about public ownership. The Provincial Secretary for Resources Development issued a report on Onakawana, the lignite deposit in northeastern Ontario. We were profoundly disturbed by that report as well, because what the government of Ontario apparently intends to do if it develops Onakawana is to allow it to be developed by the Manalta Coal Co. based in Alberta.

Mr. Speaker, over the 30-year period involved for the development of the lignite reserve, the profits to Onakawana, on the basis of what we know in 1972, will be something in excess of $100 million. We frankly object to an Alberta-based company coming into a natural resource hinterland of Ontario and taking out $100 million of profit over a 30-year period.

One asks the government to think of what could be done with that $100 million for a service base and a manufacturing base in northeastern Ontario were the money ploughed back into that region represented by some of the members of this caucus. So I may say, Mr. Speaker, as well, that we think that since all that the Manalta Coal Co. now has is exploratory rights—that's all—it should be compensated for those rights and that all of the development of the lignite deposit should be done in the public sector. We think that every development of an energy or natural resource nature in the future in this province that is not now currently in the private sector should be done by a Crown corporation. In that, Mr. Speaker, we are very much at one with Eric Kierans and the report he did for the government of Manitoba.

Mr. J. R. Rhodes (Sault Ste. Marie): Who shares in Manitoba's Crown corporations?

Mr. Lewis: Who shares in Manitoba's Crown corporations? The people of the Province of Manitoba.

Mr. Rhodes: And the people of Sweden.

Mr. Lewis: The people of the Province of Manitoba will share. The profits remain in the province for subsequent development. As a matter of fact, the whole of the Kierans report related to that. Let me quote from the Kierans report just for a moment. He says:

Nations or provinces which follow such a policy [the policy that the member for Sault Ste. Marie would wish us to follow of putting it all in the private sector] must inevitably remain as resource-producing economies until their resources are exhausted. The capital that is generated bolsters the power and assets of the agents, the large corporations to whom they have turned over the management of their land and labour. These are the new institutions that will grow, not the province or nation. The dynamism of the new capital generated leaves the province; it does not remain to transform the province into a stronger agricultural force or an efficient industrial community or a strong service economy.

Let me just put a little more of Kierans on the record, because I think it is important:

To be satisfied with the new jobs created and to forego the surpluses and profit inherent in the development of its own endowment is hardly the mark of a strong and mature government.

So what strength and maturity is there in the member for Sault Ste. Marie's advocacy of the Manalta Coal Co. taking out $100 million in profit from northeastern Ontario? From Sault Ste. Marie! The member would deprive the northeast of $100 million over the next 30 years? No wonder Anne Valentine is hot on his neck. He'll never survive.

Mr. Deans: He would sell this province out.

Mr. Lewis: I continue to quote:

The government accepts the role in that way of hewers of wood and drawers of water for its people when they are capable of much more. That role provides wages and salaries and little else.

That's all, just wages and salaries. Does the member know that in the Statistics Canada analysis of the energy industry, and the natural resources industry generally—I have the exact figures with me somewhere—every dollar in wages and salaries produces something more than a dollar in profit in that industry? That is for 1972. That is where the figure of $100 million comes from.

It is perfectly appropriate that Kierans, when he is looking at an economy like Manitoba's, said that the exploration and development should be done by a Crown corporation. He didn't recommend as yet—we will get to that in the estimates—what happens in the processing and refining sector, but there is no question that it belongs to us.

Let me read to the member the best part of Kierans. He puts it better than I could ever put it.

Mr. Rhodes: I agree.

Mr. Lewis: To quote:

It is not a question of capitalism or socialism. It is simply searching for the better way. In any event, one cannot nationalize what one already owns, and it is clear that the province owns its own resources. What must be determined is the manner in which one can gain the highest returns from that wealth, both now and in the future. This is not a matter of questioning the sanctity of private property; the issue of proprietorship has long been settled: it is public.

Mr. MacDonald: The government is being doctrinaire, that's the problem!

Mr. Lewis: Whether it is uranium or lignite, it belongs in the public sector; and that's what we will fight for in this Legislature.

We'll fight for more than that in the field of energy. We're going to fight to give power to the Ontario Energy Board to regulate prices of all petroleum and natural gas products at the wholesale and retail levels. That is now an absolute requirement in the present continental situation. And I'll tell you what the first task of that board will be: to equalize gasoline prices across this province. That will be the first task.

Mr. Foulds: How does the free-enterpriser from Sault Ste. Marie feel about that?

Mr. Lewis: The second task will be to look at the discrepancy in prices charged to residential and industrial purchasers, since it is now 2:1 in the area of gas.

Mr. Speaker, I had some remarks on Task Force Hydro, but I will leave them out of this portion. They will be dealt with by other colleagues as the Throne debate evolves. I think it is worth pointing out that what we're asking for is an integrated energy policy in Ontario that includes the Onakawana reserves, uranium, natural gas and Ontario Hydro, and which is not dictated by the fallacious assumptions of the advisory committee on energy reform. That report was given a wide circulation in the province and served only to bolster the mythology which the oil companies are frantically attempting to make pervasive, that somehow in Ontario and Canada at the moment we are in a state of total panic, and therefore consumer prices must go up commensurate with the corporate profits which will be received.

We have problems in the energy field. No one disputes that for a moment. They are serious problems. But if we don't alienate our energy to continental sources in the United States, and if we implement the policies suggested here, I think we can keep them under control.

That, Mr. Speaker, you will be extremely pleased to know, leads me to the last point I want to make in this presentation. This is something some of us have thought a good deal about in trying to sort it out, because it's odd and confusing. It is something which we collectively think strikes to the root—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please!

Before the hon. member proceeds, I wonder if he would permit me to interrupt at this time in relation to standing order No. 27(g), which provides for debate on certain subjects that were brought up during the question period.

The hon. members will recall this was discussed last Wednesday.

Mr. Lewis: Oh, yes.

Mr. Speaker: According to the rules, it is incumbent upon me to inform the House prior to 5 o'clock on Tuesday, and I thought this would be a good opportunity before the hon. member went on to another subject.

There have been two notices given, by the hon. member for Ottawa East (Mr. Roy) and the hon. member for Grey-Bruce (Mr. Sargent), in that they were not satisfied with the answers given to certain oral questions.

The question from the hon. member for Ottawa East, in the first instance, and I will read the notice:

"Please be advised that I am not satisfied with the response from the Premier to an oral question on the royal commission on criminal activities, and I intend to raise the subject matter at the adjournment of the House."

The motion of the hon. member for Grey-Bruce reads:

"With regard to my question to the Premier, will the Premier advise with regard to the Fidinam affair why the terms of reference of crime commissions should not be extended to Queen's Park. The Premier refused to acknowledge the question and remained in his seat. I am not satisfied with this response to an oral question."

And his second notice was regarding the question:

"Will the Premier advise why he will not call at once a royal commission on the Fidinam affair; to furnish lists of donors, and if they have government contracts, with powers to subpoena."

The next section of his question was purely hypothetical and will not be permitted.

"Why has he for a second time refused to name the legal firm handling the multi-million-dollar deal? Who received the finder's fee?" The hon. member indicated he was not satisfied with the response to that oral question.

Therefore, in accordance with the rules, five minutes will be allowed to each member to introduce and speak on the subject matter of his original question, after which the Premier, in this case, will be permitted five minutes to reply, if he so wishes. He need not reply if he does not wish to reply.

Therefore, there will be three subjects brought up at the adjournment hour of this House today, which is 6 o'clock; and I might point out that the motion to adjourn will not be necessary in accordance with the provisions of standing order 28(a). I am to deem that the motion to adjourn has been made. In accordance with the same rule 28, when the 15 minutes or 30 minutes have expired, I will deem the House to have been adjourned.

Hon. Mr. Kerr: Mr. Speaker, will it be necessary for the Premier himself to reply to any of the standing orders; or is it possible for somebody on the government's side to substitute for him?

Mr. Speaker: In my opinion, the answer would be no.

Mr. Deans: No what?

Mr. Speaker: No one can substitute. The questions were directed to the Premier.

Mr. M. Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): He should be here to listen too.

Mr. Singer: He won't recognize his responsibility.

Mr. Speaker: I thank the hon. member for Scarborough West.

Mr. Lewis: Well, I suppose I should thank you, Mr. Speaker, for the break. On the other hand, I would not have been dismayed had you done it before the orders of the day. May I deal with the last point I wanted to raise.

It is strange and ironic that the Conservative government is being largely repudiated by the electorate in all areas of the province, for reasons which one wouldn't have expected. Put simply, simply as I can, the Conservative party has developed a fixation with Metropolitan Toronto at the expense of the rest of Ontario.

And who would have believed it, Mr. Speaker; this rural-based Tory monolith contracting an obsession with Metropolitan Toronto, against which all else is measured and by which all else is conditioned.

And as a crowning achievement, the Conservatives have managed to win the worst of both worlds. Outside Metro, the populace condemns the government for its neglect and indifference; inside Metro, government is condemned for the massive urban blight, for what it has failed to do by way of housing, and land values, and the environment, and transportation, and for the inexorable concentration of people, goods, services, and industry in one jam-packed section of Ontario.

Mr. Speaker, I think there is growing resentment and not a little bitterness inside and outside Metro at the way in which Queen's Park has distorted social priorities and abandoned intelligent economic planning.

Citizens' groups, Mr. Speaker, are not just a reflection of democratic participation; whether it is Ramsden Park in St. George, or "Save the Jail" in Huron; whether it's "People or Planes" in Pickering or "Stop the Garbage" in Minto and Hope townships.

People are protesting the way in which social decisions are arrived at and the way in which wealth, power and opportunity is distributed across Ontario.

This province is starting to show its hostility to the undue concentration of influence at the centre, and the centre expressed its hostility in the municipal elections last December pretty vividly. I really think that that Tory party is losing its grip on credibility and judgement.

Now, it's very hard to provoke any response from those Tories that are here; so what I'll do, Mr. Speaker, is put a number of rhetorical questions which I think reach the root of it.

How do you explain, Mr. Speaker, that the Toronto-centred region plan preceded an overall plan for the Province of Ontario and that that has not been corrected to this day?

How does the government explain that processing and refining in this province for northern Ontario are dependent on the Metro-centred region plan, as are jobs in Cornwall?

How does it defend the continued quest for eight million people by the year 2000, when the levelling of population figures would allow for a reconsideration of the whole Toronto-centred region proposals?

How does it explain, Mr. Speaker, the lunacy of North Pickering—building a quarter-of-a-million-bedroom suburb for Metro right on the periphery, in violation of the Metro plan?

How does it defend North Pickering when Oshawa was intended to be the appropriate growth centre, and how does it defend the consequent destruction of regional government?

How does it defend the expropriation of 25,000 acres of prime agricultural and recreational land and then talk of environmental preservation in its Throne Speech?

How does it allow Port Hope and Cobourg to be sucked into the vortex of Metro—a new linear city stretching 75 congested miles along the lakefront?

How does it protect the interests of little communities outside Metropolitan Toronto—whether it is Port Hope, Cobourg, or Orillia-Midland—when they are always subservient to this emphasis on Metropolitan Toronto and its growth?

How does it explain a $1.3 billion transportation policy, primarily designed for Metropolitan Toronto, perhaps to be used a little by Ottawa or Hamilton, but offering virtually nothing for the rest of the province?

How do government members explain, when they go up to Huron county, that this government didn't fight hard enough the discontinuance of the rail line between Goderich and Stratford, or that the buses don't connect properly with the trains, or that we haven't got the money for STOL aircraft development in this province so we could have a route from Owen Sound to Goderich to Stratford to Toronto, but that all the money we spend is spent to satisfy the obsession with Metropolitan Toronto?

How do they explain a massive new Queen's Park office development right in the heart of downtown Toronto?

How do they defend its adding to the congestion and oppression that is already felt by thousands of citizens?

I am saying to you, Mr. Speaker, that the people in Metro resent these perverse priorities as much as do the people in other parts of the province.

How does the government explain to the rest of Ontario that the civil service and all its head offices must forever be centralized? Why the Workmen's Compensation building here? Why Hydro here? Why the Centre for Forensic Studies here? Why the Ontario Housing Corp. here? Why the enlarged Downsview area for Transportation and Communications? Why OISE? Why is everything to be centred here—and now this ultimate abomination, the new complex for Queen's Park?

How does the government explain that educational television's full schedule of school and adult programmes is still confined solely to the Toronto area?

How does it explain Ontario Place—losing money endlessly, subsidized by Treasurer's warrants, and accessible on a regular basis only to people in Metro, with as yet no counterpart in another part of the province, while the rest of the province pays for the endless deficiency?

How does it explain that with 27.5 per cent of the population in Metro, this area receives 35 per cent of all Ontario hospital public funding, 42 per cent of the psychiatric beds are here, and so are 66 per cent of the special and rehabilitative beds?

How is it that OISE, in contemplating likely budget cutbacks, has to consider abandonment of its field centres in London, St. Catharines, Peterborough, Thunder Bay and Kitchener? How does the government explain why it permits problems of university financing to fall most heavily on Peterborough, on Brock, on Laurentian, on Thunder Bay? Why must Trent fight so desperately for such an excellent little system of education as it has developed, while the University of Toronto never seems to experience these problems?

Frankly, Mr. Speaker, people in Metropolitan Toronto are bewildered by the government's preoccupation with growth. The government is mesmerized by growth—growth for growth's sake—and they're creating enormous problems as a result. And where, one might ask, are the incentives to get some of the growth out of Metropolitan Toronto? After the EIO development loan programme, nothing has emerged to take its place—and it was a pretty unhappy effort itself.

Where is the campaign to move the head offices out of Metro? Where is there to provide for the citizens of Metro some sense of relief and sanity and where is there to provide for the rest of Ontario some sense of balance and opportunity? How is it that the Tories have managed to incur the wrath of those both inside Metro and outside?

That was the real lesson of the by-election. Let me leave out for a moment, if I may, the standing of the parties. Let me say to the hon. members opposite, Mr. Speaker, that what was happening in St. George was a rejection of their mania for growth; and what was happening in Huron was a rejection of the way in which they neglect parts of this province outside Metro.

Growth has become such a fetish in this province; it has become so intoxicating for the cabinet that all else pales. The cabinet is drunk on growth in one area primarily. Those of us who live in Metropolitan Toronto don't like it, because it distorts the social and economic priorities of this region; and it is obvious that people outside don't like it either.

And you have a Throne Speech, Mr. Speaker, which the member for Sault Ste.

Marie probably quietly burned in the dead of night so as to avoid the embarrassment of sharing it.

Mr. MacDonald: Is that when he burns?

Mr. Lewis: Because what is there for northern Ontario in this Throne Speech?

Mr. E. W. Martel (Sudbury East): Same as usual

Mr. Foulds: As much as there has ever been.

Mr. Lewis: Yes, as much as there has ever been.

The member for Sault Ste. Marie and the member for Timiskaming (Mr. Havrot), now leaning forward on his desk in anticipation, went to the Conservative conference and predicted—the only time the two of them had ever shown such insight—that the NDP would sweep the north in the next provincial election unless something was done. And then, Mr. Speaker, you bring forth a Throne Speech—

Mr. E. M. Havrot (Timiskaming): The hon. member must have read the newspapers. Don't believe what the papers say.

Mr. Lewis: —in which nothing was done for the north. There has never been a document so insulting to northern Ontario as this one. So what do you substitute for it? Well you substitute what we called earlier the group of seven. The Provincial Secretary for Resources Development (Mr. Lawrence) and six of his associates wander through north-western Ontario between Jan. 19 to Jan. 21, quote: "To take Toronto to the people of the northwest." Not only didn't they want them, they didn't want them so badly the plane broke down; the weather interfered.

An hon. member: Maybe it was sabotage.

Mr. Lewis: It may indeed have been sabotage. Well, 35 briefs were presented reiterating what we all know: pleading for assistance. The Provincial Secretary for Resources Development pronounced it an "unqualified success," and he went on to say that he was impressed by the quality of the briefs and the great concern that was expressed for further development of the northwestern Ontario region. What a lot of gratuitous paternalism that is; and it is a further indication of what you people over there think of northern Ontario.

Mr. Stokes: The government has had a Design for Development in mothballs for the last 2½ years.

Mr. Lewis: Design for development means not a tinker's dam in northern Ontario.

Mr. Foulds: I think the member should resign.

Mr. Lewis: That is spelled "dam" in northern Ontario.

The group of seven—not satisfied with the north—wandered into eastern Ontario and sat down at Smiths Falls. I guess it was Norm Webster's report—

Mr. Martel: With all their advisers too—the whole firm.

Mr. Lewis: —in the Globe which pointed out that among the kinder adjectives which the group of seven received in eastern Ontario were "ivory tower bureaucrats in Toronto", "absurd", "obstructive", "stupid" and "ignorant".

Mr. F. Laughren (Nickel Belt): That says it all.

Mr. Lewis: That is pretty concise.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: That is them all right. Those are the ones.

Mr. Lewis: They knew who they were talking to. They certainly knew who they were talking about.

Mr. MacDonald: The Solicitor General (Mr. Yaremko) looks puzzled.

Mr. Lewis: Sorry, the Solicitor General is yearning for a repetition. The words were: "Absurd", obstructive", "stupid", "ignorant". Why, pray tell, does he laugh?

Mr. Foulds: Because he wasn't included.

Mr. Lewis: He knows who they are. Smile that away.

An hon. member: He agreed.

Mr. Lewis: I know he agrees, but it is not nice for him to agree, because his colleagues are involved. They speak kindly of him. They always speak kindly of him.

An hon. member: Not always.

Mr. Lewis: The 65 briefs presented included examples of government insensitivity and obstructionism toward small town planning. Problems of young people leaving the area because of lack of economic opportunities; briefs dealing with the problems of waste disposal in the area; problems of milk producers in Lanark county and throughout eastern Ontario; the need for improved road subsidy legislation; the need for more recreation land. In this instance the group of seven didn't pronounce it an unqualified success and they made no comment.

An interesting comment was made by the Ottawa Journal. It was advertised as a confrontation and on Feb. 23 the Ottawa Journal editorialized:

A confrontation? Certainly, though too polite a series of discussions to meet the 1970 definition of that word. But Mr. Lawrence's committee had come looking for a confrontation. That it got its wish in such numbers and with such force merely shows that Queen's Park has a long way to go before eastern Ontario stops feeling it is still the neglected poor cousin in the province.

I may say, Mr. Speaker, that eastern Ontario like northern Ontario has never been more neglected than under a Tory government. For the first time I have experienced it politically, when I was on the Green-line Programme in Ottawa just a week or two ago and people started phoning in to say why they were rejecting the Tories and what was going wrong.

The Minister of Correctional Services (Mr. Apps) knows just how bad it is in eastern Ontario. The government has absolutely nothing but contempt for the people of eastern Ontario. One would think that that is the most neglected region of the province, right?

We have a Design for Development report for Metro Toronto. We have one for the northwest. We have one for the northeast. And we have them for the southwest—Niagara; midwest—Lake Erie; Lake Ontario, Lake St. Clair and Georgian Bay. More than two years after the Design for Development plan was introduced in the province we get prospects for the eastern Ontario region. It is the last region in Ontario to be dealt with.

For two years they laboured, this clutch of civil servants, using all their creative and intellectual energy to produce a document—in over two years—fully 20 pages in length. I may say that any pre-pubescent adolescent taking interviews on a street corner in Smiths Falls could have written a better document than this one. This is a piece of such nonsense that it is really beyond parallel, and it shows how the government feels about eastern Ontario. It took more than two years to bring down a report—the last report to be brought down. Let me tell the government what it learned in two years.

The first thing it learned—and I want some of the members to listen to this because they probably don't know it—is that the following cities—Ottawa, Kingston, Cornwall, Brockville, Hawkesbury, Pembroke, Renfrew and Smiths Falls—all lie in the eastern region. One has to admit that, for insight, that's hard to beat as a report. Then it said, turning to the lyrical prose which is so dominant and characteristic in this report:

There is a wide range of lifestyles from the urbane diversions of Ottawa to the old continental charm of Kingston, the historic character of Perth and the relative simplicity of the many rural villages.

That's a pretty good economic forecast. Yes, that certainly cuts to the problems of the region. Then the government goes on to deal with the goals, and goal No. 1 is pretty breathtaking; kind of unusual for a plan of this kind. Goal No. 1 says, "To provide opportunities and encouragement for every person in the eastern Ontario region to live a full and satisfying life."

Imagine taking two years to come up with that! I mean that would surely take a lifetime. It is one of those glimpses which isn't often revealed to mortal men.

The document has a number of problems set out and it puts them in the form of questions and answers. I can't possibly give members the full flavour of the questions and answers but to give a sense of their content, let me read one question and one answer.

Question: How should the lowland's recreational attractions be preserved? Answer: With pressures of population and economic growth likely to intensify along the St. Lawrence shoreline, the best means should be found to preserve the scenic area.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Singer: That is good, yes. It sounds like the Minister of Health.

Mr. Lewis: Do the members remember that extraordinary line in the regional development report for northeastern Ontario? I think it was on page 237 in the section on public safety where at the end of the analysis, the government said: "The incidence of drowning is likely to increase near bodies of water." Do the members remember that one? That's basically the quality of these documents except that—

Mr. Deans: The same person wrote it.

Mr. Lewis: The same person wrote it, is right.

—they took 300 pages to do it for north-eastern Ontario and here they did it in 20. Well, they don't stop there. They go on endlessly in this fatuous array of nonsense which is such an insult to the people of the eastern region.

And then they talk about techniques and they reveal again, albeit begrudgingly, some of the marvels of creative intellect. They say there are at least two alternatives; they might concentrate growth or they might disperse growth. Then, on the last page they say: "Inevitably, the final plan will be based on policies lying somewhere between the extremes." Well, who would have believed it?

Mr. Singer: The Minister of Health and his mess.

Mr. Lewis: And then they invite our thoughtful representation.

Oh, I'll tell the government members something. Your MPPs are in trouble. Your MPPs are in very real trouble, because they've managed to alienate most of the people in this province who live in hitherto neglected areas outside Metropolitan Toronto, and they have managed to alienate those in Metropolitan Toronto who worry about housing problems, who worry about transportation problems, who worry about urban congestion, who worry about all of the social problems attendant on what is happening in the Metro area. Mr. Speaker, it's comic, perhaps, in some ways, but it's a perfect example of the nonsense with which regional government planning is presently riddled.

Mr. Speaker, I would like you to convey to the Premier for me that there is, throughout this province, an all-pervasive sense that no one is listening. Indeed, you, sir, may be the only person listening. The Premier has distanced himself.

Mr. Ruston: The Speaker doesn't always listen.

Mr. Lewis: He's alienated himself from the province. The Premier is no "Wacky" Bennett. He's no Ross Thatcher. He's no Joey Smallwood. Nobody pretends that. But that posture of homey urbanity isn't working. It doesn't ring true.

The barriers between the Tory party and Ontario now are not merely bureaucratic. They're psychological. The cynicism of which the Premier speaks is a reflection of the sense of impotence which the public feels about its politicians and the sense of estrangement it has from the Tory party. I want to tell the government, as much as I'd like to say otherwise, I think it is probably beyond correction and this government is vulnerable everywhere. Mr. Speaker, give us a by-election in this province where we have—

Mr. Rhodes: The NDP wants one?

Mr. Lewis: —a reasonable fighting chance and we'll take—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Lewis: —the Tories and the Liberals and we'll trounce both of them.

Mr. Foulds: Try Timiskaming.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. J. A. Renwick (Riverdale): Somewhere between the extremes.

Mr. Lewis: And that's about 75 seats that I can think of, and that's off the top.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Lewis: If I thought harder I'd work the percentage up. May I say that I wish well to all Conservative and Liberal members.

Mr. McIlveen: Try High Park in five years.

Mr. Lewis: No, no, easy. I wish well to all of them.

Mr. Rhodes: You and I both resign.

Mr. Lewis: You and I both resign? All right, I'll tell you what. You do it first and I'll consider my options carefully.

An hon. member: That sounds like the way the member for High Park (Mr. Shulman) resigned. By the way, where is he?

Mr. Singer: Yes, he hasn't been here all afternoon, we notice.

Mr. Rhodes: The member for Scarborough West is closer to the end than I am.

Mr. Lewis: I may say, Mr. Speaker—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Rhodes: His days are numbered — back to Kentucky.

Mr. Lewis: I may say, Mr. Speaker, that now that we have introduced the fear of God into the Legislature, for all of those who sit in the reactionary benches—that's the only way I can characterize it in a friendly way—I don't want them to be faint of heart. I don't wish any ill on any of them, but we look forward to the opportunity of which I spoke. We also look forward to the opportunity of participating further in this Throne debate and covering a whole variety of subjects relating to pension payments, Workmen's Compensation benefits, profits, prices, and all of the things which should be developed by our party. Therefore, in direct continuity with that I move, seconded by Mr. Deans, that this House further condemns the government:

1. For its failure even to recognize that soaring prices are making it difficult for families and pensioners to make ends meet and maintain good nutrition;

2. For its failure to bring our pensioners up to a minimum income of $200 a month;

3. For its failure to deal adequately with the exorbitant increases in housing costs in the Province of Ontario;

4. For its failure to provide adequate public low-cost housing;

5. For its willingness to subsidize private speculative development with public funds in the building of houses;

6. For its failure to develop an integrated energy policy which would ensure adequate supplies for Ontario residents and industry at reasonable prices;

7. For its failure to exercise its stewardship over the resources of Ontario and to ensure the maximum return to the people through public ownership, control and intervention;

8. For its failure to reorganize the delivery of health services to the people so as to ensure accessibility to comprehensive health care at a reasonable cost;

9. For its failure to provide an adequate financial base for regional governments to enable them to attain true autonomy and carry out their functions;

10. For its failure to correct the imbalance in development between the Metropolitan Toronto region and the rest of the province by creating a provincial plan for Ontario and, as a first step, by decentralizing the new Hydro headquarters and the new provincial office complex to another region of Ontario.

They are a sorry lot over there.

Hon. Mr. Kerr moves the adjournment of the debate.

Motion agreed to.

Mr. Speaker: Since the debate has been adjourned, in accordance with the provisions of standing orders 27 and 28, I shall deem the motion to adjourn to have been placed before the House as provided in the orders just mentioned.

The notices of dissatisfaction with the answers to oral questions given last week were handed to me, firstly, by the hon. member for Ottawa East (Mr. Roy) who will now be given five minutes to speak to his point. The hon. Premier (Mr. Davis) may reply for five minutes if he so wishes.

Hon. W. G. Davis (Premier): Mr. Speaker, I think I understand from reading Hansard the question of the member for Ottawa East; I think I understand that. I'm at a little loss, Mr. Speaker, and I'm certainly not objecting to your ruling, but as I read Hansard I'm still not clear as to exactly what the member for Grey-Bruce (Mr. Sargent) was asking.

Mr. D. C. MacDonald (York South): It's possible he may clarify it, and he speaks ahead of the Premier.

Hon. Mr. Davis: I am doubtful that he will.

Mr. R. F. Nixon (Leader of the Opposition): What is the purpose of this?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Reading this, where you yourself, sir, had ruled it hypothetical and out of order—that is if I am referring to the same question that I think the member is asking—I really want some clarification whether, in fact, you did say it was hypothetical and out of order; and as a result of this whether it is an appropriate thing for us to debate under this particular rule.

As I say, even if it is not hypothetical and out of order, I had some difficulty in understanding the question, but certainly—

Mr. E. Sargent (Grey-Bruce): I'll make it clear to the Premier.

Hon. Mr. Davis: —I'll be delighted to listen to and hopefully will be able to clarify it for him.

Mr. Sargent: I'll be glad to.

Mr. Speaker: I might inform the hon. Premier and the House, of course, that the second question posed by the hon. member for Grey-Bruce, which I had last Wednesday deemed to be hypothetical and which I reiterated today was strictly hypothetical—I didn't even read it to the House—was what he would do if the Leader of the Opposition led his party out of the House if this information, and action—

Mr. Sargent: Read the whole question, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: I read it before and I am reading the part which I ruled to be hypothetical and out of order.

Hon. Mr. Davis: He has already led his party out of the House. He's gone.

Mr. Speaker: It was what he would do if the Leader of the Opposition led his party out of the House if this information and action was not forthcoming. That part of the second question is purely hypothetical and will not be included in the question today.

The hon. member for Ottawa East.

Mr. A. J. Roy (Ottawa East): Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The question had been raised by myself to the Premier in response to the Throne Speech. On page 21 of the Throne Speech, which had been read in the House by the Lieutenant Governor of the province on March 20, it stated that a royal commission was to inquire into the possibility of criminal activity within the plastering, lathing and drywall sectors of the building industry in Metropolitan Toronto. The reason for the question was simply that we could not understand why this inquiry was so limited, first of all to the plastering, lathing and drywall industry; secondly why limit it to Metropolitan Toronto?

The speech states that the royal commission was only established as a result of extensive investigation by law enforcement agencies, and I have difficulty believing this, Mr. Speaker. Are they not aware of violence in other sectors or other areas of the province? Apparently they are.

Mr. Speaker, after we spoke last week and raised the matter in the House, one of the Ottawa papers, the Ottawa Citizen, after a fine piece of investigative reporting, came out with a story from Ottawa on Friday, March 23, at which time two union officials, two leaders of unions in the Ottawa area, a

Mr. Jean-Guy Denis, who was the representative of the plasterers and cement masons union, and Leo Martel, of the plumbers union, fully supported what had been mentioned in the House.

They went on to state, according to the story, that organized crime is beating and threatening its way in the Ottawa area. These two union officials went on to say that officials had been sent to the hospital since January as a result of beatings. Others have been beaten as well. One man's family has been roughed up. Legitimate construction companies have been ordered to stay out of the building of certain projects.

This all goes on, at least that we know of, in the Ottawa area. I suggest, Mr. Speaker, that these two individuals know exactly what they are talking about.

For instance, take the question of Mr. Jean-Guy Denis. Some three months ago paid thugs entered his home on a Sunday morning; they were going to teach him a lesson. Unfortunately, in his home was only his 16-year-old son; they decided to beat him and sent him to the hospital. For good measure, they went on to kill the dog.

As far as Mr. Leo Martel was concerned, he was beaten up as well. Now these people have stated, Mr. Speaker, that they are prepared to testify before a royal commission but how can they testify if the royal commission is limited to any activity in the Toronto area?

The second point is this, Mr. Speaker, is it only coincidence that violence has started only since certain lathing firms or companies have moved into the Ottawa area? The member for High Park (Mr. Shulman) would recognize some of these names here. They were very easy to obtain, as all one had to do was call the Ministry of Consumer and Commercial Relations and get the officers of some of these companies. For instance, recently a firm called Cesaroni Bros. moved into the Ottawa area and violence followed shortly afterwards. Who is the head of Cesaroni? The president of Cesaroni, of course, is Mr. Samuel Cesaroni.

Another firm moved into the Ottawa area a short while ago—Durable Driwall Ltd. Again a name that was mentioned in this house by the member for High Park. This gentleman here, the president of this firm, happened to be one Siduel Romanelli.

Another member who's out recruiting very strongly in the Ottawa area these days, and pushing his weight around with the unions, is one Mr. Gus Simone. But apparently the government, in spite of all its research, according to the Throne Speech, was not aware of any of these activities.

The union officials went on to say that they had informed the member for Ottawa South, the present Minister of Industry and Tourism (Mr. Bennett); but he goes on to say, "Well, no, I have not heard anything about this." That is surprising, because since the member for Ottawa South's entry into this House he has become a power in Ottawa. He is the giver and the maker of all good things emanating from the Conservative Party. He is called "the boy wonder" in the Ottawa area. And yet he knows nothing about this. Maybe we should have a new nickname for this particular minister and call him something like "the ostrich."

There was also mention in the article that the Ottawa Housing Corp. projects were nesting grounds for these people, that they were using this type of project to further their own means. Apparently the Minister of Revenue (Mr. Grossman) is not aware of this.

They go on to say—and I have discussed this with lawyers representing some of these firms—that they have extreme difficulty every time they appear before the Ontario Labour Relations Board to discuss some of these factors. Apparently the Minister of Labour (Mr. Guindon) is not aware of this. The Solicitor General (Mr. Yaremko) says that CSO is aware of everything that is going on in the province. Apparently he was not aware of this, because it would not have been a limitation in the Throne Speech, and so on.

So I say very simply, Mr. Speaker, there is a theory called wilful blindness, and I am suggesting that the approach taken, at least in the Throne Speech, would seem to indicate that on the part of the government they are not looking around themselves. If they had decided to establish this commission at the time that it was required, some three years ago, likely they could have limited it to the Toronto area—

Mr. Speaker: The time has now expired.

Mr. Roy: —but this was not the case.

Mr. Speaker, in closing I say simply that we on this side will oppose any terms of reference which will limit this commission to this particular industry and will also oppose it if they limit it to the Toronto area. We want it right across the province and we want it for the building industry. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. Prime Minister may now have five minutes to reply if he wishes.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I doubt that it will take quite that long, on the assumption of course that this doesn't extend the time to the member from Grey-Bruce, who I am sure will be inhibited by the five minutes that he is allocated.

I would just state, Mr. Speaker, with respect, that I think really this was answered — and obviously the hon. member from Ottawa East didn't feel it was sufficient—when I observed to the Leader of the Opposition that while the Throne Speech set out the fact that we would have a royal commission, it did refer specifically to Metropolitan Toronto because I think it's fair to state that the discussions in the past two or three years have generally centred around this. I think I also made it clear in answer to both the Leader of the Opposition, and I believe to the member for High Park, that the terms of reference were in the process of being drafted. We did not want to inhibit or limit the activities of the commission; at the same time, Mr. Speaker, I think it's proper to observe that we don't want the commission to embark on any sort of witch-hunt. I will take note of—

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Davis —what the hon. member has said. I tried to express this in the House the other day, that from the government standpoint—and really I hope this represents the views of the members opposite—we want to see the royal commission try to deal with specifics and come up with specific answers if at all possible. I am not saying at this moment that the suggestion of Ottawa, Hamilton and so on, Mr. Speaker, doesn't make sense; it may very easily. I think the point that has to be made here is that the terms of reference will be made public and the members in the House will obviously have an opportunity to comment upon them; and I say with respect, Mr. Speaker, I think this is what was implied in my observations to both the Leader of the Opposition and the hon. member for High Park.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Grey-Bruce asked why the terms of reference of crime commissions should not be extended to Queen's Park. He may speak to this for five minutes.

Mr. Sargent: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I think it is a good idea to have the "untouchables" on the carpet. It's a gimmick we should have had a few years ago. I'm thinking now that—

Mr. MacDonald: Sounds like padding; the hon. member can't fill five minutes that way.

Mr. Sargent: Well, we'll see.

Mr. Speaker, I want to thank the Premier for coming. I didn't think he'd show up today, but I sincerely welcome him.

Mr. MacDonald: More padding. Let's get to the substance!

Mr. Sargent: Each day, Mr. Speaker, as events unfold, as a wee bit of the lid comes off, the people of Ontario are beginning to realize just what kind of a gang is running affairs at Queen's Park. Everywhere we look, every day, we have signs of corruption, waste, deceit and fraud.

I think of the story—

Mr. MacDonald: Here comes more padding!

Mr. Sargent: —about the fellow who asked the doctor what he should give a girl who has everything. The doctor said, "Penicillin." At this point, I think anything would help this government.

Mr. Speaker, the city of Montreal is spending $3 million to investigate organized crime—

Hon. G. A. Kerr (Provincial Secretary for Justice): And that's a witch-hunt!

An hon. member: He's getting nowhere.

Mr. Sargent: If there's any place where crime is organized, Mr. Speaker, it's right here in Queen's Park. This is organized crime. On March 20 we had the opening of the House. We had a full-dress performance of who's who in Ontario filing past "the godfather" over here—

Hon. Mr. Kerr: Who wrote that?

Mr. Sargent: He gave a performance that would put Marlon Brando to shame. Here was "smilin' Billy" shaking hands and giving his blessing to all the contractors and developers who have made fortunes at Queen's Park. And they stood in line for two hours to pay homage to "the godfather."

I ask the Premier, in the very brief time I have allotted to me, what right he has as leader of the Conservative Party to use the business contracts of the people of Ontario to raise money? What right does he have to do that? This business belongs to the people of Ontario, and the Premier sends his men out to put those guys on a list because they do business with the people of Ontario. What right does he have to do that?

As recently as three weeks ago, the Conservatives' Mr. Kelly approached an engineer with a large firm, which had a contract pending with the government; and the price tag was $50,000, the same as the Fidinam affair.

Mr. W. Hodgson (York North): How about Keith Davey?

Mr. Sargent: Is this going on 365 days a year? Is it an ongoing affair?

Mr. S. Lewis (Scarborough West): Who was this?

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Sargent: Does the Premier expect us to believe—

Mr. F. Drea (Scarborough Centre): Name the company!

Hon. Mr. Kerr: He really hasn't got a name!

Mr. Drea: Name the company!

Mr. Sargent: Does he expect us to believe—

Mr. Drea: Name the company!

Mr. Sargent: —that he is not informed about who gives what? Does he expect us to believe that?

An hon. member: Yes!

Mr. Drea: Name the company!

Mr. Sargent: The Progressive Conservative Party is reported to have raised $5 million or $6 million. The Premier has never denied the amount. The press says that is the amount.

Mr. Lewis: And he kept two-thirds of it for his own personal use!

Hon. Mr. Davis: Yes, I'm spending it every day!

Mr. Sargent: If the $50,000 deal with Fidinam is a relatively minor concern, what does the Premier expect us to believe happens in the really big areas of buildings and highways?

Mr. Drea: How did the member get his liquor licence?

Mr. Sargent: Mr. Speaker, does the Premier expect us to believe that the other $4,950,000 was raised by legal methods? Each and every contribution would be a criminal activity if it was the same as Fidinam.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member has 60 seconds left.

Mr. Sargent: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

An hon. member: He'd better get to the point!

Mr. Drea: That makes 50.

Mr. Sargent: Does the Premier agree, Mr. Speaker—

An hon. member: That's 45.

Mr. Sargent: —that if he made a full disclosure of how he raised the other $4,950,000, it would reveal criminal activity, as my colleague from Ottawa tried to prove—

Interjection by hon. member.

Mr. Drea: How did the member raise his money?

Mr. Sargent: —to prove it was a criminal activity would bring down this government immediately. If the people knew what was going on—

Mr. T. P. Reid (Rainy River): Ask him about Moog and the Ontario Hydro.

Mr. Sargent: Mr. Speaker, the Premier's failure to have a full scale royal commission, and his decision to conduct the investigation himself is an admission, I say to you sir, of fear of the results in taking the lid off.

Mr. Speaker: Time's expired!

Mr. Sargent: This Telex here—

Mr. Speaker: Time has expired.

Mr. Sargent: —is a glaring admission.

Mr. Speaker: Time has expired.

Mr. Sargent: I ask you then in closing, Mr. Speaker, if I may.

Mr. Speaker: Five minutes have expired.

Mr. Sargent: In closing I say—

Mr. Speaker: Five minutes have expired.

Mr. Sargent: I cannot close, Mr. Speaker, if you won't let me.

Mr. Speaker: Five minutes have expired. The Premier may reply to the extent of five minutes if he wishes.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I think really to dignify some of the observations of the hon. member from Grey-Bruce with a reply would be really offensive, both to me and my colleagues, and I would like to think, with some respect, to some of his own colleagues—

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Davis: However, I will reply to one or two other observations. He did ask a question which was not part of this debate, but he was asking as to the legal firm that looked after the legal work in the negotiation or finalization as between the Workmen's Compensation Board and Fidinam. I assume he meant the Workman's Compensation Board. I am informed that it was the firm of McCarthy and McCarthy; I think a firm with a very excellent reputation—

Mr. MacDonald: What are their politics?

Hon. Mr. Kerr: They are good Grits.

Hon. Mr. Davis: —here in the metropolitan area. Now that is information, Mr. Speaker, that I did say I would give to the hon. member; and he has it.

To deal with the question raised, there is just no intent—

Hon. Mr. Kerr: That's the end of that one.

Hon. Mr. Davis: —on the part of the government to have a royal commission. I say with respect, as I recall the observations of the member from Ottawa East—

Mr. Speaker: Order please! The hon. Premier is replying to the second question. The hon. Premier has five minutes further to speak to the second question sir.

Hon. Mr. Davis: No, I say with respect, Mr. Speaker that the hon. member for Grey-Bruce referred to observations made by the member from Ottawa East to which I was going to refer in reply to the member from Grey-Bruce—

Mr. MacDonald: Would the Premier say that again!

Hon. Mr. Davis: —because he quoted the member from Ottawa East as suggesting certain things that, as I understood it, were observations made last fall by the member from Ottawa East. He referred to some form of inquiry which was conducted, Mr. Speaker, by very competent law officers of the Crown; people in whom I have, and I say with respect, the public has confidence.

Mr. Reid: A new Henry VIII!

Hon. Mr. Davis: And it was determined after their investigation, without any question Mr. Speaker, that there was no evidence of any criminal offence. And I would say to the member from Grey-Bruce, when it comes to the financing of political parties I think I was the first one in this House to come to grips with the essence of the complexity of financing political parties; and that was the determination, as a matter of policy, that we would have disclosure. I say with respect, Mr. Speaker—

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Davis: —it was never a position put forward by the Liberal Party in the Province of Ontario—

An hon. member: The government was caught with its hands in the till.

Hon. Mr. Davis: —and it was never a position of policy adopted by the federal Liberal Party as it relates to the—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order

Mr. J. E. Bullbrook (Sarnia): The Pontius Pilate of politics!

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, we will come to grips with what I think is the basic element in election reform. We will come to grips with this.

I say to the hon. member for Grey-Bruce that the way the Progressive Conservative Party raises funds in this province is within the law. I will say this, without any specific knowledge, I would think that there are many companies and corporations that contribute to his party, maybe not in equal amounts but certainly—

Mr. Bullbrook: We don't give them contracts.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Oh, come on! To try to wind up my brief reply—

Mr. Roy: What reply?

Hon. Mr. Davis: —we have no intention of extending — as I think the member's question was—the terms of reference related to the construction industry to any matters related to political finance.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Grey-Bruce had asked the question:

Will the premier advise why he will not call at once a royal commission on the Fidinam affair, to furnish lists of donors and if they have government contacts, with powers to subpoena; and why he has for a second time refused to name the legal firm having the multimillion-dollar deal, and who received the finder's fee.

That was the hon. member's second question, to which he may now speak for five minutes.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Sargent: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Any organized crime must have complete co-operation of the government in any area—

Mr. M. C. Germa (Sudbury): Federally too.

An hon. member: Is the member for Grey-Bruce speaking from experience?

Mr. Sargent: —and the most ardent supporter of this should be the Premier of this province. He mentions the fact that he brought about full disclosure. Not until he got caught with his pants down did he do that—not until.

Mr. MacDonald: That's when you get full disclosure.

Mr. Sargent: I say it is a cowardly way of doing it—why doesn't he admit that he was caught?

Hon. Mr. Davis: On a point of personal privilege, that was never the kind of disclosure I contemplated. Mr. Speaker, that should probably not appear in Hansard.

Mr. MacDonald: It is what you call a Stanfield revelation.

Hon. Mr. Davis: I have great loyalty to my federal leader, but I have to confess that it would not be demonstrated in that way.

Mr. Sargent: Is this on my time, Mr. Speaker?

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Sargent: Mr. Speaker, our system here is corrupted by the people who put up financial contributions to get officeholders elected. The biggest improvement we could make to democratize our society, it seems to me, is to arrange for public financing of political campaigns. Right now, each elected official has two constituencies—his money constituency and his voting constituency. He can't even get the money to reach his voting constituency until he has satisfied his money constituency that he is going to look after its interests.

Mr. Drea: The member should speak for himself only.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Sargent: Now Mr. Speaker, the Fidinam affair—

Mr. Drea: Why doesn't he tell us how he gets his millions?

An hon. member: Legally!

Mr. Sargent: I owe a million. I don't have any; I owe it.

Mr. Reid: Not doing business with the government, I can tell the member.

Mr. Sargent: This company, Mr. Speaker, got a $10 million loan with a $1.4 million lease over 20 years—an unknown company—and for this it donated $50,000 to the Premier's election pot.

Now, Mr. Thompson, the man in charge of the investment, said he didn't know who put the deal through. I maintain this; he told me this.

These funds, Mr. Speaker, are trust funds and not tax dollars, and by law they can't be lent out on this type of investment. But they were anyway. When you can get Hydro bonds paying 9.5 per cent, why would you lend this kind of loan unsecured at 10 per cent?

The bagman, Mr. Kelly, works out of an unmarked office downtown here. He works from a list of firms having contracts with the government. He makes the deals based on the size of the contracts. The cheques are made payable to him. Is that right, I ask the Premier? The cheques are made payable to him, is that right? The Premier doesn't know?

Hon. Mr. Davis: I have no idea.

Mr. Drea: Has the member donated?

Mr. Sargent: If he wanted to give us a complete and unbiased, fair answer to this—

Mr. Speaker: Sixty seconds.

Mr. Sargent: Sixty seconds? I am just starting.

The Premier says he doesn't know who gives what, or doesn't want to know. Well surely someone must know, and I charge that the Premier, as the head of that party, has been engaged in pretty close to criminal activity by this type of operation.

Mr. Speaker: Order. The hon. member will kindly withdraw that remark.

Mr. Sargent: All right. I said "alleged." By golly, we could prove it if the government opened the books. How did it raise $4,950,000? Was Fidinam the only crooked deal it had? Was that the only one?

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Mr. Sargent: Only $5 million out of the contract?

Mr. Speaker: The time has expired.

Mr. Sargent: Who is the government trying to kid?

Mr. Speaker: The Premier may reply if he wishes for five minutes.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I think, with great respect, a certain amount of what the hon. member said was repetitious. My observations, made earlier, that parts of it should not be really dignified with some form of reply would also bear repetition.

I would only say I listened with some interest and I really sensed a very distinct degree of hypocrisy. I would just repeat to the hon. member for Grey-Bruce that I happen to be very proud of the party I lead. I make no apologies for the way we have conducted the affairs of the party. I think it is a credit to the party and the people of this province.

Mr. Sargent: A lot of people in Ontario don't believe that.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, whether the member for Grey-Bruce believes it or not, it happens to be factually the case.

Mr. Speaker: This completes the special time allotment for this particular period. I now deem the motion that the House adjourn to have been carried.

The House adjourned at 5:43 o'clock p.m.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF ONTARIO

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 28, 1973

The House met at 2 o'clock, p.m.

Prayers.

Mr. Speaker: Statements by the ministry.

GRANTS FOR COMMUNITY CENTRES

Hon. R. Brunelle (Minister of Community and Social Services): Mr. Speaker, I have a short statement. After reviewing the submissions made by a number of municipalities regarding the termination of grants under the Community Centres Act to municipalities with more than 25,000 population I am pleased to announce that his restriction has been lifted. Municipalities with more than 25,000 population will be contacted on an individual basis regarding applications that have already been made.

I should also like to announce that a new pre-approval system will be introduced for new projects as of March 29, 1973. In this regard, municipalities would need to obtain approval of their projects if they wished to obtain a provincial grant. Approvals and the resulting grants will be based on an assessment of municipal needs and resources.

All municipalities will be notified without delay of the new procedures and will be provided with the necessary forms. I should like to assure the hon. members and municipalities that projects which have already been started or completed prior to March 29, 1973, will be considered according to existing legislation and regulations.

NAMING OF TOWNSHIPS IN NORTHERN ONTARIO

Hon. L. Bernier (Minister of Natural Resources): It is my pleasure, Mr. Speaker, to inform the members of the assembly that the Ministry of Natural Resources has prepared the way for the naming of 358 numbered and lettered townships in northern Ontario.

An all-party committee under the chairmanship of the hon. member for Sault Ste. Marie (Mr. Rhodes), my parliamentary assistant, has been appointed to supervise the application of these names. Assisting my parliamentary assistant will be the hon. member for Thunder Bay (Mr. Stokes), the hon. member for Nipissing (Mr. R. S. Smith), the hon. member for Timiskaming (Mr. Havrot) and the hon. member for Algoma-Manitoulin (Mr. Lane).

I am happy to report that qualified staff within my ministry have been and are being found to assist in the task of researching material dealing with the history of the areas concerned; the circumstances regarding dates, surveyors, decisions, etc.; information on the types of records and plans involved; names of officials and members in office responsible for the original surveys; and information on topography, geology and other distinctive features within the townships to be named.

Though its proper role in this programme is strictly advisory, the Ontario Geographic Names Board has provided us with much of our present information. Although they are the statutory authority in the province for the provision and maintenance of names for geographical features and other unincorporated populated places, and thus not responsible for geographical townships, they are prepared to accept, provided no problems of duplication are encountered, all names provided for the unnamed townships by the committee.

The names shall be drawn from the lists in the proposal submitted to the policy field committee, which includes:

1. Names of members of the legislative assembly, approximately 60 in number.
2. Names of chiefs from Indian bands, approximately 60.
3. Names of mayors and reeves from northern Ontario, approximately 175.

An hon. member: Does the minister think they'll name one after him?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: These lists will be updated and verified by the committee—

Mr. E. W. Martel (Sudbury East): Leo the Lion township!

Hon. Mr. Bernier: —and their work should be completed within six months.

Mr. S. Lewis (Scarborough West): That should ensure their support for a considerable time.

ACID SPILL AT DUNNVILLE PLANT

Hon. J. A. C. Auld (Minister of the Environment): Mr. Speaker, I'd like to make a brief statement concerning the explosion and resulting acid spill at the Electric Reduction Co. of Canada's Dunnville plant. The explosion took place at approximately 2 p.m. yesterday when the acid was being transferred from a tank truck to a storage tank. Eight hundred tons of sulphuric acid were lost. The blast ruptured another tank containing 80 tons of bunker C oil and seriously injured two company maintenance men and the truck driver.

Ministry of the Environment staff were immediately sent to the scene and a news release was prepared and distributed by late afternoon. Initial reports indicated that a considerable quantity of the acid had reached the Grand River. This proved to be unfounded. Investigations by my staff showed that the spill was contained on company property and a cleanup and neutralization programme was put into effect under the direction of the industrial waste branch.

A dike has been constructed to prevent the acid from moving and neutralization began almost immediately. The sulphuric acid was between 75 and 90 per cent pure, and additional ministry staff will be sampling both surface and ground water to determine if there has been any adverse effect on the environment in that connection.

The Grand River is being monitored as well as the area adjacent to the Dunnville water treatment plant which is 2½ miles from the scene. Latest reports show that the situation is well under control and there is no present danger of contamination of the river. Testing in the area will continue and a Ministry of the Environment industrial waste branch representative will be on hand to ensure that the containment and cleanup are carried out to our satisfaction.

Mr. E. Sargent (Grey-Bruce): Mr. Speaker, last night at the Academy Awards in Hollywood, Marlon Brando did not accept his award for "The Godfather," so I'd like to present this trophy to the Premier (Mr. Davis) with the high regard of the contractors and developers of Ontario.

Hon. W. G. Davis (Premier): Mr. Speaker, on a point of personal privilege, like the recipient last evening, on behalf of the public of the Province of Ontario, which we happen to represent on this side of the House, I return this very delightful award to the member for Grey-Bruce to remember that fact in the years to come.

An hon. member: The member deserves it.

Mr. Lewis: Now can we have a statement on Indian affairs?

An hon. member: That backfired on him!

Hon. A. Grossman (Minister of Revenue): The Premier was very nice; he didn't tell him what to do with it!

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Sargent: That really hurts.

Mr. Speaker: Oral questions.

The hon. Leader of the Opposition.

ONTARIO HYDRO HEAD OFFICE

Mr. R. F. Nixon (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I'd like to ask the Premier if he would obtain from Ontario Hydro copies of the unsuccessful proposals that were submitted to Hydro with regard to the building of the new headquarters, and table those proposals in the House.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I am prepared to discuss this with Hydro. The proposals, I would gather, are relatively complex in the evaluation. Perhaps some better method might be found for the Leader of the Opposition and others who wish to look at the system and the evaluations. I say, with respect, that perhaps just a tabling would not in itself solve the problem. I certainly would not undertake to do this but certainly I will discuss this with the chairman of Hydro.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: A supplementary: If the Premier will undertake to table them, I will undertake to ask for further assistance in the evaluation, if we feel it is necessary.

SOLID WASTE DISPOSAL

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Minister of the Environment. Will he comment on charges made by Pollution Probe at a press conference today that he, as the minister in charge of the environment, has stated that landfill is the answer for solid waste disposal, and that Pickering and Port Hope should resign themselves to this solution? Would he further comment on the charges made by Pollution Probe, which is evidently represented on the minister's Solid Waste Task Force, that the task force has not met for almost 10 weeks, although there is a nine months mandate for the task force; that in fact the leadership of the task force has ignored the terms of reference and has not come to grips with any sort of discussion of the disposal of solid wastes; and, further, that the paid industry representatives on the task force dominate the discussion, if not in numbers, at least in their influence?

Hon. Mr. Auld: Well, Mr. Speaker, I just happen to have with me a copy of the speech that I made on Monday—I won't read it all, unless the hon. member would like me to. Here is what I said on page 4—I had been talking about packaging and the fact that there was a lot of it and it was adding a lot to the solid waste stream:

First, I believe that the best possible way of dealing with waste disposal is to have all waste recycled if at all possible, and this is the long-term goal of the provincial government: to try to generate interest and develop methods which will ensure that this becomes a reality.

I also said that because of the time frame facing Metro, and despite the activities they are already undertaking in a preliminary way to look into some sort of separation and reclamation, the sanitary landfill method was inevitable—they have about 11 or 12 months of space left. I said that in many parts of the province sanitary landfill was going to be the only solution for a number of years because of geography, volume and a whole host of economic reasons.

I also indicated some of the things that my ministry is doing and is proposing to do in the field of research and experimentation on uses of garbage other than simply sticking it back in the land.

As far as the Solid Waste Task Force is concerned, the task force was set up in November, and I have had a number of meetings with the whole force, although I couldn't say when the last meeting of the task force itself was held. But I do know that the first two tasks that I asked the force to undertake were to take a look at beverage containers and at milk containers.

The chairman of the task force told me last Friday that he thought the working groups, which are made up of people within and without the industries that would be affected and who are knowledgeable, would be reporting by the end of May as far as beverage containers are concerned, and probably before that as far as milk containers are concerned.

I am sure that there are many different opinions being expressed by those working groups, because they are made up of consumers, Pollution Probe, the bottlers, the can people, the paper people and a whole variety of interests who have made representations in the past. Now, I trust, they are cross-examining each other on the statements they are making, and presumably are going to make some recommendations to the task force, which will in turn make recommendations to me.

As far as the solid waste part is concerned, which is the biggest single problem and in my opinion the one that will take the longest to resolve, I believe the working group is in the process of being put together. It will be a larger one; it will have a lot of technical people on it. I would assume that they will be reporting from time to time, but I would be misleading myself as well as everybody else if I said that I expected they were going to come up with definite, perfect solutions in a short time. I would hope that they will have some suggestions and recommendations to make to us for specific areas in the field of reclamation, but my expectation is that they will be meeting for some time to try to give us some additional assistance on what is a North American problem and for which there is no simple solution at the present time.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: I wonder if the minister would make it clear whether or not the task force has met in the last 10 weeks; and what is the difference between the task force and what he chooses to call the working group? Is the working group some special group from the task force?

Hon. Mr. Auld: I can't say when the whole task force has met, because I just received a copy of the press release from Pollution Probe, which I gather it issued this morning. I haven't had an opportunity to get in touch with the chairman of the task force and find out when the full task force last met. But I do know that the working group contains some members of the task force and people who are not on the task force but represent industry and consumers—a broad spectrum.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, I don't want to prolong this, and I have difficulty hearing the minister, but why expand the task force in such a peculiar way to include those people from the industry, when the industry is already well represented on the task force?

Hon. Mr. Auld: Mr. Speaker, it was the task force itself which recommended to me that it set up working groups in the specific fields, because there are different issues involved in, for example, the fairly narrow beverage container field as compared to the whole field of solid waste.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: A supplementary: Pending something definite from them, the minister is going to continue with his attitude that the municipalities east of Toronto might as well prepare themselves to receive garbage?

Hon. Mr. Auld: Oh, no, Mr. Speaker. Again I will—

Mr. Lewis: The member for Durham (Mr. Carruthers) wouldn't hear of it.

Mr. A. Carruthers (Durham): I am listening.

Mr. I. Deans (Wentworth): That is a change.

Mr. Lewis: That is the first time he has stood up for his people in a long time.

Mr. Carruthers: I stand up for them every day and the member for Scarborough West tries to run them down.

Mr. Lewis: Don't get excited now.

Mr. Speaker: Order.

Hon. Mr. Auld: I would like to say, Mr. Speaker, I would really enjoy having an opportunity to read parts of this speech to you.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: I wish the minister would speak up so we can hear him.

Mr. Lewis: There is a seat that would make a good by-election—Durham.

Hon. Mr. Auld: I am now reading, Mr. Speaker, from page 14.

Mr. V. M. Singer (Downsview): How many pages has the minister got?

Hon. Mr. Auld: It is triple-spaced; it isn't that long.

For all of these reasons [and I won't give those—those are two more pages before that] I must support the acquisition by Metro of space suitable for sanitary landfill. I must also support the action taken by Metro in obtaining proposals for the rail haul of waste.

I had said earlier I was supporting the proposal that had been made to them, I believe by one of the paper companies, for a form of separation.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Surely the minister is going to stop it until the task force reports?

Hon. Mr. Auld: To continue from the speech:

However, there are two major qualifications to this support. I must distinguish between support in principle of the need to acquire landfill sites, and approval for the use of specific sites wherever they are located. Before any particular site is approved, all the procedures laid down in the Environmental Protection Act must be followed, including public hearings before the Environmental Hearing Board.

I can state quite categorically that under no circumstances will any site be approved where valid objections have been raised which cannot be overcome by changes in design or operation of the site, or if the requirements of the Act and regulations cannot be met.

My support also might be qualified by the proviso that I shall expect Metro to do everything in their power to initiate other more sophisticated techniques when we consider these are practicable.

I went on to mention the two things that Metro presently is doing for its proposed Bermondsey site, one of which is to get the crushing equipment which will be required before separation takes place, and the other is certain other projects that it proposes to initiate there.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Hamilton East, a supplementary.

Mr. R. Gisborn (Hamilton East): Before the task force report, and in view of the concern of the employees and the manufacturers of the non-returnable products, why has the minister made such positive statements as, "Strong leadership will be taken in this field so that we will cut down as much as possible on one-way disposable cartons. That will include cans, bottles and plastic containers."? Why was the minister so positive in his position?

Hon. Mr. Auld: Mr. Speaker, I was simply repeating what I said in other places at other times, that there is a great and growing amount of solid waste being generated, and that if any parts of that can be reduced at the source I think we ought to do so by whatever method.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Thunder Bay, a supplementary.

Mr. J. E. Stokes (Thunder Bay): Would the minister consider making use of the facilities, the resources and the expertise of the Ontario Research Foundation to find out ways of recycling, rather than damaging our environment with landfill sites right across the province?

Mr. J. F. Foulds (Port Arthur): Good question.

Hon. Mr. Auld: Mr. Speaker, I don't think I should take the time of the House to go into the various methods and things that we have been doing in the solid waste field since we got into it two years ago. In those specific areas where the ORF can be of assistance, we use them. As a matter of fact, this year we've used them on about two occasions dealing with private waste disposal systems which they can evaluate.

Mr. Lewis: Supplementary.

Mr. P. G. Givens (York-Forest Hill): Supplementary.

Mr. Speaker: We've had a reasonable number of supplementaries.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: We have had a reasonable number of supplementaries.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Let's take one from the government side.

An hon. member: Let's not!

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Lewis: Come on, you shouldn't discriminate against a government member fighting for his life.

Mr. Speaker: I understand the hon. member for Waterloo North (Mr. Good) would like me to be unreasonable, but I don't buy that.

The hon. Leader of the Opposition.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: No more questions at this time, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Scarborough West.

RECYCLING SUBSIDIES

Mr. Lewis: A question related to this matter but slightly different, I think: How much money is the government now spending on direct subsidy of recycling programmes?

Hon. Mr. Auld: I might be wrong, but I would say none other than—no, there is one—

Mr. Lewis: Well, that's a pretty positive programme.

Mr. E. R. Good (Waterloo North): Burlington, 45,000.

Hon. Mr. Auld: Well, there is nobody who is doing recycling in that sense.

Mr. Lewis: Oh, I see, I see!

Mr. Givens: On a point of privilege—

Hon. Mr. Auld: There is one grant we made to Kanata for Pollution Probe.

Mr. Speaker: Order. A point of privilege.

Mr. Lewis: Well, by way of supplementary.

Mr. Givens: Point of privilege, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: Point of privilege.

Mr. Lewis: By all means.

Mr. Givens: The minister says that nobody's doing recycling. May I inform the minister that I am the vice-president of a company that recycles 250 tons of paper a day. The name of the company is Atlantic Packaging Co., on Progress Ave.

Mr. Speaker: That's no point of privilege. No point of privilege.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Givens: Why is the minister so pessimistic about recycling when it is being done right now? He is not helping it at all.

An hon. member: He doesn't know anything about it.

Mr. Speaker: Order.

Mr. Givens: He doesn't even know anything about it.

Mr. R. M. Johnston (St. Catharines): The member for York-Forest Hills has a conflict.

Mr. Lewis: All he's asking for is a forgivable loan.

Mr. Speaker: Order.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Auld: Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Givens: We do it every day, seven days a week.

Mr. Foulds: The government are experts on recycling. It keeps coming out in the Speech from the Throne.

Hon. Mr. Auld: In reply to the—

Mr. Sargent: Supplementary.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. minister is on his feet replying. Will the hon. member for Grey-Bruce please wait his turn?

Mr. D. C. MacDonald (York South): Is this the minister's Throne Speech?

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member is out of order.

Mr. Sargent: All right.

Hon. Mr. Auld: In reply to what I assume was the question from the hon. member for York-Forest Hill—

Mr. Lewis: That was a point of privilege, not a question.

Mr. Speaker: I'm waiting for him to finish his answer, then you're next on a supplementary.

Hon. Mr. Auld: —I'm quite aware that there's been a company recycling papers in Toronto for 22 years.

Mr. Lewis: What is he talking to?

Mr. Speaker: Well, is he not completing his answer?

Mr. Deans: It wasn't even a question, it was a point of privilege.

Mr. Lewis: I have a supplementary.

Mr. Speaker: I ruled the hon. member for York-Forest Hill out of order because he certainly had no point of privilege.

Mr. Lewis: Right.

Mr. Speaker: It was my impression the hon. minister was still continuing to reply to the hon. member's—

Mr. Lewis: No, no.

Mr. Speaker: If the hon. minister is finished, then the hon. member for Scarborough West has a supplementary and he's in order. He may ask it.

Mr. Lewis: His reply was quite succinct, Mr. Speaker. It finished after the word "none." Now I, therefore, have a supplementary.

How is the minister going to prevent the pockmarking of the landscape of Ontario with landfill sites until he ploughs major amounts of money into recycling projects which do exist, or into the government undertaking a public recycling?

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Auld: Mr. Speaker, I'll send the hon. member a copy of my speech.

Mr. Speaker: The hon.—

Mr. Sargent: Mr. Speaker, I'd like to ask the minister—

Interjection by an hon. member.

Mr. Speaker: Order. The hon. member for Grey-Bruce.

Mr. Sargent: Is the minister aware—

Mr. Lewis: The minister has given up on this and he has committed himself to solid waste disposal landfill. The member for Durham will lose his seat because of it and I am worried about him.

Mr. Carruthers: The member for Scarborough West doesn't have to worry about me.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Grey-Bruce has a supplementary.

Mr. Sargent: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker: Is the minister aware that the large firm Black Clawson-Kennedy Ltd. in Owen Sound is the largest manufacturer of recycling equipment and it is building it for major cities in the United States? Is he aware of that?

Mr. Lewis: There is great self-interest here today.

Hon. Mr. Auld: Mr. Speaker, I am aware of the company, which has been in the business of manufacturing equipment for the manufacture of paper for, I think, 50 or 60 years—

Mr. Good: And he isn't interested.

Hon. Mr. Auld: I am aware of the pilot project which they undertook in Franklin, Ohio. I am aware of the fact that they are building their first—

Mr. Deans: Where is the Ontario government pilot project?

Hon. Mr. Auld: —full-sized plant someplace in Long Island. I am aware of the fact that they are discussing with Metro a proposal whereby they will build a plant which will separate some materials, and I visited their plant and I have talked with their people. But they are not the largest manufacturer of recycling equipment in the world. They are building—

Mr. Johnston: We are going to separate the men from the boys. The member for Grey-Bruce is on the boys' side.

Hon. Mr. Auld: I'll send the hon. member the brochure from the company. I think I have a spare one.

Mr. Speaker: A supplementary?

Mr. M. C. Germa (Sudbury): Supplementary to the minister: I am sure the minister is aware of the pilot project at Queen's University to do with the composting of solid waste and I understand that this project is foundering because of lack of funding. Has the ministry put any funds into this pilot project and does the minister think it is worthy of it?

Hon. Mr. Auld: Mr. Speaker, I am well aware of the project that Professors Brown and Clark from Queen's were proposing to the city of Kingston. In fact we indicated in the sessions with the city of Kingston and the two gentlemen, who are quite knowledgeable in this field, that we would be prepared to assist in the construction of that part of the separation operation which they wanted to build—this was not a pilot project; this was a full-scale project to look after Kingston's waste—provided that Kingston would take it over when it was completed.

There was some disagreement in the figures that we produced, and that were produced at the other end, as to the economic benefit of those materials which they could separate, and the city of Kingston decided, as I understand it, not to proceed because they felt that it was going to be too costly.

Mr. Lewis: Sure, if the minister put it to them.

Mr. Speaker: Does the hon. Leader of the Opposition have further questions? I think there have been enough supplementaries.

SOLID WASTE DISPOSAL

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Can the minister inform the House whether or not the hon. member for Wellington-Dufferin (Mr. Root) will still be conducting the hearings regarding the disposal of solid waste, whether or not it is recycled?

Hon. Mr. Auld: Mr. Speaker, the hon. member to whom the Leader of the Opposition referred is chairman of the Environmental Hearing Board which will continue to conduct hearings on proposed landfill sites as well as carry out the other duties the board has in connection with water and sewage.

Mr. Lewis: Well, it is ludicrous. It is a travesty.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Isn't there obviously a conflict of interest between policy and the impartial hearings associated with the administration of that policy? Doesn't the minister see that conflict and would he not move to remove the conflict?

Mr. Deans: The member is protecting the government every day.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Auld: Mr. Speaker, I don't see any conflict provided—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. F. Drea (Scarborough Centre): No more conflict than the opposition member sitting as an arbitrator.

An hon. member: The minister is white-washing.

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Hon. Mr. Auld: I have every confidence in the hon. member and I don't see any conflict—

Mr. R. F. Nixon: That's not the point. I've got confidence in him too. I don't think he should have that job.

Hon. Mr. Auld: There was a problem we might have had, had the PP proposal for the site in the hon. member's riding taken place.

Mr. Lewis: Look at his stand on Minto township. Why has the Ministry of the Environment deteriorated so badly since the former minister left it? What happened?

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Scarborough West.

HIGHWAY LITTER SIGNS

Mr. Lewis: A question of the Treasurer (Mr. White), Mr. Speaker: He was here a moment ago. He's not here now?

Then another question of the Minister of the Environment just to satisfy a matter of curiosity: Is it true that the $50-for-littering signs on the highway are being removed by his ministry?

Hon. Mr. Auld: Mr. Speaker, I assume the hon. member is talking about the signs that I assume are put up by the Ministry of Transportation and Communications and deal with a section of the Highway Traffic Act having to do with littering. It is not my legislation.

Mr. Speaker: Does the hon. member for Scarborough West have further questions? If not, the hon. member for Essex South.

REMOVAL OF AGGREGATE FROM LAKE ERIE

Mr. D. A. Paterson (Essex South): Mr. Speaker, a question of the Minister of Natural Resources: Has the ministry decided as yet whether or not to renew the licences, which expire March 31, for the taking of sand and gravel from the bed of Lake Erie by National Sand and Gravel and Erie Sand and Gravel? And does his department now think that the taking of this aggregate is contributing in any way to the erosion of the shorelines of Lake Erie?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Mr. Speaker, I would like to inform the member that we have agreed with the company to extend their licence for another year on the condition that they increase their exploration in certain parts of Lake Erie. Our studies are still continuing with regard to the erosion problem of which he speaks.

Mr. Paterson: Mr. Speaker, can the minister advise the House as to whether or not this will change the number of cubic yards of aggregate that will be taken from the bed of Lake Erie, and the location in relation to the tip of Point Pelee where this operation is going to be conducted?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Mr. Speaker, I don't have that information at my fingertips but I will get it and make sure the member is well informed.

Mr. J. E. Bullbrook (Sarnia): By way of supplementary, would the minister advise the House when, if ever, his ministry is going to adopt any of the 12 recommendations contained in the select committee report tabled in this House in 1953 in connection with erosion and lake levels?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Mr. Speaker, I don't have the answer to that particular question but I will endeavour to find it.

Mr. Bullbrook: A supplementary: Is the minister familiar with the 12 recommendations made in 1953? Why wasn't anything done to implement them in the intervening 20 years?

An hon. member: Twenty-one years!

Hon. Mr. Bernier: I am not totally familiar with all the recommendations but I will make myself well informed.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for High Park.

INCREASES IN PRICES OF HOUSES

Mr. M. Shulman (High Park): Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the minister responsible for housing.

An hon. member: Which minister is that?

Mr. Lewis: The apologist for housing.

Mr. Shulman: We wonder sometimes. Is the Minister of Revenue aware that the price of housing in this province, both under HOME and outside HOME, has risen between 20 and 30 per cent in the last eight weeks? Is the minister taking any action to control at least the price of housing under HOME and if so, what is he doing?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Of course, Mr. Speaker, we have always controlled the price of housing under the HOME plan. I don't know why the hon. member is—

Mr. Shulman: Why the tremendous increase in prices in the last two months?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Under the HOME plan?

Mr. Shulman: Yes.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: There hasn't been a tremendous increase in price. We have just recently considered a slight increase in price because we couldn't get any builders to build. Some of them, indeed, have abandoned—

Mr. Lewis: The government offered them the money. It increased their prices. There is no end to its dealing. It is such a ripoff.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: If it is such a rip-off, why aren't they all grabbing it?

Mr. Lewis: Some of them are.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: The member should make up his mind. It is either too good or isn't good enough.

Mr. Lewis: Why doesn't the government build its own houses?

Mr. Deans: Why doesn't the government do something?

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Hon. Mr. Grossman: The opposition has all the answers but none of them is practical.

Mr. Deans: Why doesn't the government try it?

Mr. Speaker: Has the hon. minister finished with his reply?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: The hon. member asked me a question and I am trying hard to answer him, if his colleagues would give me an opportunity. I was pointing out that—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. minister is replying to the hon. member for High Park, not the member for Wentworth. The hon. member for Wentworth is prolonging it.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Because of the limitations imposed by OHC on the prices for which the developer or builder was able to sell his houses to the public and because this price had not been increased for two or three years. I think it was, some of them, in fact, abandoned the houses because they could not build them profitably. Some, indeed, lost money on them so we are increasing the prices accordingly. I think they went up by some $1,200 or $1,600.

Mr. Lewis: That's very useful to middle-income earners.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for High Park still has a supplementary.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: It is very useful! It is better to get houses built for $1,600 more than no houses at all.

Mr. Lewis: I am sure that is true. It is better to be a developer and get $1,600 more.

Mr. Shulman: Mr. Speaker, as a supplementary: In view of the tremendous increase in prices both within and without HOME amounting to over 30 per cent in some cases—and I have the statistics here if the minister wishes them—is he considering putting any ceiling or making any effort to prevent this continued rapid rise?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Mr. Speaker, as the hon. member knows perfectly well, except insofar as it deals with those matters which Ontario Housing Corp. is able to deal with—that is those buildings and those operations which it helps finance and those which it builds on its own—we have absolutely no power to do what the hon. member is talking about. That is, that we should have the power to impose ceilings on prices for housing. We don't have that power, sir.

Mr. Deans: The minister is part of the problem, not part of the solution.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Except—

Mr. Lewis: The minister has the power to give the builders money but not to control it.

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Hon. Mr. Grossman: —where we provide the funds, as I have just told the hon. member, and he knows perfectly well what I am saying, and where we have some control over the lending of funds or where we do the building on our own, there we have the power to control the price at which these houses are sold and at which the units are sold, and we do control it. On the others we have no control.

Mr. Shulman: Mr. Speaker, a supplementary.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for York Centre is entitled to the next supplementary.

Mr. D. M. Deacon (York Centre): Does the minister provide any control over the fast buck increase in the price of land or does he just control the increase in the price of building the house itself?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: We have no control over the price of land, sir. The only means by which we can hope to keep the price of land down is to do as much land banking as we can, as much servicing as we can, and provide as much housing on our own as we can and lend money where it will help get housing built.

Mr. Lewis: But it never gets built.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Well, only about 100,000 starts in Ontario last year! Only 100,000!

Mr. Lewis: The government is still short 10,000 to 15,000 starts a year for the last five years.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: That is probably as many as the rest of Canada. It's not a bad record.

Mr. Lewis: It's terrible.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Hon. Mr. Grossman: It's a pretty good record.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Downsview was attempting to gain the floor previously.

Mr. Singer: I have a question of the—

Mr. Sargent: May I ask a supplementary question?

Mr. Speaker: Is this a supplementary?

Mr. Singer: No.

Mr. Speaker: I am sorry, there are a couple—if the Liberal Party will decide which one wants the floor I'll pick one of them out.

The hon. member for Grey-Bruce.

Mr. Singer: We have lots of questions.

Mr. Sargent: I know this is a difficult field, but is the minister aware of the NHA finance programme in Hull, Que., where they bought 300 three-bedroom homes for $11,000 per unit? It is a beautiful development. I showed it to the Minister of Industry and Tourism (Mr. Bennett) and he has apparently inspected it by now. Does the minister know about this project?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Mr. Speaker, I have no control over what the NHA does in the Province of Quebec. Indeed there are some things which NHA will do for other provinces which they won't do for the Province of Ontario.

An hon. member: Tell us what!

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Mr. R. F. Nixon: He can't get away with that kind of thing.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: There can only be one member on the floor at one time.

The hon. member for Scarborough West.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: That's irresponsible!

Mr. Lewis: But out of curiosity, perhaps the minister would care to tell the House what specifically NHA is doing for the Province of Quebec to which he refers.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: I didn't say they were doing it for Quebec.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Deans: Caught out again, caught out again!

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Check the Hansard and see what I said. If the hon. member wants—

Mr. Lewis: Just like the Ottawa Tories. Just a little artful innuendo.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: The hon. member wants an example. I refer him to the questions we raised at Ottawa, at the federal-provincial conference, for example, in respect of the NHA amendments which are now being processed through the House of Commons.

Mr. Sargent: When is the minister going to resign?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: The member will never get an opportunity to resign, because he won't have anything from which to resign.

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Mr. T. P. Reid (Rainy River): Pretty weak slap, that one!

Hon. Mr. Grossman: The NHA amendments to a fairly large extent will not help the Province of Ontario at all, because the limitations imposed and the amount of help given do not deal realistically with what the cost of housing is in those provinces which have large urban areas, like Metropolitan Toronto, Ottawa, Hamilton and so on.

Mr. Lewis: That's debatable.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Well, all right. These things will not help the Province of Ontario. There are other instances which I will talk about before this session is over. We will have an opportunity during my estimates, presumably, to go into all of the details, and I am sure the hon. members opposite will be convinced that it would be a lot better if Ottawa provided the block funding we are talking about and let us run our own housing programme.

Mr. Deans: It would be disgraceful. This government would abuse the money.

Mr. Lewis: Another opting out.

Mr. Shulman: Inasmuch as the minister is responsible for housing in this province, and inasmuch as he says he does not have the powers to control these prices, has he considered bringing in legislation to give himself the powers to put a ceiling on these prices?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Mr. Speaker, if that decision is ever made it will be announced in due time in this House.

Mr. Lewis: It will be announced by this party.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Waterloo North.

RESIDENTIAL TAX REBATE

Mr. Good: A question of the Treasurer and Minister of Economics and Intergovernmental Affairs regarding the residential property tax credit plan: Is the minister going to correct the situation whereby people who are unable to pay their taxes in the fiscal year 1972 and pay them in 1973, who will then pay their 1973 in 1973, will be denied the $290 base amounts on which to add 10 per cent of the taxes. Is he going to correct this in view of the fact that this is a direct hardship to elderly people who have had to postpone paying their taxes, and now have municipalities, under their welfare directors, trying to arrange a rebate for them?

Hon. J. White (Treasurer and Minister of Intergovernmental Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I'll take that as notice.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: The member for Chatham-Kent (Mr. McKeough) would have been able to answer that!

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Wentworth.

GREAT LAKES FLOOD DAMAGE

Mr. Deans: Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Provincial Secretary for Resources Development. What steps will the provincial secretary take to ensure that all of the municipalities affected by the flooding are notified of the provincial grant programme, that apparently is available but of which many are not aware?

Hon. A. B. R. Lawrence (Provincial Secretary for Resources Development): Mr. Speaker, I find it hard to believe that any are unaware. But in the absence of a direct notice to them, I think the member has got a good point. I will ensure they are all formally notified.

Mr. Deans: By way of a supplementary question, may I ask whether, in the event the municipality is not prepared to proceed on the 80-20 basis set out by the minister, if an individual homeowner can proceed and make the 20 per cent available by himself or herself?

Hon. Mr. Lawrence: Not under the present policy, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Deans: A supplementary question: Will the minister alter the present policy to ensure that homeowners who are affected are not unable to take part in the programme because the municipality in which they live is either unwilling or unable to provide the 20 per cent necessary?

Hon. Mr. Lawrence: That is a point we haven't discussed either in the policy field or in government—but we will, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Downsview is next.

SUSPENSION OF OTTAWA POLICEMAN

Mr. Singer: Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Solicitor General. Is the Solicitor General aware of the difficulty existing on the police force in Ottawa which resulted in the disciplining by suspension of a member of that police force who was a member of the anti-theft bicycle squad? Has the minister looked into, or will he look into, the advisability of laying criminal charges in that case and not just dealing with it by a private, police disciplinary hearing?

Hon. J. Yaremko (Solicitor General): Mr. Speaker, I don't recall that item reaching my desk. I will check into the matter and take the question as notice.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Sudbury East.

SUDBURY HOUSING INVESTIGATION

Mr. Martel: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have a question of the minister responsible for housing. Could the Minister of Revenue indicate why two contracts from Ontario Housing Corp. were granted to Elm St. Holdings on March 20, 1972, when in fact one of the owners, one Ross A. Shouldice, through his connections with Cambrian Real Estate, had been under investigation since December, 1971 by the Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Mr. Speaker, I think that is the question the hon. member asked of one of my colleagues the other day; I made note of it, and I did get some information at the time.

I think the answer to that—and I stand to be corrected when I bring in a detailed reply to the hon. member later—is that we actually did not give a contract to the gentleman referred to after his difficulties came to light. Indeed, I think that in a particular instance since then we have refused to accept a tender by the same group, even though they were the lowest tenderer, because of the difficulties they have found themselves in.

Mr. Speaker: A supplementary?

Mr. Martel: A question, Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Speaker: Is this a supplementary?

Mr. Martel: Yes, Mr. Speaker. My understanding is that the contract was released to them in two parts, for senior citizens' units and family dwellings, on March 20, 1972. That would indicate—

Mr. Speaker: Is there a question in this speech?

Mr. Martel: It is coming. Four months after the investigation started—

Mr. Speaker: Does the hon. member have a question?

Mr. Martel: —why—

Mr. Speaker: Does the hon. member have a question? Otherwise, he will be seated.

Mr. Martel: "Why" is an interrogative word, I suspect, Mr. Speaker. Why, then, if Silhouette was not granted the original contract, was it given to Elm St. Holdings, which was part of the same corporate entity?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: With great respect, Mr. Speaker, I believe it is somewhat of an abuse of the question period when a member gets up and asks questions requiring so much detail—

Mr. Deans: Answer the question! We don't need a lecture on the rules.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Well, with great respect, the hon. member is asking for details about various companies and so on.

Mr. Deans: We don't need a lecture on the rules!

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Really, I think he should give notice of such a question—

Mr. Stokes: Take this as notice!

Mr. Deans: The minister makes a statement on everything.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: —because all I can say at this time is that I will get the information and give it to the hon. member when I have it.

Mr. Lewis: Don't tell us, "with great respect."

Mr. Speaker: Order. The hon. minister may take it as notice.

The hon. member for Ontario South has a question of the Provincial Secretary for Justice.

REMOVAL OF BOOKS FROM CIRCULATION

Mr. W. Newman (Ontario South): Yes, Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Provincial Secretary for Justice. I would like to know if it is true that the Metro police have actually seized "The Happy Hooker"?

An hon. member: Holy smokes!

An hon. member: No!

Hon. G. A. Kerr (Provincial Secretary for Justice): Mr. Speaker, I have some information that some books that were written by the lady in question—

An hon. member: She's no lady!

Hon. Mr. Kerr: —have been ordered off the bookstore shelves in Metro Toronto—

Mr. Lewis: No! Is that true? In Metro Toronto? Not really!

Hon. Mr. Kerr: —and the books have been labelled as obscene under the Criminal Code and the police have asked the distributors to—

Mr. Reid: So is the Provincial Auditor's report.

Hon. Mr. Kerr: —stop the sale of these books and the distributors are co-operating.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Shulman: A supplementary, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please! It would help a great deal if the hon. members would immediately indicate to the Chair whether or not they have a supplementary.

Mr. Shulman: I have a supplementary, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for High Park has one first.

Mr. Shulman: Mr. Speaker, does the minister believe that the police should decide what is or is not obscene? Should not their proper action have been to lay a charge if they believe that there actually was an obscenity here? What right do they have to tell the distributors that they may not sell a certain book?

An hon. member: None!

Hon. E. A. Winkler (Chairman, Management Board of Cabinet): What's the matter, didn't the member for High Park get a copy?

Hon. Mr. Kerr: My information is that the police have indicated to the distributors that they feel those books are in breach of the section of the Criminal Code; and unless the books are in some way removed—carted away, trucked away—charges will be laid under the Criminal Code.

Mr. Shulman: Blackmail, that's all it is.

Mr. J. A. Renwick (Riverdale): The government is prejudging the issue.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Downsview has a supplementary.

Mr. Singer: Could the Provincial Secretary for Justice tell us if he believes the police have power to label something as pornographic under the Code? Doesn't the minister agree with me that that labelling can only be done after a trial in court and after charges are laid? Why does the minister misinform the House?

Hon. Mr. Kerr: I'm not misinforming the House, Mr. Speaker; I'm just saying the police have indicated to the distributors that if the books are not removed, charges will be laid. I am not indicating—

Mr. MacDonald: That's a threat.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Kerr: I'm not saying that the charges would hold—

An hon. member: Who did?

Hon. Mr. Kerr: —or there are grounds for laying the charges. I'm just relaying for the information of the House that this was the information passed to me at about 2 o'clock, that this is what the police are doing. I'm not condoning it, or agreeing or disagreeing with it.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please!

Mr. Drea: A further supplementary, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Scarborough Centre has a supplementary.

Mr. Drea: A supplementary, Mr. Speaker: May the decent members of the House expect that the minister will issue a commendation to the police for the beginning of a long overdue cleanup of smut in Ontario?

Mr. Lewis: The decent members of the House?

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Windsor West has got a supplementary.

Mr. E. J. Bounsall (Windsor West): I haven't got a supplementary.

Mr. Speaker: No supplementary? The hon. member for Riverdale has a supplementary.

Mr. Renwick: Mr. Speaker, a supplementary question: Does the Provincial Secretary for Justice not consider that a police threat to lay charges if an act does not take place, is not answered by the minister saying that he doesn't approve or condone or comment upon it? Isn't he required to take some initiative to stop that kind of threat?

An hon. member: To discipline the people.

Hon. Mr. Kerr: Mr. Speaker, first of all, the hon. member is indicating that what I have told is in fact a threat. My information is that the police have indicated to the distributors—

Mr. MacDonald: Sure: "Remove the books or we will charge you."

Hon. Mr. Kerr: —that in their opinion, the sale of these particular books is a breach of the Criminal Code.

Mr. Lewis: Who the hell are they, in their opinion?

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Hon. Mr. Kerr: As the hon. member knows, if charges are laid the local Crown attorney would be involved. Whether or not they are, reasons for the charges would be decided by the local Crown attorney in most cases.

Mr. Lewis: Has the minister read the book?

Mr. Stokes: What does the minister think of the book?

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Kerr: So, I would think that if the merchants or distributors do not agree with the suggestion, or with the information from the Metro police, then the charges would in all probability be laid, and the matter would be heard in court in the proper manner.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Shulman: How does the government get away with this blackmailing act?

Mr. Martel: Oh, the minister is a sanctimonious bugger!

An hon. member: After the minister spent all of those thousands of dollars on lawyers' fees.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Rainy River with a supplementary?

Mr. Reid: No, not a supplementary.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order, order! Were there supplementaries or not?

Mr. Reid: No, a new question, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Lewis: That is not justice in any way.

Hon. Mr. Kerr: Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Lewis: The minister can't believe that.

Hon. Mr. Kerr: I want to clarify one point. I am not saying, at this point, and I never intended to say—

Mr. MacDonald: Leave it to the member for St. Catharines.

Hon. Mr. Kerr: —that the distributors or the store owners have to comply with any such edict from the police at this time.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Kerr: I am not saying that.

Mr. Lewis: Oh, what nonsense!

Mr. MacDonald: What obfuscation!

Hon. Mr. Kerr: I am just saying that that particular direction has been given.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order.

Mr. Lewis: The minister thinks he is really top drawer.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order. The hon. member for Rainy River with the next question.

USE OF GOVERNMENT AIRCRAFT

Mr. Reid: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have a question of the Minister of Natural Resources, referring to the auditor's report. Will the minister table the logbooks of government aircraft under his department, as I requested of the policy minister and as my colleague, the member for Grey-Bruce, requested last year? Can the minister tell us for what reasons cabinet ministers have been using these aircraft to transport themselves and their families outside the Province of Ontario?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Mr. Speaker, as the member has very correctly pointed out, this matter was very clearly gone over during the—

Mr. Reid: Not clearly enough.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: —the last session of the Legislature. If he would turn to page 4761 of Hansard he would see my reply. That decision has not changed.

Mr. Reid: A supplementary, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: The question-period time has expired.

Mr. Sargent: On a point of order.

Mr. Speaker: I doubt it very much, but I'll listen to it.

Mr. Sargent: I have twice had it on the order paper, and the Premier twice has agreed to furnish the logbooks of these aircraft.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Sargent: Well, he certainly has. I wonder what right he has to ignore the rights of a member of this House. When he agreed twice on the order paper—

Mr. Speaker: There is no point of order. The hon. member does not have a point of order.

Mr. Sargent: It's a pretty good point of order, it seems to me.

Mr. Speaker: Petitions.

CROWN ATTORNEYS ACT

Hon. Mr. Bales moves second reading of Bill 4, An Act to amend the Crown Attorneys Act.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. Leader of the Opposition.

Mr. R. F. Nixon (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I have no comment to make on the bill other than that it simply changes a reference, as I understand it, to the Deputy Attorney General, and the next two bills I presume that you are going to proceed with have the same change in reference.

Mr. J. A. Renwick (Riverdale): Mr. Speaker we have the identical comment the Leader of the Opposition has made to the bill.

Mr. Speaker: Does any other member wish to enter the debate on second reading of Bill 4? If, not, the hon. Attorney General.

Hon. D. A. Bales (Attorney General): Mr. Speaker, the change is necessitated by the reorganization of the ministry. Under the Criminal Code the Attorney General and the Deputy Attorney General are responsible for prosecution in the criminal field. The director of public prosecutions has in the past been in charge of the work of the Crown attorneys. That position has been phased out and there is now a director of Crown attorneys within the ministry.

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

Mr. Speaker: Shall the bill be ordered for third reading?

Agreed.

THIRD READINGS

The following bills were given third readings upon motion:

Bill 4, An Act to amend the Crown Attorneys Act.

Bill 5, An Act to amend the Crown Witnesses Act.

Bill 6, An Act to amend the Administration of Justice Act.

ARBITRATIONS ACT

Hon. Mr. Bales moves second reading of Bill 13, An Act to amend the Arbitrations Act.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Downsview.

Mr. V. M. Singer (Downsview): Mr. Speaker, as I read Bill 13, its intention apparently is to take the fixing of arbitrators' fees from the schedule in the Act and prescribe it by regulation. I presume that the intent behind this is to give a little more flexibility to the government so that they will be able to adjust the schedule of arbitrators' fees in the light of particular circumstances pertaining at the time when arbitration is in fact required.

There is, of course, our usual concern about matters being attended to by regulation rather than in the statute. More and more power it seems is being taken by government in the form of a regulatory power rather than in the form of a specific statutory enactment.

What bothers me again is whether or not the government intends at this point in time to set up different classes of arbitrators. We have no idea what the regulations are going to look like.

Is the Attorney General going to have a class A arbitrator who might get $500 today and a class D one who might get $50 a day? On what basis are the regulations going to be framed? Is it merely periodic readjustments in keeping with the cost of arbitrators, or the cost of living, or the cost of food prices, or what real reasoning is there behind this?

One could suggest that perhaps if the present schedule is out of date that the Attorney General amend the schedule. At least his amendment should be reasonable for a year's time and if at the end of that time the schedule in the printed statute is found to be outdated, the government can easily bring in an amendment.

We are concerned, Mr. Speaker, with the real reasoning behind this and what, in fact, the Attorney General has in mind. Has he had difficulty in getting arbitrators within the present schedule? Does he want to bargain with each one individually? If he feels that there is a good arbitrator available, does he want to be in the position to offer him a very high fee? Those are the immediate concerns that we express in relation to this bill, Mr. Speaker, and we would like to hear the Attorney General's explanation.

Mr. I. Deans (Wentworth): Mr. Speaker, I would like to be in my customary mood and allow this to pass but in actual fact I can't see permitting the government to carry on with the practice which has developed in the Province of Ontario of governing by regulation until such time as there are adequate changes in the Regulations Act which will permit a close scrutiny of the regulations prior to their being put into force—and not only that, a change in the Regulations Act which will permit discussion of the principle of the change in the regulations.

Quite frankly we don't trust the government to continue the practice which seems to be getting prevalent over the last number of years in its dealings with matters of public concern. It seems to want to gather to itself; the cabinet in particular, powers which ought to be powers which are the responsibility of the Legislature. Frankly we don't think there is any justification for taking out of a public Act, and therefore out of the sphere of public debate, any matter that pertains to the expenditures of public funds or for that matter any matter which has any far-reaching implications in dealings with the public.

We feel we couldn't support taking the schedule from within the Arbitrations Act and putting it in the responsibility of the government through regulation until such time as the government does bring in amendments to the Regulations Act. The Act permits this committee, which is set up by statute, to meet regularly—in fact, not only permits it but makes it necessary for this committee to meet regularly and to review all of the regulations which are being suggested by this government, and to pass comment on the regulations both in terms of the content of the regulation and the substance of the regulation.

We are worried. I don't know what it is that the Attorney General intends to do in regard to the amendments to the schedule. As the member for Downsview stated, neither does he. I don't know why the government would feel it necessary to have the kind of power which would permit changes at random and at will. I am quite satisfied to sit in this House and to have the government bring in an amendment to the Act if it deems it necessary.

I am quite satisfied to sit in the House and to hear the government explain why it feels it necessary to raise the arbitration fees. I am not convinced that the arbitration fees as set out in schedule B are, in fact, out of line but if they are, tell us why they are.

If it is unreasonable that a person who should sit for not less than six hours should be entitled to receive up to $100 but not less than $50—if the government considers that unreasonable I want to assure the government that we don't consider that unreasonable. If the government says that a man who shows up for a hearing and the hearing doesn't take place should receive more than $40 I don't think and we don't think that that ought to be.

More than that, the overriding principle is that it gives this government additional powers to change things which affect the people of the Province of Ontario without us in this Legislature having an opportunity to discuss and to try to understand the reasons for it. We say to the minister that we have come to the conclusion that until such time as this government is prepared to make the necessary changes to the Regulations Act to ensure that there is adequate debate, to ensure that there is adequate perusal of all of the regulations prior to them becoming law, we don't feel that we are prepared to grant the government the additional powers it needs in order to ensure that it can make whatever changes it wants without the opportunity for the representatives of the public to be present and without the opportunity for the representatives of the public to express opinions on behalf of the public.

There is enough done by this government by order in council that directly affects, and quite often adversely affects, great numbers of people in the Province of Ontario, and there is enough done by this government by virtue of its extremely large majority in this House which is not always to the benefit of the people of the Province of Ontario. We don't think you need any additional powers in this regard and we will not support the legislation.

Mr. Renwick: Mr. Speaker, if I may just underline what my colleague has said in reference to the Regulations Act, this is a very good example of what our problem is with the minister's legislation and with many other kinds of legislation that are introduced into the House.

At the present time the statute is clear as to what the remuneration is, everyone in the House knows what it is and if you wanted to amend it by statute you would have to come before the House and there'd be some opportunity for views to be expressed. The Attorney General wants to take it into the regulations so that on some Saturday at some point in the distant future a regulation will be published which a few people may see, that a few practitioners in the field of arbitration may be interested in, but the vast body of the public, including substantially all of the members of the Legislature, will not see the regulation.

Now we went to very elaborate procedures a few years ago to provide for a standing committee of the Legislature and I want to make one point perfectly clear. This standing committee established under the Regulations Act is of an entirely different quality from the standing committees appointed by the Legislature each session to deal with the various matters which are referred to it by this House. This is, if there is such a thing, a statutory standing committee. But there is no regularized procedure by which that committee meets, except during the time when the House is in session, and yet regulations are published in the Ontario Gazette every Saturday throughout the year.

We consider that the statutory committee on regulations must be able to meet regularly, must be required to meet regularly by establishing its own procedures. I would suggest a meeting once a month or more often if necessary, for the purpose of considering the regulations before they are published in the Gazette and before they therefore have the force of law in the Province of Ontario.

But that is of no point, as any person who has sat on the regulations committee would be well aware. There is no point in doing that if its scope is limited only to making a very technical determination as to whether it is within the ambit of the regulatory power provided in the statute, because the section of the Regulations Act specifically states that the standing committee on regulations shall examine the regulations with particular reference to the scope and method of the exercise of delegated legislative power, but without reference to the merits of the policy or objectives to be effected by the regulations or enabling statutes, and shall deal with such other matters as are referred to it from time to time by the assembly.

Now the restrictive connotation of the Regulations Act means that we are removing from public comment the very real essence of the matters which are dealt with in the regulations. We believe that there are matters which should not occupy the time of the assembly. But we also believe that if the standing committee had proper authority and proper power then it could deal with the merits of the matters which are dealt with in the regulations as well as dealing with the question of whether or not they are within the scope of the delegated legislative power, because they are all within the scope of the delegated legislative power except in very rare exceptions.

They are in there for two reasons. There are very skilled people in charge of the regulations and the drafting of them and the filing of them, so it is very much a marginal watchkeeping job which is done. But in addition, every statute that provides for regulatory power ends up at the end by referring to the power of the Lieutenant Governor in council to make regulations dealing with an itemized list of things "and such other things as may be necessary for the due implementation of the powers set out in the Act" or some such very generalized language.

It seems to us that a standing committee of the Legislature should have power, before the regulations are filed and become the law of the province and by regular meetings throughout the year, to deal with the kind of substituted regulatory power which the minister wants to provide in the statute.

Therefore, we consider that we are opposed to this bill and will continue to be opposed to the transfer of regulatory power out of the statutes into the regulations until such time as there is an amending provision to the standing committee on regulations which would encompass the matters I have referred to in these brief remarks.

Mr. Speaker, we will vote against the bill.

Mr. Speaker: Does any other hon. member wish to speak to this bill before the minister replies?

The hon. minister.

Hon. Mr. Bales: Mr. Speaker, in dealing with this particular bill—and I think the hon. member for Riverdale is speaking on a slightly different point—the schedule in the Arbitrations Act has not been changed for some considerable period of time.

Mr. Deans: Bring in an amendment!

Hon. Mr. Bales: We think it needs to be updated. The hon. member for Downsview suggested that we might be establishing a schedule for one person and a different schedule for another person. That, of course, would not be the case.

Mr. Singer: No, but the minister could do that. He's giving himself that power.

Hon. Mr. Bales: That would not be the case. The hon. member may say we could do it if we wished to—

Mr. Singer: Well, couldn't it be done that way if the minister wanted?

Hon. Mr. Bales: Theoretically, it could be done—

Mr. Singer: That's the power the minister is asking for!

Hon. Mr. Bales: —but it wouldn't be done that way.

Mr. Singer: But his successor might!

Mr. Speaker: Order! Order, please!

Hon. Mr. Bales: This does not deal with the expenditure of public funds—and I recognize the principle on which the members opposite are speaking—the schedule sets out maximums and minimums. It does not deal with arbitrations, for example, under the Labour Relations Act. It doesn't have anything to do with that; by reason of section 37 of that Act.

But from time to time we do need to make changes in these schedules and in the fees. I think that it is good sense to provide a means whereby these schedules can be updated in a much easier and more sensible way than always bringing amendments before the Legislature of the province.

Certainly these regulations must be published and the people must see them and clearly understand them. Procedures have been taken in recent times so that the regulations get very careful scrutiny before they are passed by cabinet; and then, of course, they are published. The hon. member opposite said only a few people see them, but I take issue with that because a very large number of people see them and take careful note of the changes that are made.

Mr. Speaker, in many ways this would provide a more expeditious and a fairer way of dealing with the schedules under this Act, and for that reason the bill has been brought forward. I would move its adoption.

Mr. Speaker: The motion is for second reading of Bill 13.

The House divided on the motion, which was approved on the following vote:

Mr. Speaker: I declare the motion carried.

PROCEEDINGS AGAINST THE CROWN ACT

Hon. Mr. Bales moves second reading of Bill 14, An Act to amend the Proceedings against the Crown Act.

Mr. Speaker: The member for Downsview.

Mr. Singer: Mr. Speaker, I've got the explanatory note and, while I see what it says, I still don't understand it. I wonder if the minister could elaborate on the necessity for having Bill 14 and give us something more than is in the explanatory note.

Mr. Speaker: Does any other hon. member wish to speak to this bill?

If not, the hon. minister.

Hon. Mr. Bales: Mr. Speaker, provisions for trial and appeal of assessments similar to those in the Retail Sales Tax Act were added to the Motor Vehicle Tax Act in 1972, and consequently they do not come within the provisions of the Proceedings against the Crown Act. That change having been made, we simply make this change in the legislation.

Mr. Speaker: The motion is for second reading of Bill 14. Shall the motion carry?

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

Mr. Speaker: Shall this bill be ordered for third reading?

Agreed.

Clerk of the House: The first order resuming the adjourned debate on the amendment to the amendment to the motion for an address in reply to the speech of the Honourable the Lieutenant Governor at the opening of the session.

Mr. Speaker: The member for Scarborough Centre.

THRONE DEBATE

Mr. F. Drea (Scarborough Centre): Mr. Speaker, first of all, through you, I would like to announce a change in conduct by myself in the House.

Mr. I. Deans (Wentworth): It can only be an improvement!

Mr. Drea: I am rather hopeful that the member for Grey-Bruce may follow suit.

Mr. E. Sargent (Grey-Bruce): Don't count on it.

Mr. Drea: Instead of the usual congratulations, may I commend you on the very difficult task that you have—

Mr. Sargent: Me or him—

Mr. Drea: I frankly—

Mr. Sargent: Which one?

Mr. Drea: I'm coming to the hon. member in a few minutes—commend you on the very difficult task that you have, because in the very brief time that I sat as your substitute, I now understand the complexities and the problems that are inherent with your role. Before, I will concede that I felt, like some other members of the House, that there were times when the Speaker was rather arbitrary and a little bit testy, and, frankly, from time to time—at least toward me—a little bit crabby.

I now say to you in all sincerity that having sat there, and at that particular time having to ponder in my mind the propriety of certain remarks that were being made in a debate, and, frankly, being unable to come to a conclusion on their propriety before the debate was ended, and realizing that this is a common, everyday occurrence for you, I extend my congratulations to you.

I certainly hope this session will be the most orderly, and certainly the most rule-minded, so that you will not be taxed in trying to determine whether the rules have been obeyed, or bent within a reasonable limit. I certainly commend your patience.

I know it is almost an occupational hazard to have to have patience in that seat, sir, but I think that the Speaker in this Legislature more than exemplifies the highest tradition of the office in those places where the parliamentary system has been the accepted form of government.

And now, Mr. Speaker, I would like to depart—

Mr. D. A. Paterson (Essex South): Good!

Mr. Drea: —somewhat from the ordinary remarks of an urban member because I am going to talk about my riding. I know that in the non-urban parts of the province the members do talk about their ridings. And ordinarily, in urban ridings we do not.

The reason I want to talk about my particular riding—indeed, the entire borough of Scarborough—is that I think there are some popular misconceptions about that particular borough. One of them unfortunately is that the seers of King St., the Star and the Globe and Mail, seem to be extremely condescending towards the entire borough of Scarborough. I would point out to you that my particular riding, Scarborough Centre, includes among its inhabitants—and I think this is somewhat indicative of the type of person who resides in the entire borough—that among my constituents is the leader of the New Democratic Party.

Mr. S. Lewis (Scarborough West): Not by choice, it just happened that way!

Mr. Drea: Well, I have a lot of suffering to do with the member, too.

Mr. Lewis: I want that understood.

Mr. Drea: We will come to the member; we will come to him.

I also have the honour to represent as a constituent the Minister without Portfolio (Mrs. Birch). I also have the honour to represent as a constituent the federal member of parliament for Scarborough East.

But I would just like to talk for a moment about Scarborough.

Mr. Deans: There are a lot of people who are disadvantaged around here.

Mr. Drea: You see, we in Scarborough are being portrayed as some kind of obscure suburbia. Nothing could be further from the truth. I think that we have an outstanding borough. I think in terms of the lifestyle in Scarborough, and in terms of coping with the great many challenges and problems that confront us, I like to think that it is the finest of all the metropolitan boroughs and, indeed, probably the best community in this province in which to live, to work, and above all to raise a family. And I say that for a number of reasons.

In Scarborough over the years the people have literally had to raise themselves up by their own bootstraps because they do not think that, either in the beginning or right up to now, the borough receives its fair share of priorities from the Metropolitan Toronto government. In the field of transportation, certainly the western part of Metropolitan Toronto was serviced quicker and much more efficiently than Scarborough.

Indeed, I can say to my colleagues from eastern Ontario that it is getting to be my thought that eastern Ontario, in terms of priorities, somehow begins just east of Woodbine Ave. Because we in the eastern borough of Metropolitan Toronto have had to face in a great many ways exactly the same problems that they have had to face. All the development seems to be intended for the western section and we are somehow regarded as an afterthought.

But despite all of that, Mr. Speaker, I think that the people of Scarborough and their elected representatives, particularly the people in the municipal council and on the school board, have worked very diligently to overcome many of the artificial barriers that were placed in their way. I know in my own particular riding that the aldermen long ago were the new breed of aldermen, in that they were people-oriented; they weren't programme-oriented, they were people-oriented.

In the schools, for instance, I think it has been indicated to the select committee studying the off-hours use of educational institutions, that Scarborough is the leader in this field; in that the recreational facilities where they exist in the secondary schools and in the primary schools are available to the general public. And I think in this way we have set an example for Ontario.

Our public utilities commission—and I don't just say this; this is common knowledge—is the most efficient and best-run in the entire province. And I think it is time that a member from Scarborough stood in this House and started extolling the virtues of the borough and its people. Because I say to you, Mr. Speaker, that we are very proud to reside in the borough. And we are getting a little bit tired of being looked at down the long noses of the editorial pundits who somehow believe that nothing is good to the east of Woodbine Ave., whether it be in Metropolitan Toronto or indeed throughout the province.

Having talked about my riding, I would like now to proceed into the main thrust of the remarks that I intend to make today.

Mr. Speaker, in listening to the replies to the Speech from the Throne, I am struck by one particular argument that has been advanced, and that is by the hon. member for Sarnia (Mr. Bullbrook). I'm probably struck by it because he advanced the same argument on at least two occasions in the last session. So I have become rather fascinated in looking at Throne Speeches, because if you were to listen to him, and indeed to his leader, they say Throne Speeches are remarkably sterile documents, that we do not seem to care for people and, above all, that we deliberately ignore what the member calls labour.

I don't think anything could be further from the truth, because in the particular Throne Speech that I am talking to today, immediately after the formal introductions this government takes on the most important thing as it pertains to people, particularly those who work for wages and salaries, because we immediately start talking about the economy and about jobs. I think if you look back in past Throne Speeches you will see that same attention paid to that most important area of labour, because what the people of Ontario want is economic security.

They don't want a planned economy. They don't want their lives tinkered with by social scientists who like to press buttons and somehow convey themselves into their living room. They don't want to be told what to do from the time they are teenagers until the time that they expire. They want some very basic rights. They want the right to have a job. They want the right to advance by virtue of their own hard work and their talents. Above all, they want an opportunity to fulfill the Canadian dream.

I know that at the moment things like that are usually reserved to the remarks from squares.

I assure you, Mr. Speaker, I am a square. I believe in the Canadian dream. I believe that this is the province of opportunity, where any man or woman who is endowed by God with reasonable health and with reasonable talents can prosper and can go on to the amount of success that is only dictated by their ability to persevere and to employ their talents in a manner which is most remunerative to them.

I think that that type of attitude pervades the entire address to His Honour. I say that because we are talking about jobs, and part and parcel of jobs and the ability to get jobs is the health of the economy.

Mr. Speaker, since 1943 no province in the Dominion of Canada, no state in the United States of America, no country in Europe, and I think those are comparable jurisdictions, has either achieved the degree of opportunity for its citizens or been able to afford them the chance to achieve a standard of living or a quality of life that has happened in this province. I say to you it began in 1943, because this is when the Progressive Conservative Party took power in this province, and we have gone on ever since.

Mr. Deans: It gets more incredible with each second.

Mr. M. C. Germa (Sudbury): He should sit down while he is ahead.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Drea: This hasn't come about by accident, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Deans: Nor has it come about by hard work.

Mr. Drea: If the members opposite are going to sit there and argue it happened in spite of us, they'd better start right now, because I'm prepared to go on on that one. Even they won't argue.

Mr. Deans: Is that right? That's awfully intimidating. I'm worried half to death.

Mr. Drea: Oh, I'm sure it is.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Mr. Drea: Pardon?

Mr. Deans: It's their own fault.

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Mr. Deans: If one can't make it in this grand Province of Ontario it's because one is plain lazy, says he.

Mr. Drea: The member shouldn't even put words in my mouth.

Mr. Lewis: Believe me, that's not necessary.

Mr. Speaker: Will the hon. member proceed.

Mr. Drea: As I was saying, this was not by accident, not by somehow looking up to the heavens and expecting it to come. It has been the very deliberate fabric of every policy of every Progressive Conservative government—and there have been five of them since 1943—to provide people with the stimulus, the means and the resources to achieve the Canadian dream. We in the Progressive Conservative Party believe, when it comes to people who work for wages and salaries, that nothing is too good for them and for 30 years we have carried that out.

Mr. Deans: And the Tories make sure they get nothing!

Mr. Lewis: The government has fulfilled that commitment.

Mr. Deans: They make sure they get nothing, too. Nothing is too good and the Tories make sure that is what they get.

Mr. G. E. Smith (Simcoe East): The members opposite haven't done too badly.

Mr. Drea: When the late Mr. Drew was the Premier of this province, as soon as the end of World War 2 permitted, there was the immediate policy that we would—

Mr. R. Gisborn (Hamilton East): Remember when he got beaten in High Park?

Mr. Drea: Yes. I wasn't as old as the member but I was around.

Mr. Deans: The member acts as if he were the age of Methuselah.

Mr. Drea: Don't tell me the member is going to take up temperance at this late stage recalling that event?

As soon as the war was over, he embarked upon a very deliberate, a very innovative and, at the time, a frankly somewhat controversial programme of expanding not only the industrial and the resource base of this province; that government went to war-torn Europe and it invited people with skills and with occupational talents and, indeed, the professions. It brought them here and there began the tremendous expansion of the industrial base of this province.

At the same time, we didn't pay lip service to opening up this province. Indeed, the highway programme, the hydro-electric power programme, all became part and parcel of the fabric of the type of society that we were trying to build. Again, through the governments of Mr. Kennedy and Mr. Frost, we put electricity into the places where the candles used to burn. We put it there for one reason—because we were going to raise the standard of living in this province—

Mr. J. E. Stokes (Thunder Bay): There are places in northern Ontario that still don't have it after 30 years of Tory rule.

Mr. Drea: Does the member have a candle?

Mr. Lewis: The Tories also brought in the wheel, I understand.

Mr. Drea: Again, in the time of Mr. Robarts this government embarked upon a new course because we knew that the time had come when the former educational system was just not sufficient in the area of rapid technological and occupational change. I say to you, Mr. Speaker, no other jurisdiction on this continent switched over to the type of education and trade training with as much success as this province did under Mr. Robarts' government.

Furthermore, we did something else; we went into trade expansion because we knew that the future of Ontario and the prosperity of our citizens really lay in our ability to export to markets that, for one reason or another, had remained closed to us. The record of accomplishment in the field of trade expansion by Ontario industries, I think, is a barometer of our ability to overcome the challenges posed by industrial change, by certain trading agreements that are reached between nations, indeed by the challenge of being able to sell in a foreign market at a competitive price and not having it subsidized by the sweat of our own workers, because in Ontario we have many of the highest paid people on the continent and at the same time we are able to sell our goods outside of here.

Mr. Gisborn: No fault of this government!

Mr. Stokes: We are exporting the jobs with the resources!

Mr. Gisborn: The Tories had nothing to do with increasing the wages in this province!

Mr. Drea: Well, who did?

Mr. Lewis: The trade union movement largely.

Mr. Drea: And who allowed the trade union movement to prosper and grow? In terms of membership it went up by a third under this government. Nowhere else did that happen! When the unions started and Mackenzie King and the Liberals tried to run them out, it was this government that put in laws so that they could operate under the rule of law and not under those phony labour courts or under the rule of the truncheon at the plant gate. If we want to restrict it to union members, that is when labour in this province got its bill of rights and started to move forward—and it was a Conservative government that did it.

Mr. Gisborn: He's lost.

Mr. Drea: No, but I am losing the hon. member.

Mr. Deans: I hate to tell him, but the hon. member is losing some of his own members too.

Mr. Drea: Well, unlike some of my friend's, I don't have to ring the bell to bring them in.

Mr. Deans: They wouldn't come even if the hon. member did that. They are bored already.

Mr. R. D. Kennedy (Peel South): One word and they would all be here.

Mr. E. M. Havrot (Timiskaming): Look who's talking about boredom!

Mr. Drea: Again, in the tenure of our own Premier we have embarked on something else for the people who work for wages and salaries. We believe that bread alone does not make the full life, so we are embarking rather deliberately again on improving the quality of life around us.

I know it comes as a shock to some parts of this House that biblical quotations are occasionally used, but I come back to a favourite of mine: "What is a man profited, if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul?" I think that pertains to the quality of life. What does it matter if one gets $25 an hour, has five automobiles and everything imaginable when all around him is nothing but waste and desolation and pollution? There really isn't anything. Again, it is this government that is taking the lead in this province and in this country.

Mr. Deans: It is causing them.

Mr. Drea: The expressway era came to an abrupt end not because of anybody else but this government. Right here in this House we said goodbye to expressways. Tell me that is not correct! On the basis of that approach to urban life, the voters have responded in a very meaningful way. We can see it all around in the municipal elections, particularly in this area.

The reformers don't seem to be those who want planning, tinkering, fooling and all kinds of things. I seem to bump into most of the reformers who hold elected office in the boroughs at meetings of the Progressive Conservative Party. I think that indicates not only the strength of this party and the type of thing we are talking about in the Throne Speech, but indeed that we have assumed the ideological leadership of all those people in Ontario, regardless of their party persuasion or lack of it, who are interested in the quality of life.

Mr. P. G. Givens (York-Forest Hill): They show great leadership in granting salary raises too. Some of them doubled their salaries. They are getting more money than the member gets paid.

Mr. Drea: Well, that wouldn't be very much, but I have never had a low-wage mentality. I don't believe that we should try to restrict a person by wages. I think he or she should be paid commensurate with his or her contribution to the community. I would much rather rest the case upon that than dollars and cents per hour.

Mr. Deans: The member should be careful or we'll starve. If they did that with him he'd starve.

Mr. Havrot: Look who's talking. He couldn't even put out a fire.

Mr. Drea: I will match my contribution with those of the member for Wentworth any day.

But you know in terms, Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Stokes: Is the member for Scarborough Centre running out of gas?

Mr. Drea: Mr. Speaker, in terms of the quality of life, and particularly in regard to some of the comments by the member for Sarnia, I'd like to go back to an old saying in the labour movement. He seems to want labour discussed in this House. I don't mind discussing it. If I belonged to his party I might be a little bit reticent. But in any event I don't mind discussing it.

You see, it is not only the growth of the organized labour movement that has come about because of the policies of this government. There is also an entirely new concept which somehow escapes those with the narrow, legalistic mind who think that the Labour Relations Act is the be-all and end-all for those who work. You see, although quite frankly I don't think it has been publicized enough, this government has deliberately changed the Minister of Labour from basically a technical and an industrial relations oriented ministry into indeed a socially oriented one.

The reason I say that is despite the growth of the organized labour movement, 70 per cent or thereabouts of the people who work remain outside it. I think realistically that means about 60 per cent, because I think we should point out that many who are listed in the work force are professional people, have their own associations, and therefore are outside the scope of what we call working people. But that other group are working people, and they are represented by the Minister of Labour (Mr. Guindon), through our employment standards legislation.

Because our employment standards legislation is not only their measure of economic security, but indeed is their bill of rights, as working people. I don't happen to believe that just because you have the magic green-coloured or white-coloured card from a trade union—a great number of people somehow have difficulty these days getting into certain trade unions—that gives you a privileged status in society. I happen to agree with a gentleman named Phil Murray who, some years ago, said that the function of trade unions was not to set up an industrial elite, it was to build and fabricate a better society.

And so with the change in the Ministry of Labour we are now, in effect, the people who are setting the pace for those who work for wages and salaries and are outside the scope of the labour movement.

Mr. Gisborn: A buck eighty an hour—$1.80 an hour.

Mr. Drea: And this, Mr. Speaker, I would suggest to you is a very fundamental departure in society. Because up until a few brief years ago, those people were somehow considered an elite because they did not belong to the labour movement.

So today we have it that it is the Minister of Labour who will go and collect the wages, the actual wages owed, of a working man or woman who is not paid by the employer. I have never known a union to volunteer and go out there for the masses. Somehow when it comes to things like this I suppose that you have to take care of your members first.

The minister too has the power to ensure that there is equal wages for equal work between male and female, even though certain union agreements in this province still allow discrimination and that gap. I think that is a tremendous step forward.

We've done something else too, because in many other jurisdictions before a female worker can try to get equal pay for equal work she has to lodge a complaint, and to many people this is a form of intimidation, because if you do lay a complaint against your employer, particularly in a small shop or a small office, you figure that there is going to be retribution. Unfortunately I think the record would show that that is not exactly fear without reason.

So in this province the ministry has the right to go in and spot check, and if you look at their collections every year—that little report they hand us; the newspapers write a couple of paragraphs about so many million were collected—I think sometimes it might be very interesting to just sit back for a moment and remember that the bulk of this money for equal pay for equal work was obtained on spot checks. Nobody had to make any complaints. Nobody had to put their job on the line. This was obtained by spot checks.

Mr. Gisborn: The Act licenses the employers to cheat on their employees, that's what it has done.

Mr. Drea: Oh come, come, come!

Mr. Gisborn: They pay a fine every time the board goes in, five per cent on the collection. The licence is to let them cheat their employees. Check the Act again.

Mr. Drea: There is one thing that I admire about the member's persistent stubbornness. He is living so far in the past that he somehow cannot come out into 1973.

Mr. Gisborn: That Act was brought in last year. That is the one the member is talking about.

Mr. Drea: Yes.

Mr. Gisborn: He is not quoting it correctly.

Mr. Drea: Well in view of the events of last Thursday I think members would have to agree that I somehow have as good a grasp of labour relations legislation as the self-proclaimed experts.

Mr. Gisborn: The member didn't throw any weight around here with his contribution to that.

Mr. Drea: Well, then, why was the member shaking?

Mr. Deans: Shaking? He was shaking with mirth. He was laughing at the member, if he wants to know.

Mr. Drea: Was he?

Mr. Deans: Yes. He thought the member was amusing and so did we.

Mr. Drea: Well, that is very good, because I felt very sorry for the member, abandoned by his leader. You know, it fascinates me, I wish he were here—

Mr. D. C. MacDonald (York South): After all, the member drove him out.

Mr. Drea: Well, then, maybe I'll bring him back with these remarks. Because you see I look over there—and we're talking about the Throne Speech, Mr. Speaker, I'm keeping to the point. I looked in the paper to see what remarkable contributions the leader of the NDP had made in his reply—

Mr. Deans: Did the member ever consider being here when he was supposed to be?

Mr. Drea: —and I found it on page 2 of the Globe—and I think that is very significant. Page 2. Not page 1 any more, page 2. On the skids—on the skids! And to paraphrase the paraphrase he has used so often lately, and the member's party has used so often lately, about lying down for a while to bleed and then somehow rising again, well our swords are still sticking out of them from 1971, there are two lances in them from last month. But with the motto that prevails over there called "Et tu Brutu?"—

Mr. Givens: "Brute"!

Mr. Drea: —I can understand why their leader took sanctuary around the ides of March. I wouldn't have stayed around either.

Mr. MacDonald: The member's reasons may be different.

Mr. Drea: The member for York South is the living example of what I have just talked about.

Mr. MacDonald: He is, as ever, confusing. He is confusing.

Mr. Deans: The member for Scarborough Centre isn't an example of anything, that is the unfortunate part.

Mr. Drea: Mr. Speaker, to come back to the apparent paradox of a province and a provincial government that has been not only dedicated but determined to expand its industrial, its commercial, its resource and its other economic bases and yet have a government that supposedly does not mention labour or any aspects of it in a Speech from the Throne.

As I said when I started out, just by glancing at the Speech I see three or four paragraphs right away where we talk about jobs. Let's talk about what those jobs mean, because in Ontario, particularly in manufacturing—and that is supposedly the source of all the talent that prevails to the party of the left across the floor, the people who come out of manufacturing industries, the wage-slaves, the oppressed.

Mr. Speaker, in many cases Ontario manufacturing wages are higher than those of the United States. And what that means is that under a number of Progressive Conservative governments we have achieved in Ontario what used to be the dream of our forefathers; to get the same amount of money as people are paid in the United States. I think that that very simply states our case. In fact, it is very interesting. The average wage for employees in manufacturing in Ontario not only exceeds that of other Canadian provinces but also the average manufacturing wage being paid in the United States, including the State of New York.

Now, the State of New York is not some backwater part of a great industrial nation. The State of New York is as highly, if not more highly unionized than this province. The corporate wealth in New York State is many times greater than that of this province. They have a much broader market; they have a much larger population. And yet, under the stimulus provided by successive governments of this party, we have achieved something that people at the end of World War 2 in the Province of Ontario would not have believed possible; and it didn't come about from planning in the socialist sense. It didn't come about because of all kinds of manipulation by those who enjoy playing with statistics, rather than looking at what people want.

Mr. Deans: It came about by court manipulation.

Mr. Drea: It didn't come about because we closed our eyes and somehow God in his heaven ordained that Ontario would be better. It came about because this province has been fortunate enough to have a government that has only one aim: to provide opportunity for people. After that, it is up to the people themselves how far or how little they want to go. And I argue with you that there is no more a reasonable government can do than that; and that is precisely what we have been doing.

Mr. Deans: Very enthusiastic.

Mr. Drea: But in a great many areas we have affected the lifestyle of people.

Mr. Givens: Like the Indians.

Mr. Drea: And of course we keep hearing that only those who somehow belong to a special group have any interest in what happens to the little man.

Just in the last couple of years—three years—we have put through legislation by this government that you can no longer be refused a job or dismissed because you have a garnishee on your wages.

Mr. Stokes: We in this party don't think there are any little men around. Everybody is equal.

Mr. W. Hodgson (York North): Oh, come on!

Mr. Drea: That's just a profundity from the north.

Then there is the Landlord and Tenant Act that removed the arbitrary rights of the landlord for those who chose to rent rather than own their own homes.

Mr. Deans: They were dragged in, kicking and screaming.

Mr. Drea: There was the removal of the right by bailiffs to seize for rent and other forms of debt. In what other jurisdiction are the bailiffs restricted only to commercial enterprises? Where? There are thriving bailiff businesses all over the place, but not in this province.

And again, in the field of education we have invested a great deal of the money provided us by the taxpayers in providing the type of education that would train people—whether they wanted to go into a profession, or technology or into other occupations—so that they could be entirely self-sufficient in this world and have gainful employment. I think the record of this government is first class in that regard.

Again, even in those areas where I sometimes wonder if really they are that effective—for instance, winter works, I am very fascinated about this in the borough of Scarborough. I had the report of the borough treasurer—and he reports to the council. It was at their request. He reported to the council that dollar for dollar the best programmes around for a municipal council were the winter works programmes of this province, because they weren't shrouded in red tape. They didn't operate in a double-dealing manner where you never knew how much money you were going to get for the projects. In fact, it stimulated the municipality to do certain things. This is a matter of record. I think that, too, is very important.

Mr. Speaker, just to return to jobs, I think realistically we in this House must realize that Ontario does have certain natural and monetary advantages in these very critical times across the country. I am not trying in any way to say that it is easy for some of the "have not" provinces—or indeed for some of those that may have a little bit—to generate new jobs and new job opportunities. But, it seems to me, that is a measure of the success of a government when it can stimulate an economic climate that will produce 140,000 new jobs, which figure is just about roughly half of all the new jobs created in the Dominion of Canada.

Think about 140,000 new jobs. That's a very, very interesting figure, because here we have next to us in the Province of Quebec a province, with all due respect to its government, that is trying to do something. They are talking about 100,000 new jobs within the whole span of the government, within four years, and here we have, because of the policies of the Progressive Conservative government, 140,000 new jobs from year to year.

Then they say that there is nothing in the Throne Speech that pertains to labour, that pertains to working people. The reason why we aren't expanding even faster is the artificial limitations placed upon us by the Liberal Party's spiritual mentors in Ottawa.

Mr. E. R. Good (Waterloo North): The member has to be kidding.

Mr. Drea: What is their track record, other than the worst unemployment since the last Liberal government was in power? If you look over everything from 1957 onwards in terms of the thing that means the most to people, the opportunity to have a job, the track record when a certain party is in Ottawa is not only dismal, it's enough to frighten the wits out of you.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to come back to another area of the Speech from the Throne, and that is the continued determination of this government that it will preserve our ecological heritage. It's very easy to preserve a cultural heritage because in that regard you are dealing with books, you are dealing with buildings, you are dealing with material things. In fact, because of the advances of technology we can now conserve and save and preserve many of the ethereal parts of culture. But the great challenge in the 1970s, and indeed the '80s and the '90s and probably until the turn of the century, is can we preserve the ecological heritage?

In our own time we have seen a rather provincial city that wasn't even reckoned with as one of the major urban areas on the continent, Toronto, grow into a rather magnificent, sometimes controversial, sprawling mass that almost extends now from one end of the city line at Hamilton virtually to Oshawa, and which to the north, disregarding some of the artificial boundaries, threatens the very shores of Lake Simcoe. People are pouring into this province, not only from abroad but from within Canada.

This is the province where the action is. This is the province where you can make supposedly your most material success. Also the educational facilities are here. So people are coming here. This, of course, requires that they be sheltered, that they have recreational facilities and a great number of other things.

Of course, this puts a great pressure on the land. I think it has been a sudden shock to this province that it is no longer a place where there is a northern frontier. I think the day of the frontier in this province is gone. We have to be very special about how we treat land and it is very reassuring to me that the most priceless ecological heritage that this province possesses, the Niagara Escarpment, is now a priority matter for this government.

Mrs. M. Campbell (St. George): At last!

Mr. Drea: I realize that it is going to cost a great deal of money to acquire but I think that the investment, measured by future generations, will be as much a hallmark of this government as was the rural electrification of the province by the Frost government, the highways programme of the Drew government and the education programmes of the Robarts government.

Again, this pertains to quality of life which I think is important to all of us.

Mrs. Campbell: I guess that's why the minister isn't in the House.

Mr. Drea: I'm sorry.

Mrs. Campbell: I said I guess that's why the Minister of Education (Mr. Wells) isn't in the House.

Mr. Drea: Well, the Minister of Education talks to me line to line in Scarborough.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. R. F. Ruston (Essex-Kent): There is somebody on the line for the member.

Mr. R. F. Nixon (Leader of the Opposition): The member for Peel South is going to report this to the cabinet.

Mr. Kennedy: Certainly!

Mr. Drea: They can hear me in the cabinet. They never have to have reported to them what I say.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: The papers knew it.

Mr. Drea: That's right.

Mr. Speaker, on another part of the Speech from the Throne, I would like to talk about the proposed royal commission into certain aspects of a number of conditions that apply, in my view, to the entire construction industry of this province.

I do not quarrel; I certainly support the need for a royal commission but I think there are two things that should be made abundantly clear. The very creation of a royal commission indicates that the conventional forces of law and order—that is, the Crown with all its investigative agencies; the courts with their ability to hear the charges that are formally laid against people, to find them guilty or not guilty and to sentence them; the correctional institutions; and a great deal of money has been spent on these—that all of these somehow are unable to cope with a situation that has suddenly arisen.

I think that has very profound implications for our society because we like to think that certain things cannot happen here. I think it is a great tribute not only to this government—that would be a very narrow view—but to all the governments that there have been—not only in this province but in municipalities and those of the Dominion—that this kind of thing has not happened to this extent in our first 102 or 103 years. It only begins to emerge after that.

I think the implication that the conventional forces are no longer tactically able to cope with this has some very, very severe implications, particularly in the area of labour relations. Until now, and by deliberate design, industrial relations or labour relations or union-management affairs or what-have-you have been left sacrosanct and out in a special sphere. The authorities have deliberately handcuffed themselves and with good reason because we have seen the intervention of the state into industrial democracies in Latin America and in Europe with its very dire results. We have deliberately handcuffed and restrained these authorities.

Mr. Speaker, as a result of this royal commission and the very fact that it has to be established, I do not think the day of that special sanctuary for labour relations or whatever we call it will exist very much longer in this province.

As a consequence, I would hope—in fact, I will go farther than hope; I will make an appeal—that a great many questions be answered by this royal commission, particularly with regard to what the hon. member for Thunder Bay says doesn't exist, the little man. It's all very well to read in the newspapers about criminals, extortionists, bomb-throwers, thugs, hoodlums and so on. But where that exists, there is exploitation; there is a ruthlessness against ordinary working people who ask no more and no less than to be able to work in peace and dignity.

It concerns me a great deal, Mr. Speaker, that somehow in all of this business about this royal commission that law enforcement agencies seem to have a vested interest. I haven't seen a law enforcement agency out there when the man doesn't get paid or gets cheated, or has to work the first hour and the last hour of the day for nothing to keep his job. It seems to me that the legalists have a very vested interest in this. Yet where were they when people got buried alive under the tons of concrete in the subway? Where were they?

Mr. Gisborn: It took this government 10 years to recognize that was going on. That was brought to their attention 10 years ago.

Mr. Drea: By whom, may I ask? By whom?

Mr. Gisborn: By members of the opposition!

Mr. Drea: Oh no! By whom?

Mr. Gisborn: By members of the opposition.

Mr. Drea: I would really like to take a bow but unless the hon. member will give me credit—and I think it's a matter of record.

Mr. Gisborn: It took 10 years to move on that question.

Mr. Drea: Well, let me throw out a hypothetical question—and it will drive the member—where has the trade union movement been to try to control the hoodlums masquerading under its name? Where has it been? Has there been any condemnation by the trade union movement when employers are bombed, their children are threatened or anything else? No, sir!

I don't believe it is the job of the hon. member's party to police them, any more than it is my job or anybody else's here. But what concerns me in all of this is that there are literally thousands of people whose quality of life will be affected by this commission. And to restrict it to the professional people in law enforcement, to specific areas and to specific industries, to me is akin to nothing more than trying to treat a very deep infection by putting a kind of ointment over the top of it so it will appear to be cured.

All that will happen is that the very tip of the iceberg will titillate. That's what is going to happen. People are going to be titillated for months by tales of derring-do and so on. In the meantime, those people are being exploited—and they are being exploited because they did not have the good fortune to be born in this country and they do not have the good fortune to speak English without an accent. That is going to go on.

Mr. Speaker, I appeal to those who are responsible for drawing up the terms of reference not to restrict it to what the lawyers think will make a neat and tidy package, and not to restrict it to what certain segments of the industry or certain segments or organized labour—or indeed certain segments of this House—consider to be a neat and easy task.

For the past 14 years—and since other people like to make literary quotations—there has been in the words of John Steinbeck, "a sorrow beyond recall". That sorrow has been that the people who came to this country and to this province for that right to take part in all the good things that come from being in a province of opportunity, they have led dreadful lives.

I say to you, Mr. Speaker, not on a political basis because certainly the civil service has to bear a lot of this, those people in the beginning came to us. They came to those who were here. They came to the institutions that we had and we spurned them. Then we wonder why they don't think it's so bad now if a thug goes out and gets them their wages. Well, the institutions that we had to help them weren't terribly interested when they didn't have any money.

What I am appealing for is that there be some consideration given, when this royal commission and its terms of references are established, that it embrace the whole of the construction industry. The commercial end of it will probably take about five minutes of the commission's time, but let's do the whole of it. The other parts of it—the speculative, the residential, particularly those parts of it using new technology and new products—may take quite a bit longer. I suggest to members that it would be more than worthwhile because I think we have to eradicate this cancer among us. If we don't—it isn't just for those people who are being affected now; it will go on with them—it will also spread because in any other place where it was allowed to fester it has spread out and taken over the very institutions that were set up to combat it.

For once, when all these things are investigated. I would like to see all of the doors opened up regardless of the consequences. I think the time has come for there to be a thorough airing of how any or all of this could happen in the Province of Ontario in the 1970s or in the Dominion of Canada in the 1970s. I say to the House that unless there is a modification or at least the broadest interpretation of the plastering, lathing and dry-walling sectors of the building industry in Metropolitan Toronto, the royal commission isn't worth the money that the first ad to announce its presence will cost.

Mr. Speaker, today I have ranged over a fair number of years in this province.

Mr. Sargent: Let's get back to the donations from the lathing industry to the government.

Mr. Drea: From the what?

Mr. Sargent: From the lathing industry.

Mr. Drea: From the lathing industry? I wouldn't know a lather if I saw him.

Mr. Sargent: They don't make donations to the party?

Mr. Drea: I have no idea about who makes donations to anybody in the party.

Mr. Sargent: That's why it's pretty safe to investigate those people?

Mr. Drea: No, I don't think it's pretty safe for us to investigate those people whom I don't know. I have enough confidence in this party that we wouldn't take a dime from the likes of the people I want investigated. We have never taken a dime from them and we never would! All we have is one ambition and that's to put them where they belong.

Mr. Sargent: How does the member know? Did the Premier (Mr. Davis) tell him all these things?

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Even the Premier doesn't know, he says.

Mr. Drea: If the members want me to—I have today touched very briefly upon the outstanding role of the Liberal Party in the growth of the industrial establishment of this province—

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Tell us about Oshawa again.

Mr. Drea: What?

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Tell us about Oshawa again.

Mr. Drea: Would the member like to hear about it?

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Yes. Don't forget that we won it in the election of 1937; that was the one he was talking about.

Mr. Drea: Yes.

An hon. member: In 1937?

Mr. Drea: That's right. Does the member want it recorded that he is very proud of that? Not the winning of the election but the events subsequent to it?

Mr. R. F. Nixon: No, but I don't really know what the member is going to achieve by repeating the story every time he gets up on his feet.

Mr. Drea: I'm trying to help the opposition labour critics, so help me get the history of labour in this province straight. I should send them a bill for education.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: The member sounds to me like a singer with one note.

Mr. Drea: No, he sits next to the Leader of the Opposition.

Mr. Sargent: The member and his colleagues need all the help they can get themselves.

Mr. Drea: Mr. Speaker, I have ranged over a number of topics today. I have by deliberate design put the thrust of my arguments and my comments on the Speech from the Throne upon economic matters, for I think it is a great fallacy to suggest that this government is not interested in that collective term "labour." I don't think there has been a government or a series of governments anywhere on this continent that has been more interested.

Certainly there are problems. Certainly in my view we have not provided organized labour with 100 per cent of the legislation that I would think it could use to operate in a very effective manner. I think we have come close. I think we have come close, and I think we are going to go much further, but I want to dispel the myth that we care not what happens in this province.

Because the very roots of this party are not inside of unions per se, they are not inside of management per se; the very roots of our party lie with people who are like me, the squares who still believe in the Canadian dream. That is why they come to this party, because we are not continentalists willing to peddle away.

We are the party that determined that the expansion of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission into the nuclear age would be done with Canadian technology, not by importing a two-bit licence from the United States. We gave our kids the right to show what they could do. And, Mr. Speaker, I say to you the record of accomplishment there is first class.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: What about Stephen Roman's uranium? Isn't he in the member's party?

Mr. Gisborn: What happened to natural gas in Ontario? The government made an awful switch there.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: If it weren't for the Liberals we would have sold uranium too.

Mr. Drea: If it weren't for whom?

Mr. R. F. Nixon: The Liberals. Trudeau stopped it single-handedly.

Mr. Drea: Well that must have been the first thing he ever did single-handedly. One way or the other.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: He did it pretty effectively—so Roman decided he would run for the member's party.

Mr. Drea: We are also now embarking upon something that is very close to people who want a superior quality of life in this province, and that is mass urban transportation. Again, the cornerstone of this government's programme is that the research must be done in Canada. We are opening up jobs for research, not taking the continental approach that the kids can go get a job in Detroit if they want to experiment because somehow this isn't done in Canada.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: I thought the government was buying its elevated trains in Germany with money borrowed from Germany?

Mr. Gisborn: They borrow the money from Germany and now they are going to buy the transit system.

Mr. Drea: And the research will be done in this province.

Mr. Sargent: And it won't happen in 20 years either.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: I understand some Swiss company is building the buildings for them.

Mr. Drea: The first one is being built from my riding in Scarborough right down to here, and I'll let the Leader of the Opposition ring the bell when the first one moves because both of us will still be here.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Right up at the back row.

Mr. Drea: It is also very interesting, you know, that across the floor there is not only the low wage mentality but there is the low ambition mentality.

Mr. Sargent: He gave that same speech last year.

Mr. Drea: No I didn't; no sir. I gave it in the member's club, but not last year. There is the low ambition mentality.

I don't think that there is any challenge that the people of this province cannot overcome—

Mr. W. Hodgson: What is a low ambition mentality?

Mr. Ruston: That is the Tory rump.

Mr. Drea: Right over there. All of them in opposition.

Mr. Good: That is a great back row there.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: That is the government that listens.

Mr. Drea: Oh, they listen to me.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Not if they can help it. The member warned them about Fidinam, but they won't heed.

Mr. Deans: They heard he was going to speak and they left.

An hon. member: That a boy, the member is getting through to them.

Mr. Deans: That is how much they listen—not one single cabinet minister to hear him.

Mr. Drea: Oh they listen to me. They are listening to me. There is the member for Wentworth, stripped and alone on the front benches again. Surely it is not the ides of March again?

Mr. R. F. Nixon: It is a conspiracy.

Mr. Deans: No one can stand it for more than five minutes.

Mr. Drea: He's safe. The member's leader is safe. There is only one member there. There will be no knives in the back today. He is safe.

Mr. Deans: I am the only one who can stand this for more than five minutes at a stretch.

Mr. Drea: There you are! Well, why does the member stay then?

An hon. member: Where is the NDP's leader?

Mr. Drea: I certainly don't accuse the member of lack of ambition. He seems to persevere through all of this and I somehow think there is a little bit more to it than merely partaking in the dialogue of the House.

Mr. Deans: I am not partaking in the dialogue. I am trying to suffer it.

Mr. Drea: Well, I may make the member suffer a lot longer.

Mr. Deans: I don't doubt but what the hon. member will. That is the problem. That is what I fear.

Mr. L. M. Reilly (Eglinton): We have suffered at the hands of my hon. friend.

Mr. Deans: Oh, the member is going to suffer again.

Mr. Drea: This is called retribution—so sweat.

Mr. Deans: It certainly isn't called contribution.

Mr. Sargent: We have listened to the member's preamble for two hours.

Mr. Drea: Well, if the member had been in here all day instead of exercising himself somewhere else—and Mr. Speaker, I want that recorded in the Hansard. It is not the way I pronounce "exorcising." I think that that pertains to the member in that seat quite a bit.

Mr. Deans: Has the member finished his preamble?

Mr. Drea: No!

Mr. Deans: The member is not really down to the guts of the speech yet, is he?

Mr. Drea: Well, Mr. Speaker, when they are able to control themselves, I am prepared to continue.

Mr. Deans: Does the member mean to tell me that if we keep speaking he will shut up? It might be worth it, you know.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Drea: You see, they don't want to grasp what I have been saying—because they are going to have to go back home tonight and explain how it is that the kind of a government they say couldn't care less about anybody, doesn't listen, doesn't do anything, has produced a province and a style of life that is second to none anywhere on this continent—

Mr. Sargent: And is almost bankrupt; almost broke.

Mr. Drea: —whether you want to measure it in terms of dollars and cents or whether you want it measured in terms of quality life.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Drea: They don't want to hear it; and the terrible part for them is that they know it's true.

Mr. Good: That is in spite of the government.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Drea: The what? Are they still there? The last I heard, they had moved.

Mr. Ruston: You bet they are. They will stay there too.

Mr. Sargent: And the government is cutting back on the caretakers in Ryerson.

Mr. Drea: Oh, didn't the member read the paper this morning, other than page 5? Did the member not read it?

Mr. Good: The member doesn't believe what he reads in the papers, does he?

Mr. Drea: Well, I certainly do in certain places.

Mr. Speaker, to come back—and I hope that they have rid themselves of whatever frustrations there are. I realize it must be terribly difficult, since 1943, going out time after time to the public saying: "Look at them, look at that Conservative government; look what they are doing to you, put us in and here's what we'll do." And what's left, a trail of carcasses—

Mr. Good: Especially in Huron and St. George.

Mr. Drea: A number of leaders all along the trail, dead, dying, wounded, retired, committed. There it is since 1943; and then they come to us this year and they say the Speech from the Throne is bankrupt, that we haven't touched upon the right things. We don't have to produce a book in this party or in this government any more. We have the book behind us. We have the record of accomplishment.

Mr. Good: They didn't think of that in St. George or Huron, though.

Mr. Drea: Do we really want to get into that? I have a few things to say there too. I was trying to save some time for the next speaker. He has been very long suffering; I promised him.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: We've got lots of time.

Mr. Givens: I will relieve the member of his promise.

Mr. Drea: The member doesn't want to speak?

Mr. Sargent: The member is a good kid, but his skates are dull.

Mr. Drea: That really is the kind of an analogy that could only come from the part of the country which the member represents. Now think about that one for a moment.

Mr. Speaker, I am really about to conclude—and if you could control—no, I sympathize with you, Mr. Speaker.

What I have been attempting to point out, Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Sargent: He is out of order.

An hon. member: Stay with them.

Mr. Drea: Mr. Speaker, what I have been trying to convey today is the very simple and elemental fact that this government is concerned about people who work for wages and salaries. It is so concerned that it has not only provided for an orderly and progressive growth of industrial relations in this province, it has gone far beyond that. It has recognized the fact that because of the nature of the service industries or the nature of the employment that a great many people will not become part of organized labour. The ministry has taken over as their social watchdog. It has done it remarkably well. I think that the true measure of a government is not the number of seats it has, not the number of years that it has been in office and not the number of commendations it has. I think the true measure is what it is doing for people.

I think if the members really read, instead of giving it this cursory examination, the first part of the Speech from the Throne, they will be impressed with the fact that, one, we are more than concerned about economic security and that we are more than meeting the challenge of unemployment in this province; and that, secondly, we are concerned with the ecological heritage of this province and we are certainly going to extraordinary steps and very innovative steps to preserve that.

Mr. Sargent: Where does the member get that "we" from?

Mr. Drea: They still have me. One never knows for how long, but I am still here.

Finally, we are coming to grips with our most intense social problem, which is the matter that will be studied by the royal commission. Therefore, Mr. Speaker, I point out to you that this Throne Speech is in the tradition of this party which rescued Ontario from a party that had fallen apart; and which rescued it from the calamity of almost being governed by those who like to plan and plan so well that their monument in Sweden now turns out to be the leading contender in a number of dubious categories. This party rescued the province from that.

It has since gone on to enjoy an ever larger and an ever more responsive position among the ordinary people. I think that is the measure of a government, because if it were not for the response from ordinary people we would not have been able to fill these benches for so long and to do the things that people wanted us to do when they wanted us to do them and in the manner they wanted them done.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Ruston: Now for the words of wisdom.

Mr. J. R. Rhodes (Sault Ste. Marie): Move the adjournment. Now is the time.

Mr. P. G. Givens (York-Forest Hill): Mr. Speaker, I am not prepared to speak in the tradition of the Throne Speech and excoriate the ministers across the way. None of them is here to be excoriated anyway.

Mr. R. F. Nixon (Leader of the Opposition): Not one.

Mr. L. M. Reilly (Eglinton): They are tuning in, though.

Mr. Givens: To be perfectly frank, I still don't know them well enough to be able to say in the terms of the leader of the NDP (Mr. Lewis) when he said yesterday—and he probably is an expert on it because he has been here longer than I—"You are a sorry lot, all you empty chairs."

I am not going to pour coals or fuel, any more than was already done on the Minister of Health (Mr. Potter), who is having a rough time of it.

Mr. R. G. Hodgson (Victoria-Haliburton): The newly elected members are not even listening.

An hon. member: The member for St. George (Mrs. Campbell) is not around. She is sick of her party's members anyway.

Mr. Givens: I feel sorry for him, because I feel he is a good, kindly, honest, decent man, but he is in water far over his head and he has about a dozen tigers by the tail which he can't let go. Enough has been said about that.

I noticed this morning's paper said he made his first public appearance last night. There was a medical bulletin to say that he didn't look bad. I suppose we can expect in the newspapers every day that there will be a medical bulletin describing the condition of the Health minister. Apparently he isn't very healthy. I think that as an act of mercy he should probably be relieved of his duties so that this province can get back on the rails with respect to its health programme.

Mind you, having said that, I am of two minds with respect to some of the ministers.

Mr. Speaker, you may think that the action takes place here but it doesn't. This is just the dress rehearsal for what takes place on the other stage out there in front of the klieg lights.

I am amazed by the Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde performance that takes place here every day in the question period. When members on our side of the House ask the ministers questions, they mumble and they fumble and they jumble; then, between the time they leave this chamber and go through the eastern corridor out into the lights they seem to blossom like my tulips do on a sunny day.

Somewhere along the route they are passed a note or their memories are jogged or they are able to think things over and they become master debaters and masters of coherence and logic and articulation. When one tunes in one's television set and radio at night one sees a completely different show from what takes place here in this august chamber. It is hard for me to make a decision as to some of the ministers because when one is preparing oneself for something, for making a speech like today, one has to go to the television set and to the press clippings to see what it is that they were supposed to have said in the chamber—and not what they actually said in the chamber and which is recorded in Hansard.

Until such time, Mr. Speaker, as television is permitted into this chamber so that the people of this province can watch—they are permitted to see men walking on the moon; they can see battle scenes in Viet Nam; they can see sports activities, God knows, in the Soviet Union on their television sets, but they aren't permitted to see the conduct of their members in this particular chamber to whom they pay salaries—until that is done, Mr. Speaker, this will continue the way it is. I'm sure that ministers, being as they are, will not permit the intrusion of television and the media into this House.

Mr. R. G. Hodgson: The member would never get on with his grandstanding.

Mr. Givens: They would prefer to put on the show—the comedy show, the dramatic show—they put on out there for the academy awards every day. That is how they are judged by the voters and the people of this province.

Mr. I. Deans (Wentworth): Would the member like to inflict this on the population?

Mr. Givens: Yes, I would, particularly and especially the question period; that is the best fun we have day after day.

An hon. member: The comedy hour!

Mr. Givens: I want to speak, Mr. Speaker, on some of the items in the spectrum of provincial activities which interest me; others have been covered by other people very adequately. The first thing I want to speak about is the—

An hon. member: The Spadina!

Mr. Givens: —matter of the regional government which the government seems to be hell bent for leather on implementing without due evaluation. It is going like the charge of the light brigade into the valley of death with cannons to the left of it and cannons to the right of it, without really reassessing and re-evaluating what it has been doing. It is just like Oral Roberts in a tent—the government takes the victim who was sitting in a chair and forces its hand down on the victim and says “heal.”

Mr. R. G. Hodgson: The member is one of 22 opinions.

Mr. W. Hodgson (York North): There is a good one to the north of him.

Mr. Givens: The victim is supposed to come out of the chair all cured and all healed.

I am, first of all, disconcerted with what was done with the ministry of urban affairs in this province. We have had a new manifestation—a minister who is a Treasurer, and a Minister of Economics and of Intergovernmental Affairs. An IGA sounds to me like a corner grocery store, but I don't think it is a good way for a minister of municipal affairs to perform.

Mr. R. G. Hodgson: That's what the member was hoping would be done in Ottawa.

Mr. W. Hodgson: Urban affairs is a federal term, isn't it?

An hon. member: The member had better go back to Ottawa.

Mr. W. Hodgson: Trudeau wouldn't accept him.

Mr. Givens: We have a minister who looks after elementary students. We have a minister who looks after the cause of college and university students. We have a minister who looks after convicts. We have a minister who looks after tourist operators, but we do not have a minister whose sole responsibility is to look after the operation and the functioning of all the municipalities in this province.

Metropolitan Toronto has a budget which is larger than the budgets of eight of the provinces of Canada. Metropolitan Toronto has a population which is larger than the populations of eight of the provinces of Canada. It is the full-time job of 23 people on the metropolitan council of 33 to look after the interests of Metropolitan Toronto. There is not one cabinet minister here at all who looks after the interests of Toronto, Ottawa, Windsor, London or the northern cities in this province. Hamilton should be thrown in there too; it is a large and important city.

How can one minister look after the Treasury and bring down the budget with all the responsibilities that are inherent therein; look after the economic affairs of the province and its fiscal policy with due regard to the monetary policy that comes down from the federal government; and still have time to deal with intergovernmental affairs, which involve dealing with the federal government and the governments of all the other provinces, as well as with the international situation, because even within the purview and jurisdiction of the province there are trade offices dispersed all over the world.

How can one minister do all that? When I asked about this last year, I was told that this job was designed for the hon. member for Chatham-Kent (Mr. McKeough); he was a bear for work, and he had a complete grasp of all these activities. He was to look after this, and he would do a great job. But that minister has now fallen from grace; he's gone to purgatory. Apparently he's in a shadowy position now where he's working himself back up but still hasn't entered the House as a minister again. Then we had a new minister and two members who were supposed to assist him, the hon. member for York East (Mr. Meen) and the member for Ottawa South (Mr. Bennett). But the member for Ottawa South now has got his just reward; he has got a promotion.

Aside from that fact, we have a situation where the new minister, who is supposed to look after this tidy bundle, has indicated publicly that he will not be running again for public office in the election that probably will take place in 1975.

How does the government expect a man who has publicly committed himself not to run again to look after something that requires dedication and devotion over the next five or six years, particularly during the transition period of all these regional governments? How they expect a man to do that job, I don't know. I don't understand.

I think it's high time that the government recognized its responsibilities in this area. If students can have ministers, if convicts can have ministers and if tourist operators can have ministers, then to do justice to the municipalities of this province, there should be a minister looking after urban and municipal affairs.

An hon. member: Federally and provincially.

Mr. Givens: I think regional government—

Mr. E. Sargent (Grey-Bruce): On a point of order—

Mr. Speaker: State your point of order.

Mr. Sargent: My point of order is that with such an important message as this I think we should ring the bells and get the members in the House.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member has no point of order.

Mr. Sargent: Well it's a good idea.

An hon. member: We have a quorum.

Mr. Sargent: There isn't a cabinet minister in the House. You should be ashamed of yourself, Mr. Speaker, to let this kind of thing go on.

Mr. Givens: Mr. Speaker, I state categorically that the regional government system that the province has imposed in this arbitrary way, without consultation with the people, has been largely unsuccessful—and I'll give the reasons why. We still have the intricate provincial grants system; there is still a proliferation of boards, commissions and agencies; planning and development responsibility is still gravitated toward the province; and there has been absolutely no municipal tax reform, notwithstanding all the studies that have taken place.

The financial situation remains the same. Property taxes, which are taxes based on a fixed asset, are still the main basis of municipal financing. All this government has done with the financial system is spread it out over larger areas, the regional areas. The local governments are financially weak and must rely on transfers from the province—and this will not only be in the transitional period. They are never going to be able to cut the umbilical cord, because that is the history of conditional grants given to municipalities.

Some benefits will accrue to the regional areas in their borrowings. They will be able to borrow at perhaps half of one per cent or a quarter of one per cent less interest, but their activities are still restricted. They are still subject to the decisions of the Ontario Municipal Board, which not only determines whether the municipalities can afford to borrow the money but goes into every fact and facet of their borrowings as to whether they are desirable or not. This, I think, is wrong—and I'll deal with the OMB later if I have the time.

The regional governments are also inefficient and too expensive—and people in the rural areas should be interested in this—because they don't reduce the staff or the number of commissioners. They duplicate them. In the two-tier system, if we have a works commissioner at the local level, we maintain that works commissioner and we get another works commissioner at the upper tier.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: That's right.

Mr. Givens: The same is true of the police, the firemen, the roads commissioners, the water commissioners and everybody else. There's duplication. And the commissioner at the lower tier says: "I can't deal with my counterpart of the upper tier unless I get the $35,000 a year that he gets." So there is a jack-up system at work here.

We will find, as we found in Metropolitan Toronto, that our expenses will double, triple and quadruple because of the proliferation that takes place. Parkinson's law goes into operation. Costs will rise and they are rising out of proportion to the services. The government is not going to tell me that in the rural areas where it already has regional governments the cost to the rural areas hasn't doubled and tripled, and the government has nothing to show for it.

An hon. member: Right!

Mr. Givens: Absolutely nothing to show for it! The government does not decrease its staff; the finances are still controlled by the province and municipalities need provincial approval for spending. They can hardly spend a dime. They cannot borrow one dollar for capital expenditures in any municipality without approval by the Ontario Municipal Board, and the OMB always refers to the Ministry of Intergovernmental Affairs, especially when it has to do with large sums of money.

What happens with these conditional grants that the province gives is that these are generally a percentage of the projects. They are on a cost-sharing basis and the cost favours the rich areas, as those members who come from a little place know. If we are going to have subways, the government is going to contribute 75 per cent as they promised by and by. If we ever get to build another subway in Toronto, the people from outside Toronto are going to pay for it.

It's good for Toronto. We'll be able to build subways that way but others are going to have to pay for it. It's okay if one is in the subway business but it is different if one comes from any other city other than Metropolitan Toronto. The government is not likely to build subways in Hamilton or Windsor.

An hon. member: Or in London!

Mr. Givens: Or in London! So remember, when I'm talking about what some call Hometown they're paying for it — the farmers and the miners and all the other people of the Province of Ontario.

Mr. R. G. Hodgson: We have always paid for it. That's is nothing new.

Mr. Givens: Now with respect to structural problems, the government talks about a two-tiered structure. It's incomprehensible, because what one actually has Mr. Speaker, is a three-tiered structure. There is the lower tier that looks after the hewing of wood and the drawing of water, police protection and fire protection and the collection of garbage. This is what the lower tier looks after. Then there is the upper tier and then a third tier—

An hon. member: It sounds rounded off.

Mr. Givens: —which is centralized in the Kremlin right here. No municipality can make a move without approval from the Kremlin up here, so when they talk about two-tiered government, they actually have three tiers.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: The commissars never even come into the Legislature.

Mr. Givens: There is no clear definition between the two tiers. The new member for St. George will tell the House that in Toronto after 15 years there's still a vagueness in the understanding. Certainly on the part of the public there is a complete misunderstanding as to where the division splits, as to what jurisdiction is Metro and what jurisdiction is local and what is the lower tier and what is the upper tier. The regional councils are selected by indirect election.

Mr. D. A. Evans (Simcoe Centre): Why doesn't Metro amalgamate?

Mr. Givens: Why doesn't it amalgamate?—because the government won't permit us to amalgamate. We still have these indirect elections, where in Metropolitan Toronto we still don't know who is going to sit on the metropolitan council. In Ottawa-Carleton they aren't going to know because they come from the lower tier. The government has developed a new brand of democracy where all the chairmen, all the heads that it is appointing to these regional councils are appointed people and not elected people on the principle that in order for a guy to do an honest job in these regions he's got to be plucked out of somewhere and be appointed and shouldn't have to expose himself to public election. That's a principle of democracy which I don't understand.

In Hamilton, it will be interesting to see what's going to happen to Mayor Vic Copps here, when he comes down. He's going to say to the government, "we want one tier in Hamilton-Wentworth and we want an elected chairman." It will be interesting to see whether the government will give it to him or not.

An hon. member: No way!

Mr. Givens: What has been happening—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Givens:—has been loss of representation. Do members know why there has been a proliferation of ratepayers' groups? There has been a proliferation of ratepayers' groups in these various regions and other places because people have been deprived of representation.

In Metropolitan Toronto, Forest Hill, which comprises about two-thirds of my constituency and which has about 25,000 people, used to have a council of five. It now has nothing looking after its interests. They were absorbed into Ward 11 which has two representatives, but for the most part they don't represent that particular area. They don't understand that area. Their prime concern is the other part of the ward.

Leaside had a council of seven but now has no representation; Long Branch a council of five, and also no representation; Mimico a council of seven; and New Toronto also had a council of seven. That mean 19 representatives from Long Branch, Mimico and New Toronto were completely absorbed into Etobicoke, and to all intents and purposes, these areas are not represented with respect to local matters.

Swansea was absorbed by Toronto. It had a council of five—no representation. The people have nobody to turn to in that particular area. The same thing happened in Weston. Weston had a council of seven. It has completely disappeared. There was a complement of 109 elected representatives and that has been reduced tremendously.

In the regional municipality of Niagara, prior to regional government there was a complement of 173 elected representatives. Now there are 120.

Mr. J. R. Rhodes (Sault Ste. Marie): Nothing wrong with that.

An hon. member: That's cut them down.

Mr. Givens: In Ottawa-Carlton, 108 representatives—not too bad—now down to only 97. The regional municipality of Sudbury, effective Jan. 1, 1973, had 99 elected representatives looking after the same regional area where there are now 54.

Mr. S. B. Handleman (Carleton): He's got the figures wrong.

Mr. Givens: In the regional municipality of Waterloo there were 105 representatives; now they are down to 72.

Mr. Handleman: That's efficiency!

Mr. Givens: In the regional municipality of York, effective Jan. 1, 1971, there were 80 elected representatives; now they are down to 70, which isn't too bad.

And in the district municipality of Muskoka—is the member for Muskoka (Mr. Miller) here?—they had 133 elected representatives in this area, and now they are down to 49, about one-third.

An hon. member: What's the point? Isn't that good?

Mr. Givens: The point that I am trying to make is this—

Mr. Rhodes: What is wrong with that? What is wrong with it?

Mr. Givens:—that as far as regional integration is concerned, this has served the purposes of the provincial government, to reduce the number of people that they have to deal with. As far as the people that they are supposed to represent is concerned, as far as the care for the people that the preceding speaker was talking about is concerned, it takes away representation from the people. They could turn to an elected representative and complain to him about some problem, and take up with him some problem that they had. They had somebody to discuss it with but now they don't have anyone to discuss it with. This is what it has accomplished.

Mrs. M. Campbell (St. George): Certainly not the cabinet.

Mr. Givens: As far as autonomy is concerned, the Throne Speech talks about:

My government believes that a strong and reformed local government is in the best position to determine its own priorities, and proposes to transfer, to strengthen local governments, more authority and responsibility for many of the decisions that relate to local matters.

Everything that they have been doing is just the opposite. It has been taking away local autonomy, because the local tier loses autonomy within the regional government and the regional tier loses autonomy within the provincial government. The lower tier has inferior status and lacks authority to perform any functions at all. The urban-rural mix causes problems, because the rural people feel that the urban people are getting the benefit, and the urban people feel that the rural people are getting the benefit. There is a wedge driven in between them, and there is great alienation between the urban and the rural people, much greater than we have had before.

Mr. R. G. Hodgson: Name one thing that is taken away from them.

Mr. Givens: This close financial tie with the province causes centralization at the provincial level and completely detracts from the autonomy of the local areas. The local choice and options have been eliminated, and little integration of plans and policies can take place.

I am saying with great respect that what regional government is resulting in is crisis government and more complex government. The people are alienated because they were all supposed to be consulted with respect to regional government going into these various areas, and they were not consulted.

Mr. A. Carruthers (Durham): They certainly were.

Mr. Givens: The politicians have been consulted, but not the local people. In addition, there has been a lack of integration of programmes.

I think, consequently, I agree with the remark that my leader made, that before plunging ahead pell-mell with implementation of other regional governments, we should evaluate those regions which have already gone into effect, for the reasons that I have indicated. Let's not have this myth and this fiction of local autonomy, because this is not what it is resulting in at all.

Then the government indicated in the Throne Speech that:

As a result of its review of the report of the select committee on the Ontario Municipal Board, my government will place before you proposals to make the board a more effective vehicle for discharging its responsibilities.

I thought that the OMB was pretty effective up till now.

Mr. R. G. Hodgson: Where it reverses the decisions?

Mr. Givens: What that deals with, of course, is the role that the OMB has played. During the Depression the OMB was brought into force because it was to deal with the financial capabilities of the various municipalities, which at that time were frankly going broke. They weren't able to borrow on capital account, and when they did borrow there were defalcations. The role of the OMB at that time was to be the policeman with respect to the financial capacity of the various municipalities.

There has been a metamorphosis of that role and now the OMB barges in with respect to planning jurisdiction so that no municipality can make a move with respect to planning or zoning without the approval of the OMB. With respect to borrowing, not only does the OMB deal with the financial capability of any particular municipality—whether or not it has the ability to pay back or whether it has the ability to borrow—it goes into the merits of the particular case.

If the government is going to talk about local autonomy and if it is going to have something like the Ontario Municipal Board which is going to be the big brother who is going to look over their shoulders, and if the government is going to elect people to municipal governments and is going to treat them like retarded children, they are going to continue to act and behave like retarded children. I don't think that in this day and age a city like Hamilton or Metropolitan Toronto or Windsor that has good professional staff, machines, computers, accounting advice and every other kind of advice available to it—again, these municipalities have populations and budgets, as I mentioned before, which are bigger than the populations and budgets of eight of the 10 provinces of Canada — should have to go through this humbling experience of having to go to the Ontario Municipal Board for approval on planning and rezoning or with respect to borrowing.

Yes, I believe that there should be an ultimate court of appeal. When you have gone through a whole series of meetings like we do in the city, with committee meetings and executive committee meetings, council meetings, and Metro meetings over a period of eight or nine months, and then you go to the Ontario Municipal Board and they start from the beginning— ad initio, right from the beginning of things as if nothing else has happened before—I don't think you can talk about local autonomy.

Another remark made during the time we had the hearings was on the question of corruption. Listen to this—on the question of corruption. We listened to witnesses like former Chief Justice McRuer and Jack Weir who said that one of the reasons for the OMB was the fact that it avoids corruption in the municipalities.

Then along came another minister who used to serve on this government, a man by the name of Bob Macaulay, and he said there was absolutely no corruption at all and he blew the whole case. We know, and I had better be careful how I choose my words, that if there is such a thing as corruption—and probably there is, as there is among doctors and lawyers and accountants and ordinary people who steal things from chain stores and department stores—if there is corruption, it isn't limited to the municipal field. It may appear in other fields. The hon. member for Grey-Bruce made a statement about the people he saw here on opening day. We were all permitted to have four tickets for the ceremony that takes place here on opening day.

Mr. F. Drea (Scarborough Centre): Does the member mean he was scalping?

Mr. Givens: I was dying to bring one of my kids here and I couldn't get a fifth ticket. When I came here, I saw the judges here—okay; heads of boards and commissions—okay; heads of big associations and the trades union movement—okay. Then I saw what he saw—contractors, builders, developers; men whose claim to fame is the fact that they have made millions of dollars, a great deal of it from the public trough. I am sure they were not invited here by anybody on our side. I didn't see any friends here.

An hon. member: They were all in Ottawa.

Mr. Givens: Nor are they related by blood, consanguinity or marriage to anybody on that side. Bringing them into this chamber to shake the hands of the Lieutenant Governor is like taking Xaviera Hollander to meet mother at home, especially when mother's there!

Mr. R. D. Kennedy (Peel South): The member should have checked with his leader.

Mr. Givens: We have a right to be suspicious, if nothing more, as to whether there is corruption at this level whether there is corruption at the federal level. It's not confined to one field. Who was overlooking what the provinces did? Who was overlooking what the federal government did?

Another factor is that many of the members who sit here, on all sides of the House, from all parties, are people who were formerly members of municipal councils. So they were corruptible when they were at the lower level, but they're not corruptible now. I too have a right to be as indignant as the Premier (Mr. Davis) was yesterday when he got up and he said, "I am proud of my party"; and "I don't do things that are wrong"; and "I do everything that's legal"; and so on and so on. Surely we have a right to be indignant too?

Mr. Drea: Well, doesn't the member?

Mr. Givens: And if there is a function to be performed in keeping local councillors in line, the builders and the developers who appear at the local level and at the provincial level; then there should be some other kind of organization which looks after corruption and not an organization like the Ontario Municipal Board.

I believe that there should be a court of appeal, of last resort and it should be on the record. If hearings at boards of inquiry or at committee meetings at local councils are properly being carried on; and if there's a denial of natural justice, if citizens aren't being heard and the reports aren't being divulged and circulated, we should stiffen the strength of the legislation to see that at the local level these people are heard and that there is no such denial of natural justice.

Mr. Drea: Introduce it as a bill and I'll sell it.

Mr. Givens: But I don't think that the big municipalities of this province require that kind of policemenmanship from the Ontario Municipal Board. This is what I think we should watch when the legislation comes through. If we're going to talk about local autonomy and we're going to talk about municipalities looking after their own fate, then we should give them the jurisdiction and the powers to do it.

Now, on the question of transportation—

Mr. Drea: Here comes the elegy to the death of the expressway.

Mr. Givens: As far as my riding is concerned, Mr. Speaker, I feel that my people have been sadly betrayed by this government—and it talks about looking after people—and I'll tell the members why. People come to me and they ask, "Is the Spadina Expressway dead?"

Mr. Drea: Yes.

An hon. member: Yes.

Mr. Rhodes: Except when the member revives it.

Mr. Givens: Maybe the members opposite are right. Certainly as long as this Premier is around as Premier there will probably not be a Spadina Expressway.

Mr. Rhodes: And others, and others.

Mr. Givens: Whether there will be others or not, let me say this—

Mr. Rhodes: On his side of the house.

Mr. Givens: If manufacturers are going to keep selling a million vehicles a year like we brag about in this Legislature, people are going to have to have some place to run them.

Mr. J. F. Foulds (Port Arthur): Right.

Mr. Givens: Motor vehicle registration in Metropolitan Toronto today is in a ratio of about two vehicles to three people. Now, it seems to me from the standpoint of logic, forgetting politics for the moment, that if we're going to have that many motor vehicles in this city and other cities—certainly in this city, as far as I'm concerned, where I reside—we're going to have to have some north-south thoroughfare between the Don Valley Parkway and Highway 27.

It just staggers the imagination to think that we can go on bringing the number of motor vehicles into this city and not allow for some kind of north-south thoroughfare. Now, whether it's going to be the Spadina or a continuation of Highway 400, somebody is going to have to come to grips with this situation in the future, and the sooner the better because there's no way around it.

Last November the Premier got up at the Science Centre and he said to the people of the northwest quadrant, "We will give you a dial-a-bus system."

Mr. Drea: And we have.

Mr. Givens: And when he made the promise it sounded as if the dial-a-bus system was going to be imminent. Now because of a question that I asked the Minister of Transportation and Communications (Mr. Carton) the other day, he went out and waxed eloquent in front of the TV cameras—he didn't give the answer in the House—that next November, in time to compete with the snowploughs, there are going to be three pilot projects: two in Downsview, which is away north of my riding.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: I don't know why they bothered with that one.

Mr. Givens: It's in the riding of my hon. friend in front of me. And one in the district of Don Mills, which is a two-car family area. This is going to be an experiment? It will take at least from November of 1973 to the fall of 1974 to draw up a report. This is the dial-a-bus system which the Premier has promised the people of northwest Toronto. I say that he has betrayed these people, because unless he was prepared—

Mr. V. M. Singer (Downsview): Of course he has betrayed them.

Mr. Givens: —to deliver alternatives he shouldn't have cancelled out the subway which was supposed to run down the subway alignment of the Spadina Expressway. So no alternatives were provided.

Mr. Singer: Right!

Mr. Givens: And where are you going to take them from Downsview and York Mills out to the York Mills station? All the residential streets now have signs on them which say "No thoroughfare" in the rush hour in the morning going south and the rush hour in the evening going north, so they're all being crowded into Bathurst St., and Yonge St. and Avenue Rd. If the members opposite just want to have an experience, let them go there sometime between the hours of 7 and 9 in the morning and see what a great miracle their leader has wrought by abandoning the Spadina Expressway.

Mr. Singer: Don't confuse him with logic. He wouldn't understand, that fellow from Sault Ste. Marie; he wouldn't understand.

Mr. Rhodes: Now say something nasty about the north; go ahead.

Mr. Singer: No, just the member. The north is fine, but they have the member; that is too bad.

Mr. Givens: And then we have the monorail, which was promised in November—

Mr. Singer: I talk about it frequently; people change. The member knows all about that.

Mr. Drea: The member for St. George better look out for him.

Mr. Givens: And then the people have been looking forward to the monorail. This is going to be experimented with at the Canadian National Exhibition midway. I guess it's going to run around the periphery of the exhibition.

I think it is interesting to know that the two firms that are going to be competing are Hawker-Siddeley and Kraus-Maffei. Hawker-Siddeley is from near London and Kraus-Maffei from Munich. In both these countries—even though the one in Germany is supported by the federal government—they did not build the monorail. They are providing more conventional subways in Germany. So we are going to experiment probably for a year's period; because if they start at the exhibition, how are they going to simulate the conditions of snow and sleet that we get in Ontario. That will take about a year—

Mr. Foulds: Especially in the north.

Mr. Givens:—so there will be a report on that and there will be a report on the dial-a-bus system just ready for the election of 1975. In the meantime, the people of our area have no alternative transportation facilities. So they are not moving people, and they haven't improved the situation and provided alternatives; and whether it will take place in this century or next century, I don't know.

As far as the subway is concerned, Mr. Speaker, I do not understand why—when the expressway was aborted—the government couldn't have made a decision at that time in June, 1971, and said: "Go ahead with the subway." Because now the subway route is still up in the air. It is a matter being appealed to the Ontario Municipal Board; and it will probably then be appealed from the Ontario Municipal Board to the cabinet. Labour costs are increasing and costs of materials have increased about 30 per cent since the last subway was started; and the cost of land is increasing. Until such time as the route is decided upon, no more acquisition of land can take place.

Mr. Foulds: Freeze all land.

Mr. Givens: All the people who come from the outside Toronto who cheered the decision are going to find that they are going to be contributing 75 per cent of the increased costs of the subway on which the government could have saved several millions of dollars if it had gone ahead in 1971; as it should have—because no new facts came to the fore at all.

This is the situation that government is in with the aborting of the subway. I say that the people have been betrayed because they had a right to expect better. What is ironic, Mr. Speaker, is that this coming Friday at 1:45, the subway extension from Eglinton to Finch is going to take place.

Mr. Singer: Just to York Mills.

Mr. Givens: Just to show you how long it takes to build a subway system, it's five miles from Eglinton to Finch and it was started in 1963 when I was still a member of the board of control in Toronto; it is just being finished now. And who are going to be the big shots who are going to strut their parts on the stage, and who is going to take all the bows?

Mr. Foulds: Strut their what?

Mr. Givens: Mayor Crombie, Mayor Lastman, people who weren't even around and who never even had an inkling of the decisions that had to be made in 1963 in order to build the extension, which is to run at about $35 million a mile. And the Premier and Mr. Campbell had little to do with the decision.

Ten years from now in 1983, there will be a new crop of people who will have to stand the blame for the terrible decisions that were made in 1971.

I want to deal with one more subject before 6 o'clock—and that has to do with housing. The minister responsible for housing (Mr. Grossman) has risen in the Legislature and he has said that one of the reasons he hasn't been able to provide for low-cost housing was because municipal councils, ratepayer groups and citizens have been blocking his way. We are awaiting imminently a statement from him as to the location of these developments that have been blocked. He was supposed to bring it in yesterday and today, and it hasn't been brought in. The minister has been accused by some mayors, Mayor Lastman of North York particularly, who says that the minister is creating ghettos.

There was a lead editorial in the Star last night which stated that municipal politicians would be more receptive to low-cost, low-assessment housing generally if a fundamental reform of low taxation was brought in; that real estate taxes should be levied only for actual services to properties, such as sewage, local roads, sidewalks and garbage collection; and that services to the community generally, such as police, welfare and education, should be financed provincially on a more equitable basis related to ability to pay.

I think that was written out of naïveté. I believe that tax reform should take place—and representatives of the municipalities have been clamouring for this for years—because the real estate tax is neither fair nor equitable. Municipalities today are providing services which not only have to do with the administration of real estate but have to do with social services, which should be a provincial responsibility and sometimes can be a federal responsibility. But I think they are being naïve, because I don't think there is any question that there is an evil spirit in the community. I have dealt with some of these ratepayers' groups, and there is no question in my mind that some nice middle-class people practise discrimination and bigotry and even hatred with respect to people who are poor.

One of the things that the preceding speaker didn't mention was the Ontario Human Rights Code, which makes it illegal to discriminate against people on the basis of race, creed, colour, nationality, ancestry or place of origin. Yet every day in the week, nice people are discriminating against people who want to live in low-cost housing.

Mr. Foulds: They're not nice people.

Mr. Givens: That isn't the reason they give, though; it is always, "Who is going to pay the taxes?" "We are going to overcrowd the schools." "We haven't enough recreation facilities." "It's going to generate too much traffic" and things of that nature. Yet the minister gets up in this chamber and says, "Why doesn't the NDP go to these meetings and straighten out the ratepayers' groups?" Or: "Why don't the Liberals go over and try to straighten out these ratepayers groups?" Well, I think that the responsibility is his.

I was about to recommend that perhaps the Ontario Human Rights Code should be amended by adding a provision which would not permit people to discriminate against people and practise bigotry against people because of their economic condition. Then I thought that there would be middle-class cronies of mine who wouldn't like this idea, because it would mean that they would be accused of practising bigotry, which is reprehensible and heinous and which everybody regards today as something which is unfair and un-Canadian.

I feel that there is an overwhelming demand today for low-cost housing. From a straight economic standpoint, if we don't provide people with housing they require, then we'll have to provide it in some other way: We will have to build bigger jails; vandalism will go up; the number of broken homes will increase, as will the number of homes where there are drinking problems. These are social conditions which arise out of the fact that people haven't got proper housing.

If there is this overriding and overwhelming public requirement for low-cost housing, then this government should have the guts to go ahead and amend the Housing Development Act to permit the establishment of a board of inquiry that will conduct hearings where ratepayers' groups and members of councils will be able to come down and present their views. And if in the opinion of the board, all criteria with respect to proper housing are met—as far as park space, services, sewers and water, schooling and so on are concerned—if all these qualifications are met, then the provincial government should take the bull by the horns and override the local councils and the ratepayers' groups and proceed with these housing developments.

If there is to be local autonomy, which I advocate, there cannot be local option with respect to prejudice and bigotry and discrimination on the basis of a person's economic condition. Consequently I challenge the government that instead of it throwing the challenge at us, this House should straighten out people in the Province of Ontario who practise this kind of discrimination and bigotry. This government has the power to do so and has done so in the past when it was more progressive than it was Conservative. I say that this evil spirit which persists in the community today—and I believe that it persists and I am sure the minister agrees that it exists—should be rooted out root and branch, the only way we are going to do it is legislatively.

Mr. Drea: Wait till this Hansard gets out.

Mr. Givens: One can say one can't legislate brotherhood and one can't legislate against discrimination and so on. I think 117 decent people, men and women, who sit in this chamber have a right to say to the people of the Province of Ontario, "What you are doing is anti-social and it is wrong." We should take the leadership in this.

This is part of the educational process. If the 117 decent men and women who sit in this chamber aren't prepared to say to the people of Ontario, "There is this overwhelming demand and requirement for public housing; there are 10,000 to 15,000 people on the list who require this kind of attention. If you don't pay for it one way you are going to pay for it double in another way"—unless members are prepared to do this they have no right to be sitting in the seats they sit in.

I challenge the members to take up the cudgels on behalf of the people who are discriminated against, because they are suffering from poverty in this great Province of Ontario that the government has talked about so fluently.

Mr. Drea: Does the member for Downsview approve of that?

Mr. Singer: I can't hear the member opposite.

Mr. Drea: Does he agree with that?

Mr. Singer: If the member has a message for me, let him send it to me.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Forget about it.

Mr. Young moves the adjournment of the debate.

Motion agreed to.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Before the adjournment of the House, I wonder if the House Leader could make a more effective attempt to indicate tomorrow what the business will be for next week so that we can prepare for what we might expect? I think if we could, as we start the session, try to have some idea of what the business is going to be—I suppose we will be critical and the minister will be defensive—but if we could start out that way, we'll try to co-operate in every way we can. What are we going to do tomorrow?

Mr. Singer: Something on the order paper.

Hon. E. A. Winkler (Chairman, Management Board of Cabinet): Mr. Speaker, I think it has been agreed that tomorrow we will be on item No. 1 and that the Premier will be speaking at the opening of the House I think that was agreed upon. Subsequently, on Friday, we will remain on the same debate. Because of the time element from now until budget day the rules governing debate, I will be more than receptive to having as many speakers participate in the debate as desire to. I agree very much with the Leader of the Opposition, and I'll endeavour to have a legislative programme announced. Certainly not later than Friday in each week, I'll tell him that. I also believe that we will be sitting probably two evenings next week; probably Tuesday and Thursday.

Mr. Deans: On one matter of importance, Mr. Speaker: I wonder if the House leader could tell us whether it might be possible to have some cabinet ministers for tomorrow's debate?

Hon. Mr. Winkler: I would think that that would be assured.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: It will be just like payday.

Hon. Winkler moves the adjournment of the House.

Motion agreed to.

The House adjourned at 6 o'clock, p.m.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF ONTARIO

THURSDAY, MARCH 29, 1973

The House met at 2 o'clock, p.m.

Prayers.

Mr. Speaker: Our visitors today in the east gallery are students from the Adult Day School of the YMCA in Toronto, and in the west gallery, students from Allan A. Martin Sr. Public School of Mississauga.

Statements by the ministry.

PROVINCIAL AUDITOR'S REPORT

Hon. J. White (Treasurer and Minister of Intergovernmental Affairs): Mr. Speaker, one day last week I made certain comments concerning OHSC premium collections, which included the phrase "grossly deficient" and which were dependent really on newspaper articles which were misleading, if not inaccurate. Now, in providing an explanation of these circumstances to the House, I think I owe Mr. Stan Martin, the Deputy Minister of Health, who was then the chairman of OHSC, and the officials connected with this administrative change, an apology. I offer that apology now and provide the following explanation to the members of the Legislature.

I undertook earlier this week to examine the Provincial Auditor's comments on the premium payment procedures which were adopted when the two provincial health care programmes were integrated on April 1, 1972. Although this question will be examined in detail by the public accounts committee, there has been some preliminary concern and misunderstanding—including my own—which I want to deal with.

As members know, the two parent plans—one covering hospital accommodation and the other medical care and treatment—presented the commission and the government with a serious administrative problem of integrating two different coverage periods and premium systems. Hospital insurance covered either individuals or families—a two-level system—with the premium collected three months in advance, while the medical plan covered individuals or couples or families who paid one month in advance—a three-level premium system. A decision was made to adopt the Ontario Hospital Insurance number and billing system. This decision was set out in a pamphlet which was distributed by mail to every resident in Ontario, a copy of which I have here with me, if anyone would like to look at it.

Integration of the two plans began with the payment of the first combined premiums in January, 1972. For the rest of that year and ever since, subscribers have paid monthly combined premiums. The effect of this was to give all subscribers of the plan three months' medical coverage for one month's premium. However, it did not affect cash flow as subscribers paid the combined premiums for all 12 months of the year.

The alternative to this would have been to require subscribers of the medical plan to have paid additional premiums in February and March, even though they commenced the combined premium payment in January. In essence, then, medical plan subscribers would have made 14 premium payments during the calendar year 1972. There was no loss or misappropriation involved.

The auditor has questioned only the right of the commission to make these changes without a specific authority from the Lieutenant Governor in Council, but the commission produced for him and for us the legal opinion supporting this action. The public accounts committee may want to look into this opinion, but I want to assure the House that the commission acted on considered advice in dealing with this administrative problem.

I must say, having proffered this apology to those concerned, I hope the media will give it the same coverage as they gave to my uninformed remarks. I invite the leader of the NDP to join me in the apology.

Mr. S. Lewis (Scarborough West): Not yet, my friend, not yet.

Hon. Mr. White: No.

Mr. R. F. Nixon (Leader of the Opposition): On a point of order, Mr. Speaker, you have not called ministerial statements as yet, have you?

Mr. Speaker: Yes.

CONSTRUCTION OF TRANSAMERICA BUILDING

Mr. R. F. Nixon: You have. Well, on a point of order, anyway, with your permission, sir, this morning on CFRB, Jack Dennett, a newscaster who is also a member of the board of the Ontario Educational Communications Authority, was critical of a statement I was reported to have made. He said that I had indicated that that building, put up by the Transamerica Corp., was built by the proposal method for the communications authority. I have made no such statement. I said that the proposal method was associated with the building of the new headquarters for Ontario Hydro.

I was well aware that the Transamerica building had been built, and that the communications authority then rented the facility, because there is every indication, which we should verify through questions, that the building had to be modified considerably with the expenditure of a large sum of money in order to make it useful for educational television facilities, since it was built right on the subway track.

I want to make it clear, sir, that I did not say the Transamerica building had been built on a proposal basis.

Mr. Speaker: I believe this cannot constitute a point of order, but I do accept the words of the hon. Leader of the Opposition as a point of privilege at this time, in which he claims to have been erroneously reported in the press. I believe it to be a proper point of privilege.

WASAGA BEACH PARK COMMUNITY

Hon. Mr. White: Mr. Speaker, I have written to the reeves of Wasaga Beach, Flos, Nottawasaga and Sunnidale to invite their councils to consider with my ministry the prospects for consolidation of parts of their municipalities.

For several years our government has been working with these municipalities in preparing plans for a multi-purpose recreational park, embracing Wasaga Beach and part of the three townships. The plans, which have been generally accepted by the councils, will form the basis of substantial provincial investments in roads, water, sewer and other services in the park development. However, the ultimate success of the park concept will depend in large measure on the active support and participation of local government with adequate resources and jurisdiction over the entire area.

In the coming weeks, my parliamentary assistant, the member for York East (Mr. Meen), will begin meeting municipal representatives to see how they feel our objective can best be accomplished.

DIAL-A-BUS SYSTEM FOR TORONTO

Hon. G. R. Carton (Minister of Transportation and Communications): Mr. Speaker, I would like to make an announcement with regard to a proposed expansion of my ministry's activities in our efforts to improve public transit in the suburban areas of Metropolitan Toronto.

I think the announcement is particularly pertinent at this time because of the official opening tomorrow of the Yonge St. subway extension to York Mills, an event that will undoubtedly be of great benefit to transit users in northern areas of Metro.

At this moment officials of my ministry are meeting with the Toronto Transit Commission and are presenting a proposal under which the government would underwrite the cost of a new dial-a-bus demonstration in Metropolitan Toronto. The project, which would be financed by the province for a period of three years, was referred to originally in the new urban transportation policy announced last November by the Premier (Mr. Davis).

This proposal is a continuation of the province's development work in the dial-a-bus field which started with the experiment in Bay Ridges in 1970. The results of the initial experiment were used in the planning and design of the services in Stratford and Kingston and the proposed services in Ottawa and Bramalea. This proposal for Metropolitan Toronto is the next major step forward.

The demonstration plan has been developed by transit specialists representing Metro Toronto, the TTC and my ministry. It is now being considered by the TTC which has been asked to operate the service as agent for the province.

The project would complement existing fixed-route services by providing access to subway and regular bus routes for people living in suburban areas where nearby transit is not convenient. In off-peak periods the system would be tested as a local transit service centred on some local traffic attraction such as a shopping complex.

The demonstration would also provide the opportunity to study the possibilities of dial-a-bus as a transit service for special groups in the community, such as the physically handicapped.

The selection of the seven areas to be involved in the demonstration was based on the fact that some areas across the top of Metro do not have convenient access to public transit and they also allow for the testing of a variety of service concepts.

Four areas have been selected in which dial-a-bus will operate as a feeder service to the subway terminus at York Mills and to other fixed-route systems. These areas are south Downsview, Armour Heights, York Mills and the south portion of east Willowdale.

Off-peak local service will also be provided to these four areas and to the three additional areas of north Downsview, central Willowdale, and the north portion of east Willowdale.

All seven are low-density residential areas and each presents different transit characteristics and service problems. During the demonstration period, different service techniques will be studied to establish the most suitable design of future systems in urban areas across the province.

The immediate proposal for Metro calls for a fleet of 25 to 30 radio-equipped, medium-capacity buses. During the demonstration it is hoped to test vehicles of several different designs, including electric-powered, pollution-free buses.

The extension of dial-a-bus operations in the Toronto area and elsewhere in Ontario is expected to have a considerable impact on the province's automotive industry and to encourage research and development in the search for pollution-free, quiet and more comfortable buses.

The new dial-a-bus demonstration would create about 70 job opportunities for new TTC bus crews and dispatchers, who will undergo extensive training to familiarize themselves with the new transit mode.

It is anticipated that this proposal will meet with a favourable reaction from the TTC. The starting date for the new service could be early next November. This is the earliest date by which new buses could be procured, crews trained and necessary planning completed.

Mr. Speaker: Oral questions.

STRIKE OF FRENCH-SPEAKING STUDENTS

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the Premier (Mr. Davis) and the Provincial Secretary for Resources Development (Mr. Lawrence) and the Minister of Education (Mr. Wells), I would like to ask a question of the Minister of Labour.

In view of the failure of the Minister of Labour to solve the problem of the establishment of a French-language secondary school in Cornwall, and the students' refusal to accept the establishment of a linguistic commission within the next three months as a means toward decision, what immediate steps will the government now take to solve the problem?

Secondly, will a special commissioner be appointed to intervene in the crisis situation created by the government's failure to act on the commissioner's report, now in its hands for over a year?

Hon. F. Guindon (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, in reply to the hon. Leader of the Opposition, perhaps I should tell the House that last evening I did go to Cornwall. I felt it was my responsibility as a local member to take part at the meeting. I must say, first of all, that of course I did not take sides in the dispute; I was there only as a mediator by nature—and by office, as well.

Mr. A. J. Roy (Ottawa East): The minister should have taken sides.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Isn't he in favour of French-language education?

Hon. Mr. Guindon: I can tell my hon. friend from Ottawa East, and this goes for my hon. friend from Ottawa Centre (Mr. Cassidy), that his contribution so far has not been very helpful either.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. J. E. Bullbrook (Sarnia): He's an instigator!

Mr. D. C. MacDonald (York South): Isn't the minister in favour of government policy?

Hon. Mr. Guindon: As a matter of fact, if my hon. friend will read the local papers he'll find that even the NDP organization in Stormont is backing the present member.

Mr. MacDonald: Well, the minister keeps going—

Hon. E. A. Winkler (Chairman, Management Board of Cabinet): They're smartening up.

Mr. MacDonald: The minister shouldn't be in a neutral position.

Hon. Mr. Guindon: Mr. Speaker, I presented the government's position at this point in time—

Mr. MacDonald: We'll have to look into our association.

Hon. Mr. Guindon: I stated that the government had decided to introduce legislation within six to eight weeks to appoint a commission of language instruction. This was rejected by the student body. I was back here early this morning to report, and I propose to meet with some of my colleagues later on today to assess the situation.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Supplementary: Is one of the outcomes of this reassessment liable to be a decision to fulfil the recommendation of the language commissioner's report a year ago, that a French-language secondary school be built without delay in Cornwall?

Hon. Mr. Guindon: Mr. Speaker, it would be pretty difficult to tell my hon. friend what the discussions are going to be about at this time.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: That is one of the alternatives available.

Mr. Lewis: By way of supplementary, Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Ottawa East was on his feet.

Mr. A. J. Roy: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In view of the Premier's statement last week that a commitment for Cornwall would be premature at this time, and in view of the fact that the city is 53 per cent French, and since 2,000 people have been asking for this school since 1969, would the minister, as the member for that area, not agree that they are entitled to a French school for the fall of 1973?

Hon. Mr. Guindon: Mr. Speaker, in reply to the hon. member, I wish to tell him that I am very close to the people of Stormont. And I will repeat once again that I received 60 per cent of the popular vote.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: What's that got to with it?

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Guindon: The matter is, unfortunately—

Mr. V. M. Singer (Downsview): Have a by-election and try it out!

Mr. Speaker: Order, order.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. A. Grossman (Minister of Revenue): It's rough over there, isn't it?

Mr. M. Shulman (High Park): Allan Lawrence had more than 60 per cent!

Hon. Mr. Guindon: Now, Mr. Speaker, a public quarrel never settles these disputes. I know this.

Mr. Roy: Settle it here!

Hon. Mr. Guindon: I'm working very seriously on it—don't worry.

Interjection by an hon. member.

Hon. Mr. Guindon: What's happening really is that there are more than two groups involved. Even the French Canadians are divided on this matter; that doesn't make it that much easier. But by putting all our heads together, I think eventually we will be able to find a solution to the problem. And I can assure my hon. friends that I'm working as hard as I can—it's all I needed after the strike of last week! Thank you.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Singer: They are so sensitive over there!

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Scarborough West has a supplementary.

Mr. Lewis: I have two supplementaries, as it were. First, may I say to the minister that surely the views reflecting this party's position, as voiced by the hon. member for Ottawa Centre, that the demands of the community and the principles of the report received by this government require this school, is as honourable a position as the neutrality of the member who represents them.

Second, under the present circumstances, would the minister consider appointing Mr. Tom Symons—and I mean this in utmost seriousness—as a commissioner to provide a mediation attempt in view of the extremely able service he performed prior to this in Ontario?

Hon. J. Yaremko (Solicitor General): And he gets an apology from the member for Ottawa Centre!

Hon. Mr. Guindon: Mr. Speaker, in reply to the first question, I would like to record in this House that I've never said that a school for French-language students was not needed. I have never said that.

Mr. Roy: Well, say it again!

An hon. member: Oh, shut up!

An hon. member: Keep quiet long enough for the minister to answer!

Hon. Mr. Guindon: As a matter of fact, they have a French-language school now; only it's working on a shift system—

Hon. W. A. Stewart (Minister of Agriculture and Food): If the members of the opposition would keep quiet long enough—

Hon. Mr. Guindon: —which I must admit, after three years is unacceptable to both parents and students. That's where the problem is. But the board has recognized a French-language school for a long time. It's a matter of facilities. As to the appointment of a mediator, this is one of the questions that perhaps might come up in our discussion today. We have a number of options that I would like to look at.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Ottawa East.

Mr. Roy: In view of the minister's answer to my question, and his vacillation on this point—

Mr. W. Newman (Ontario South): He didn't vacillate.

Mr. Roy: —how can he reconcile this with his statement in the student publication where he is quoted as saying that it would be a crime for Cornwall not to have its own French school? Why can't the minister make a commitment as a matter of policy now and say they are entitled to a French-language school in Cornwall, not on a shift basis, by the fall of 1973?

Hon. Mr. Guindon: There is nothing wrong with my statement, Mr. Speaker, nothing wrong with my statement, I said it then and I say it again today. We are talking—

Mr. Lewis: Because the minister can't get cabinet support. There are still too many people in that cabinet who engage in innuendo, like the minister in charge of housing.

Mr. Speaker: Order, order!

Hon. Mr. Guindon: We are talking about facilities. Now, Mr. Speaker, I would like to place on the record of this House that if there is one member in this Legislature who has worked for the Francophone minority in the last 15 years, it is the member for Stormont.

Mr. Lewis: We agree. But he hasn't succeeded because he doesn't have the support of the cabinet.

Mr. J. F. Foulds (Port Arthur): Why doesn't he get the support of the cabinet?

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Mr. Lewis: The minister doesn't have the support of his cabinet, you know their social consciousness.

Mr. Speaker: Order! Order!

Mr. Lewis: He knows his colleagues on this issue. He throws up his hands in a Gallic gesture.

Mr. Speaker: Would the hon. members please come to order, a member wishes to raise a point of order.

Mr. Roy: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order, I would like to advise you that I am not satisfied with the minister's response and I intend to raise it at the adjournment of the House.

Mr. Lewis: That he is not satisfied with the answer?

Mr. F. Drea (Scarborough Centre): Why doesn't the member run federally again?

Mr. Roy: That bothers that member, doesn't it? That really does.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: What did the people of Ottawa do for the hon. member for Ottawa East at the last federal Liberal nomination meeting?

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Mr. Lewis: I may say if the degree of exercise on the part of the cabinet is a measure of support for the member for Stormont—

Mr. Speaker: Is this a point of order or a supplementary question?

Mr. Lewis: Well, I also want to express on behalf of this party a lack of satisfaction in the answer of the minister, and we'll use the period available to raise it if possible.

Mr. Speaker: Order, order. Does the hon. Leader of the Opposition have further questions?

POPULATION OF MUNICIPALITIES

Mr. R. F. Nixon: In the absence of the Premier, a question of the Treasurer, Mr. Speaker, and since his position was designated as the chief planner for Ontario by his immediate predecessor, will he comment on a statement apparently made by the Premier in interview with a reporter writing in Time magazine this week? I quote the Premier's word: "We will be saying to certain municipalities, 'Your ultimate population densities will be X number.' This means that development just won't occur on a certain amount of acreage." Is it the chief planner's programme to specifically limit the growth of municipalities by, let us say, designating X number as the ultimate population of any municipality in the province?

Hon. Mr. White: Mr. Speaker, I think in fairness to the Premier and the reporter, Bob Lewis, that the question about the quotation should be directed to the Premier. Certainly planning does involve imposing certain maximum population densities, whether that be X evolving to Y evolving to Z or something else. Nothing is forever. But I think it's essentially correct to express the idea in the terms used by the Leader of the Opposition, yes.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: A supplementary: If the Treasurer is saying that when the Premier said "we are going to say your population will be X," and the chief planner says, "It will be X evolving to Y evolving to Z," how are we going to know what the government policy is, if the chief planner does not say, essentially, the same thing as the Premier, the boss?

Mr. Lewis: Where do we stand on A,B,C?

Hon. Mr. White: I think that one might determine that by questioning the Premier on exactly what he did say.

I simply do not want to leave the idea in the minds of the members that a number determined today is going to last until the year 2000. Zoning and planning and land control is far too complicated for that rather simple answer; and so while it is perfectly true we do establish population densities as part of zoning and development, it must be said that implicit in any zoning is the flexibility to let these plans evolve over the times; the needs and the wishes of the community alter through time.

It might be too complicated for the member's simple mind.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, I wonder if the Treasurer would repeat what he said. Did he in fact say: "Is that too much for the member's simple mind, maybe"? Is that the sort of thing he is prepared to contribute to this debate?

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Mr. Singer: When all else fails be a bit stupid!

Mr. Speaker: Those were the words I heard. I would ask the hon. minister to withdraw the statement.

Hon. Mr. White: In point of fact, the hon. member's mind is not often simple; and if he feels that it is not simple today I will certainly accede to the request with pleasure.

Mr. Speaker: Does the hon. Leader of the Opposition accept the withdrawal?

Mr. Bullbrook: The minister is burying himself even more.

Mr. MacDonald: That is the second apology today. That isn't a bad batting average.

Mr. Singer: The minister is not very smart, is he?

Mr. R. F. Nixon: That is one of the Treasurer's more gracious moments.

Mr. Lewis: It was the Treasurer's only gracious moment.

Mr. Speaker: Order! The hon. member for Scarborough West.

PROVINCIAL AUDITOR'S REPORT

Mr. Lewis: Yes; talking about simple and complicated minds, Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the provincial Treasurer, before I tender an apology: Since he knows that the Provincial Auditor's disagreement on the matter of authority was ancillary to his basic statement, which was that premier receipts for the year would have been increased by approximately $50 million if they hadn't provided 14 months of coverage on 12 months of premium, and also that there would have been an additional $5 million if there hadn't been the under-billing, the Treasurer saying that the Auditor made a $55 million error in his report; or that in fact the Auditor is right, and that additional money will never be billed?

Hon. Mr. White: I think the Auditor is not incorrect in that if we had—just a minute now, just a minute!

Mr. Lewis: My simple mind doesn't accept double negatives. I can't absorb that. I want to understand what that means in English.

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Hon. Mr. White: It is correct, but it ain't right! That's what it means.

Mr. Lewis: Now reconcile that for me.

Hon. Mr. White: And here is why it is correct and ain't right; because while it is technically correct if there had been no alteration on the premium schedule there would have been 14 premiums required of these people and additional amounts of money collected, at the same time it would be equally correct to say if we had billed six months in advance, or 12 months in advance, we would have had hundreds of millions of dollars additional.

Now the fact of the matter is we received 12 premium cheques from the people being covered, and only the time of advance coverage was altered. Therefore, the only way in which an advantage could accrue to the premium-payer would be to move out of the jurisdiction. There would be a similar alteration for the entire society in the event that the plan wound up, which I see as being highly unlikely, to put it mildly.

An hon. member: Shame, awful!

Mr. Lewis: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker: That's really specious claptrap and the minister knows it. He knows it.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. White: And the member is attempting to mislead the people.

Mr. Lewis: Take off your shoe and pound it on the desk.

An hon. member: Sit down, Napoleon!

Mr. Singer: Why doesn't the minister get another job?

Mr. Lewis: The minister is trying to bail his colleague out of trouble. Nonsense!

Mr. Singer: Bring back Charlie!

Mr. Lewis: Is the Provincial Auditor right when he says, to take another approach, it can be said that essentially—and I am going to interpolate essentially on the basis of the plan as it was then run, not on the basis of the minister's preposterous hypothesis—essentially, the OSIP premiums and the hospital services insurance portion of the OHIP premiums collected during the 12-month period from April, 1971, to March, 1972, provided health services insurance benefits for the 14-month period from May, 1971, through June, 1972. Surely that is correct and therefore he is correct.

Hon. Mr. White: Yes, that is correct and it is exactly what I said—

An hon. member: Oh!

Hon. Mr. White:—that the cash flow was exactly the same as it would have been in the absence of this merger.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Lewis: No.

Hon. Mr. White: That the amount of money collected monthly from individual premium payers and premium payers collectively was unaltered, that the period of coverage was changed and so there was a technical gift—a technical, not a practical gift—of two months premium coverage.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Lewis: It is a real gift—$50 million. It won't influence—

Mr. Speaker: Order. This exchange is purely argumentative and is not proper under the question period.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: No further supplementaries. The exchange is argumentative and we will not pursue the topic further.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Not my exchange, surely?

Mr. Singer: There is no more simple, reasonable person—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. J. E. Stokes (Thunder Bay): Bailing them out again.

Mr. Lewis: This is a reasonable man, if I may say so. You want to afford him an opportunity now and again.

Mr. Singer: The member for Chatham-Kent (Mr. McKeough) was pro-American but he knew what he was talking about.

An hon. member: When was that?

Interjections by hon. members.

An hon. member: The minister is simple-minded.

Mr. Speaker: Order.

Mr. Lewis: I'd like to address a question, Mr. Speaker, to one in the cabinet who is clearly not a simpleton, and that is the Minister of Revenue.

Interjections by hon. members.

PURCHASE OF HOME LOTS

Mr. Lewis: May I ask of the Minister of Revenue how citizens of the Province of Ontario find their way to the actual purchase of a HOME lot; how the builders choose among those who approach them for purchase of lots?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Mr. Speaker, the builders will advertise. They have lots which are under our lot-lease programme and on which they are prepared to put up buildings for people who apply for them. What other way could there be?

Mr. Lewis: By way of supplementary: The government has therefore no way of control over those who may need a lot most. In fact, a builder can enter into all kinds of private arrangements on the recommendation of members of this House or with those who reach him first, or in any other way.

Mr. I. Deans (Wentworth): Or any friends.

Mr. Lewis: Or any friends. But in fact those who are most in need are by no means served. The minister hands it over to the builders to make the decision.

Mr. Deans: Right.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: I think, Mr. Speaker, that the builders are asked to take the applications in the order in which they receive them.

Mr. Deans: How can the minister tell?

Mr. Lewis: Does the minister know it to be true?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: I know the question wasn't meant to be argumentative and I don't want to give an argumentative answer. I am trying to keep calm.

I was about to say that there is, of course, very limited control in that result. There is the matter of the amount of income these people have. There is a limit on the income, I believe, of those who purchase them. If there is an income limitation, it really doesn't make a good deal of difference insofar as providing housing stock for those who need it is concerned.

In addition to this, for the last two, three or four months we have had a new policy in which OHC, in fact, buys some of the buildings for its own purposes—I believe it is up to 10 per cent of the number of lots—so that we can put into those houses, under our rent supplement programme, people who have made application or are very badly in need of—

Mr. Lewis: But the minister really has no control over the ways in which the builders distribute those lots to friends or those who reach them, or those who have inside information. And the minister knows, doesn't he, that it is abused?

Mr. Stokes: Ask the member for Scarborough Centre.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: I don't know that it is abused. First let me say that I admit there are limitations to the control we have in respect of the matter which the hon. member has raised. There are limitations. We could, of course, enlarge our bureaucracy more and have people fill out more forms and have lists and all that.

However, I admit that there are some limitations in this respect. I have no evidence—certainly none has come to my attention—of any abuse in this respect. If the hon. member has any evidence of that I will be glad to investigate.

Mr. J. A. Renwick (Riverdale): No, the minister doesn't have to enlarge his bureaucracy. He has sufficient bureaucracy.

Mr. MacDonald: Supplementary question, Mr. Speaker, of the minister: In view of the fact that some Conservative members from the Scarborough area are boasting that they have clients or friends of theirs on the lists now—

Mr. F. Drea: (Scarborough Centre): The member had better name a name right now.

Mr. MacDonald: Okay. I'll name the member for Scarborough Centre.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. MacDonald: May I ask a question of the minister?

Mr. Speaker: Order.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order. The member for York South has the floor.

Mr. MacDonald: Have I got the floor?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The hon. member for Scarborough Centre may rise, on a point of privilege, I believe.

Mr. Drea: Yes, I do, Mr. Speaker.

An hon. member: Oh!

Mr. Drea: I have never got anybody on a list of any kind at any time at any place.

An hon. member: Speak up.

Mr. Drea: The member for York South just said that I did.

An hon. member: Is the member for Scarborough Centre that ineffectual?

Mr. Drea: I'm asking him to apologize to me right now.

Mr. MacDonald: May I now ask my question, Mr. Speaker?

Mr. Drea: I want an apology.

Mr. MacDonald: When I apologize to the member for Scarborough Centre, there will be a blue moon in the sky.

Mr. Drea: Well, let it be recorded then.

Mr. MacDonald: There are certain depths beyond which I don't sink.

Mr. Speaker: my question of the minister is this: In view of the boast of certain constituents of the hon. member for Scarborough Centre that they have been gotten on to a list through the builder, will the minister alter his procedures, namely, that applications should be made through the OHC, conceivably as of a given date, so that they are handled honestly and above board, rather than surreptitiously given preference behind the scenes?

Mr. Renwick: And that the criteria are public.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Mr. Speaker, first let me be very positive in this matter about people getting special consideration. In respect of the allegation that some Conservative members are bragging about getting people into these houses, I tell the hon. members on my honour as a member of this Legislature, as a member of the cabinet, that I cannot recall anyone attempting to use any influence in this manner at all.

Mr. P. G. Givens (York-Forest Hill): What's the next joke?

Mr. MacDonald: Will the minister answer my question?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Is my friend over there suggesting that I'm telling a lie to this House?

Mr. Lewis: The minister offers proposals.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: It is not a joke at all. I will tell the hon. member this, that there have been—I can't remember too many of them—members from all sides of this House making inquiry at my office and—

Mr. Lewis: Right.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: —I have told them that there is a list of builders and they are to get in touch with the builders involved.

Mr. MacDonald: Will the minister answer my question?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: That was the end of it.

Mr. MacDonald: Will the minister answer my question?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: I will give him the answer. That is the first part.

Mr. MacDonald: Will the minister handle it through the OHC, above board?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: If the hon. member will give me a chance I will answer his question. I can't answer it while he is talking.

Mr. MacDonald: I am giving him a chance.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Insofar as the second part of the question is concerned, I remember having quite a discussion on the matter of the method by which these homes are marketed. I think it arose from one of the first situations I was faced with when I became responsible for housing. I think it was the one in Hamilton—

Mr. Deans: Right.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: —where there was a lineup in very bad weather, and so on. We made some changes there. But the suggestion the hon. member made at that time was discarded after a great deal of discussion, because of its being impractical for some reason or other. I will consider the question the hon. member has raised today. I will come back to this Legislature with the reasons as to why it has not been accepted, if in fact it ever was considered.

Mr. Lewis: The minister is very uncertain about this, because he has no control.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Or perhaps if it appears to be a practical one I will make some changes in that respect.

Mr. MacDonald: That is fair enough for the time being.

Mr. Drea: Mr. Speaker, on a question of privilege.

Mr. Speaker: A question of privilege?

Mr. Lewis: Can it be done?

Mr. Speaker: Personal privilege.

Mr. Drea: Mr. Speaker, my question of privilege is simply this, I did not believe in this House that the kind of thing that went on a moment ago could really go on.

An hon. member: Oh, go on!

An hon. member: Shame!

Mr. Drea: Now I'm coming to something.

Mr. MacDonald: Pompous.

Mr. Drea: Mr. Speaker, I think it is a matter of record, and if you want to put me to the test I'm prepared to ask the minister a supplementary question, that at no time have I ever communicated with the minister, orally or in writing, on behalf of anybody.

Mr. J. R. Breithaupt (Kitchener): Ask him anyway.

Mr. MacDonald: I didn't say that—with the builders.

Mr. Drea: Sit down. Mr. Speaker, a member has stood here today and accused me of trying to influence something.

Mr. Renwick: Ask a supplementary question of the builders.

Mr. MacDonald: Did the member ask the builders to put his friends on the list?

Mr. Drea: Mr. Speaker, I am prepared to put it to the test of this Legislature, if the members so wish. But I point out on a question of privilege that the minister has already, by implication, corroborated my position. I have never, and I repeat never, before I was in this House or in this House, ever tried to interfere with anything. I haven't put anything before it. And I want it cleared, right here and now.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Drea: I am not going to have my character assassinated in this House.

Mr. Foulds: The member is doing a good suicidal job himself.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Drea: Stand up and say just that I did that. Just go ahead!

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Drea: Not one of them. Just stand up!

Mr. Speaker: Order please!

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, let him resign and put it to the people.

Mr. R. G. Eaton (Middlesex South): Let the leader of the NDP do the same thing at the same time.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Scarborough Centre has raised a point of privilege in which he denies the allegations, apparently made by the hon. member—

Mr. Drea: They were made.

Mr. MacDonald: They weren't made.

Mr. Foulds: The member was asked to name one, and he named one!

Mr. Speaker: It appeared there were some remarks made by the hon. member for York South which offended the hon. member for Scarborough Centre. Now I must point out—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: It seems to me there is actually no point of privilege. It's an argument, a point of position taken by two members. There is no point of privilege whatsoever. It took place in this House, and there are two different, opposing views as to what took place.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: There can therefore be no point of privilege that has been abused.

Mr. MacDonald: Mr. Speaker, I have a mild point of privilege, just so the record will be straight. I didn't accuse the hon. member of going to the minister, I accused him of going to the builders.

Mr. E. W. Martel (Sudbury East): There is a big difference.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Here we go again.

Mr. Lewis: Deny that.

Mr. Drea: Mr. Speaker, on a question of privilege, I have just been accused of being a crook.

Mr. Speaker: If that accusation had been made I would have asked the hon. member to withdraw it. He made no such accusation.

Mr. Drea: I just resent the implication, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. MacDonald: There was no implication.

Mr. Drea: That is exactly the words that were used; that I am a crook who attempts to fix things.

Mr. MacDonald: It is not exactly the words that were used.

An hon. member: Get on with something useful.

Mr. Drea: I would like it withdrawn. Either I am or I'm not. If he's got evidence that I'm a crook he'd better say it here.

Mr. MacDonald: What I said is on the record.

Mr. Speaker: Now I make it perfectly clear; there is no way in which I can ask the hon. member for York South to withdraw anything he said.

Mr. Lewis: Hear, hear! I agree, I agree.

Well, the Minister of Education (Mr. Wells) isn't here, the Minister without Portfolio (Mrs. Birch) isn't here, and he wouldn't name me; so what has the member lost?

Interjections by hon. members.

HOME PLAN LOT LEASING

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, I put a question to the Minister of Revenue: When did the minister revise the rules of the HOME plan so that it was not possible any longer for individuals in the Province of Ontario to lease a lot directly, but it is now possible for them to lease only through a builder?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Mr. Speaker, this was done, I think—and again I don't want to give this as a positive statement, I don't remember the date—it was some time, I think, in 1970 or 1971.

Mr. Lewis: Oh come now!

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Well, all right.

Mr. Lewis: The minister is going to be in trouble.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: If the hon. member has a date let him give it.

Mr. Lewis: Well, it has to be the end of 1972.

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Hon. Mr. Grossman: No, no; it was well before that.

Mr. Lewis: Late 1972.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: It was well before that.

In any case, the reason for that apparently was because OHC found in leasing the lots to individuals to provide their own building there was difficulty in getting the area built up. There was some difficulty as between builders.

Mr. Lewis: Sure!

Hon. Mr. Grossman: One builder would have his own ideas, one purchaser would have his own ideas of what he would want for a house. It would be—

Mr. Lewis: Yes, make them supply it through a builder.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Why doesn't the hon. member wait!

Mr. Lewis: Because the minister does everything for builders.

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Hon. Mr. Grossman: There was some difficulty as between the levels of the two houses. There were complaints about the water running from one lot into another after the houses were built.

Mr. Lewis: So the minister decided in favour of the builders, didn't he?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: As a matter of fact, most of the builders involved in these lot-lease programmes were all small builders. I should say, by and large, they were small builders. I'd better be careful, I don't know if there was a big one.

Most of them, I think, get anywhere from eight, 10 to 20 lots. So it was also a way of trying to keep the small builder in business.

I think, by and large, it has worked out very well. If the hon. member doesn't think it has worked out very well I refer him to a very good news article, starting on the front page of the Star, by one Mack Parliament, in which he points out how the HOME lot programme has worked so wonderfully in Malvern.

Mr. Lewis: Right, right; in Malvern! But let's talk about the other parts of the province.

Mr. Deans: I have a question.

Mr. Speaker: Order! There have been sufficient supplementary questions on this topic.

Mr. Deans: I have a question.

Mr. Speaker: There have been sufficient supplementaries. The hon. member for St. David (Mrs. Scrivener).

Mr. Deans: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker. There were no supplementary questions.

Mr. Speaker: In my opinion there were supplementaries.

Mr. Deans: It was a new question.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Scarborough West asked the hon. minister supplementary questions.

Mr. Deans: He did not.

Mr. Lewis: I understand your anxiety at the time, Mr. Speaker, but it was a new question. It had nothing to do with the previous line of questioning.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: It was an old question repeated.

Mr. Speaker: It was all about the housing—

Mr. Lewis: It had to do with the situation in the Sudbury basin right now.

Mr. Speaker: I did not detect it to be a new question. I thought it was all about housing to the same minister—

Mr. Lewis: Well, I—

Mr. Speaker: —therefore it was all on the same topic.

Mr. Lewis: —admit that the minister—

Mr. Speaker: It seems to me that we should accept the hon. member for St. David at the moment.

INCREASES IN PRICES OF HOUSES

Mrs. M. Scrivener (St. David): Mr. Speaker, I also have a question of the Minister of Revenue. In view of today's discussion—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mrs. Scrivener: —and inasmuch as I was in attendance at a housing task force public hearing in Ottawa yesterday and consequently was absent from the House, I would like to ask the minister to clarify a point.

Is the headline in the two-star edition of today's Star correct in that it states that a price hike of 10 per cent in the HOME programme was kept a secret? Also, it has been my impression that the price of housing under the HOME plan was always controlled, but the newspaper reports the minister as saying the province does not have the power to impose ceilings under the HOME programme.

I'd be grateful if he could clarify this for me, Mr. Speaker.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Mr. Speaker, to answer the last question first. The hon. member is quite right in that the province does have the power to impose ceilings, and she's quite right that the Star has stated in the article that the province does not have the power. In fact, it's supposed to be quoting me.

Mr. Stokes: The minister stated that?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: I stated yesterday that it does have the power. The Star was contacted today and the mistake was pointed out. It was apparently a typographical error.

Mr. Singer: The minister is apologizing.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: It wasn't important. Somebody just put "not" between two words.

Interjection by an hon. member.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: I did say we do have the power to control prices under the HOME plan. As far as the headline is concerned I was very concerned about it when it says that I admitted there was a secret price hike of 10 per cent in the HOME programme. There is no such thing, of course, as a secret hike.

As a matter of fact, there has always been a policy that, from time to time, it is necessary, to keep in line with increased costs, to increase the maximum amount for which a builder can sell a house under the HOME programme. Indeed, by and large, there hasn't been an increase, except in one or two instances in some particular areas, for five years.

The increase that I talked about yesterday runs somewhere between five and 10 per cent. I don't know how the headline writer could come to the conclusion that it was secret because I—

Interjection by an hon. member.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: —mentioned it here in the House yesterday. It was just approved by the government. We are just in the process of getting a statement ready which probably would have been given on Monday or Tuesday. No one has been allowed the increase yet because we haven't had any new houses advertised in this programme. The new offer has not been advertised yet, as far as I can recall.

The point is, how can anybody claim it's a secret when the minister gets up in this House and tells everybody an increase is going to be allowed, and it was just approved by the government this week? I think that answers the hon. member.

As far as the amount is concerned, again I repeat that by and large there have been very few increases allowed since 1968. Prices were increased by between five and 10 per cent which I think, having regard for a five-year gap, is doing very well. The fact that the HOME houses go so well is evidence we are doing a good job.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Kent.

ASSISTANCE FOR NURSING HOME OPERATORS

Mr. J. P. Spence (Kent): Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Minister of Health. Does the minister plan to assist the small nursing home operators who are having trouble complying with regulations of the extended care programme introduced by his department last year, or does he plan to enforce the rigid regulations, which will reduce the income of nursing home operators and force many of the small nursing home operators out of business on account of a reduced number of beds?

Hon. R. T. Potter (Minister of Health): Mr. Speaker, my staff have been instructed to co-operate as much as they can with the small nursing home operators. We must realize, of course, that there are standards of care that must be maintained. There is the odd small nursing home, and even the odd large one, where the standards are not up to what we think they should be; then we must insist that they be raised. But in the case of small nursing homes where they run into difficulties, we would be delighted if the hon. member would draw those to my attention because my staff are most anxious to co-operate with them as far as possible.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Thunder Bay.

COST OF TRADE MISSIONS

Mr. Stokes: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have a question of the Minister of Industry and Tourism. Regarding the 11 people who have been sent to Spain, the 12 people to Mexico, the eight people to New Orleans, as well as other junkets to Atlanta and Newark and another two junkets that are going to Italy in two stages, what proportion of the cost of these trips is underwritten from the public purse, and what does the minister hope to achieve as a result of this expenditure?

Hon. C. Bennett (Minister of Industry and Tourism): Mr. Speaker, with regard to the cost underwritten by the government, the flight passage is paid by the government; the individual's costs while he is in the country he is visiting—for hotel accommodation and other out-of-pocket expenses—are entirely his responsibility. I say again, the government's only responsibility is supplying his air ticket to the particular country we are visiting.

What do we expect to accomplish? Mr. Speaker, quite often when we are entertaining a trade mission to a particular country, we review the situation very closely as to the type of suppliers in that country and the type of products that might be produced in Ontario. Then we try to match this with a manufacturer in the Province of Ontario who would be interested in visiting the country, and try to negotiate a licensing arrangement or some type of manufacturing connection between the two firms. We do an assessment, and we believe that the records in our ministry prove that it has been very profitable for this province and for the manufacturing industry in this province.

Mr. Stokes: Well, a supplementary: What direct benefits have flown from the junket to Ireland and the tourist junkets to Mexico and Italy—

Hon. Mr. Bennett: Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Stokes: —which didn't involve any kind of products?

Mr. Lewis: Especially Ireland!

Mr. Singer: What about the skiing one?

Mr. Deans: Other than an increase in the price of—

Hon. Mr. Bennett: Mr. Speaker, may I say that these particular trade missions the member speaks of have only come to a conclusion in recent days, and at this time I do not have before me in the ministry a report on these affairs—

Mr. Lewis: What about the Ireland one?

Hon. Mr. Bennett: May I say, Mr. Speaker, that I have not had a chance to review the report on the Ireland mission, but it has been through my ministry, under the former minister (Mr. White). But I do say to the hon. member that we can get him some indications as to the areas where we were extremely successful. We are also prepared to supply him with the number of visits and calls made by our manufacturers and those that visited from Ontario with manufacturers and suppliers in the countries we visited.

Mr. Stokes: The minister makes that commitment?

Hon. Mr. Bennett: Yes, sir.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Sault Ste. Marie.

FLIGHT OPERATIONS OF TRANSAIR

Mr. J. R. Rhodes (Sault Ste. Marie): Thank you, Mr. Speaker, my question is of the Minister of Transportation and Communications. Realizing that this matter is not in his jurisdiction, would the minister use his good offices—

Interjections by hon. members.

An hon. member: He can probably handle it better.

Mr. Rhodes: Would the minister use his good offices to obtain the following information from the Canadian Transport Commission in regard to the flights between Toronto, Sault Ste. Marie, Thunder Bay, Dryden and Winnipeg, as operated by the airline known as Transair:

1. The on-time performance of the flights as per the scheduled timetable—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Rhodes: To continue:

2. The reason for scheduled flights to be cancelled or unduly late due to equipment being used for charter flights—

Interjections by hon. members.

An hon. member: Why not write him a letter?

Mr. Rhodes: Also:

3. The reason for converting a 115-seat Boeing 737 to 76-seats by installing freight pallets.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Rhodes: And:

4. The reason for using a 60-seat F-28 jet instead of a 737 on weekends.

5. Why it is necessary for the flights to be delayed while crews are taking required rest here in Toronto.

All of which affect the service to the communities mentioned.

Mr. Shulman: Great maiden speech!

Mr. Speaker: May I suggest that the question should properly be placed upon the order paper?

The hon. provincial Treasurer has the answer to questions previously asked.

Mr. Lewis: The last time I took a Transair flight from Toronto to the Soo, it landed in Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., by mistake.

Hon. Mr. White: Mr. Speaker, I have answers to—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Bullbrook: Order, order. The Treasurer is speaking.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. provincial Treasurer.

QUARTERLY REPORT ON OHIP FINANCIAL STATUS

Hon. Mr. White: I have answers to two questions asked earlier in the week, the first by the Leader of the Opposition with respect to the quarterly financial report, and more particularly the $14 million increase in OHIP premiums, the question being, "Why were OHIP premiums $14 million higher than expected?"

The answer is as follows: The 1972 budget estimated OHIP premiums at $498 million for the 1972-1973 fiscal year. Ontario's financial monitoring process indicates the final premium revenues for the 1972-1973 taxation year will be in the order of $512 million—$515 million. This $14 million change in increased yield is essentially a forecasting difference. The member will appreciate that at the time of the 1972 budget estimation of Ontario's OHIP premium yield, it was very different due to a number of factors:

1. The province made extensive changes in levels of premium costs effective Jan. 1, 1972, for pensioners, and April 1, 1972, for all our subscribers.

2. Premium assistance is based on taxable income and the federal government made a number of changes in exemptions and deductions which affected taxable income.

3. The separate premium collection operation of the OHSIP plan and the OHSC plan were merged into the comprehensive OHIP plan at this time.

TAX CREDIT FOR MACHINERY

Hon. Mr. White: Mr. Speaker, the leader of the NDP asked two questions relating to the tax credit on machinery, the first of which was, "What is the cost of the investment tax credit?"

The answer is that the total cost of the investment tax credit to Ontario from March, 1971, to March, 1973, is estimated to be $80 million to $90 million. The cost realized to the end of the fiscal year 1972-1973 is approximately $53,300,000; the remainder of the costs will fall in the fiscal year 1973-1974 due to the nature of payment streams under the Corporations Tax Act. This incentive was developed by Ontario to stimulate investment and create jobs. It is interesting to note that this type of incentive was later adopted by the federal government in the May, 1972, budget when the manufacturing processing incentives for Canada were introduced.

Clearly this type of incentive has been recognized as a way of promoting economic growth and placing Canada on a more competitive basis with the US.

Mr. Stokes: How many jobs?

Mr. Lewis: How many jobs?

Hon. A. B. R. Lawrence (Provincial Secretary for Resources Development): Just listen!

Hon. Mr. White: The second question was how well did the credit perform in creating jobs? The answer is that there are no exact figures available and the nature of the job creation process makes it difficult to estimate.

However, information from two sources indicates that this incentive was effective in this respect. First of all, responses from major corporation which were surveyed by the Ministry of Revenue indicate that the credit has been used to increase employment. Secondly, unemployment performance in Ontario has been much better than the rest of Canada over the two-year period—

Mr. Lewis: That had nothing to do with the incentive.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. White: —when Ontario was the only province which possessed such an incentive.

Mr. Lewis: The incentive was a gift to corporate profits.

Hon. Mr. White: In 1971, Canada's unemployment performance was 6.4 per cent and in 1972 6.3 per cent, in contrast to Ontario where we had 5.2 per cent unemployment in 1971 and 4.8 per cent unemployment in 1972—

Mr. Lewis: This has nothing to do with the question. The answer is out of order.

Hon. Mr. White: —and the labour force increased by 11 per cent a year during the two-year period.

Mr. Speaker: The oral question period has expired.

Mr. Bullbrook: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order, am I correct in assuming that the lengthy questions of privileges and points of order raised by the members are not deducted from the question period?

Mr. Speaker: Yes, you are quite correct in assuming that. They are included in the question period.

Petitions.

Presenting reports.

Hon. Mr. White: Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to present to the House the following reports: 1971-1972 Public Accounts of Ontario, Volume 2, Financial Statements of Crown Corporations, Boards and Commissions; and Volume 3, Details of Expenditures.

As you know, Mr. Speaker, my predecessor presented volume 1 of the 1971-1972 public accounts on Nov. 30 last year.

Mr. Speaker: Introduction of bills.

BANTING AND BEST MEDICAL RESEARCH ACT

Hon. Mr. Potter moves first reading of bill intituled, An Act to repeal the Banting and Best Medical Research Act, 1923.

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

Hon. Mr. Potter: Mr. Speaker, the Act repealed provides for payment of $10,000 annually from the consolidated revenue fund for the Banting and Best Research Foundation. The repeal removes the grant as a statutory item for inclusion in the estimates in the normal manner.

NURSES ACT

Hon. Mr. Potter moves first reading of bill intituled, An Act to amend the Nurses Act.

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

Hon. Mr. Potter: Mr. Speaker, the Nurses Act, 1973, amends the Act so that membership in the College of Nurses of Ontario is widened to include registered nursing assistants. The composition of the council is changed to provide for the appointment of persons who are not registered nurses and also for the appointment of registered nurses' assistants.

NURSING HOMES ACT

Hon. Mr. Potter moves first reading of bill intituled, An Act to amend the Nursing Homes Act.

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

Hon. Mr. Potter: Mr. Speaker, in this amendment there will be changes in the licensing of nursing homes. At the same time the purpose of section 2 is to re-enact section 14 to provide a clear prohibition against the charging of amounts in excess of the amounts prescribed for services or accommodation in a nursing home.

PRACTICE OF DENTAL PROSTHESIS ACT

Mr. R. F. Nixon moves first reading of bill intituled, An Act to provide for the Practice of Dental Prosthesis.

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, the bill authorizes the practice of denturists without the direct supervision of the dental profession. As well, it sets up the regulation of denturists.

LABOUR RELATIONS ACT

Mr. Paterson moves first reading of bill intituled, An Act to amend the Labour Relations Act.

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

Mr. D. A. Paterson (Essex South): Mr. Speaker, the intent of this bill is to prevent the ballots on a vote under subsection 4 of section 63 of the Act from going directly to union headquarters. The purpose of the amendment is to keep the decision-making process at the local union level.

HIGH LAKE LEVELS

Mr. Haggerty moves, under the legislative standing orders rule 30(a), that ordinary business of the House be set aside to discuss a matter of urgent public importance, mainly the crisis of the high lake levels that exist along the shoreline of Lake Huron, Lake St. Clair, Lake Erie and Lake Ontario.

Mr. Speaker: I might say that proper notice of the intention to introduce this motion has been given to me. That is, the standing order requires that notice be given two hours prior to the sitting of the House and I have received that notice. I believe the notice to be in order and if it's acceptable to the House we will proceed with the formalities under rule 30.

Mr. R. Haggerty (Welland South): With respect to the Premier's reply to the Throne debate this afternoon, I beg the consent of the House to deal with this motion following the Premier's address.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Agreed.

Mr. Speaker: Well, I had the motion from the hon. member for Welland South, which as I have said, in my opinion is acceptable. Now I understand that the consent of the House has been requested in order to proceed with the orders of the day and to revert to this motion at a specific time after the orders of the day have been entered upon. Is that correct?

Do I have that unanimous consent of the House to do so? Agreed.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: Mr. Speaker, just before the orders of the day, I think the House would join me in extending our congratulations and our compliments to Sally Barnes and Jonathan Manthorpe for being two of five people who have won Southam Fellowship Awards to the University of Toronto. We congratulate them and wish them well.

Mr. Speaker: Orders of the day. The hon. member for Yorkview.

Mr. F. Young (Yorkview): Mr. Speaker, I adjourned the debate at 6 o'clock last evening. I understand that the Premier (Mr. Davis) wishes to enter the Throne debate at this particular time. I am quite willing to relinquish my place to the Premier at this moment, providing I have your assurance that I will be next in order.

Mr. Speaker: I will recognize the hon. member if he catches my eye at the proper time.

Mr. S. Lewis (Scarborough West): Well, we are certainly prepared to accommodate the Premier.

Mr. I. Deans (Wentworth): It is too bad he is never prepared to accommodate us.

Mr. E. W. Martel (Sudbury East): Yes, by being in attendance once in a while.

Mr. Deans: We will even listen to the Premier.

Clerk of the House: The second order: Resuming the adjourned debate on the amendment to the motion for an address in reply to the speech of the Honourable the Lieutenant Governor at the opening of the session.

THRONE SPEECH DEBATE

Hon. W. G. Davis (Premier): Mr. Speaker, may I, at the outset extend my appreciation to the hon. member who wished to debate at this hour the very real problem in his riding and other areas bordering the Great Lakes. I do appreciate that accommodation and also that of the hon. member who was in the midst of his constructive presentation to the Throne debate.

I would not ordinarily, Mr. Speaker, suggest that this be done, but I was anxious to participate at this time because I know the members opposite were anxious to have some of my constructive views as to the opinions and questions that they presented to this House.

I do appreciate the opportunity to do it at this hour because I would assure the hon. member for Sarnia (Mr. Bullbrook) that I really am not following the example set by his national leader of wearing a rose to every sitting of this House, although I think it's a very excellent thing to do. I just would like to observe for the members of the House that this really is in honour of a birthday. Mr. Speaker, I must confess it is not my own, but later on today the Lieutenant-Governor and I are going to share the 100th anniversary of the town of Brampton. It is a rather long-standing commitment—one might say 100 years—and as a result it is somewhat necessary. I am sure the members opposite would understand this, that I join with the other citizens of that municipality to celebrate a very significant event.

I would of course be delighted to have any members, both on this side of the House and on the other side of the House, join us there this evening. They are entirely welcome—all of them. I certainly noticed the member from St. George (Mrs. Campbell) has already visited my riding. I appreciate that great interest and I will have some observations to make about her just a little later on in the course of my remarks.

I would also like to compliment you, Mr. Speaker, because I don't often get the opportunity on the way that you conduct the affairs of this House—with dignity and with complete impartiality—although there are occasions when we wonder whether perhaps there is a slight tendency to look to the left rather than to the right; but this is not always a bad thing.

I am accused on occasion by some of my more conservative Conservative friends of going a little bit further to the left than the right in the philosophical sense; which of course is not true. But nonetheless, I do understand, Mr. Speaker. I am glad this happens.

Mr. S. Lewis (Scarborough West): Usually for Throne speeches there are more people on the Speaker's left than there are on the Speaker's right.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Well Mr. Speaker, I would have been very charitable about just who was here and who wasn't here when His Honour the Lieutenant Governor delivered that very excellent address just a few days ago.

At the outset, Mr. Speaker, before getting into what I hope will be accepted as non-controversial remarks, two or three matters have been raised very recently. I would just like to show the member for York-Forest Hill (Mr. Givens) how rapidly we react to some of the more constructive suggestions he makes. I am not sure that they were that constructive in his Throne Speech contribution in some aspects yesterday, and I will get to that a little later, but certainly there are occasions when he does—I say this quite sincerely, Mr. Speaker—bring to our attention matters that are important. I would just like to read a telegram that has been sent to his national leader:

THE GOVERNMENT OF ONTARIO VIEWS WITH CONCERN THE POSSIBILITY OF US CUSTOMS AND IMMIGRATION PRE-CLEARANCE BEING TERMINATED AT MAJOR AIRPORTS IN CANADA. I URGE THE FEDERAL GOVERNMENT TO RECONSIDER SERIOUSLY THE UNLATERAL STEPS BEING TAKEN BY AIR CANADA. THE ARGUMENTS ATTRIBUTED TO AIR CANADA ARE WEAK AND NOT SUBSTANTIVE AND SUCH ACTIONS SEEM CERTAIN TO LEAD TO SIGNIFICANT INCONVENIENCE AND UNNECESSARY DELAYS TO TRAVELLERS TO THE UNITED STATES.

Just to illustrate how promptly we react to the member for York-Forest Hill—

Mr. P. G. Givens (York-Forest Hill): I'm dying to hear the answer.

Mr. Lewis: That's more than Pierre Trudeau ever did for him.

Hon. Mr. Davis: I was going to say—really, the leader of the New Democratic Party is quite right. We probably have accommodated the member for York Forest-Hill here on this side of the House far more than his national leader did during his tenure in Ottawa.

An hon. member: And don't forget it!

Mr. Givens: I wish to express my deep appreciation.

Hon. Mr. Davis: I appreciate that. I would also wish to advise the House, Mr. Speaker, on a matter that is of great importance as well. I am disappointed the member for Ottawa East (Mr. Roy) is not here, because I did try to assure him—and I meant it most sincerely—that some of the observations that were made related to a part of the Throne Speech in which he had a particular interest.

What I tried to convey to him, so that he wouldn't need to delay us beyond the normal adjournment hour, was in respect to the terms of reference of the royal commission. I wish to read to the House, Mr. Speaker, the order in council establishing the royal commission on this matter; and it follows very simply:

That his honour, Judge Harry Waisberg of the county court of the judicial district of York, has been appointed a royal commissioner with the following terms of reference—

And I see the hon. member is back. I shall read it slowly so that he can understand it and listen to it.

To investigate and inquire into the activities, practices and conduct in the operations, relationships and commercial affairs of those persons, firms, corporations and organizations engaged in the plastering, lathing, drywalling, concrete forming and allied sectors of the building industry in Metropolitan Toronto, Hamilton, Ottawa, and such other areas as the commission may deem necessary as a result of this investigation, and to report to the Lieutenant Governor in Council on the possibility of any unlawful activities that may exist or may have taken place and to make such recommendations in regard to those matters as the commissioner may deem fit.

Mr. J. E. Stokes (Thunder Bay): The member for High Park (Mr. Shulman) wins again!

Mr. J. R. Breithaupt (Kitchener): The member for Thunder Bay is a keen observer of the facts.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, to deal with some of the other matters in the Throne Speech and the points raised by the members opposite, I must say that I listened very carefully, and I say this sincerely, to the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. R. F. Nixon). There were some valid and constructive observations. There were some parts of the speech that I say very frankly, Mr. Speaker, are not worthy of a man of the calibre of the Leader of the Opposition, and I shall come to that in a few moments.

I sense, Mr. Speaker, and I know that we are in politics and it is a political process—

Mr. Stokes: Don't talk down to him.

Hon. Mr. Davis: I would say to the hon. member that it is not a question of talking down, it is a question of trying to set in perspective certain matters where people and others are referred to in this House. I say with respect, Mr. Speaker, it is a practice that I personally think is very regrettable.

I would say, Mr. Speaker, that I did not listen, and I apologize, to the leader of the New Democratic Party, but I say this sincerely—

Mr. Stokes: There are a lot more here on this side listening to the Premier today than there were over there listening to the leaders here when they spoke.

Hon. Mr. Davis: I say sincerely that I had really been anxious to listen to his contributions, but I did have matters of some significance. I can only assure him that I did hear a portion of it and I can also assure him, through you Mr. Speaker, that I have read very carefully the observations that he has made. I would just say in a general sense that really the leader of the New Democratic Party has come close to taking the place of a former member who, while he was difficult to deal with on occasion none the less I think many of us regarded as being something of a friend and colleague, the former member for Sudbury, who in his own inimitable fashion endeavoured to reorganize the Treasury benches of this province with the same singular lack of success.

But I do compliment the leader of the New Democratic Party. What the speech lacked in substance, certainly the style was there, the humour was there, and I thoroughly enjoyed those portions I listened to and those portions I read. But I would say to him, and I want to make this abundantly clear, that while it is part of the game to have a little fun with the ministers, to have fun with the Premier, this I expect, this we all understand and appreciate, just so there is no misunderstanding in his mind or anyone else's, I have great confidence in the capacity and the integrity of the executive council members of the Province of Ontario. They are performing a very valuable function and—

Mr. Lewis: I hope the Premier has—he appointed them!

Hon. Mr. Davis: —they are doing it in a totally relevant way.

I would say, as it relates to one particular minister, where the request has been made both by the Leader of the Opposition and the leader of the New Democratic Party—once again, I fully appreciate, with something of a partisan feeling—that he should bring himself to resign from the very difficult ministry that he has, I would say for the Minister of Health (Mr. Potter), Mr. Speaker, that he is a man who is completely committed to his responsibilities, who has had certain difficulties in a personal way with his own health in the past three to four months, has laboured under these personal disadvantages, has worked hard at his ministry, in an area that probably is as complex as any other area of government administration at this precise moment, and that he is doing it in a totally responsible way. And I want to say to the members opposite who have called for this minister's resignation, I have no intention of having him leave the Ministry of Health in the Province of Ontario.

Mr. J. F. Foulds (Port Arthur): Ever?

Mr. Lewis: That was a startling affirmation.

Mr. E. W. Martel (Sudbury East): The Premier was in on the error. What else could he do?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, ever is a long time. But if the hon. member who made the interjection really has some ambitions in that direction himself, I would just say that he really should restrain himself, because it will probably be before his great-grandchildren come into being that there is ever any likelihood that he would be a part of the executive council of the Province of Ontario. It will be a long, long time.

Mr. D. C. MacDonald (York South): That's a high school gesture. That kind of comment is not worthy of the Premier.

Hon. Mr. Davis: No. I don't think it's unworthy. I would say to the hon. member for York South that I look upon it—and I hope that most of my presentation today will represent the same thing—I look upon it as a statement of fact.

Mr. J. A. Renwick (Riverdale): It's a snide remark—and the Premier knows it!

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, there is another matter that I would like to refer to. I have long and copious notes and a great detailed speech here today, but I may ramble a little bit—I haven't really reached them yet. There is another matter, though, that I believe was raised by the leader of the New Democratic Party, a matter that is of concern to the government. I wish to inform the hon. members of the House about the proposed use of the land east of Bay St.

Mr. Speaker, there is some lengthy history as to the accumulation of this property by the Province of Ontario. Some two months ago, the Ministry of Government Services invited—and I want this clearly understood—invited five or six presentations of a conceptual nature related to the possible use of that particular piece of land. These were conceptual in nature; there was no determination by the government whether it would proceed, when it would proceed or how it would proceed.

I have viewed those conceptual drawings and models myself, along with the minister of that particular department, and I must say, Mr. Speaker—and this reflects no criticism, because I don't think this is the appropriate approach—but none of them is acceptable to the government of the Province of Ontario. There will be no development along the lines that were contained in the conceptual presentations made to the government.

We will reassess the position, and we shall do so in light of the planning developments taking place by the city of Toronto planning board in their midtown studies, which have been delayed because of their concentration of work, I would think, on the Eaton Centre and Metro Centre developments.

Whatever development and use is determined east of Bay St. in the future, Mr. Speaker, will be compatible with the desires of the city of Toronto and with the social and economic objectives of this province.

Mr. MacDonald: That's one result of the by-election!

Mr. Lewis: They learn slowly, but they learn. That is quite a retreat.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, with great respect, if the leader of the New Democratic Party could put himself in the position—which he never shall—of Premier of this province, he would recognize the degree of flexibility and the degree of reaction to the change that has taken place.

Mr. Lewis: It's infinite. The Premier's flexibility is infinite.

Hon. Mr. Davis: This is really what government is all about—

Mr. Foulds: His reaction is infinite, too!

Hon. Mr. Davis: And we, unlike his party, are not doctrinaire. We are a progressive party.

Mr. Lewis: Don't become partisan now.

Hon. Mr. Davis: No, I won't become partisan—

Mr. V. M. Singer (Downsview): Or political! Don't be political!

Hon. Mr. Davis: Oh no, I won't be political at all—

Hon. E. A. Winkler (Chairman, Management Board of Cabinet): Just like the hon. member for Downsview.

Hon. Mr. Davis: We are a progressive party, Mr. Speaker. We are not doctrinaire—

Mr. Lewis: They are more progressive than the Liberals, I will grant them that.

Hon. Mr. Davis:—nor are we reactionary like the official opposition in the Province of Ontario is becoming. There's no question about that.

Mr. R. F. Nixon (Leader of the Opposition): And they don't win many by-elections either.

Hon. Mr. Davis: I really had this in my notes, but I must say it now, because I'll be saying some things with which the Leader of the Opposition may not agree: I hope in his fairness—and he has always been a fair person until recently—

Mr. R. F. Nixon: He loves losers!

Hon. Mr. Davis: In his fairness—I hope, in his fairness, that he will accept some of the things I'm going to say in the constructive way that they will be presented. But I do congratulate him on the success of his party in the two recent by-elections. To say that we are happy about it, Mr. Speaker, I would not be telling the truth. We are not happy; we're disappointed. We are not bitter—

Mr. E. Sargent (Grey-Bruce): They're scared as hell, that's all!

Hon. Mr. Davis: We have learned a few lessons ourselves—

Mr. MacDonald: He sounds like Pierre Elliott Trudeau!

Hon. Mr. Davis:—and I think we may even put the lessons we have learned to appropriate use when perhaps another significant test takes place some time in 1975, 1976 or whenever that may be.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Even this year, if the Premier insists.

Hon. Mr. Davis: I would say to the Leader of the Opposition, though, before he takes total credit for those two by-election wins himself—

Mr. Breithaupt: He never would.

Mr. Singer: He is far too modest.

Hon. Mr. Davis:—that in spite of his modesty, perhaps he should consider that they were not necessarily a vote for him nor for the Liberal Party—there were other matters that led to the determination in these by-elections.

Mr. Singer: They were a vote against the Conservatives.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, if the member for Downsview is saying, as I understand him to say, that this was a vote against myself and my party in the government, I say to him I'm a politician and I recognize that sometimes this is how election results are determined. But I think it should be very disappointing to him and his colleagues if that is the reason. Very frankly, I don't believe that to be the reason, but if it is, what a very negative way to achieve some degree of political success! What a very negative degree!

What the member for Downsview is saying, Mr. Speaker, and I think it is very relevant, is that the voters in St. George weren't voting for the policies of the Liberal Party, mainly because they didn't know what they were—

Mr. Lewis: How could they?

Hon. Mr. Davis:—and if they did find out what they were, they were contradictory.

Mr. Lewis: Right!

Hon. Mr. Davis: In fact, the successful candidate in St. George—

Mr. Singer: The Premier can talk as long as he wants; we still won them both.

An hon. member: The Premier's wonderful!

Hon. Mr. Davis: The successful candidate in St. George publicly disassociated herself from two rather significant policy positions taken by the leader of her own party. Now, Mr. Speaker, I don't object to that. Perhaps she will have some determining—

Mr. MacDonald: That makes her a good Liberal.

Mr. Lewis: That was a blood test for entry into the party.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Of course, Mr. Speaker, it's quite obvious that the new member for St. George is already developing her leadership platform. I find this very intriguing and I think it is appropriate. Firstly, she is the first lady to represent the riding.

Mr. Singer: We won two by-elections; we are happy to listen to both other party leaders.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, it is quite appropriate that the first lady member, certainly in my memory, of that party is seated in the front benches. I think it is a tremendous idea. It must certainly sound a little note of concern for the member for York Centre (Mr. Deacon), perhaps even for the members for Sarnia and Downsview, and the member for Huron-Bruce (Mr. Gaunt). I just wonder how the member for York-Forest Hill feels.

Mr. Singer: We are all concerned!

Hon. Mr. Davis: If this is an indication as to how the Leader of the Opposition feels about his succession, Mr. Speaker, I just say to the members that I feel sorry that they have been disappointed and that the new member for St. George has been given a very prominent position on the front benches of that party.

Hon. W. A. Stewart (Minister of Agriculture and Food): The member for Downsview should not leave. Why is the member for Downsview leaving?

Interjections by hon members.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I regret the member for Downsview finds it necessary to leave, because there are other matters where I'm sure his own recommendations to his leader—and perhaps I shall have some observentions on these—might be helpful, as we approach some of the mathematics that we're going to go through very shortly.

Mr. Lewis: Why doesn't the Premier get to them? It is a little convoluted so far.

Hon. Mr. Davis: We are going to get to the mathematics, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Lewis: Good.

Hon. Mr. Davis: In fact, I think we will get to them very shortly.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: The Premier must have something important to say.

Mr. J. E. Bullbrook (Sarnia): Talk about the proposal system.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I will come to that.

Mr. Bullbrook: Good!

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I listened to the Leader of the Opposition when he rose to his feet here. I guess he heard the news this morning when one of Ontario's I think very reputable newscasters, made certain observations about statements attributed to the Leader of the Opposition in the Toronto Globe and Mail. I read the report in the Globe and Mail. I think, while it may not have in fact stated verbatim what the Leader of the Opposition said, I say that in tenor, in innuendo and in the suggestions that he was making there is no question that the reference that he made to that particular organization and the people connected with it could be contained as part of the other suggestions that he was making.

For the Leader of the Opposition to get up in this House and try to explain his way around what he said, I say, Mr. Speaker, is not worthy of the man he is.

I have read Hansard. I have read the term "lease-back". I have read the fact that the Leader of the Opposition suggested that the ETV authority was the basis for the development of that building. That is what was stated in Hansard, Mr. Speaker. The fact remains that it was a rental arrangement in an existing facility determined specifically by an independent organization.

This is what Mr. Dennett made abundantly clear to the people of the Province of Ontario this morning. I say it ill behoves the Leader of the Opposition to try to back away from the general intent and the fact of the observations that he made which are recorded in Hansard.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Nonsense—just nonsense!

Hon. Mr. Davis: It is not nonsense; it is a fact.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker, since the Premier was good enough to bring this to the attention of the House, and since you will recall that he got up two or three times during my remarks in this regard, surely he sees the difference between the proposal method—which was specifically the criticism that I was levelling at him and his ministers in this regard—and something to do with rental and leasing. Is he also not aware of the criticism in the community that the educational TV authority perhaps should have selected some other building when they were looking for facilities, so that they would not have to spend $60,000 of extra money—even if it is on the builders' side—to make it useful for educational television? Why didn't they rent more specifically useful premises?

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I will read—

Mr. R. F. Nixon: I didn't say that was on a proposal basis; I didn't intend to and I didn't say it.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I just quote Hansard and I am saying this in the total context of what was said—

Mr. R. F. Nixon: The Premier and Mr. Dennett are overly sensitive and are both misinformed.

Hon. Mr. Davis: "Transortium Realty, which is the company that got the lease-back . . ." The Leader of the Opposition should ask the member for Sarnia (Mr. Bullbrook) what that means. That is not a rental agreement, a lease-back is quite distinct—

Mr. R. F. Nixon: It is not a proposal. Why can't the government have tenders for lease-backs?

Hon. Mr. Davis: The Leader of the Opposition said "contract to build"; there is no contract to build.

Mr. Bullbrook: Well, the Premier starts talking about proposals now—and his friends get them.

Hon. Mr. Davis: But I say, Mr. Speaker, that is a most—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Hon. Mr. Davis: —unfair reference to the ETV authority.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: It's just the Premier's sensitive, but Machiavellian approach to it.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: Who is sensitive today?

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Hon. Mr. Davis: Now, Mr. Speaker, let's move to the institute which has been the favourite subject of the member for Sarnia over the years.

Mr. Bullbrook: We know the Premier is afraid of this.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please!

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, let's just move through it very briefly. There are just three points to be made.

Firstly, the Ontario Institute for Studies in Education is an institution governed by an independent board of governors upon which board are represented men and women of integrity and capacity. The decision to build the building—the decision as to who was to do it—was reached entirely under the direction of the board; in no way was it determined by the government of the Province of Ontario.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: It's the Premier's baby and now he's stuck with it.

Mr. Bullbrook: Without any knowledge?

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Hon. Mr. Davis: As to the—

Mr. Bullbrook: It was the Premier's baby. Answer that! Without any knowledge?

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I knew that they were doing it. Certainly I knew that they were doing it.

Mr. Bullbrook: The Premier certainly did know it.

Hon. Mr. Davis: But I also know this; that the then chairman of the institute board—who is now Mr. Justice Bora Laskin of the Supreme Court of Canada—is not the kind of man, nor the people who serve with him, who are going to make determinations—

Mr. Bullbrook: Nor do I.

Hon. A. Grossman (Minister of Revenue): Great Liberal, too!

Hon. Mr. Davis: But that is the implication. That's the innuendo.

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Hon. Mr. Davis: It was done completely independently and it wasn't done under my direction.

Mr. Bullbrook: It was the Premier's shadow of direction that did it.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: The criticism is directed to the Premier and no one else.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Well of course, Mr. Speaker, the Leader of the Opposition says it's directed to me—but what are the implications?

Mr. R. F. Nixon: That's right.

Hon. Mr. Davis: The decision was made apart from government; and there is no question about this. I would say to the Leader of the Opposition, he can talk about proposals, or developers, or builder proposals—but take a look at the mathematics. I won't get into it in detail on the institute—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Hon. Mr. Davis: But I say this, that the rate is competitive.

Mr. Sargent: Why didn't the government tender?

Hon. Mr. Davis: There is no question that the rate being paid at the institute today is $1 to $1.50 less than competitive space in the same geographic area—

Mr. Sargent: That's a lot of baloney and the Premier knows it.

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Hon. Mr. Davis: And the title becomes available to the public at the end of the 30-year period.

Now, Mr. Speaker, let's deal with—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order! The hon. member will be seated.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, let's deal with the Hydro building. And I assume, Mr. Speaker, the Leader of the Opposition has a copy of his own statement—I don't say his press statement; I'm not sure that he would want to carry it around with him—but I would think that he has. If he hasn't, then a copy of his mathematics. Does he have one, Mr. Speaker? Because if not, I will send him a copy so that we can follow it together.

Mr. Speaker, I think there are two or three points—

Mr. R. F. Nixon: I don't.

Mr. Sargent: These are the Premier's figures.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Firstly, Mr. Speaker, as to the competitive terms of the contract related to the market situation that exists; something that the Leader of the Opposition didn't refer to because he wished to capture some sort of global figure and I know he was hoping for some headline; somebody to make $85 million or $83 million profit.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: I think it was $180 million.

Hon. Mr. Davis: No, I'm just talking about Hydro. I think the figure was $83 million.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: No, it's not. It's $6 million a year for 30 years.

Hon. Mr. Davis: I know, and when I heard the Leader of the Opposition talking about educational matters the other day, I was in complete sympathy. When he talked about the need for a core curriculum I only regret that mathematics obviously was not a part of his core curriculum when he was a student in the school system.

So, Mr. Speaker, let's take a look at it.

Mr. Sargent: It's the Premier's kind of mathematics. What is a $5 billion debt?

Mr. Speaker: Order, order!

Hon. Mr. Davis: I have his documentation here. I have his calculation of what might be termed abridged financing.

I can't quarrel with some of these figures, Mr. Speaker. I'm not that sufficiently knowledgeable, but there are a couple of items which I think are relatively important.

When one is doing a calculation of these matters it really isn't sufficient to set out the total terms of the rent. It isn't sufficient to have just a part of the expense. If one looks at it very carefully, Mr. Speaker, one will find that in the calculations there are two significant items missing, two significant items. I think if the Leader of the Opposition knew he was doing this—I don't believe he knew it; I can't think that of him because it would be grossly unfair—

Interjection by an hon. member.

Hon. Mr. Davis: —I would put it down to his complete lack of competence or the lack of competence of his staff. There are two items missing, Mr. Speaker; one is fairly basic and the degree might be arguable. There is an amount allocated here for janitorial and maintenance costs.

Mr. Speaker, there are a couple of other areas, I think, which might come into some consideration of costs—such as fuel; such as heat; such as light; such as maintenance, cleaning, elevators, etc. I think it is fair to state—

Mr. Sargent: And payoffs to the party!

Hon. Mr. Davis: —that an estimate—and it is only an estimate; I'm the first to admit it—but I think it is a relatively realistic one of probably something close to $1.45—and if the Leader of the Opposition wants to say it should be $1.30 or $1.50 I'm not going to quibble over the 10 cents a sq ft differential that some might build into it—that estimate comes out, Mr. Speaker—and I wish he would follow his calculations—on 1,124,500 sq ft to $1,630,525 per annum. If we subtract that from what the Leader of the Opposition and his great mathematics projected for us—$367,000—if we were to take that away from the amount, there is only a difference per annum of somewhere around $900,000 over a 30-year period. That's all, Mr. Speaker, but then let's move to another item.

Interjection by an hon. member.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Let's move to another item.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: It says janitorial services are included.

Hon. Mr. Davis: That's right. There isn't a cost—there's a cost—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Hon. Mr. Davis: I am talking about fuel hikes—there is! If the Leader of the Opposition would like to check this with any—

Mr. R. F. Nixon: It says maintenance costs are included; janitorial services—

Hon. Mr. Davis: —standard maintenance cost in any building, and use a figure, I will not debate the figure whether or not it is $1.45. This is an estimate, not mine, but it is an estimate that I think is relatively close. It comes out, as I say, to about $1 million—I was wrong; I'm sorry. He was out $1.3 million.

Mr. Sargent: What is the net figure?

Mr. Speaker: Order! Will the hon. member for Grey-Bruce please observe the common courtesies of the House.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: He doesn't know any better.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: The Premier has left the subject and gone on to the gardening costs or something. Is he aware that heat and light are provided in the contract by Hydro?

Hon. Mr. Davis: But it is part, Mr. Speaker, of the cost that is—

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Hydro is paying for it! Why should the contractor have it included in his costs?

Hon. Mr. Davis: It is part of the cost calculated in the amount of rental that the Leader of the Opposition has used for the income derived. It is a total figure.

Mr. Lewis: On a point of order. Could I ask the Premier a question, very briefly?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Yes.

Mr. Lewis: So that we can understand it, is the Premier saying that the amount of money on an annual basis to pay for all the items he enumerated will add up to roughly $45 million over the term of the leaseback, at $1.5 million a year? Is that what he's saying?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I'm saying the rough estimate of the annual operating and maintenance cost is approximately $1,630,525—

Mr. Lewis: I see.

Hon. Mr. Davis: —which is, I think, related to that figure of $1.45. As I say some people could argue it should be $1.30 or—

Mr. Lewis: That's part of the lease-back arrangement?

Hon. Mr. Davis: It is a part of the total figure that the Leader of the Opposition has used.

Now let's, Mr. Speaker—

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Another question before the Premier proceeds, because he said a moment ago that no consideration was taken of the cost of certain items. Is the Premier aware that Hydro is taking the responsibility for heat and light? Therefore, why should it even be a part of the lease-back because the owner of the building isn't going to have to provide it?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I am relating it to the calculations that have been done by the Leader of the Opposition himself.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Well, we left it out because they were not payable by Canada Square.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Then let's use the same figures. I'm using the member's figures and his way of calculating. Mr. Speaker, let's move to the next item and it has here "Interest on the mortgage." I don't think there is anything improper in that and I won't quarrel with the calculations, but there is a very large single item that has not been calculated into this whole projection, and that is the cost of the building itself. The fact that there will be somewhere in the neighbourhood of $45 million by way of principle that has to be returned, that has to be deducted from his $83 million.

Now, Mr. Speaker, the Leader of the Opposition talks to us—my colleague who, I think, even with his double negative, presented the $55 million situation very well earlier today—the Leader of the Opposition talks about—

Mr. Singer: The Premier doesn't really believe that?

Hon. Mr. Davis: —talks about these things. There has to be a calculation for the return of the cost of the building, and it is not here.

Mr. Sargent: What was the land cost?

Mr. Singer: It is.

Hon. Mr. Davis: It isn't.

Mr. Bullbrook: Goodness gracious—

Hon. Mr. Davis: Well, I am telling the hon. members—

Mr. Sargent: What was the land cost?

Hon. Mr. Davis: —and in fact, if you take all of these—

Mr. Bullbrook: Who advised the Premier on this?

Mr. W. Hodgson (York North): It wasn't the member for Sarnia anyway.

Hon. Mr. Davis: If you take all of these, Mr. Speaker—

Interjection by an hon. member.

Hon. Mr. Davis: —and you come up with figures—

Mr. Bullbrook: Who has the Premier got advising him?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Well, with great respect, check the calculations.

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Mr. Bullbrook: Has he looked at the contracts?

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Mr. Bullbrook: Has the Premier looked at them?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Check the calculations. Let's present it in a very simple way, then, if we can—a very simple way.

The annual rental, Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Bullbrook: Maybe the Premier's advisers are miscalculating.

Hon. Mr. Davis: No. The annual rental, Mr. Speaker, is about $5,465,000 on the bulk of the accommodation; this is the office accommodation.

There is an annual mortgage payment, principle and interest, of approximately $3.9 million. The annual operating costs and maintenance costs, whichever way they are combined, are $1.63 million, for an approximate total figure of $5,544,015.

And those are approximate—I should put EOE, and I say with respect the Leader of the Opposition might have done the same on his.

Mr. Lewis: The Premier means they are losing money every year?

Hon. Mr. Davis: There is then the revenue from the commercial part, Mr. Speaker, of some 83,000 sq ft at an approximate figure of $6, which is $501,000. There is a cost of a rent payable or a sum payable to Hydro of some $50,000, or a net operating profit before taxes of somewhere around $380,000 to $400,000.

Mr. Speaker, I don't expect the Leader of the Opposition to present it in its best light—this is not his job, I guess—

Mr. Sargent: We thought the Premier would be better, though.

Hon. Mr. Davis: —but I think, Mr. Speaker, if we are going to deal with it in equity, if we are going to deal with it fairly, that one might also include the fact that before one can say there is a net return, here is a small item that might be calculated in of corporation income taxes of some 50 per cent.

Mr. Bullbrook: We did calculate that.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Well, it doesn't show, and the corporation income tax of say $192,000 with a net cash flow of $192,000, then the balance per year—and Mr. Speaker, I am not too knowledgeable in these matters, but you do that over—

Mr. Sargent: He certainly isn't.

Hon. Mr. Davis: —a 30-year period, and it comes out to about $5,768,000. I am told that at present value at nine per cent, it represents about $2 million today.

I would say to the hon. Leader of the Opposition that there might even be—

Mr. Sargent: That is not bad.

Hon. Mr. Davis: —a closer reconciliation with his own figures, if he had been able to add up his own columns correctly. I think he will find if he looks at this, as some of these figures are transposed from column to column, that he is out several hundred thousand dollars, and I would say—

Mr. R. F. Nixon: We'll have a look at the Premier's figures.

Hon. Mr. Davis: That's fine; that's fine. In fact, Mr. Speaker, I could give him—

Mr. R. F. Nixon: The Premier will find the addition is all right.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Well, Mr. Speaker, I don't know, we just—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Is the Premier defending the proposal method? Is that what he is trying to do?

Mr. Bullbrook: This is getting impossible. It's a proposal—

Hon. Mr. Davis: Just to check the figures, Mr. Speaker—

An hon. member: Jumped too far on that one.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Our figure comes out higher than his. It came out to $85,281,000. His was $83 million. I think it just demonstrates, Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Bullbrook: We'd like to hear the Premier talk about the proposal method.

Hon. Mr. Davis: —how careful one might be.

Mr. M. Gaunt (Huron Bruce): Just being fair about it.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Now, Mr. Speaker, let's relate—

Mr. Bullbrook: It was $183 million.

Mr. Lewis: It was $183 million.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: It was $183 million not—

Hon. Mr. Davis: No, no. I assumed that he was coupling everything together. The net operating profit I have on the press release the Leader of the Opposition issued is $83,084,708, which I say is wrong in his own calculations—

Mr. Lewis: Oh, I see. And the Premier is saying that the net isn't $83 million, it's $2 million plus?

Hon. Mr. Davis: I'm saying that, and I am not sure how they calculate these things related to present value. I think if you did it on the 30-year term you could use a figure of $5 million; if you do it related to present-day value at nine per cent, it would be perhaps around $2 million.

Mr. Lewis: But there is a discrepancy of $75 million to $80 million?

Hon. Mr. Davis: That's about all!

Mr. Lewis: I don't trust either of them!

Hon. Mr. Davis: Well, they are the member's own calculations. But I would make a prediction—

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Davis: I would make a prediction that mine will be closer than those of the Leader of the Opposition.

But Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Lewis: I can't believe either of them.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I want to deal with just one other relevant aspect. There is one aspect that I think must be mentioned, and that is that the rough total rental or cost is somewhere around $6.50 a square foot—I may be wrong in that, but it's fairly close. I would like to point out that comparable buildings are, at 522 University, $8.50 to $9.50; 439 University, $8.50 to $8.75; 2 Bloor—

Mr. R. F. Nixon: But that is rental cost. The land cost is not included.

Hon. Mr. Davis: That's rental, certainly that's rental.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: That is rental cost. Why don't they build it on a tender?

Hon. Mr. Davis: First of all, those figures would be higher; and secondly, there is no equity left to the tenant of the building.

Mr. Sargent: Well, whose land are they on? Whose land are they on?

Hon. Mr. Davis: That is all calculated in, Mr. Speaker. It's all calculated in.

Mr. Sargent: They use their own money too.

Hon. Mr. Davis: No way. Mr. Speaker, the fact is very simply this, that the Hydro-Electric Power Commission in this province is part—

Mr. Sargent: The Premier is defending the developers!

Mr. Foulds: Say, what else is new?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Utter nonsense: —is part of the agreement whereby, at a rate that is somewhat lower than competitive rentals, all things being considered equal it is paying less and ending up with little to the building at the end of the 30-year period. That is what in fact is happening.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Will the Premier permit a question at this stage? If he is so concerned about the relative cheapness of the price of the accommodation, then why did he not make this a part of a tender instead of a proposal? And in support of his contention here, will he table the four other proposals that were given to Hydro so that we can examine those? We would be glad to sit down with the mathematicians who are advising him so that our figures will at least be within a ballpark figure of each other, because we really want to find out what is going on as far as these costs are concerned.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I'd be delighted—

Mr. Lewis: They should let us add the calculations, because we are clearly the only independent arbiters around here.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Then nobody could trust anybody.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Leaving the mathematical lesson aside for a moment, I might—

Mr. Sargent: Better leave that one, that is a bad one. Got something better than that?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Well I think, with respect, Mr. Speaker, it is not a bad one; in fact if you go to the rentals in Commerce Court and TD Centre of $10-plus a square foot—

Mr. Bullbrook: One can't use that as an analogy at all.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Well Mr. Speaker, with great respect, you are talking about a competitive position in the marketplace.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: If he thinks that is so bad, the Minister of Labour is paying $11.

Hon. Mr. Davis: The point is that Hydro is paying much less and getting title to the building.

Mr. Nixon: Well they could have done even better if they had had a competition—

Mr. Bullbrook: The government is paying the interest for them.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Oh, come on!

Mr. Bullbrook: They are! Surely the Premier must know that?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, there is no question as to the economics whatsoever, and I say to the Leader of the Opposition, take the mathematics and rework it. And if the mathematics that I have delivered to the House today is substantially in error I will be the first one to apologize, I assure him.

Now, Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Givens: What about the other proposals?

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Can we have the other proposals?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I told the Leader of the Opposition I would discuss it with the chairman of Hydro. I have not had the opportunity, and very frankly I don't think I will have today.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Well, can we have the Premier's figures too, please, so we can have a look at those?

Hon. Mr. Davis: I will try and get some figures to the Leader of the Opposition. I thought he was making a note of them; sort of digesting them all and putting them into the computer and agreeing with us.

Mr. A. J. Roy (Ottawa East): It wasn't that good.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, moving to a number of other items, and I must confess that I have taken a little longer with this—

Mr. Bullbrook: Well that one fell flat, I'll tell the Premier; that didn't mesmerize us at all. We thought we were going to get something and the fact is the Premier doesn't understand it himself.

Hon. Mr. Davis: No, the fact is, Mr. Speaker, that the figures used by the Leader of the Opposition are just completely inaccurate.

Mr. Lewis: Well, the Premier has said they are out by $75 million. He has said he is out $75 or $80 million. That is quite a charge.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Yes, close. Mr. Speaker, I think I should make one correction. I think the Leader of the Opposition is right that Hydro does pay the light. I think it does—

Mr. R. F. Nixon: He is darn right they do.

Hon. Mr. Davis: —but that is not in the $1.45 figure. Now, Mr. Speaker, let's move on to two or three other issues—and I now see I have to select two or three of those that I can deal with in the limited amount of time available. I will just reply to the leader of the New Democratic Party on the matter of energy, where he feels that Ontario has abdicated its position—

Mr. Sargent: This is one of the Premier's best speeches.

Hon. Mr. Davis: —to the Province of Alberta. I would only say to him that this is not the case. I visited the Premier of Alberta several weeks ago along with my parliamentary assistant.

Mr. Lewis: Cap in hand.

Mr. Foulds: Hand in hand!

Hon. Mr. Davis: There were no determinations made. The visit was made on the basis of determining the government of Alberta's feelings and position. I think, Mr. Speaker, it is pretty important to point out that the fact that the Premier of Ontario would in fact go to the Province of Alberta, register his concern and also recognize the concern of that province, is not a bad thing within the type of federated structure we have in this country. In fact, Mr. Speaker, I was really very encouraged last night to hear over the news that the Leader of the Opposition in the Province of Alberta had said publicly that he will give me his seat in the Legislature next Tuesday afternoon to explain Ontario's position to the government of the province of Alberta—

Mr. R. F. Nixon: I hear the Premier of Alberta won't let the Premier of Ontario in.

Hon. Mr. Davis: —but in that the Premier of the province, over the radio, felt that there should be pro quo and in that the Leader of the Opposition here might not be as magnanimous as the Leader of the Opposition in Alberta, I doubt that I will take a seat in the Alberta Legislature on Tuesday afternoon to explain our feelings as they related to the energy situation.

Mr. I. Deans (Wentworth): I would give him my own.

Hon. Mr. Davis: I would only point out, Mr. Speaker, that we recognize the seriousness of it. It's not just related to gas and it's not just related to oil as it relates to Alberta; it relates to the whole question of energy over the next X number of years in this province and this country. As I said a few days ago, we anticipate something—not a definitive statement nor a statement with all the answers—but some indication of the direction the province is moving in the field of energy policy.

I want to move to regional government, Mr. Speaker. This is an area in which the Leader of the Opposition has, in this case in his perhaps helpful way, suggested to the government that regional government is one of the reasons we had some difficulty in the great riding of Huron.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: The government is going to have a lot more difficulty, too.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I can't really determine whether, in fact, this was the case in the county of Huron. If it was it is regrettable. It is regrettable because regional government should not have been an issue in the county of Huron. There was no plan for regional government. There was no determination by the province that there would be regional government in the county of Huron—

Mr. Sargent: There is none in Queen's Park either.

Hon. Mr. Davis: I say, if it was an issue, it was unfortunate. If the hon. member for Huron wishes to hear me say it, I shall say it now. The government of this province is not in the process of imposing regional government on all sections of the Province of Ontario. It is not in the process of imposition in the terms used by the Leader of the Opposition on the other parts of the Province of Ontario.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Why didn't the Premier tell his candidate about that? The candidate certainly said it was an issue.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, what the Leader of the Opposition surely must recognize is that we cannot move ahead with some of the existing municipal structures that are available to us. I won't go east of Metro, I won't go into some of the areas, but I'll deal with one specifically because I think it demonstrates the problem.

That is in the county of Peel which is faced with the same difficulties in regional government as many other areas. It's fine for the hon. member for St. George—as I say, she's welcome to come to the county of Peel, to the town of Streetsville—to say to the very excellent citizens of that community, "The government is imposing. Why don't you get together with the other communities, etc.?" I would just inform the hon. member for St. George, through you, Mr. Speaker, that the municipalities in the county of Peel—and this is true of many other areas where we are dealing with regional government—have been discussing this issue now for five, six, seven and eight years.

The proposal from the Province of Ontario to the county of Peel represents something very close to the proposal submitted to us as a government from the county council of that great area of the Province of Ontario.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: McMurtry said it couldn't have been better if he had written it himself.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I'm sympathetic to the problems of the people of Streetsville. I know the concern of some of the people in the city of Hamilton. I have had some very ample demonstrations of the concern of the people in Port Hope and Cobourg. The government has indicated its desire to accept other suggestions. We will be flexible.

I say to the hon. Leader of the Opposition that any attempt by him to construe the regional government proposals as an imposition, or to create the concern in the balance of the Province of Ontario that regional government is going to be imposed overnight, tomorrow or even five years hence, is not a statement of fact because it will not be the case.

I say to the Leader of the Opposition, Mr. Speaker, that I have said—and I've said it not just in Huron but in other parts of the Province of Ontario—in my view the county structure of government and the county boundaries and councils represent, to a certain extent, a form of regional government as they presently exist. I would go one step further, Mr. Speaker. I think it is important in some areas that a greater strength or responsibility be given perhaps to the county council.

It's fine to say regional government isn't working as the member for York-Forest Hill said, and that we shouldn't do it. The Leader of the Opposition says back away from it, it isn't working elsewhere. I would ask the Leader of the Opposition to calculate the cost we've already incurred, in a social and economic sense, in some areas of the Province of Ontario, because we do not have regional government.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: What about the costs where we do have it?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Can you tell me—I'm sorry, Mr. Speaker, through you to the Leader of the Opposition: Please sit down and calculate the duplication in service; the lack of planning cohesion; the kind of urban growth that has taken place; the kind of disorganization that relates to transportation—

Mr. R. F. Nixon: The Premier is listening to his own propaganda.

Hon. Mr. Davis —the kind of densities that have occurred right within the county of Peel—and I represent it—which would not have occurred if there had been regional government in that area five or 10 years ago.

Mr. Sargent: Does the Premier mean the Bramalea pipeline and things like that?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Perhaps, Mr. Speaker, perhaps. I know of the political difficulties imposed on the members who represent some of these areas, and I happen to have them. I know that the people from the town of Streetsville are less than delighted with the proposal that has been made. I also know the cost to that general area in general terms, looking at it five or 10 years ahead, if we do not move ahead with some form of municipal restructuring.

It's fine for the member for York-Forest Hill to say we should have a single tier and that regional governments are too expensive, et cetera. I only say to him to turn it around—and I ask him to do this most sincerely and most constructively—and calculate the cost to the public of the Province of Ontario in general terms in those areas of urban growth over the past 10 years because of the fact that we have not done some of the things that should have been done, because we have not had the intestinal fortitude, I say very frankly, to do some of the tough things. I just ask him to calculate what might have been the cost. I guess this is not calculable and perhaps I shouldn't suggest it; but I say it is relevant and it has to be considered.

The member for York-Forest Hill makes light of the Toronto-centred region plan. I say to you, Mr. Speaker, this is another tough thing the government is doing. Does the House think it is very easy for my colleagues who are affected, and some of the members, to be there when we say to the municipal councils and the people with rather natural ambitions for economic and commercial growth that as a matter of policy there must be density limitations in population. Let's use my own community as an example—a very appropriate time to do it on its 100th birthday. It now has 45,000 people. It would like to be larger—at least some of its people would. It is right next door to a community, Chinguacousy, wherein there is a very large urban centre, called Bramalea, of some 35,000. There are official plan amendments prepared and presented to the government of this province—and these were done with planners, with sincerity—that would have envisaged a total population in excess of half a million people in those two municipalities. This was done knowing that there were many people with investments and many people with natural ambitions for growth. We are saying to them in the Toronto-centred region plan, "We regret it, but your population densities are restricted to 300,000."

Do you think that makes it any easier? It doesn't, Mr. Speaker, I can assure you, but we believe it's the right thing to do. I have said in my own riding, and I will say it here in the House—

Mr. Givens: But the government hasn't changed the financial basis. It hasn't touched the financial basis of any of these.

Hon. Mr. Davis: —as long as I am Premier of this province, as long as I have the responsibility, we are not going to see asphalt and concrete, with great respect to the member for York-Forest Hill, from Queen's Park to 61 Main Street South. That is not the way we are going to see development take place.

An hon. member: Sit down! The Premier has made a fool of himself.

Mr. R. G. Hodgson (Victoria-Haliburton): The member should not add to his superciliousness.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Do you know what I find most interesting in all of this discussion, Mr. Speaker, and I know the problems—

Mr. R. F. Nixon: What is 61 Main Street South? Is that the "White House"?

Mr. Sargent: Mr. Speaker, may I ask the Premier why doesn't he stay here and mind his own business and let the people of Ontario run their own affairs?

An hon. member: Don't answer that.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Hon. Mr. Davis: I won't really answer the member for Grey-Bruce, but I will say that perhaps in some respects what he is suggesting is representative of the contradiction that exists in the Liberal Party in this province today. On the one hand they are saying to us give the municipalities greater autonomy, let them make their own determination, and don't impose things from Queen's Park. But when the crunch comes, where is the buck then passed. Right here to Queen's Park, to the government; and we are expected to resolve the problems.

Mr. Sargent: And we know what kind of a mess the government made of it.

Hon. Mr. Davis: As we should! As we should, Mr. Speaker!

I won't get into Hamilton-Wentworth. I know the problems there. I know the problems east of Metro.

Mr. Singer: What about North Pickering?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Not too many—pardon?

Mr. Singer: North Pickering?

Hon. Mr. Davis: North Pickering?

Mr. Singer: You know, no asphalt—

Hon. Mr. Davis: Very significant, Mr. Speaker!

We don't minimize them but at the same time we are not going to adopt the reactionary policies of the Liberal Party in this province.

When the Leader of the Opposition first came into this House—I think back to one of his first elections—I can recall coming into the House—I didn't bring the pamphlet with me today because I thought it would be a bit repetitious—but I remember that great pamphlet and the great Liberal commitment to county school boards, regional government reform, and all the great things the Liberal Party was going to do for the Province of Ontario. I remember, Mr. Speaker!

And do you know what we have seen happen here? It's politics, and I guess we live with it; but what we have seen happen here is the Liberal Party of the Province of Ontario becoming reactionaries, becoming unprepared to do the tough things that are necessary in a province like ours in the 1970s. They are unprepared.

Sure it's easy to tell the people what they want. It's easy to say, "Yes, we will do this." It is fine for the member for St. George—and I'm not unsympathetic to the things she said in Streetsville—to convey some of that message, but I would say to her with respect—

Mr. Singer: She bothers the Premier, doesn't she?

Hon. Mr. Davis: No, she doesn't. I think she made a very excellent run—

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Davis: I am delighted to see her on the front bench. I would say—

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Davis: I would just say, very casually, she's probably disturbing the members for Downsview and York-Forest Hill. I don't know about the member for Sarnia—I don't know yet; I haven't decided—and the member for York Centre. She is disturbing them far more than she is disturbing us.

Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Singer: The Premier has referred to her speech 15 times now.

Hon. Mr. Davis: No. As a matter of fact, Mr. Speaker, I have referred to it I think four times.

Moving on from the non-controversial subject of regional government, I want to deal very briefly with the escarpment and the parkway belt and to refer to the Throne Speech in which the commitment of the government was to bring before the members of this House some rationale for the escarpment and a recognition—here I was encouraged by the Leader of the Opposition representing, as he does, a rural area—of the need for land-use planning. I can only say to him that the escarpment policy and the parkway belt policies will be available in the not too far distant future for consideration by the members of this House.

Mr. Speaker, let's not minimize it. I know members will be delighted because they will happen to be, some thought, somewhat difficult. It is not easy for us to do and I am sure that will delight members, but I would hope that perhaps the reactionary swing we sense may not be demonstrated when those pieces of legislation come before us.

Mr. Speaker, I want to deal very briefly with the opposition's remarks on federal-provincial financial matters. It is referred to by the Leader of the Opposition in some of his remarks. I feel somehow, Mr. Speaker, that the Leader of the Opposition and his party really haven't yet understood it, not just the complexity but the importance—not just in financial terms but in terms of the future of this country as it relates to the fiscal arrangements between the federal and the provincial governments.

Mr. Speaker, it is fine to be critical of us. It is fine to say to the Treasurer (Mr. White), "Don't threaten Ottawa because of certain tax situations." We are not threatening anybody. We are saying, as a matter of fact, that the present fiscal arrangements do not permit the provincial governments—this one in particular—to administer the affairs of the provinces in an appropriate fashion.

The federal government has not yet recognized that if the fabric of Confederation is to be preserved, if we are going to have the kind of country that I would think we all want to see here in Canada, there has to be a recognition that the provinces must have more room to discharge their responsibilities. This isn't a threat. This isn't blackmail. It is a statement of fact. While we support the tax cuts in the recent federal budget, we are not going to be hypocrites. At the same time that the Leader of the Opposition construes this as a solution to the major considerations we have to undertake here in this province, I say he is very seriously mistaken because they do not help us in those determinations. And I say with respect I don't think it helps other provincial jurisdictions either.

I think it is important for all of us to recognize that we must come to grips with this issue. There must be a solution. We are faced with municipalities on our doorsteps—and properly so—for a greater share every day of the week. We want to be able to respond.

We want to have them with a greater financial resource. But we have to do this from a broader tax base. They say that to us. We say it to Ottawa. We agree with them. We just wish the federal government would see the light and recognize the implications as well.

I can't help but feel in those observations by the Leader of the Opposition on the fiscal matters—and the suggestion that we are trying to threaten Ottawa is ridiculous—that he doesn't have an appreciation of the complexity of the problem or the serious nature of it. I feel that he is acting as an apologist for his federal counterparts in Ottawa. I don't think there is any question about it.

Mr. Singer: Is the Premier going to grab back the tax reduction?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, as we travel on to a number of other matters—and I would like to deal with transportation because this is a subject dear to the heart of the hon. member for Downsview—

Mr. Singer: Yes indeed, let's talk about it.

Hon. Mr. Davis:—and the hon. member for York-Forest Hill. I would only report—

Mr. Givens: Let the Premier tell us about how many people he has moved.

Hon. Mr. Davis: I would only like to report a degree of progress—

Mr. R. F. Ruston (Essex-Kent): We have moved two out for him.

Hon. Mr. Davis:—and that is that the proposals with respect to the CNE projects are very near final evaluation.

Mr. Singer: Does the Premier think it is going to attract as many as Disneyland?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I will tell you if it attracts as many as Disneyland then I can say to the hon. member for Downsview we have it made.

Interjection by an hon. member.

Hon. Mr. Davis: The hon. member for Downsview must know that Disneyland happens to represent a very successful situation, and if the intermediate capacity carrier here is as successful as that, I say to him, I shall be delighted and I think all of us will.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Singer: And we have great faith in the Premier. We look at Ontario Place.

Hon. Mr. Davis: And I say, Mr. Speaker, that while I understand the concern of the member for York-Forest Hill and of the member for Downsview—

Mr. F. Drea (Scarborough Centre): The member for York-Forest Hill knows he won't get down to the front row, so why does he bother?

An hon. member: It is a different illustration than Disneyland.

Hon. Mr. Davis: We know there are transportation problems for motor vehicles.

Mr. Singer: Really?

Hon. Mr. Davis: We know that there are some people upset. We know that there are some people who disagree with us. But, Mr. Speaker, once again—and I'm surprised that the great party of reform, the Liberal Party in Ontario, doesn't recognize this. Or is that being unkind?

Mr. Lewis: Very!

Hon. Mr. Davis: That the Liberal Party in this province—

An hon. member: The same party that has Ben Grys in it.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Davis: But we have to recognize that we must be prepared to take very different steps in the field of transportation. We have to. I would say to the member for Downsview, even if the decision had been taken to build Spadina, within five to six years the transportation problems in downtown Toronto would not have been one bit better than they are today.

Mr. Givens: Why couldn't the government build the subway?

Hon. Mr. Davis: We are building the subway.

Mr. Givens: Two years ago!

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, here we are with the member for York-Forest Hill who talks to us about municipal autonomy and responsibility. We did not delay the location of the subway for the last number of months.

Mr. Singer: Oh, come on. The Premier decided to hold back. He postponed the whole thing.

Hon. Mr. Davis: We didn't!

Mr. Givens: He ruined it all.

Mr. Singer: He overruled the municipalities.

Hon. Mr. Davis: We didn't!

Mr. Givens: He does anyway. Why didn't he go all the way?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, so that this discussion doesn't get—

Mr. Givens: The government is going to pay 75 per cent.

Hon. Mr. Davis: That's right. We are very generous.

Mr. Givens: All the increased cost.

Mr. Singer: Whatever happened to Buckminster Fuller?

Mr. Givens: Yes, what did happen to Buckminster Fuller?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Buckminster Fuller is alive and well. He is doing very well!

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, there are a number of other matters that I would like to raise.

Mr. Singer: Now that we have solved the transportation problems.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Perhaps I will have some occasion in the future to do so.

Mr. Sargent: He should be on the Johnny Carson Show.

Hon. Mr. Davis: But, as I say, I do have to wind up my very brief remarks. I won't refer to the specific items in the amendments that were made. I have looked at them all very carefully. I have reasoned them out.

Mr. Singer: He is going to support them.

Hon. Mr. Davis: And I must say, Mr. Speaker, when the time comes to vote on those weighty amendments, I shall be forced to cast my vote against them.

I would say to the members opposite as we move ahead with the session, I expect there will be other proposals put before them that are somewhat controversial. I expect we will meet them with enthusiasm, with constructive criticism. But I just reiterate what I said at the outset, Mr. Speaker; we know there are difficulties in what we are doing, but this government is committed to serving the interests of the people of this province.

We know that it's not simple; we are not going to become reactionary; we will be providing leadership. But I say with respect, Mr. Speaker, the contributions that were made by the leaders of the other parties in this province represent, in my view, the conclusions that were drawn some many months ago—that this government is best able to administer the affairs of this province.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. members have agreed unanimously to revert to the motion introduced by the hon. member for Welland South (Mr. Haggerty). That was a motion under the provisions of standing order 30, in which the ordinary business of the House be set aside to discuss a special matter of urgent public importance; in this case, namely the high lake levels that exist along the shorelines of lakes Huron, St. Clair, Erie and Ontario.

As I indicated earlier, the motion itself does meet the requirement as far as being in order is concerned. At this particular point in time, the mover of the motion may speak to the motion for five minutes; and a representative from the other sides may make a similar presentation after the hon. member for Welland South.

HIGH LAKE LEVELS

Mr. R. Haggerty (Welland South): Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In recommending the motion to the members of the Legislature this afternoon, I urge their full support in accepting the crisis of the high lake levels that exist along the shorelines of our Great Lakes system as a matter of importance and urgent public interest.

The problem concerns the communities bordering on lakes St. Clair, Huron, Erie and Ontario. They are most adversely affected by the present conditions. The highest levels of all time—the records go back to the year 1860—are predicted for 1973. This will be a critical year for high levels of water in the Great Lakes basin.

My main concern, Mr. Speaker, is the condition of Lake Erie at the present time. The hydrology of Lake Erie is such that it doesn't take too much of a wind to whip up a good storm on the lake. As I recall, in just a matter of an hour the winds can shift on Lake Erie and the water can be raised as high as seven to 14 feet at one end of the lake. It is called a tilting lake.

The input of rainfall in Lake Erie and the output by evaporation, I guess one would call it, pretty well equalizes the level. But last year there were adverse weather conditions in the Lake Erie basin. I believe there were five inches of rainfall above normal and this has certainly created one of the problems.

But I believe there are two or three other culprits in this matter which are also causing problems. I think one is Ontario Hydro and another is the St. Lawrence Seaway—and perhaps the International Joint Commission. The matter that comes to my mind at the present time is the Hudson Bay watershed where we have the diversion, I guess it is, of the Albany River. The course of the river is changed and it flows down to Lake Superior. This no doubt has caused some of the problems of the high water levels. Perhaps others are the Ontario Hydro projects at Queenston and the control weir on the Niagara River. The two generating stations—one that belongs to the Ontario government; the other that belongs to the New York State Power Authority—I believe bear some fault, along with the control weir there, in the high level of the water in that particular area. We have the location of the generating station down in the St. Lawrence River, the Eisenhower locks and so forth, where man-made devices have been installed, I think these have caused some of the problems of high water levels. I don't think they can be ruled out.

Mr. S. Lewis (Scarborough West): On a point of order, Mr. Speaker. I am terribly sorry, but do I understand that you have accepted the motion? That you are not now hearing debate on its legitimacy, and we are launched into the subject?

Mr. Speaker: I merely indicated to the House that the motion was in proper order and that a member of each party could speak for five minutes before I rule whether or not it is of sufficient public importance.

Mr. Lewis: I see. I am sorry.

Mr. Haggerty: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, I mentioned a few of these things. I can recall a press release in 1969 put out by this government that the people in the Province of Ontario, particularly on the Lake Ontario water basin, were complaining of the low water levels. This is the kind of thing I can't relate to the present situation, where there is a substantial increase in water levels in the Lake Ontario basin.

I believe that steps should be taken at once by all levels of government to provide some degree of relief and to lower the water levels. I would suggest to the House this afternoon that the government should take action immediately to call a joint meeting with the members of the Ontario Legislature whose ridings are affected, along with members of the different state assemblies on the American side, federal members and the International Joint Commission, to deal with the problem.

I consider that this is an immediate problem, and that disaster is no doubt facing all the constituencies within the Great Lakes basin. But the problem perhaps could have been looked after earlier. I refer to the 1953 report of the select committee then dealing with the levels of the Great Lakes. And I just can't grasp why this government hasn't taken any action or followed some of the steps or guidelines that were set out in that report. One recommendation in particular concerns the problem of zoning, and I stress that the government should have taken some action to control the building of cottages and so forth along the lakeshores where there are hazardous conditions.

In the Niagara region official plan that has come out, Mr. Speaker—I notice that this is the first time in any official plan that any municipality has designated the shorelines of Lake Erie and Lake Ontario as hazardous areas.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member's time has expired.

Mr. Haggerty: I appreciate the opportunity to bring this motion to the House this afternoon, Mr. Speaker, and I hope that the government in all sincerity will get on with the problem of the high levels on the Great Lakes.

Mr. Speaker: The New Democratic Party member now has five minutes.

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, I am not going to take the five minutes. I believe the hon. member for Welland South is entirely within his rights to bring the motion. I think he is right to judge it a matter of urgent public importance. There are people affected in the Great Lakes who have called the hon. member for Sandwich-Riverside (Mr. Burr); they are still building their barriers. They are even now still looking for further government support as they build their defences.

The question of negotiation about funding with the federal government is clearly important to this debate. It is not something that has thus far been discussed in the Throne Speech debate, and it is perhaps not appropriate that it be relegated to the Throne Speech debate, because there should be some exchange amongst the members of this House.

On every front we think it's a matter of urgent public importance and urge you, Mr. Speaker, to allow the debate to continue after you have heard from a government member.

Mr. Speaker: Is there a member from the government side who will make a contribution?

Hon. A. B. R. Lawrence (Provincial Secretary for Resources Development): Mr. Speaker, the government accepts entirely the attitude expressed by the leader of the New Democratic Party. There is no question, and we feel that by our actions and responses alone that we have demonstrated our acceptance of the point made by both speakers that there can be nothing much greater and of more immediate concern to a particular group of people in this province than the destruction of their lands and their homes and buildings by the disastrous conditions on the Great Lakes.

As a member of the government, as someone who has been involved for at least a year in the problems arising out of the lake levels, I think I can fairly say that we have worked steadily for months and, as the members have mentioned, we in the Province of Ontario have worked off and on for I suppose 70 or 80 years, along with the federal government, along with the American Corps of Engineers, along with the International Joint Commission, in our commitment of concern in relation to the problem of levels. The Minister of Natural Resources (Mr. Bernier), who is down now working in the areas affected so that his resources may be made immediately available, so that his presence will underline the government's concern, is there today, has been there before, and undoubtedly will be there tomorrow.

Mr. Bullbrook: On a point of order, I don't for one moment accuse the Provincial Secretary for Resources Development of misleading the House, but his colleague the Minister of Natural Resources is in my area today on a preordained meeting that was arranged long before the tragedy affecting my people and other people. He is tonight addressing the Lambton Conservation Club, is meeting with the member for Lambton (Mr. Henderson) and flying over the area with members of the St. Clair Parkway Committee. So I just want to point out that his main purpose in being there today is in connection with a commitment of long standing.

Hon. Mr. Lawrence: Well, his commitment, and the government's commitment, Mr. Speaker, is not limited to the Sarnia area. During his visit there I know he's had requests—and I think he has been able to respond to them—to visit other than the member for Sarnia's constituency. I'm sure he will.

All I can say, Mr. Speaker, is that we look forward to the debate. We have been addressing ourselves to the question of solutions as long as I've been acquainted with the problem, and that goes back at least 10 years. This has been accentuated, of course, by the disastrous levels of 1972-1973 and perhaps 1973-1974, and the government entirely supports the motion and the support, if received, from the New Democratic Party.

Mr. E. Sargent (Grey-Bruce): May I make an observation on this?

Mr. Speaker: No, not at this moment.

I should inform the members now that in accordance with the provisions of standing order 30 (a), a representative of each party has now explained his party's position on the motion and it remains for Mr. Speaker then to rule on whether the motion is in fact in order and of urgent public importance. I would refer the hon. members to rule 28 (b) and rule 28 (c) in which the conditions are set forth.

An hon. member: Section 30.

Mr. Speaker: Section 30, I should say. First of all, the matter proposed for discussion must relate to a genuine emergency calling for immediate and urgent consideration. Now, it has been deemed in the past that matters of urgent public importance are matters that have taken place almost very, very recently, and I can't help but recall that this matter has been one that has been a continuing matter of importance. At the same time, the nature, the importance of the whole topic is such that, in spite of the fact I do have some doubts that it qualifies under the rule, I'm going to permit the question as qualifying.

Now that I have ruled the motion to be in order and meeting the qualifications, the question then at this moment is, shall the debate proceed?

Those in favour of proceeding please say "aye."

Those opposed please say "nay."

In my opinion the "ayes" have it.

The hon. member for—

Hon. E. A. Winkler (Chairman, Management Board of Cabinet): Is there a time limit now placed upon each?

Mr. Speaker: Ten minutes, for debate.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: Thank you.

Mr. Speaker: Until all members have spoken or until 6 o'clock, whichever comes first.

Mr. D. C. MacDonald (York South): It's a rule, Mr. Minister.

An hon. member: Good ruling, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. R. F. Ruston (Essex-Kent): Mr. Speaker, I thank you for your considering our debate today and I will say that it is very urgent at this time. I did notice in your remarks that you wondered if it was an ongoing thing, but having spent last Saturday from 9 in the morning until 6 at night viewing about 35 miles of Lake St. Clair shoreline, I am personally convinced that this is an emergency now.

However, I would probably agree that it has been coming over the past year but I'm not convinced that anyone could stop it. I don't think that man himself can stop the rising lake levels when we have high precipitation in the previous year or two. In 1972, as some people will remember, we had, I think, the least amount of sunshine in about 20 years in western Ontario. Now that covered probably all Ontario, and this has a great deal to do with the evaporation from our lakes.

It is a really serious problem now. I have here about 10 sheets of pictures taken by some of the newspapers showing the high water over roads, cottages and so forth.

I can recall in 1934 when the lakes were so low that if one had a boat I guess one had to push it half a mile to get it going. In 1952, which was about 18 years later, we had high water. Members may recall that in 1963 and 1964 there was low water. We had very low water. In fact, a number of people complained that Chicago was stealing our water. That was the great Chicago steal!

I even attended meetings as head of one of the municipalities in Essex county. We had a meeting in Leamington at which some engineer was trying to figure out a way to divert water from St. James Bay and bring it down into the Great Lakes system. I understand the engineer's name was Kierans.

That was considered at that time because we felt we needed more water in the Great Lakes system. Thank goodness he didn't go ahead with his project because I'm afraid we would have been mired in our area.

However, it's just nine or 10 years later and we are back up to the high levels again. The last 10 years' average for high levels in the Lake St. Clair area is 573.7 ft above sea level. The high water for 1969 was 575.3 ft. and the 1934 all-time low was 530 ft. Just imagine—it was 65 in. lower than it was on March 16 of this year. It is rather hard to believe but that is the way it was.

In Lake Erie that was 572 ft above sea level and this is 59 in. different from the 1934 level. Lake Erie went up 14 in. in the past year so we are really having a great problem with this. Some people also claim that high water cycles can be caused by the axis of the earth moving. I'm no expert and don't pretend to be; I only read and people have mentioned this sometimes. It may have moved but the problem is I don't think that is quite so because it comes every so many years, but the high water cycle seems to vary; sometimes it runs in 20-year and sometimes in 30-year cycles. We are not sure whether that really has anything to do with it.

Of course, with the high water the way it is, it's great for the St. Lawrence Seaway and the shipping companies. Some people claim that because the shipping companies like this—they can load a third more on their boats than when the water is low—probably they have something to do with trying to get the water levels up. In all the studies and so forth that just doesn't seem to show up. One can't seem to find that.

I talked to the secretary of the International Joint Commission and he said that if they stopped up Lake Superior and raised it an inch and a quarter it would lower Lake Erie about an inch in two years' time. That kind of throws that out and there are so many different opinions.

My own opinion is that 90 per cent of it is caused by natural causes. Probably five per cent could be controlled under the controls we have now, if they were put into effect at the right time. I suppose one inch counts a lot if your house has water underneath it and it is coming up to the floor. Then it comes up one more inch, you've got it all over your house. I guess that's when every inch counts.

The real problem in our area from the last storm was the wave action that did so much damage. I visited a number of homes where the foundations were completely taken out. I visited one two-storey home where the front porch had gone. The floor of the porch was underneath the house next to it; it knocked the blocks out from underneath there. The whole walls of the front of the house were right out; chesterfields and everything were all out.

That person with his wife and two children moved out at 7:30 on Saturday morning, March 17. I asked him what it was like on Friday night and he said, "Well, it was blowing, but we never thought it would get so high." So they didn't really have much of an opportunity to do much.

You might recall that on that particular day it was snowing and blowing. We had about 30 mph wind. I think that was the first day I had ever seen anyone using boats at the same time as they used snowmobiles.

I had seen people being evacuated with boats from the lake areas, and on that evening there were about 25 snowmobiles going down by my place because we had had about four inches of snow during the day. So it was quite a sight. It wasn't very pleasant, however, but this is what happened on that particular day.

There are a number of different ways to solve this. I suppose something along the shoreline to defeat the wave action is probably the most important. I had three different suggestions, and I thought of them myself. The first is that we dike the whole county, but that spoils the whole lakefront area. I also had suggested, and I thought of it myself, that we'd go out about 200 feet from the shoreline and build a big rock area to stop the wave action from coming in. There again you have a permanent dike which really spoils your whole view, and so forth.

Another suggestion, which may be much more adaptable, would be to make sure that every property owner has a proper breakwall in front of his own property. You may have a good breakwall in front of your own, but if your neighbour has no breakwall, then your property is going to go because the water just comes up on to the bare land and washes around your own. So it is a case where everybody is going to have a breakwall of some form or we just cannot survive.

I think that it's going to have to be the responsibility of all three levels of government. I think we should sit down fast and figure out the best way to work on it. I think we should have some weirs, maybe out in the water, to break the wave action. We could probably protect our homes then if we had the wave action stopped. We could probably dike up around, even with sand bags, plastic, and so forth. If the water did pour in at least we would have some control of the wave action which does so much damage to the property.

I know that the member for Welland South (Mr. Haggerty) mentioned a report in 1953, and I think the member for Sarnia (Mr. Bullbrook) will be dwelling on that, so I don't want to mention anything there. I am very concerned about some of the recommendations in the report. One of the recommendations I am thinking about, having travelled and lived in the area all my life, is that we are going to take a very close look at the level of any future building, and where it is going to be built, and not only where it is going to be built, but the level compared to the high water mark for the last 50 or 100 years. If we are talking of 575.5 ft above sea level, at which the water is now, then we should be talking probably of at least five or six feet above that for the basis of a home, even if it's back half a mile or a quarter of a mile. I think that is something that we have to consider.

I suppose we should talk about flood insurance. I have looked into the flood insurance they have in the United States and it is very cumbersome and doesn't really work that well.

Mr. Speaker: The member has about 30 seconds left.

Mr. Ruston: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would just close at that. I want to stress to everyone here that it is a real problem and it is going to take really quick action at the provincial-federal level of government especially, in co-operation with the municipal councils. Thank you.

Mr. Speaker: The member for Sandwich-Riverside.

Mr. F. A. Burr (Sandwich-Riverside): Mr. Speaker, what I have to say will include some remarks that my colleague, the member for Windsor West (Mr. Bounsall), would probably have made had he been able to get into the discussion. If time permits, he may still be able to do so.

As a member whose riding was one of those damaged badly by the Nov. 14, 1972, storm, and damaged even worse by the March 17, 1973, storm, I have been deeply involved in trying to get guidance and leadership and initiative from the two senior governments. I began writing to Prime Minister Trudeau and Premier Davis in January of this year. Perhaps in the Throne debate I may have a chance to recount some of my frustrations.

However, today, suffice to say that after five weeks the Premier wrote announcing that he had decided that the Provincial Secretary of Resources Development was the proper person to worry about the flooding around the Great Lakes. And on March 7 that provincial secretary announced that all that could be done was to compensate the victims. He was quoted in the Windsor Star as saying: "Any useful work on diking and shore protection would come too late for this year."

Mr. Speaker, I don't believe this is true at all, because lake dwellers in my riding have been working in the last few weeks to strengthen their defences; they are still working in the two or three good days that we are going to have this week. In fact, they have run out of sandbags and want to know where they can get more. Some of them are learning valuable lessons on how to improve their defences against the storms that inevitably will follow throughout 1973.

The provincial secretary has announced also that the Ontario and federal governments are planning to spend between $100 million and $200 million over the next 20 or 30 years to protect our shoreline. The time to start was last fall—early last fall—when Professor Paul Vandall of the University of Windsor began to warn that lake levels would be unusually high and that preventive measures should be taken. Professor Vandall has been uttering warnings regularly ever since then and has recommended that Hans New of the Bedford Oceanographic Institute at Bedford, Nova Scotia, should be co-opted by the Ontario government to act as an adviser in this crisis. Hans New is the only wave expert in Canada.

The first recommendation of the 1953 select committee on the levels of the Great Lakes, with which the Minister of Natural Resources showed that he was quite unfamiliar yesterday during the question period, was that a study of lake currents be made, since an understanding of these currents is of fundamental importance to sound beach protective measures. Our lake dwellers desperately need expert advice and they need it fast.

The time to start, as I said, was last fall. The time to finish is, I would say, about 1980, not in 30 years as the provincial secretary suggested, which is the year 2003; not in 20 years, which was the minimum time he mentioned, which is 1993; but before the next high level period, which may well occur by 1983. We should have our defences completed before that time.

How different, Mr. Speaker, is the action of our governments and the action of the United States Army Corps of Engineers. On Dec. 26, 1972—the day after Christmas—the latter issued through its north central division at Chicago, a statement headed "Operation Foresight":

Major General Ernest Graves, division engineer, north central division, United States Army Corps of Engineers, today announced a programme of advance emergency measures to provide temporary protection against flooding to low-lying areas on the shores of the Great Lakes. Known as Operation Foresight, the programme will help local interests to build temporary dikes where flooding is expected to accompany severe storms. In 1969 and 1971 Operation Foresight prevented over $110 million worth of flood damage along the upper Mississippi River and its tributaries.

Previous studies of the Great Lakes shoreline and recent storm experience [they were referring to Nov. 14, of course] indicate the possibility of providing this type of flood protection to a number of areas along the Great Lakes. These areas are subject to flooding from storms during the current period of extremely high lake levels. The programme will begin with field surveys of potential flood areas, and meetings with local authorities to reach agreement on joint flood protection measures.

Guidelines for Operation Foresight, which comes under Public Law 84-99, emphasize that the primary effort must be by the local people. [And that, of course, Mr. Speaker, is what we hope for here]. However, the Corps of Engineers may provide technical assistance, loan of supplies and equipment not readily available from state and local authorities, construction work beyond state and local capabilities, and control and direction of emergency work if requested by local officials.

Public Law 84-99 pertains specifically to flooding and does not cover prevention of shore or beach erosion.

That's the kind of leadership and guidance we expected from our governments and it is the kind that we didn't get.

The Corps of Engineers has all kinds of publications. Here is one: "Shore Protection Guidelines." Another one: "Recommended Field Practices and Construction Methods for Flood Emergency." Here's another: "Introduction to Floodproofing."

The scope of Operation Foresight is to provide protection against (1) rising lake waters from expected spring runoff; (2) storm-driven high waters from spring and fall storms; (3) high waters in rivers backed up because of high lake levels. Its authorized projects are mainly to provide protection to prevent flooding of homes and other buildings, not to protect lawns and beaches.

The federal programme provides technical assistance, if required, and the execution and supervision of necessary construction. It also provides the loan of supplies and equipment not readily available, such as lumber, sandbags, pumps and all the rest, all of which are accountable.

Where flood control projects cannot be carried out because of lack of co-operation, lack of feasibility or other reasons, the Corps of Engineers also gives advice on floodproofing. Floodproofing is any means of reducing damage if floodwaters do reach buildings. Floodproofing includes window shields of metal or plywood; door shields of the same kind; the waterproofing of machinery; the disconnecting or raising of electrical circuits.

Individual homeowners are urged to prepare ahead of time careful plans for removing or raising of furniture. Low protection walls can be built around furnaces, air conditioners or other valuable basement equipment. In some homes backup valves in sewer pipes would be very useful. Auxiliary generators can help. Extra pumps can reduce damage considerably. In some houses the permanent sealing of basement openings no longer used, such as coal chutes, would be of great help. The raising or relocation of hot water heaters, washers, dryers, furnaces, freezers, refrigerators—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. We have about 15 seconds left.

Mr. Burr: —and any other equipment which might be damaged by flooding, would be feasible in some homes.

To summarize, if flood control is not possible, floodproofing can reduce damage and flood insurance could offer some compensation.

In concluding, Mr. Speaker, it has often been said that governments are created to allow the people to do collectively what they cannot do individually. Lakeshore protection is a very good example of the need for government action, especially in the most threatened areas—co-ordinated and supervised, and perhaps subsidized action—

Mr. Speaker: Order please. Your time has expired.

Mr. Burr: —is the only satisfactory answer.

Mr. Speaker: Thank you.

The member for Ontario South.

Mr. W. Newman (Ontario South): Just speaking briefly to the problems we are faced with—and of course I am referring basically to Lake Ontario—a great deal of the shorelines in my area have been very badly affected by the high water.

First, I would like to take this opportunity to congratulate the Province of Ontario for taking the initiative in coming forward with a programme to meet our immediate need—our immediate problem as far as diking and some protection is concerned. This is more than I can say for our counterparts in Ottawa, with their flood disaster relief fund which says we must pay the first $8.5 million. But they'll only pay after the fact, not before. It's too bad. Well, they have been co-operative insofar as ARDA agreements are concerned.

However, they have not come forward at this time to help carry the immediate costs of the immediate problems we are faced with of those people, and many of them are in my area—and I assume in many other areas of the province—who stand to lose their homes because of the bad high water problems we are having. All we need are two or three bad storms right now to wipe out about 30 homes in the riding that I represent. And I do congratulate the province on this matter.

One of the things I would like to know when the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Stewart) does get up to speak, is the limitation on this 80-20 fund? How far can it go; how many millions is it going to cost? I am sure he doesn't know at this time, but how do we go about getting these funds? How do we get on with it immediately?

I have been talking to the subsidies branch of the Ministry of Treasury, Economics and Intergovernmental Affairs and applications must go there. But perhaps the minister could clear up how we could move on this very quickly, as far as the municipalities are concerned, at the present time.

Another thing, Mr. Speaker, that I think is very important—and the former speaker was talking about it—is assistance. I do know that the Ministry of Natural Resources has at its disposal certain staff who will come out and give their advice to individuals and home owners on how they may protect their homes in the area.

I just feel that the need is for long-term solutions. We talked about this, if I remember correctly, when the water was high in 1952. We talked about long-term solutions at that time. I am quite sure once the crisis has passed, hopefully, within the next year, that we will not forget the long-term solutions we are now talking about and the sharing with the federal people in providing a long-term solution.

Mr. Speaker, I'd just like to say again, congratulations to our government for taking speedy action to help the people in our area who really needed the help.

Mr. MacDonald: Pretty pathetic.

Mr. Speaker: The member for Sarnia.

Mr. J. E. Bullbrook (Sarnia): I am going to join the member for Ontario South (Mr. W. Newman) in congratulating the government of Ontario in assisting us, within its limitations of talent and finance, in meeting the problems that arose as a result of the storm. We got co-operation in that respect.

For example, I should record in the House that next Wednesday, the mayor of my community, together with the Reeves of another community, will have the opportunity of discussing further the formula for compensation and assistance as elicited from the Provincial Secretary for Resources Development (Mr. Lawrence) on March 21 in his statement. He is going to meet with them next Wednesday.

But I really think nothing is served by chastising the federal government in this connection. And nothing is really served in unduly complimenting the provincial government. I for one didn't intend to rise to take issue unduly with this particular minister. Suffice it to say that I have before me a letter that I wrote on Jan. 5 to the minister that expressed my deep concern about the imminence of the danger.

It didn't really require the US Corps of Engineers—and if I might digress, that is a tragedy in itself. It's a federal and provincial tragedy that on this side of the border we have to rely upon the US Corps of Engineers to dictate to us what it views as an appropriate "Operation Foresight," and what it views as the impending danger levels on the Great Lakes.

Surely to goodness we have to have some direction on the federal level; some direction on the provincial level; some community of effort between those two levels of government so that the people of Canada and, more importantly as far as our responsibility is concerned, the people of Ontario recognize what the situation is.

I pointed out in that letter of Jan. 5 to the provincial secretary that I was vitally concerned on behalf of one named constituent, a Mrs. Maxine Guthrie, whose only source of income were 10 cabins located at an address on Lakeshore Rd. I pointed out to the minister that her very address was a ludicrous one, because the road had fallen in. She had no access; she had no egress.

I don't say that the secretary or the minister could wave a magic wand and solve all the problems that face my constituents.

I have had the opportunity, albeit in an informal fashion, as I said in my letter, of talking to the provincial secretary previously in the House, and he informed me that it was the intention of the government to establish a task force in this connection.

I pointed out in that letter also that the problem with the task force that was anticipated was that the damage would be done by the time this task force reported. I want to superimpose upon this that I thought it was almost frightening for the Minister of Natural Resources, in response to my question yesterday, to say that he would take under advisement the question of the recommendations of the select committee in 1953. I must say I got the feeling that the minister didn't even know about the recommendations in 1953.

I must say also that there was express concern by me when the Premier of Ontario (Mr. Davis) reportedly said in Goderich during that election, in response to a question in connection with erosion and lake levels, let us say, that it was federal responsibility. We're not going to get anywhere, firstly, if the provincial politicians say it is a federal responsibility and the federal politicians say it is a provincial responsibility.

I think the time has come that we in this Legislature have to voice our concern to the government and, if need be, to ask our federal colleagues to voice concern to that level of government that the International Joint Commission has to become an effective voice. They have no powers whatever; all they can do is make recommendations. It is almost platitudinous to have them meet each year. It is almost trite to have the heads of the governments abutting the Great Lakes meet each year over cocktails and caviare to decide that something must be done.

The fact is that the American federal jurisdiction, the American state jurisdictions, the Canadian provincial jurisdictions and the federal government of Canada unilaterally are going to have to give up some of their constitutional prerogatives to the International Joint Commission if anything is ever going to be effected. It is not the kind of problem where we can stand in this House and expect the Provincial Secretary for Resources Development to solve it. He can't solve it. It's impossible for him so to do. All he can do is reciprocate to these tragic situations that continue to arise, be it by act of God or otherwise.

Mr. J. E. Stokes (Thunder Bay): Like the IJC, they can only recommend.

Mr. Bullbrook: Yes. I am not going to say, as some people have said, that the higher levels in the Great Lakes are for the benefit of Ontario Hydro. I really don't know that. All I know is that on Saturday morning when I went out and tried to view the storm, it wasn't Ontario Hydro that was to blame. It was the forces of nature that were adversely affecting my constituents.

The fact of the matter also—and I want to say this to my colleagues, through the Speaker—that it is absolutely essential that Mr. Herter and Mr. Robichaud and their colleagues on the International Joint Commission be given power. And to give them power we have to recognize that we have to give up parts of our power for the common good of all the people who live in that great basin. This has to be done.

That basically is the thrust of my remarks. I was going to be somewhat partisan and talk about the recommendations in 1953. It really is a sad commentary on the inertia of government that those recommendations, falling within the provincial jurisdiction, were followed up in only a very slight fashion.

I don't think programmes like ARDA—and I hope the Minister of Agriculture and Food recognizes this when he gets up—can be the instruments of compensating these people, let alone effectually remedying the situation and protecting their interests. ARDA can't be it. We just can't restrict it in that fashion. It must be much more all-embracing. I say this to you—there has been inertia on the part of the government but there is no advantage to be gained by us by spelling that out in line and paragraph.

Paragraph 6 of that report talks about the nature of provincial participation. There should have been greater provincial participation. If there was inertia on the part of the federal government we needed ministers who would try to point out to them that something had to be done. Members will recognize that in January this year 36 members of the Congress of the United States, en masse, went to President Nixon and asked him to do what I am asking that we in this Legislature do. That is, to give up to the International Joint Commission some of the responsibilities that are inherent in the federal government of the United States.

I think this has got to be the answer. What we want to see is some direction now. We appreciate what is being done at the present time. We say that frankly we would like to become more involved. One of my colleagues has made the comment that we in the Legis-

I am not certain that a task force is the entire answer. If there is the appointment of a task force I would exhort, through the Speaker to the Provincial Secretary, for Resources Development, that we who are involved in our riding responsibilities be apprised of what they are doing, where they are going, what recommendations they have.

I will close in saying this: The answer doesn't lie within this chamber. The answer doesn't lie on Parliament Hill. The answer lies really in a recognition that this huge problem, monumentally significant, astronomically costly, has to be given over to a body that really can assess it on a full-time basis and that is given the powers to meet the problem.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for York South.

Mr. MacDonald: I am not going to address myself to the technicalities of this problem and how we can cope with it but rather to the overall policy and particularly the means of financing that policy. I think our problem, notwithstanding the rather fulsome praise of the provincial government by the hon. member for Ontario South, is that we have had an absence of effective policy at the provincial level. That absence isn't going to be removed, that vacuum isn't going to be filled by once again engaging in that rather childish pursuit of blaming Ottawa.

The minister in charge of resources in this province was quoted the other day as saying that the potential loss from flooding and these storms in the Province of Ontario might be in the range of $200 million. He said that that was beyond the capacity of the Treasury of the Province of Ontario to cope with. If that is the case let's recall the policy framework within which this government has operated in coping with disasters until now.

If we had a flood, if we had a hailstorm or if we had a hurricane, or something of that nature, the government policy was that if a local group got together and raised money it would match it dollar for dollar. I can think of nothing more fatuously ineffective than that. The government is saying to the local area, which has faced disaster and has all the consequences flowing from the disaster, that the people have got to go out and raise a dollar before it will match it with a dollar.

That has been the general policy up until now. With recent disasters, the government has become mildly more generous. It has got on to an 80-20 basis and, to quote from the minister, "with those municipalities affected which wish to participate, for dike repairs, pumping off flood waters, temporary diking and road repairs."

The rest of the minister's comments tended to chastise Ottawa. I am not going to defend Ottawa—God knows the inadequacies of the policies there are painfully obvious—but I think it is well for the Legislature to acknowledge at least what Ottawa is offering, and then see what this government might do to come up jointly with a programme which might anticipate the repetition of this kind of a disaster.

I want to quote briefly for the record, Mr. Speaker, two or three paragraphs from a statement by the federal minister, Mr. Davis, as reported in the House of Commons minutes of proceedings and evidence of the standing committee on miscellaneous estimates on Wednesday, March 14, 1973. He was being queried by the hon. member for Toronto-Lakeshore. Mr. Davis' reply was:

Perhaps I can put it this way. There are programmes in several provinces of the kind that Ontario might be interested in. One programme in which the ministers from Ontario showed considerable interest was the one on the Fraser River in British Columbia. Floods are an annual event there, and because of the dikes having been built as long ago as 100 years these dikes have been raised and raised and there have been very serious floods running into hundreds of millions of dollars, with the federal government getting hooked for some part of the compensation. So after a long period of time a joint federal-provincial scheme to build protective works has developed.

The current scheme calls for a development costing in the order of $80 million, spread over a dozen years, for diking along that river whose flow might fluctuate from 1 to 30 or 40. This is a tremendous range in flow. In contrast, in the Great Lakes a flood occurs within once every 40 years or so.

So, until the population really accumulates around the Great Lakes or the flood situation gets to its present state, there is no great outcry for the kind of protection which has been annual in British Columbia. Nevertheless, there are programmes for a 50-50 sharing of protective works and if the Province of Ontario wants to develop a long-term scheme [I repeat, Mr. Speaker] if the Province of Ontario wants to develop a long-term scheme jointly with our engineers, for which it is prepared to put up a dollar, I think the federal government has to put up a matching dollar.

Another query was put to the minister and I'll read it. It was from Mr. Grier, the hon. member for Toronto-Lakeshore:

Has the compensation to which you referred earlier in respect to the Fraser, largely been paid to people whose livelihood has been affected by flooding, or has it gone so far as to compensate people whose homes or residences have been affected?

Mr. Davis' reply:

Property is included. There is a sliding scale which has been in effect now for a couple of years and is applied to flooding, not only in British Columbia but in several other provinces. It works something like this: The province pays the first dollar per capita. In Ontario's case the flood would have to exceed approximately $8 million damage to property and individuals' livelihood before the federal government begins to make an contribution. On the next $2 the federal government puts up 50 per cent. On the next $2 75 per cent—

Hon. Mr. Lawrence: Fifty per cent of the increment.

Mr. MacDonald: Yes, 50 per cent of the $2, right.

Hon. Mr. Lawrence: No, on the—

Mr. MacDonald: The first dollar is paid by the province; on the next $2 they pay half; on the next $2 they pay 75 per cent—

Hon. Mr. Lawrence: It is 50-50 at $40 million.

Mr. MacDonald: Okay—and beyond that they pay 90 per cent.

Hon. Mr. Lawrence: Yes.

Mr. MacDonald: Okay. What does it mean, Mr. Speaker? Here is this minister and his colleagues behind him bleating that the federal government won't do anything.

Hon. Mr. Lawrence: That is compensation.

Mr. MacDonald: Just listen for a moment. If the hon. minister in charge of resources in this province is at all accurate when he says there is a potential loss of $200 million, what does it mean? The Province of Ontario has to pay the first $8 million. On the next $16 million it's split 50-50. On the next $16 million it's split 12-4, with the $12 million being paid by the federal government, and on any other millions beyond that—they have not set a ceiling, though I presume this is open to negotiation in each given year—the federal government pays 90 cents on the dollar.

Hon. Mr. Lawrence: That is compensation.

Mr. MacDonald: Compensation for loss of livelihood or for loss of property.

Hon. Mr. Lawrence: Not property.

Mr. MacDonald: Yes. I am sorry—

Hon. Mr. Lawrence: Not all property. You must—

Mr. MacDonald: I am sorry, I suppose I could let the minister read the record in view of the limited amount of time.

Hon. Mr. Lawrence: No. Just to get the facts right, Mr. Speaker—

Mr. MacDonald: Just a minute. The question was:

Has the compensation to which you referred earlier in respect to the Fraser largely been paid to people whose livelihood has been affected by flooding or has it gone so far as to compensate people whose homes or residences have been affected?

The federal minister's reply: "Property is included."

Hon. Mr. Lawrence: But he is not answering that in an accurate sense. I mean—it is written out so I am not arguing with you—it is quite clear in the terms of the federal offer—

Mr. Speaker: We are intruding in the time—

Mr. MacDonald: That is okay. Fine.

Hon. Mr. Lawrence: I thought at this point you might—

Mr. MacDonald: Okay, fine.

Hon. Mr. Lawrence: It doesn't apply to recreational land. It doesn't apply to commercial and industrial property or property that is capable of being insured and so that wipes out a vast amount of damage. So I don't think anyone could comprehend that when you've taken out all those forms of property and you are limited to permanent residences and personal firms—

Mr. Burr: Farmhouses.

Hon. Mr. Lawrence: —which are uninsurable basically; it has got to be uninsurable—that you would ever get into the hundreds of balmy millions in this province or any other province. Whereas in the Fraser Valley you are dealing with market gardeners and you are dealing with intensive farming and you are dealing with permanent residences where they start off at a much lower base and it's just great.

Mr. MacDonald: The only thing that I find a little strange is, I'm not in a position to dispute the minister's listing of exemptions in a deal that the federal government would make, but here is the federal minister speaking here and he makes none of these exceptions.

Hon. Mr. Lawrence: Well, it is all in print. It is all in print.

Mr. MacDonald: He says that it is available to other provinces. He says it is available to other provinces. It has been made available to British Columbia and other provinces in recent years. All I'm saying is that even if the minister has got to operate only on the basis of residential property, private firms, farmland and things of this nature, it seems to me that beyond the first $8 million, which in terms of the $200 million figure that the hon. Minister of Natural Resources has mentioned, $8 million is a small amount. You've got $192 million beyond that. Beyond that, the federal government is meeting 50-50, and at least on personal properties and private firms and farmlands, 75-25 and then 90-10.

Hon. Mr. Lawrence: If you get up to a gross of $100 million.

Mr. MacDonald: What does the minister mean, if you get up to a gross of $100 million?

Hon. Mr. Lawrence: They pay nothing until $8 million, as the member points out.

Mr. MacDonald: Right.

Hon. Mr. Lawrence: This is not for works, this is compensation. I notice in some of the remarks that have been made that people one moment talk about the cost of works—which I would expect the Minister of National Resources meant when he said $200 million, and that is a sensible sort of figure for the kind of programme that has been discussed here this afternoon—

Mr. Speaker: You have about 30 seconds left.

Hon. Mr. Lawrence: If the member is talking about compensation, then it is not until you get a fund of damage suffered by this isolated group, at $40 million for example, that the figure becomes 20-20, or up to $100 million approximately until it becomes 75-25, and great!—at $200 million it may be 90. But does the member honestly think that the personal property compensation, with those limitations in Ontario, would ever be in those ranges?

Mr. MacDonald: Mr. Speaker, I just want to make this comment. I haven't seen the details of the proposal that the federal government—

Hon. Mr. Lawrence: I am getting a copy for the member.

Mr. MacDonald: Okay. I shall be glad to take a look at it and we will have an opportunity later in the session to come back to it again. But on the basis of this, on the next $2 the federal government puts up 50 cents; on the next $2, 75, and on the next two, 90. So beyond a $40 million total, where there is a 50-50, the federal will carry 90 per cent.

Mr. Speaker: Time has expired.

Hon. Mr. Lawrence: Well, I interrupted, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. MacDonald: I have nothing more to say. I can sum it up in 30 seconds. I think there is more opportunity to work out a programme that will meet the needs and forestall the kinds of disaster and loss we've had in the Province of Ontario. I think the obligation is on this government to sit down with Ottawa and work it out within what they are now offering, get it more generous if it can, but not waste time blaming them. Let's get a programme, because up until now we have had a farcical programme.

Hon. Mr. Lawrence: It is not a question of blame.

Mr. Speaker: The member for—

Mr. B. Gilbertson (Algoma): Glengarry.

Mr. Speaker: Glengarry.

Mr. O. F. Villeneuve (Glengarry): Mr. Speaker, I feel perhaps I should say something on this subject. I do want to sympathize with any of the members who have people who are directly affected along the shorelines of the Great Lakes. I was a member of that lake levels committee in 1952, and travelled along the shorelines from Lake St. Clair to Lake Erie and Lake Ontario. I can assure the members that I have every sympathy for the people who are directly affected.

However, it must not be forgotten that the power of mankind cannot interfere with, nor has it found an answer to the changing levels of these lakes. It has been estimated by qualified people, professionals, who have made tests, that Lake Erie in a favourable season, a dry summer, can be lowered by as much as two feet or more just through evaporation. Last year, as has been pointed out, was a year of excessive precipitation and, therefore, one can understand that weather conditions were beyond the control of man. This does not happen overnight because tests have been made indicating water coming down from Lake Superior to Lake Ontario takes 22 months in its journey. Therefore, a combination of factors causes this problem.

It appears that we have cycles of low levels and also cycles of high levels. We can't blame any one government because the laws of nature are such that erosion is a worldwide problem. Certainly, when the level is high, depending on the soil along the shoreline, the situation is greatly aggravated and far more excessive than when it's lower or at a normal level.

At that time, as I recall, coming from Lake Superior right down through to the St. Lawrence River, on the Ontario shoreline alone we have almost 3,000 miles of shoreline. The state of Indiana, as I recall at that time, has a total of 45 miles along Lake Michigan. Not one of those states actually assumes responsibility in the way of putting out public money for private property.

As I'm trying to paint the picture, it's a gigantic programme. I realize that the people and the members are conscientious enough to bring these problems to the fore and to the attention of governments; but it's one thing to talk and another thing to remedy it because, after all, basically, no one knows, the amount of money that it would require. I think it's beyond the capacity of governments to do in a short-term pull.

We have received much of that information from the United States Army Corps of Engineers. They are set up, and possibly more advanced than we are in this country, but the Great Lakes basin is navigable water for which a great deal of research should come at the federal level. Studies of currents and such like are very vague but they do show that they have an influence on the erosion problem in particular.

In 1853, the Toronto Islands were supposed to have been a peninsula, solid land right to the main shore, but builders at that time with equipment, sandsuckers and such like, used that material for construction and building. As a result, with the rise in water and the currents along the shoreline, this opened up the gap. You people are much more familiar with it than I am. The east gap to the Toronto harbour has to be dredged every now and again because of this floating material which they seem to feel comes in the neighbourhood of Scarborough Bluffs.

As I recall it, at that time the St. Lawrence power project was in the making and this report was held back a year — not through my efforts but the International Joint Commission was having meetings in Rochester on the American side because the same complaint was raised there.

People had damage done to their property along the lakefront and as a result there was quite a controversy over the duct dam which was in existence just below Prescott on the St. Lawrence River. It held back the waters through that narrow channel; as you know the precambrian rock is there and a range comes across there. For navigation purposes, it was possible to have that dam in the channel; and it was needed at that time.

What many people failed to realize was that there is only a two-foot drop on the St. Lawrence River from Kingston to 55 miles east. The real drop comes from that point to the Saunders Dam where the river fell at that time by 92 ft. The face of that dam at its greatest height is 85 ft.

There are problems which are not within the jurisdiction of the Province of Ontario connected with the flow that goes through that power dam. When the Ottawa River flows into Montreal harbour, which is in the latter part of May or the early part of June, it affects the level of the river at Montreal harbour and that has to be controlled.

Therefore, if it so happens that the high water levels coincide and the St. Lawrence is running through at full capacity and the Ottawa River is exceptionally high, the water level has to be controlled at a certain level in order to meet those requirements of Montreal harbour. That's a navigation problem which is at the federal level and which is beyond any jurisdiction that the Province of Ontario may have.

Mr. Speaker, the same problems which existed then exist now. I recall going out to Saltfleet township where people had built homes without going to the council to receive permits. The result was there was quite a controversy between two individuals and the reeve at that time because these people were not allowed to move into their homes. The council offered them free land—a free site—so they could transport the houses they had built without permission to a higher level. But that controversy wasn't in very respectable language, I can tell you, human nature being what it is.

Mr. Speaker: Thirty seconds left.

Mr. Villeneuve: If we had known of a lot of these problems years ago, perhaps restrictions could have been made to help. On the other hand how can you judge a 50 mile an hour wind? They have records of this in 1948 where the west end of Lake Erie was 13.4 ft lower than it was at Buffalo! I just point these out because it is not an easy problem to resolve.

Mr. D. A. Paterson (Essex South): Mr. Speaker, I concur with the remarks of the member for Glengarry; he and I have talked about this serious problem on several occasions. I preface my remarks, by saying I've been involved in erosion problems for the past eight years in my particular riding so this is nothing new to me.

I must say, to be fair to the provincial departments, that certainly the Department of Lands and Forests, as it was called, and its engineering staff, have been very fair with people in my riding over the past eight years. I think this has been heightened with the tragic storm that hit my particular area and that of the hon. member for Kent (Mr. Spence) last November.

I express this on behalf of the people in my riding, that we appreciate the work done by the Ministry of Natural Resources, the ARDA branch of the Ministry of Agriculture and Food, and the Department of highways, as it used to be. I think there is a feeling of mutual agreement among our provincial Minister of Agriculture and Food, who looks after our ARDA projects, the federal Minister of Agriculture, and the federal minister responsible for DREE.

However, yesterday, I and the residents in my riding were very disturbed and very disappointed at the announcement that the licences regarding sandsuckers had again been renewed by the Ministry of Natural Resources. This particular work is going on less than a mile away from where the province has expended some $300,000 on experimental erosion control work on private lands, to try to come up with a five-year study to see what methods are best.

Even that programme itself, Mr. Speaker, has foundered, in that they ran out of funds a year or two ago to have the research people look at the area and make necessary repairs where these erosion control structures were breaking down.

I refer to the recommendations of the select committee of 1953, on which the member for Glengarry served and of which the former member for Essex South, Mr. Murdoch, was a part, I believe. Recommendations 6 and 7—I'll read those into the record, if I may, Mr. Speaker—are very pertinent to this subject, and I quote; first, No. 6:

That wherever, on the shoreline of the Great Lakes in Ontario, land is subject to such erosion or inundation as, in the judgement of the Minister of Planning and Development, makes it unsuitable for private development, the minister be empowered to restrict or prohibit the use of such land until suitable protective works have been installed.

And 7:

That wherever, on the shoreline of the Great Lakes in Ontario, the use of land is restricted or prohibited because of the threat of erosion or inundation, the municipality or the valley conservation authority, if such has been established in the area in which such land is situate, be empowered to acquire these lands for park, recreation or protective purposes.

I think that in the past 20 years we have been remiss, at the provincial level, the county level and the local municipal level. Possibly we should have accepted that recommendation and acted on it in a good many cases.

In my experience, Mr. Speaker, the township of Mersea did refuse to allow one subdivision to go in a year or two ago because of the low-lying nature of the land. I believe this was on recommendation of the county health unit, and I commend them for this.

But I think this is where we have been remiss over the past few years, and might have alleviated much of the problem that has occurred in the past few weeks.

The other point I'd like to make, Mr. Speaker, is that legislation regarding conservation authorities should be changed. I had the privilege of serving on that select committee a few years ago, and again currently on the select committee on drainage. These are areas of concern in regard to the Great Lakes levels, as they have an interplay. I feel that the conservation authorities must somehow have the jurisdiction to do some sort of erosion control work, and thus be the mechanical means whereby the two levels of government can be approached in an orderly manner for financial assistance under a basic policy.

I was quite shocked a few weeks ago, Mr. Speaker, at our select committee on drainage when we had four representatives of the Ministry of Natural Resources, one of whom is on the Great Lakes study group. At the conclusion of that meeting, I asked him if they were going to make any changes in their policy on erosion control. I am sorry to report, Mr. Speaker, that they were not even aware that their engineering branch did have a policy on erosion control at that time. It is an eight-point programme that was developed in July, 1972, and first enunciated in my particular riding.

In the county of Essex we have suffered tremendously at the north shore of the county, as well as in my particular riding. Our county council has endorsed a resolution asking for flood insurance similar to crop insurance. I have replied to county council in this regard, based on my knowledge of the workings of crop insurance. In the folder outlining the details of that programme, they specifically indicate that crop insurance will not be given where there is low-lying land that is subject to normal flooding. Similarly, they will not extend that coverage where in their judgement there is poor management. And I have asked county council if this was what they meant by the type of flood insurance they wished. I don't feel it is practical; I don't think the people who have built in these low-lying areas could afford the premiums.

Basically, Mr. Speaker, I agree with many of the remarks here today. Certainly we could go into all the recommendations of the Great Lakes water resources conference held by the Engineering Institute of Canada a few years ago—but that would not solve the problem at hand. Surely we can act on the recommendations of the select committee report of 1953 and the engineering studies that have been done since, and come up with some sort of a comprehensive programme, worked out mutually by the Ottawa government, the province, the counties, the regional governments and the local municipalities. In the meantime, Mr. Speaker, I think all we can do is pray for no winds and plenty of sunshine.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Wentworth.

Mr. I. Deans (Wentworth): Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I want to join the hon. member in his prayer because I think it is going to be absolutely necessary, judging from the actions of the provincial government to date.

I want to say also, in connection with the remarks of the hon. member for Sarnia, that I appeared before the International Joint Commission in 1969, I believe, and I made just such a recommendation, that they be given additional powers to deal with matters of concern in the Great Lakes. The then Minister of Energy and Resources Management, I believe he was then called, the member for Halton West (Mr. Kerr), was in the audience and he claimed that wasn't such a good idea. Nevertheless, this is a different matter, and perhaps in this particular matter he would agree with us that there is a need to have a body that has jurisdiction on both sides of the border. So the member for Sarnia is right on in what he is saying in that regard.

I also want to say that I consider the federal government's attitude toward this particular problem to be wrong. I don't believe that they should be sitting back and waiting until the Province of Ontario has expended about $8 million before they start to assist. But, by the same token, I consider the attitude of the provincial government also to be wrong: I don't believe that they should be requesting municipalities that are already hard-pressed, with very limited tax sources, to raise even 20 per cent of the cost of the work that has to be done at this point.

I really worry about the attitude that has been evident over the last two years. I can recall attending a meeting at the Beacon Motor Hotel in the Niagara Peninsula about 9 or 10 months ago. It was the last of a number of meetings that had been held there to discuss this particular problem as well as the fears and concerns of the people who live along the shoreline of Lake Ontario, from Burlington on the one end to Niagara-on-the-Lake on the other. They were expressing their concern then that this year was going to be a year in which they were about to suffer considerable loss; and that message was relayed to the government.

As a result of that meeting and subsequent meetings with other constituents of mine, I contacted the appropriate department, sending to them maps and, in addition to that, an agreement which had at one point been signed by the government in regard to the building of groynes in the area of Saltfleet township and Hamilton that is on the lakefront. We were asking for assistance, because we feared there were going to be problems this coming winter and in the spring breakup. We didn't get much of an answer to that either, quite frankly.

I then wrote to the Premier about five weeks ago and asked him, in view of those things and of the fact that many people were already suffering and many more likely would suffer considerably greater damage, if he could inform me who was in charge. I received no answer.

I then followed up with another letter to the Premier and, referring to my first letter, I asked if he could please answer it, because many of my constituents were knee-deep in water and waiting for his help and I got no answer. Finally, out of the back rooms of the government party came the declaration that it was finally going to become involved but its involvement was conditional on municipal involvement. I think that that approach is wrong.

I raised yesterday with the minister another twist in the whole matter—that perhaps it might be possible to make that involvement conditional, if the government wished, on the involvement of the individual citizen who may be suffering damage and may be able to raise the 20 per cent on his own, and who wants to proceed with work. Frankly I think that there are citizens who live along the lakefront who are prepared to involve themselves to some extent financially and who are prepared to get work done if they think the work will be of a lasting nature. I believe that that kind of change in the policy of this government is essential and should be enunciated here as quickly as possible in order that these people can proceed.

I'm also worried because frankly I think that in the overall picture even that isn't likely to have much of a lasting effect. I'm concerned that some citizens will be able financially to do it while their neighbours will not. We all know the consequences of building a breakwater or a groyne in one area. It simply means that the currents and winds come around behind it and eventually that is torn out and it has served no useful purpose, but considerable funds will have been expended.

What I want to suggest to the government is this: That the responsibility for the maintenance of the shorelines of the Province of Ontario is, in fact, a joint responsibility but until such time as the federal government recognizes the requirement of its involvement, this government has to assume full responsibility and to move in. Further to that, the preservation of the shorelines, until such time as the International Joint Commission is given the kind of power that has been suggested, should be assumed by this government. It should take advantage of whatever is available federally but it ought to proceed immediately with the plans and the development along the shoreline.

Then, having once assumed the responsibility for the shoreline, it should go one step further in a matter perhaps slightly unrelated but nevertheless important. It should say then that since it's the government's responsibility, access to all of the shoreline is available to all citizens since all citizens are paying for it. I suggest that that's something which has to be considered in the overall picture.

Mr. J. F. Foulds (Port Arthur): Definitely.

Mr. Deans: I want to tell members something else. My colleague from Sandwich-Riverside, who spoke earlier has been concerned about this matter for some months and he's written to various levels of government.

My colleague from Sandwich-Riverside wrote to the federal government and—this is not verbatim—he urged that technical guidance for the lakeshore residents should be provided. He asked, should they sandbag; should they build metal breakwalls; should they use gabion baskets; or what should they be doing?

I'm going to show you the extent of the federal government's reply because this would be quite amusing if it weren't so serious. The federal government says, "So far as technical advice is concerned this is available in my department for any individual, community or agency who requires data on lake level fluctuations—" and then comes the ringer; this is the hooker—not "The Happy Hooker"—"so that shoreline developments can be properly—"

Mr. Foulds: That's the unhappy hooker!

Mr. Deans: "—and safely located outside the zone which is subject to damage."

That is absolutely ridiculous as an answer! I want the minister, through you, Mr. Speaker, convey to the federal government that we don't need it to tell us what to do now for future times in regard to development along the shoreline. I think, in fact, we are all aware of the kind of restrictions which have to be placed on development along the shorelines for future use.

I want the minister to tell the federal government that it's time it came to grips with developing some kind of a programme in which we can participate; that will guarantee that citizens who come with a legitimate complaint, who come to government at any level with fears for their safety and the safety of their belongings, can be treated with expeditiously and fairly. This hasn't occurred.

Frankly, I charge this government with neglect. I recognize that it may, in the cabinet room, have been concerned about the problem but the problem has been obviously growing. It has been recognized not only by the citizens but by many other people right across the province as being a problem which was going to create chaos this coming spring. In fact, that action had to be taken some months ago—and this government didn't take it. We could have taken precautionary measures, and we can't rely on municipal involvement. And therefore I challenge the government to set out a programme that will clearly define what it is capable and willing to do.

Mr. Speaker: The member's time has expired.

Mr. Deans: And the result will be that we won't be faced with this cyclical problem in the future.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. W. A. Stewart (Minister of Agriculture and Food): Mr. Speaker, first of all let me express words of sympathy and appreciation for what has been said today.

I completely agree with the position put by the member for Essex-Kent (Mr. Ruston) who summed it up historically, and I think exceedingly well, and I am sure expressed on behalf of all of us here in the House the great concern that all of us have for the very unfortunate situation in which a very great many farm people certainly, and many other people who have sought recreational sites along the Great Lakes, and their tributaries, find themselves today.

I am indebted to my friend and colleague, the member for Elgin (Mr. McNeil), for having drawn to my attention repeatedly in these last few weeks the very great concern which he has for the people of the constituency of Elgin which he represents, and those in the area of Norfolk; particularly bringing to our attention the concern expressed to him in no uncertain terms by the Houghton township erosion control committee.

All of us who are at all familiar with the Lake Erie north shoreline situation recognize full well the magnificent cliffs that border that shoreline. But we also recognize the fact that they sit on quicksand. With the high water levels being what they are, those high cliffs become subject to very definite erosion and are propelled into the water.

As my friend, the former chairman of the select committee that was established in 1952 to deal with the subject that is of such concern to us today said so well: there is very little that can be done to halt the massive effects of nature when nature takes over.

Now what can we do? I find really that an article written in the Globe and Mail by Peter Whelan summed it up extremely well. I don't have the date it appeared but it was just recently. And obviously there is so very little that can be done.

My friend mentioned the fact that the IJC should have complete control. Insofar as I know, the IJC does have complete control where the lake levels are concerned. But what else can be done really? The IJC has opened all the possible opportunities there are to draw water out of the Great Lakes—to the extent even—

Interjection by an hon. member.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Oh yes it has—even to the extent that the flow has been restricted in recent weeks because of the excessive water that was going into the St. Lawrence River.

There's no one to blame for this; it's just simply a phenomenon of nature that takes place in—well, a 20-year cycle right now.

There's nothing in all the history of the Great Lakes that indicates the regular periodical ebb and flow of the Great Lakes' levels.

The levels in 1952 were high; in 1962 and in 1964 they were extremely low. Many of us recall—in fact the member for Grey-Bruce (Mr. Sargent) would if he were here—recall the great complaint regarding the low water level in Georgian Bay area.

Now what have we been able to accomplish, really? Through ARDA we have been able to negotiate arrangements with the federal government—that were signed this very day in Ottawa—to assist in providing on a 45 per cent federal, 45 per cent provincial, and 10 per cent local contribution with the townships of Mersea, Harwich and Pelee, to re-establish and rebuild the dikes; and to, I hope, establish a more permanent type of water level control than there has been in the past.

Now admittedly there are much wider areas than that to deal with. The federal government, through its auspices, has been making a study of the area. This is now under consideration at Ottawa. Our ministry, with others within our policy field, has also been making a study of what we can do to protect agricultural lands that are adversely and could be adversely affected by the higher water levels and by any future storms which we hope just won't take place.

Mr. Speaker: You have sixty seconds left.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Let me say this—

Mr. Speaker: I am sorry. I apologize. You have another five minutes.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Let me say this, Mr. Speaker, with regard to the sharing arrangements that have been offered by the federal government, we felt, and I think the chairman of our policy field committee, the Provincial Secretary for Resources Development felt hopeful, in the statement he made a few days ago, making available funds on an 80-20 costs-sharing basis to the affected municipalities for participating in dike repair, pumping off of flood waters, temporary diking and road repair, that the federal government will come in with us. But we have to spend the next $8 million, before there is anything coming from the federal government in this regard.

With reference to the permanent type of installation. This is where I think we have to accept some responsibility, and we as government are prepared to look at this very seriously. We feel that with the offer that has been made by the federal government on a 50-50 basis for any efforts that we make with regard to establishing permanent flood control measures, they will participate with us. We think, quite frankly, that the local municipalities should be involved. We think that perhaps in the long-term negotiations—and as late as Monday I discussed with the federal Minister of Agriculture in Ottawa this very situation—that perhaps we can come up with some type of an agreement.

Now they don't have the money—

Mr. Deans: They don't have the money?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: They don't have the money today, but we are talking about a long-term agreement. I am not going to argue with my hon. friend. He thinks that we ought to put up 100 per cent, and perhaps we should in some respects, but the local people want some input into this thing, according to the statements they have given to us.

Mr. Ruston: They have got to put some in.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Exactly. My hon. friends who are involved in this thing at the level where the problem really exists appreciate the concern and the necessity of their contribution.

Mr. Ruston. They will be glad to help.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Right. So we think that this is the way we should proceed. We are prepared as soon as our plans are ready, and as soon as the federal plans are ready to discuss them together. Perhaps on a long-term basis we can work out something that will be of immeasurable help.

We have done as much as we possibly can, I feel, to assist in working out arrangements of a short-term nature. We are concerned with the agricultural community—very much so. We are concerned with the shore levels themselves and the erosion problems, and we are very much concerned with the tributaries to the Great Lakes, particularly the Thames, the Sydenham and the Chenal Ecarté—there may be others—where this water can back up and flood out over that valuable farmland that has been diked on both sides. With great respect, Mr. Speaker, we have tried for years to get federal participation in repairing the dikes on the lower Thames and on the lower Sydenham without success.

I feel, with the offer that has now been made by the federal government, recognizing the problem that exists today, our government should move in and use this offer. This is what we intend to do.

Mr. V. M. Singer (Downsview): Even if it is parsimonious?

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Kent.

Mr. J. P. Spence (Kent): Mr. Speaker, I would like to say a few words in this debate. I wish to congratulate the hon. member for Welland South (Mr. Haggerty) for bringing about this debate. Also I wish to say thank you to the Minister of Natural Resources, who is not in his seat, to the Minister of Agriculture for the grants through ARDA, which are helping a considerable number in the riding that I represent, and also to the Provincial Secretary for Resources Development for his statement the other night with regard to offering 80-20 grants for protection of farmland in the Province of Ontario.

I might say that there has been a great deal said. I hate to rehash all that was said, but we know this high-level water in the Great Lakes is of great concern to the people of the Province of Ontario.

Mr. Speaker, from time to time we read articles in the paper saying that the International Joint Commission has been letting water go from Lake Ontario down the St. Lawrence River. At the limited volume that it can let go, it is very hard to blame the IJC for this high level of water in the Great Lakes.

We have been told many times that it is lack of sunshine; it is the heavy rains, the amount of drainage that is taking place in this province; the amount of paving that we are doing, and the fact that more homes are being built. We are said to be rushing water into the Great Lakes faster than we ever did in history. One of the things blamed last year was the lack of sunshine. The water that falls on the Great Lakes in general is evaporated by the sun, but in this last year the sunshine didn't occur.

However, I must say, Mr. Speaker, the great concern is not only what has happened up to now. Last Saturday morning I was invited to view the shores of Lake St. Clair and the north shores of Lake Erie. I had a very close look at the erosion and the damage that is already done. It is a very serious situation, because of the land that was inundated with water and the cottages and homes that were threatened.

The time is limited and I know there are many others who want to speak. But we are informed that the water level in the Great Lakes will be higher in May and June than it is at the present time. I think we should do everything possible, although it is an act of God, I know.

I know the government here has shown good faith and it is trying to do something for those who are threatened with losing everything they have, or their land, or their homes. I think the Minister of Agriculture and Food has indicated that the federal government isn't bearing with us. I think we should make every effort to inform the federal government and to see that it will cooperate with the provincial government and the municipalities, so that something can be done to protect the land, the homes and the interests of the people of this province before June.

I expect the Provincial Secretary for Resources Development will be speaking, and maybe he will inform us whether the waters of the Great Lakes will be higher in June. We hear so many rumours. But I do say that some plan has to be made before this happens again.

I think we lagged after 1953 when we had this high water level before. I think we all are to blame. We didn't make an effort to build the dikes higher, or to prepare for the worst. I think now, with the loss to many people, that we will have to have a programme or make some plans—do something that will protect our shorelines. I don't know whether there is enough money in this province or not, but something has to be done, or some plan drawn up, in order to protect this great Province of Ontario.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Windsor West.

Mr. E. J. Bounsall (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, the hon. member for York South and the Provincial Secretary for Resources Development have mentioned to the House the very narrow way in which the federal government will give its support for compensation—only on the formula that was developed particularly for the Fraser River, where they are involved only with permanent residences and farmland. I say to the Provincial Secretary for Resources Development that if he hasn't already, he should be urging the federal government to recognize that the situation in Ontario is markedly different from the Fraser Valley and the formula which Ottawa has worked out for that particular situation. It is not at all applicable here, and a new formula in granting should be made.

I say this because, with residential property excluded from that federal type of compensation, it is working considerable hardship on people in this province. There should be a means whereby assistance can be extended, perhaps on a selected basis, to some cottage owners—specifically those who are retirees and have their life savings invested in their cottages and who now cannot even afford to clean up the debris, let alone build again. Some way must be found so that the recreational landowners and cottage-owners, under these circumstances particularly can be aided.

The particular need at the moment is for further protection. The municipalities and the lakeshore owners' associations need immediate advice, scientific help and advice, on protective means and on ways and means of reducing further damage. This is most important since most of the lake defences are now gone.

There is going to be a higher water level, at least in May, than we have now. The only sort of thing that we can hope for is that we don't suffer major storms in May. This would be the pattern but we can't count on that; the defences are already gone.

Even by next November the water level will not have decreased sufficiently to allow any protection against the November storms and the waves that are going to wreak the same damage if not more than that done last November. This government, at the moment—it has been warned since last September of the damage that is going to occur—needs to involve itself very heavily in proposing to municipalities and cottage-owners ways of further protection which can be done immediately.

The last recommendation, No. 12, in the report of the select committee of the Legislature in 1953—which the member for Glengarry, presently in the House, chaired—spoke to that specifically. It said:

The minister of planning and development should consider a survey and preparation of a plan and report indicating the type of protection required and the approximate cost involved.

If that had been done at that time and continually updated, particularly with the warnings the government had last September, we wouldn't be in as bad a situation at the moment.

In terms of protection, here is a lot of material available. The US Army Corps of Engineers has a publication out which it will supply to anyone—it was first produced in 1969 and revised in May, 1972—on Great Lake shoreline damage, causes and protective measures. And protective measures! In this report it outlines all the various means of protective measures which can be taken, one of the most interesting technically being the gabion basket method of protection of our shorelines and dikes.

We have heard that in Japan some really innovative, original thinking has been done in the area of diking materials. This has occurred where use was made of the flooding problem to help solve the problems. Plastic bags, sort of a Japanese gabion basket, filled with water—the most readily available resource in time of flooding—were used. This is very cheap; it makes an excellent barrier provided enough are used and they are bound together by netting.

The government should investigate this very cheap technique with its easily-filled, easily-disposable bags for building dikes, and advise municipalities and property owners whether this would be an applicable means for dikes on this whole shoreline. I suspect it is on the cost side, and the technical aspects could be investigated.

I was very interested to hear the former chairman of this 1953 select committee report talk about the damage to the Scarborough Bluffs that the Toronto city harbour has caused. I want to dwell on that. That same report in 1953 mentions that any structure which goes beyond six feet in depth, protruding into our lakes, causes current flows to be interrupted and the sand and gravel that was formerly deposited on the shoreline is deposited on the bottom, never getting there. That is the reason why Point Pelee is eroding away.

If he wants some more facts to talk to the federal government about—they, without any advice on the environmental or current or sand gravel deposits, were the ones who built the harbour at Wheatley which is having a major effect on the erosion of Pelee Island and preventing any further buildup of sand and gravel on Pelee Island. The harbour at Leamington has had the same effect.

So the federal government bears a direct responsibility for the erosion situation that is occurring around this province, because of its non-consideration of the sand and gravel buildups when it produces those piers and harbours. The same situation, I suspect, is what is causing the problems in the Ipperwash area, due to the Grand Bend harbour.

I'll mention again just briefly, Mr. Speaker, that what is needed is technical help and advice right now, with very quick dissemination to the people who are involved. I refer again to the fact that various people around this province, as far back as last summer, particularly in the Windsor area last September, were saying that the high levels were coming, and no action or preventive measures were being proposed to help those land and residential and cottage owners, let alone those who are trying to make their living off the farmlands adjacent to and abutting our Great Lakes system.

The one proposal which the professor of geography at the University of Windsor has been making—the one who pointed it out last September—was that Hans New, the only wave-damage expert in Canada, at the Bedford Oceanographic Institute, be immediately co-opted to help in the preparation of the advice which should go out. I urge that the provincial government co-opt this man, or at least talk to this man very quickly if it hasn't, and see what he can give to the government in the way of advice that should be tendered to the cottage and residence owners and farmers who about the Great Lakes system.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. provincial secretary.

Hon. Mr. Lawrence: Mr. Speaker, I don't think the time available would be adequate to deal specifically with the half dozen or more speeches that have been made by members.

I may say, to record it, that apart from those who have spoken, there is not, to my knowledge, a member along the Great Lakes in one party or another who hasn't been in touch with us over the last months. My friend, the member for Peel South (Mr. Kennedy) has been very vigorous, for instance, in relation to those whom he's concerned with who have had devastating losses in relation to private property. Others have dealt with commercial property or industrial property.

I do think that despite the criticisms that were present in the House today, the House is consistent in its concern for the people injured and affected, and in the desire of the government for virtually—totally, this afternoon—constructive advice and criticism from the other parties to move, and at least to study in depth the recommendations that have been made.

With that, Mr. Speaker, I would hope that as the weeks go by the kind of positive response we want to make, and the kind of constructive criticism that has been aired this afternoon, will be ultimately for the welfare of those who have been injured.

Hon. Mr. Winkler moves the adjournment of the House.

Motion agreed to.

The House adjourned at 6 o'clock, p.m.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF ONTARIO

FRIDAY, MARCH 30, 1973

The House met at 10 o'clock, a.m.

Prayers.

Mr. Speaker: Once again we are pleased to have visitors with us. In the east gallery we have students from Mimico High School in Mimico and from Don Head Secondary School at Richmond Hill; in the west gallery students from St. Mary's High School in Welland; and at 12 noon in the west gallery we will be favoured with girls from the 1st, 3rd and 4th Girl Guide Companies in Burlington.

Statements by the ministry.

STRIKE OF FRENCH-SPEAKING STUDENTS

Hon. F. Guindon (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the Premier (Mr. Davis), I would like to make a statement concerning the Cornwall school question.

Early yesterday and last evening I spoke to many of the people involved in the problem, and I have received assurances that with the appointment of a mediator the students will return to school as soon as possible. I have been in touch with my colleague, the Minister of Education (Mr. Wells)—

Mr. R. F. Nixon (Leader of the Opposition): Where is the minister?

Mr. I. Deans (Wentworth): Where did the minister find him?

Hon. Mr. Guindon:—and he agreed to appoint Mr. Thomas Symons, author of the Symons report, to meet with all parties in an attempt to solve the problem. I wish to make it quite clear that the appointment of Mr. Symons is conditional upon the return to classes by the students. I feel that they should return to school as quickly as possible in order to avoid any problem of lost study time.

Monsieur le Président, en l'absence du Premier Ministre (M. Davis), je voudrais ce matin annoncer aux honorables députés de cette chambre que depuis hier et durant une bonne partie de la nuit j'ai communiqué avec plusieurs personnes qui sont impliquées dans la question de l'école de Cornwall. J'ai communiqué également avec mon collègue, le Ministre de l'Éducation (M. Wells), et il a consenti à nommer M. Symons, l'auteur du rapport Symons, pour rencontrer les parties à la présente dispute. Je voudrais insister pour dire que la nomination de M. Symons est sujette naturellement à une condition: que les élèves retournent en classe le plus tôt possible.

Mr. Speaker: Oral questions.

The hon. Leader of the Opposition.

STRIKE OF FRENCH-SPEAKING STUDENTS

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Minister of Labour further to his statement. Has he any reason to believe that Mr. Symons' recommendation as a result of this special appointment will be any different than it was a year ago when he said that the community should be served with a French-language secondary school without delay?

Hon. Mr. Guindon: Mr. Speaker, in reply, I can only say that Prof. Symons has been appointed to mediate.

Mr. S. Lewis (Scarborough West): That is an excellent appointment.

Hon. Mr. Guindon: Thank you.

An hon. member: Hard, isn't it?

Mr. E. Sargent (Grey-Bruce): Try to find a minister.

ELIZABETH GARDENS PROJECT

Mr. R. F. Nixon: I think I will ask the minister in charge of housing—

Mr. Lewis: Of course.

Mr. R. F. Nixon:—if he would care to report to the House on the visit of the housing inspectors to the Elizabeth Gardens development in Windsor?

Hon. A. Grossman (Minister of Revenue): I thought I gave an answer to the question that was raised earlier this week.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Did that include the inspector's report?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: I am not too sure. It seems to me, I have answered so many questions on housing this week.

Mr. Deans: I wonder why.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: I think I answered the question of the hon. member for —

Mr. B. Newman (Windsor-Walkerville): That was a question I asked the minister earlier in the week, and he made mention that he would have two inspectors down on the 27th. They did not arrive on the 27th. They were there on the 28th. They spent only 20 minutes visiting the project. They visited only four homes of the 25 complainants, and the visit and inspection were only cursory. I certainly think it would be in the best interests of the department and those who have purchased the project that there be an on-site inspector, and that the government conduct a full probe into the whole development of Elizabeth Gardens in the city.

Mr. Speaker: We thank you for the clarification.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Mr. Speaker, do I take it that is the question that the hon. Leader of the Opposition—

Mr. Lewis: Does that come off the time of the question period?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: While I am on my feet, Mr. Speaker, could I answer questions asked earlier in the week?

Mr. E. J. Bounsall (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, could I ask a supplementary question?

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Windsor West.

Mr. Bounsall: Is the minister aware that the same contractor that built Elizabeth Gardens has got OHC approval to construct a second set of similar units on Union Blvd. on the west side of Windsor? Would the minister ensure that the same design faults and the same construction faults are not going to occur in that project, if indeed he allows it to go ahead?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Mr. Speaker, I will investigate the matters raised by the hon. members this morning, although I have been handed a note in respect of the previous question that inspectors were there 24 hours.

Mr. Sargent: Did they hold the taxi?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: There apparently is a difference of opinion as to what happened. I promise the two members that I will bring back a report to this Legislature on the situation after investigation.

Mr. B. Newman: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Deans: Supplementary?

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Windsor-Walkerville on a supplementary. The New Democratic Party did have a supplementary.

Mr. B. Newman: In reply to my original question the minister made mention in his statement that the type of complaints were those normally found in Ontario Housing projects. Does the minister really consider that the following types of complaints are normally found in Ontario Housing projects: That support posts are substantially out of plumb, that head and foot plates of jacks are missing, that wall grating vents were placed over solid walls with no openings whatsoever, that carpets were placed over large holes and openings in the floor, and that the city inspector had ordered the tearing down—

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Mr. Speaker, a point of order.

Mr. Speaker: A point of order.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: The hon. member has raised the question and I promise to investigate it. If he wants to carry out the investigation at this particular time it would be rather unfair to me. I don't have any material. I don't have the report.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: He is concerned. He wants to be sure the minister knows what to look for.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: I promise to report back to this House. I've given the hon. members an undertaking that I will have the whole matter investigated and report back to this House.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: All the minister will tell us is that his inspectors were there for 24 hours.

Mr. Deans: Supplementary question, Mr. Speaker: Can the minister indicate to the House what inspections are actually carried out by Ontario Housing Corp. of the properties that are developed under the HOME programme to ensure quality building?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Mr. Speaker, these questions were answered the other day.

Mr. Deans: No they weren't.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Well, I'll read the answer again. It's their time.

Mr. Speaker, the hon. member for Windsor-Walkerville gave the impression that I had said the deficiencies found are normal for projects of this kind. I actually said that during that time a number of deficiencies as normally found in a project of this kind were noted. That doesn't mean that if there were other deficiencies which were not found they are necessarily normal to that kind of project. There's a bit of difference there.

Mr. R. Haggerty (Welland South): Stand-ard reply!

Hon. Mr. Grossman: And in reply to the hon. member's question, I said the Ontario Housing Corp., as second mortgagee, has the responsibility for inspections relating to the release of mortgage funds. In addition to the inspections of foundations, plumbing, electrical installations, framing, roofing and insulation carried out by the municipality, Ontario Housing Corp. has been carrying out regular inspections of these units as construction proceeded.

That's when I pointed out that a number of deficiencies had been found, the developer had been informed of these deficiencies and at that time was in the process of correcting them. I also pointed out that in that case Ontario Housing is holding back $345,000 in mortgage funds and will continue to hold them back until the deficiencies are corrected to the satisfaction of OHC. So, I don't know what better protection the public needs if we hold back the funds which the builder is going to need until he corrects any deficiencies.

Mr. Sargent: The minister knows they had no such intention in Owen Sound. He knows that.

Mr. Deans: Just one final question: Are the same protections available under the HOME programme as are available under the development for public housing? If they are—or even if they're not—will the minister order an investigation into the construction of the properties which is being carried out by Benton Construction in Hamilton on Garth St.?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: If we have some responsibility there, of course we shall. If the member feels there is something wrong, of course.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Windsor-Walkerville.

Mr. B. Newman: Yes. In reading the statement of the minister, he makes mention that during that time a number of deficiencies as normally found in a project of this kind were noted. In my question to the minister this morning I had asked him if the series of deficiencies that I made mention of were normal deficiencies in the eyes of Ontario Housing Corp.?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: I would think not.

Mr. B. Newman: And those are such that the building inspector is requiring the complete tearing down of a masonry wall, base-ments being continuously wet, carpets placed over openings—

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Obviously that is not normal.

Mr. B. Newman: These deficiencies are abnormal?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Those deficiencies are not normal deficiencies. I would hope not.

Mr. Deans: I am not sure that is true. That's what worries me.

Mr. B. Newman: Will the minister then conduct a complete probe into the whole Elizabeth Gardens housing project?

Mr. Sargent: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Grey-Bruce.

Mr. Sargent: Will the minister advise what steps he has taken or will take to prevent a repeat of the situation in Owen Sound where a contractor collected deposits from people, never even started the project and the people couldn't get their money back for a long time? What steps is he taking to protect people like that?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: If the hon. member will give me the name of the project I will find out whether OHC is involved.

Mr. Sargent: The minister has a file that thick.

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Quite often, Mr. Speaker, questions have been raised and we have had letters from people complaining about certain developments—

Mr. Sargent: There are 30 people involved.

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Hon. Mr. Grossman: —with which Ontario Housing Corp. has no connection at all. So if the hon. member will let us know which particular project he's talking about—

Mr. Sargent: Come on, the minister knows all about it.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: —I will find out whether OHC is involved and will be glad to report back on that.

Mr. Sargent: Ask the deputy minister.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Mr. Speaker, may I answer those other questions while I'm on my feet?

Mr. Speaker: It really would not be proper at this point. I will call on the hon. minister as soon as the leaders of the other two parties have finished—unless it has to do with the same topic, housing, then I think we can take it.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: It's housing.

Mr. Speaker: Then I think the hon. minister may give the answers to the questions.

METRO HOUSING SHORTAGE

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Mr. Speaker, a number of hon. members on Mar. 23 and Mar. 26 asked a series of questions regarding the production of rental housing by Ontario Housing Corp., particularly in Metro Toronto. I would first like to clarify—

Mr. Deans: It's a ministerial statement!

Hon. Mr. Grossman: No, it's not a statement; it's the answer to a question. Now does the hon. member want the answers or does he just want the original headlines?

Mr. Speaker: I appreciate that the hon. members would rather that some of the original misleading headlines remain on the record without an answer; but I am answering—

Mr. Deans: The minister was the one who had the misleading headlines!

Hon. E. A. Winkler (Chairman, Management Board of Cabinet): Now, now.

Mr. Speaker: Order, order. I should point out to the hon. member that—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Deans: It was the minister who was misleading!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please!

Hon. Mr. Winkler: They prompted a ridiculous question!

Hon. Mr. Grossman: I would first like to clarify a point made by the hon. Leader of the Opposition, who spoke on last Friday of $80 million to $100 million, which he said had been approved for public housing but was not expended.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Nonsense!

Hon. Mr. Grossman: That's precisely what he said.

Mr. Lewis: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker, this is not an answer to a question. If the minister wants to take issue with something, then let him do it before the orders of the day or in the Throne Speech debate.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Lewis: He shouldn't abuse the question period this way.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Mr. Speaker, this was a question by the hon. Leader of the Opposition.

Mr. M. Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): The minister is not giving an answer!

An hon. member: It's a statement he's making!

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please!

If I might just explain to the hon. members, invariably when an answer is given which appears to be approaching a time beyond that which would constitute a normal answer, I think the hon. members would agree that I have always taken note of the time; and if it exceeds a reasonable time I add it to the question period. I started to do that this morning, and I will continue to do it.

Mr. Lewis: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker, could the minister kindly give us the question to which he is replying in each case.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: I was about to do that.

Mr. Lewis: Okay.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: The hon. Leader of the Opposition said:

This matter is of great importance. I am sure, Mr. Speaker, you would agree I wish I could remember the specific sum—

Of course the Premier (Mr. Davis) has pointed out that the hon. Leader of the Opposition doesn't remember sums — "but I think it's $80 million or $100 million —"

Mr. R. F. Nixon: That's the amount of the programme. It's an $80-million programme.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: —"that's been approved for public—"

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Isn't it?

Mr. J. A. Renwick (Riverdale): That's not a question yet.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Well, if you'd just give me a chance. To continue:

Mr. R. F. Nixon: I wish I could remember the specific sum, but I think it's $80 million or $100 million that's been approved for public housing and the minister says now that he can't spend it because he can't find any place to build the buildings.

Why doesn't he use, for example, the land that the government owns and has serviced at Malvern?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: It's been used.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: How could he possibly—

Mr. R. F. Nixon: That's not an answer!

Hon. Mr. Grossman: To continue:

How could he possibly come forward with a programme and ask us to approve huge sums of money without knowing where he was going to build the buildings? It seems to be irresponsible. I think that his duty has not been fulfilled.

This was in the question period, and I think the hon. member will agree that's a question that should be answered—and I'm about to answer it.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Well, I'll answer, if you'll let me answer it.

Mr. Lewis: The minister has to spend a week trying to find another answer, and now he's coming back.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: It's my business as to how long I take!

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: I leave it to you, Mr. Speaker: Do I answer this question in question period or do I not?

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Deans: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker. My understanding of that particular series of questions was that the minister never at any time indicated he would take them as notice and answer them later. I don't believe the minister has the right to stand up and simply go back to reiterate answers he made previously.

Mr. Lewis: He wants to correct the incorrect answers!

Hon. Mr. Grossman: I happen to feel that I have a responsibility to bring the facts back to this House.

Mr. Deans: Then make a statement!

Hon. Mr. Grossman: It's obvious that the hon. members opposite don't want the facts. I could have given a statement—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Lewis: Every year his facts disintegrate three days after they are uttered.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Mr. Speaker, I await your ruling.

An hon. member: They don't want the facts!

Mr. Lewis: He has become an embarrassment to himself, to his colleagues and to the world.

Mr. Speaker: It seems to me the questions that have been repeated by the hon. minister were in fact questions that were directed to the minister during the question period. The answers apparently were not given at the time.

Some hon. members: They were. They were!

Mr. Speaker: Are the hon. members satisfied that the answers were given at the time?

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order, since you are about to make your ruling, you may recall that the fund to which the hon. minister is referring is an $80 million fund. I wasn't sure of the figure but I am now. It is an $80 million fund. In his answer to the question, he said that the money was not expended because of the attitude in the community that would not allow him to build public housing and he has been bemoaning that attitude ever since. If, in his answer, he is going to explain how he is going to change that attitude or perhaps spend the money on public housing, let him go ahead.

Mr. Sargent: The Treasurer needed the money, that's why.

Mr. Speaker: It seems to me, in view of the comments of several members who have spoken to this, that if they are, in fact, satisfied that answers have been given, the hon. minister should convey to the members by way of a ministerial statement anything further he has to say.

Mr. Renwick: We will be glad to have it now.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Unfortunately, the time has to come off the total time allowed for questions. If it is the wish of the members that no further answers on this particular question be given now, I would ask the minister to wait until the next occasion for ministerial statements.

Mr. Lewis: No, let him give the answers to the questions which were asked, not the answers which are self-serving.

Mr. Speaker: Well, this is up to the minister entirely.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Does the member mean the answers should be serving the opposition?

Mr. Lewis: That's right.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Mr. Speaker, you put this House in a difficult position, because if the members of the opposition can ask a question by making a speech ending with a rising inflection and therefore it becomes a question—

Mr. R. F. Nixon: That makes it interrogative!

Hon. Mr. Grossman: They make a statement and we don't get an opportunity to answer them, Mr. Speaker, the only alternative—

Mr. J. E. Stokes (Thunder Bay): What question is the minister answering now?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: —a minister has it merely to not answer the question at all but to go to the press and give them an answer to the question. Would the members opposite like that?

Mr. Deans: The minister doesn't know any more about the rules of the House than he does about housing.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: I don't do badly on television either, you know.

Mr. E. W. Martel (Sudbury East): In whose opinion?

Mr. Cassidy: Vanity will get him nowhere.

Mr. Lewis: Does he mean on Masterpiece Theatre?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Mr. Speaker, on that particular point, let me say I will issue a statement on this to the press.

I will say, in any case, briefly, we have not been able to establish—

Mr. Martel: The minister is going to do that anyway.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: —what the hon. member is talking about. There has been no lack of housing activity in the dollar range he has talked about. Every dime has been expended.

Mr. Lewis: All right, get to the questions.

Mr. Cassidy: Well, why blame the ratepayer group for blocking progress if there has been no lack of activity?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: The hon. member for Wentworth—

Interjection by an hon. member.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: The hon. member for Wentworth might not like this either. They don't want answers.

The hon. member for Wentworth expressed concern about OHC's rental housing programme in Metro Toronto, where we have nearly 23,000 units under management. I would like to bring him up to date and answer his question in this regard.

As he is probably aware, Metro council has requested that OHC provide 4,000 rental units annually for the 10-year period ending in 1981. For the calendar years 1971 and 1972, OHC started construction of 7,337 rental units in Metro. Commitments were given for 1,074 private rental units under the rent supplement programme; and 141 existing dwellings were purchased for a total of 8,552 units, well over the target of 8,000 units.

Mr. Deans: Last year the government built 1,300 units.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: During this period, proposals in Metro for 1,758 units were not proceeded with in recognition of limitations requested by municipalities and in response to opposition from local residents and their representatives. As a result—

Mr. Deans: It is because the government builds ghettos.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: I guess the member doesn't want an answer. He just doesn't want an answer.

Mr. Deans: I am listening to the minister. He was breaking in when I was speaking.

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Why doesn't the member wait and he'll get his answer.

As a result, we made only 1,066 starts in 1972 compared with 6,271 starts in the previous year.

On March 26, the hon. member for Scarborough West asked for a list of the developments which had been stopped by area residents and I promised to provide that. The following 12 developments, totalling 1,758 units, failed to get beyond the development stage due to local opposition: Eglinton Ave. and Cedar Dr., 116 apartments; Sheppard Ave. and Warden Ave., 223 townhouses; Bridletown Circle, 102 townhouses; Finch Ave. and Warden Ave., 74 townhouses; Sheppard Ave. and Pharmacy Ave., 32 townhouses; Victoria Park Ave. and Albion Ave., 45 townhouses; Sheppard Ave. and Birchmount Rd., 196 apartments; Kingston Rd. and Pine Ridge Dr., 224 apartments; Steeles Ave. and Edgarwoods Dr. was the planned location for two prospects of 65 townhouses and 149 townhouses; Trethewey Dr., 440 townhouses and apartments; and Silverstone Dr. and Stevenson Rd., 92 apartments.

Mr. Speaker, I think it is important for the public at large to know that OHC, while attempting to meet Metro's requirements for public housing, is also cognizant that it has responsibilities to established communities. OHC completed more than 2,500 units in 1972 and, of the 5,356 currently under construction in Metro Toronto, we expect to finish at least 3,570 this year. Included in these totals are 331 hostel units being built for the YWCA at Church and Granby Sts. We also expect to add 600 private rental units under the rent supplement programme in 1973.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: What has the minister got on page 9?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Despite considerable obstacles we are still hopeful that we can sustain our rental housing activity in Metro Toronto. So far this year, we have started construction on 792 rental units. We have 1,359 more in the development process. Also, we will be issuing a Metro proposal call for additional housing in April. Our success, of course, is contingent, as I mentioned the other day, upon the co-operation of the public and their elected representatives.

Mr. Speaker, I would not like to leave the House with the impression that all our discussions with local community groups are on a negative basis. We have achieved positive results from our discussions with some local groups. I have only to cite the example of the Etobicoke development I announced earlier this month. Local residents had expressed some concern about the number of children that would occupy the development. To alleviate some of those concerns and to test the new housing concept, OHC agreed to set aside 58 two-bedroom apartments in the development for leasing on a shared-accommodation basis. As a result of this compromise, Metro will get this welcome addition to its housing stock, the development will be more readily accepted by the local community, and we will have added a new facet, we hope, to our housing activity.

Mr. Speaker: The answer to the question as given by the hon. minister exceeds what, I believe, is a reasonable time by about four minutes. We will, therefore, add four minutes to the question period. The hon. Leader of the Opposition.

AYR-BLENHEIM LAND PURCHASE

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, if we might proceed with the second question of the day, I would like to put it to the Minister of Natural Resources. What would lead him to recommend to the Management Board of Cabinet to approve the expenditure of fairly large sums of money for the purchase of land in the Ayr-Blenheim area, which will form the bottom of a reservoir, of a dam, on the Nith River, if it goes to fruition, when the government's policy is to restrict the loss of our best agricultural land? In this case, 5,000 acres of our best agricultural land will be lost if the government's programme were to proceed.

Hon. L. Bernier (Minister of Natural Resources): Mr. Speaker, I have to admit that I am not fully acquainted with all the details of this particular matter, but I will be anxious to get them and inform the member the reasons for the decision to move ahead in this regard.

ABSENCE OF MINISTERS

Mr. R. F. Nixon: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the House leader if he can explain why neither the Minister of Education (Mr. Wells) nor the Provincial Secretary for Social Development (Mr. Welch) seem to be available for questions and haven't been for several days? Where is the Minister of Education?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: They figure this is housing day.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: I don't ask where ministers go.

Mr. Cassidy: He is in Florida.

Mr. Lewis: Come on! The minister knows where he is.

Mr. Speaker: The question is not a point of order nor is it a proper question for this period.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: I will direct it as a question to the House leader.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: I regret I didn't hear the original question.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Where is the Minister of Education?

Hon. Mr. Winkler: I say I don't inquire as to the minister's activities.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Whose responsibility is it to see that a minister of a department that spends almost $2 billion comes into the House, so that questions can be asked, particularly when his programmes are going to restrict the quality of education in so many communities?

Hon. Mr. Winkler: I'll do my very best to have him here on Monday.

Mr. Deans: He can't be very far away. The Minister of Labour spoke to him.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. Leader of the Opposition.

Mr. Sargent: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: I think there should be no supplementaries to that question. It has been properly and fully answered.

The hon. Leader of the Opposition, any further questions? The hon. member for Scarborough West.

CONSULTANT TO MINISTER

Mr. Lewis: A question, Mr. Speaker, of the Minister of Natural Resources: Has the minister retained on a consultancy basis or employed in any other way a Mr. T. S. Jones to advise him on mercury pollution matters?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Mr. Speaker, under the Act the minister can appoint a minister's advisory committee. I am in the process of setting up that particular committee right now.

Mr. Stokes: The minister has had one all along.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: No, I'm sorry I have not. The former Minister of Lands and Forests did have a minister's advisory committee. I dispensed with that committee about six or eight months ago and have set up a new committee with a complete list of new members.

Mr. T. S. Jones is going to be a member of that advisory committee. I have asked him to accept the position of chairman, which he has done. But this has nothing to do with the point that the hon. leader of the New Democratic Party brings up concerning mercury.

Mr. Lewis: But he is the same Mr. T. S. Jones who is vice-president of Anglo-Canadian Pulp and Paper Mills Ltd. and Dryden Paper Co. Ltd.?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Yes, he is, Mr. Speaker. I would say that Mr. Jones is a man of notable character and notable ability. He has also acted on the Ontario Economic Council and is very, very much informed.

Mr. Lewis: Don't be on the defensive.

Mr. Stokes: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker: Who are the other members of the committee and what assurance can we have that other sectors of society are going to be equally represented on the advisory committee?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Mr. Speaker, the exact membership of that particular committee has not been completed as yet.

Mr. Martel: A one-man committee then?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: No, it is not.

Mr. Stokes: The chairman of a one-man committee.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: It will take in all regional aspects of the province and will cover all industries that are relative to the Ministry of Natural Resources.

Mr. Lewis: The minister means he appointed a chairman from—

Hon. Mr. Bernier: These will be forestry, the pulp and paper industry, the trappers, the recreational aspects, and people interested in parks. The members will come from all over Ontario.

Mr. Stokes: Is the minister going to assure the lumber and saw mill workers that they will be amply represented on that advisory committee?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Yes, Mr. Speaker, and I have already approached a Mr. Cloutier from Hearst to act in that capacity.

Mr. Lewis: Since the minister has now appointed as chairman the man whose company has been involved in the mercury pollution in northwestern Ontario, would he consider appointing to his committee members of the Indian bands that have been affected as a result of this company's activity?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Mr. Speaker, there will be a representative of the native population on that committee.

Mr. Lewis: A representative?

Mr. Renwick: They are the ones who are affected.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: It has nothing to do with mercury. It is a representative committee.

TORONTO-CENTRED REGION

Mr. Lewis: A very representative committee!

Mr. Speaker, a question of the provincial Treasurer: Has he changed the name of the Toronto-centred region to the central Ontario region? Is that an official change in name?

Hon. J. White (Treasurer and Minister of Intergovernmental Affairs): I certainly don't think this affects the name of the plan, Mr. Speaker. The five regions described in May, 1972, do include what is known as the central Ontario region, which includes the Toronto-centred region plan.

REGIONAL GOVERNMENT EAST OF METRO TORONTO

Mr. Lewis: Could I ask the provincial Treasurer one other question? His parliamentary assistant, the member for Grenville-Dundas (Mr. Irvine) is quoted as saying: "Personally, I'd say there should be a change. I will recommend a change to regional government east of Metropolitan Toronto". Can the minister tell us what the change in regional government east of Metro is likely to be?

Hon. Mr. White: Indeed I cannot. We gave the minister's proposal to affected municipalities on Dec. 18. We asked for their briefs by the end of February. We became aware that there was a hiatus. There was a change in councils and so on, between Dec. 18 and the middle of January. So, towards the end of February I extended the deadline for briefs until March 31, which is tomorrow. I had thought it would be a breach of trust to try to make any kind of decision about the final shape of the east of Metro region until all briefs were received, all delegations heard, all meetings concluded, and so on. So the fact is that we won't attempt to make a decision for another couple of weeks.

My expectation is that the parliamentary assistant's remarks related to a couple of townships in Ontario county, which I think originally expressed some preference for being included in York regional government but which more recently, I think, expressed their desire to come south into the east of Metro region. Without having the context, I can't be sure, but certainly there is a consensus developing with regard to a couple of townships in that area.

Mr. Cassidy: The minister can sure be flexible when it doesn't count, eh?

Mr. Lewis: By way of supplementary, at a meeting of the Durham Progressive Conservative Association, with 300 people in attendance, in response to fairly hostile questions from certain sectors of the audience, the parliamentary assistant said: "There will be a change." He was then, I take it, speaking without particular authority?

Mr. W. Newman (Ontario South): There's been a change.

Hon. Mr. White: I just have no idea what the remark relates to. There have been absolutely no decisions made and there will not be until after March 31.

RATEPAYERS' OPPOSITION TO PUBLIC HOUSING

Mr. Lewis: All right. A question, Mr. Speaker, of the Minister of Revenue, just very quickly and then I'll sit down.

Can I ask the minister responsible for housing—as he makes his way back to his seat—would he provide for the House, along with the statement in which he has enumerating the dozen proposals allegedly turned down by ratepayer opposition, the reasons in each case?

Can he indicate the reasons in each case for the ratepayers' opposition, in the sense—if I can put it in a rising interrogative—that I recall the ratepayers' opposition in the eastern end of Scarborough—led in some measure by the member for Scarborough East (Mrs. Birch)—to the development of a housing project in a place which was clearly undesirable because of adjacent industrial usage. I wondered about the reasons for ratepayers' opposition to these various projects.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: There are various reasons; essentially they object to public housing in particular areas and they give very many reasons.

The member mentioned a particular one. It is rather interesting to note that there was no objection to private development there but there was to public housing. Quite frankly, if, as and when the environmental aspect of it is improved, and there is every evidence that it might be, I don't know what they could do to stop a private developer from going in there and building.

The only reason it was stopped here was because it was a development being sponsored and built by the government which, of course, has to concern itself with the sensitivities of the people in the area.

There are many reasons they give. Some say that there are too many units in the area already. In fact, that is one of the big objections which those people in Scarborough have. They say there are too many in proportion to the number of people there are in those borough. Others object to the size of the development.

There are a great many objections but to be honest one has to look at what the zoning bylaw permits. The zoning bylaw will permit an apartment house somewhere to have 150 units and there will be no way of stopping a private developer from going in and putting up a building of 150 units. Yet, if OHC is going to build 150 units, there's an objection.

One doesn't have to have a plum stuck in one's mouth to understand what the facts of the situation are. There are many reasons given but by and large the reasons given are those I pointed out the other day.

Mr. P. G. Givens (York-Forest Hill): A supplementary: Does the minister feel that the real reason is because the people who are to live in this housing are being discriminated against on the basis of poverty and that there is a real aspect of prejudice, similar to the sort of thing that we have under the Ontario Human Code—the sort of thing that that is supposed to stop?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: I will put it this way, Mr. Speaker—is there anyone here who will pretend otherwise? There is definitely a prejudice against—

Mr. Lewis: Of course!

Hon. Mr. Grossman: —low-income housing of any particular size at all.

Mr. Deans: That is the problem.

Mr. Lewis: But it has largely developed because of what the government has failed to do in the last five to 10 years in acclimatizing the people to this housing—

Mr. Speaker: Order, order!

Hon. Mr. Grossman: The hon. member—

Mr. Lewis: —and in the nature of the ghetto developments. That's why it has developed and to pretend now is just an excuse.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: In other words, Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Hon. Mr. Grossman: —the hon. member has highlighted precisely what I said. He has confirmed it. If there is a development which permits 150 units, it is acceptable, but if it is 150 units for low-income people it becomes a ghetto. Why isn't it a ghetto if it's for 150 others?

Mr. Deans: It is the way the government builds them.

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Mr. Lewis: Look at Regent Park! Look at Lawrence Park! Look at Warden Woods!

Hon. Mr. Grossman: If it's for high income—

Mr. Speaker: This is developing into nothing more than an argument.

Mr. Lewis: Look at all the projects the government has built to develop those prejudices.

Mr. Speaker: It is purely an argument. The minister has the floor.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: The hon. members, Mr. Speaker—particularly with the posture the NDP has taken for years—ought to be ashamed of themselves. They are engaging in the kind of demagoguery which results from the backlash—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Hon. Mr. Grossman: —of providing low-income people with housing.

Mr. Lewis: The minister is using the ratepayer as a way of taking him off the hook. He glories in ratepayer opposition because then he doesn't have to build houses!

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Mr. Lewis: I'm tired of it! I'm tired of that kind of an excuse.

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Hon. Mr. Grossman: We try to subsidize and we get—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Lewis: Yes, sure! The government is 20,000 units short in Metro.

Mr. Cassidy: Mr. Speaker, a supplementary—

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for St. George has a supplementary.

Mrs. M. Campbell (St. George): A supplementary, Mr. Speaker: Will it be possible for the minister to consider not labelling these projects as government projects, and would perhaps this not alleviate some of the difficulties, both in municipalities and for those living in those projects?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Mr. Speaker, if the hon. member will tell me how we label them? We build a project—

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Indeed, at one time, I was considering providing them all with euphemistic names like "Fernwood Apartments," and so forth. And my people, in discussing it, find out that's precisely the way to label them, because people will then say: "Those people from Fernwood Apartments." We don't label them. They just have an address the same as the $500-a-month suite buildings next door.

Mr. Lewis: Because it's not integrated housing.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: In many instances, you can't tell a public housing development from the others. I don't know how the hon. member would feel we should do this.

Mr. Deans: I can show the minister how he can tell them; they stick out like a sore thumb.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please! This certainly has developed into nothing more than an argument, which is a misuse of the question period.

Mr. Cassidy: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Ottawa Centre was on his feet for a supplementary.

Mr. Cassidy: The minister also promised on Monday to table a list of developments that have been rejected by the OHC, and the number of units involved. Has he got that list now?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Mr. Speaker, the hon. member will recall that when he asked that question I wasn't too sure precisely what he was driving at.

We started to develop a list of all the developments that had been turned down for various reasons, they spill over into each other. By and large, I suppose most of the developments which have been turned down in Metro Toronto, for example, were turned down—I shouldn't say most; I don't know. Many of them, let's put it that way to be on the safe side—were turned down at the Metro Housing Advisory Committee level.

Now, should they be on the list that I have just read? Strictly speaking one could argue, and I think, with a great deal of validity, that the Metro Housing Advisory Committee includes elected representatives, and the elected representatives are presumably speaking for the people in their areas. As I say, one could argue, with some validity that these projects were turned down because of objections from councils and/or the elected representatives of the residents in the area.

Now, we got into a situation as to which list do we put them on; and what to do with those that never even reached the stage where they were being recommended for very obvious reasons—that they didn't even meet the minimum criteria in respect of that kind of housing. Or perhaps they were going into an area where there was already so much public housing that we would have preferred another area in which to build public housing. So, it became a sort of a useless exercise and I don't think anything would have been served.

Mr. Cassidy: But the minister was able to get the list of ratepayers who passed the projects!

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Hon. Mr. Grossman: We have the list of ratepayers.

Mr. Cassidy: Such precision on one side and such waffling on the other.

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Hon. Mr. Grossman: What waffling? Does the hon. member really think that it would serve any useful purpose if I got my staff working on a list of all the developments which over a year, or two years or five years have been turned down by OHC for various reasons?

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order! Order please!

I should point out to the hon. members all but five minutes of the question period has been taken up with these two or three questions by the two leaders of the opposition parties and the hon. minister, which is a misuse completely of the question period. A complete misuse. I must inform the hon. members that from this date forward I'm going to tighten up on the question period.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. provincial Treasurer has the answers to previous questions.

An. hon. member: Good, good!

Hon. Mr. White: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order, I think if the question period was cut from 45 minutes to 30 minutes it would tighten it up a lot.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: On the other hand, Mr. Speaker, if it were extended from 45 minutes to an hour we might be able to get some definitive answers in all this circumlocution we're treated to.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, I will raise it after the question period.

Hon. Mr. White: The opposition can't fill up 45 minutes on a Friday, and that's a fact.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Singer: The minister can hardly answer a question.

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Hon. Mr. White: Now, the member for Wentworth asked about the present legal status of the ownership of 55 acres of land apparently in dispute with the Metro Centre project. I'm informed that continuing legal representations are being made in connection with this complicated legal matter. Because these legal discussions are still under way I regret I'm not able to comment specifically at this time, but I will ensure that the member is informed of the final outcome as soon as these legalities are resolved. Thank you.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Grey-Bruce.

PENSION FUND

Mr. Sargent: Mr. Speaker, a question of the Treasurer: With regard to the pension and retirement fund, could he tell me the total amount of money on hand in the province, who is in charge of their investment portfolios of the province, what type of investments they are purchasing and what brokerage commissions will be paid in the current year?

Mr. Speaker: I'm sure the hon. member and the minister realize that this sort of question should better be placed upon the notice paper and that notice should be taken of such a question.

Mr. Sargent: May I have a supplementary?

Mr. Speaker: No.

Mr. Sargent: I definitely—

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for High Park.

Mr. Sargent: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order—

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for High Park.

Mr. Sargent: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: All right. State the point of order.

Mr. Sargent: The point of order is that it goes on the order paper and is never answered by the Premier (Mr. Davis) or any of those fellows over there.

Mr. Speaker: That is not a point of order.

Mr. Sargent: This is a point of order. What are we here for? Just to make—

Mr. Speaker: Will the hon. member please be seated and remain silent?

Interjection by an hon. member.

Mr. Sargent: We don't get any answers from those people.

Mr. Speaker: Will the hon. member please take his seat?

The hon. member for High Park.

INCREASES IN PRICES OF HOUSING

Mr. M. Shulman (High Park): Mr. Speaker, a question of the Minister of Revenue if he will permit it. Is the minister aware of the amount of rises in price of the sponsored condominiums of the Ontario Housing Corp., if we take the list issued by his department in February, 1972, and compare it with today's prices?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: The question is, am I aware that some of the prices have risen; the answer is—

Mr. Shulman: All of them.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: —not all of them—but the answer is yes, some, not all of them.

Mr. Shulman: Is the minister aware of the percentage increase or the total amount of the increase?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Mr. Speaker, there are some condominiums over which we have some direct control but I don't think that we have any control over most of them as to prices. And of course there is an increase. There is an increase in prices in many aspects of our society today, not just in housing. Of course, we do appreciate housing is a particularly bad one.

The answer to that is yes, I am aware.

Mr. Shulman: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker, if I may: Is the minister also aware—and if so, why has he done nothing—of the fact that in this Ontario Housing Corp. list of sponsored condominiums issued by his department, prices have risen in cases over 35 per cent in one year?

Mr. Deans: He is not only aware of it, he doesn't care.

Mr. Speaker: I presume the hon. minister does not intend to reply to that further?

Mr. Lewis: I would think not.

Mr. Deans: We take it from his silence that he doesn't know and doesn't care.

Mr. Speaker: All right. The hon. member for Waterloo North.

CROP INSURANCE

Mr. E. R. Good (Waterloo North): I have a question of the Minister of Agriculture and Food. Is the minister going to accept on behalf of the Province of Ontario the offer, I believe made by the federal government, that if the province will pay all of the administrative costs of the crop insurance programme in Ontario the federal government will pay 50 per cent of the insurance premiums?

Hon. W. A. Stewart (Minister of Agriculture and Food): Yes, Mr. Speaker, this arrangement was worked out with the federal government several weeks ago. It was reflected in legislation that was introduced in the House of Commons and was given second reading, I believe this week, although I'm not certain of that.

The Province of Ontario previously had paid 25 per cent of the farmer's premium, the federal government 25 per cent of the farmer's premium and we shared on a 50-50 basis the cost of administration. However, we were, I think, one of the only provinces in Canada to pay 25 per cent of the farmer's premium. The federal government wanted it the same right across Canada and so they introduced the legislation to do the same as was being done in the Province of Ontario, which will make it uniform across the country.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for—

Mr. Good: Mr. Speaker, a supplementary: Does this not make a change in the Ontario programme, and is Ontario going to accept the offer that if they take over the complete administrative costs the federal government will take over 50 per cent of the premium costs? Is this not a new offer made to the province just in the last short while?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Well, it's a new offer made by the federal government to all the provinces, yes.

Mr. Good: Has the province accepted it?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Yes, of course we have accepted it—I said that long ago. I told the member when I first stood up that we had accepted it as it had been worked out several weeks ago before they ever introduced the legislation.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Windsor West.

OLD SANDWICH PUBLIC LIBRARY

Mr. Bounsall: I have a question of the Minister of Colleges and Universities.

Why was the minister's response negative to the question asked of the Minister of Government Services, asking if the ministry had any interest in acquiring the old Sandwich library in Windsor, inasmuch as some weeks ago he circulated a letter stating his interest in collecting documents and properties relating to the history of post-secondary education in this province; especially since this library was originally a teachers' college and the building is considered to be a valuable antiquity? There is a group of teachers in Essex county wishing to house therein an educational museum covering all aspects of elementary, secondary and post-secondary educational documents.

Hon. J. McNie: (Minister of Colleges and Universities): Mr. Speaker, I'll take notice of the member's speech.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Huron-Bruce is next.

FARM TAX REDUCTION PROGRAMME

Mr. M. Gaunt (Huron-Bruce): Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Minister of Agriculture and Food.

Does the minister plan any adjustments in the farm tax reduction programme to accommodate the points raised in the Provincial Auditor's report in relation to that programme—namely, the payment of 130 duplicate payments; the definition of a farmer; and the fact that all applicants should have to apply?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Mr. Speaker, I welcome the opportunity to reply to that question.

Mr. Speaker: There are two minutes remaining in the question period.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Let me say that earlier the Provincial Auditor, who had been doing the work for us, had drawn this matter to our attention; that is, the difference in his opinion between the definition of a farmer as given in the order in council, and the definition we have. It resulted in discussions being held with the Treasury and Ministry of Intergovernmental Affairs and ourselves. We redrafted the order in council to more clearly define it, by striking out the word "farmer" in the second line and inserting in lieu of it "owners of property assessed under the Assessment Act as farm property." That was the point in dispute.

We've worked those matters out with the Provincial Auditor's office and the matters are, I think, quite acceptable to that office now.

With regard to the duplication of certain cheques, with the number of cheques that went out—I think there was over a quarter of a million cheques—there were bound to be some inaccuracies. We have been able to correct them and to straighten out, as far as is humanly possible, any errors that might have occurred. There were very few.

Mr. Speaker: The time for oral questions has expired.

QUESTION PERIOD

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order.

Mr. Speaker: Yes.

Mr. Lewis: I accept your admonition of a few moments ago. I personally always get a little carried away with the Minister of Revenue.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: You always hurt the one you love!

Mr. Lewis: I want to suggest to you, Mr. Speaker, that some restrictions on the number of questions, if arbitrarily set down by yourself, might well be acceptable to the House.

I also want to suggest to you, sir, that ministers who verge on answers or get involved in answers which are clearly and appropriately ministerial statements should be called to account immediately rather than let it be prolonged for some time.

Mr. Speaker: May I say to the member for Scarborough West that I have been attempting to conduct the question period in accordance with the unofficial arrangement agreed on by the leaders of the opposition regarding restricting the number of questions.

Mr. Lewis: There was no arrangement.

Mr. Speaker: There was a meeting in my office at which the leaders of the two opposition parties agreed there should be no restriction on the leaders of the opposition on the number of questions.

Mr. Lewis: With great respect, sir, on a point of order, I specifically suggested a limitation to you at that meeting. It was unacceptable for a variety of reasons but we hoped, I think, generally to keep it under control and I agreed that I am as much responsible for it as any.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, if I may speak to the point of order before you respond, I was the one who would not agree to the restriction. Why should I, unless it is forced upon me by the rules of the House? If, in your judgement, sir—

Mr. Cassidy: Because the member is a member of this House and there are other people here, too.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Yes, that's what I say, but—

An hon. member: Particularly a mouthy one from Ottawa!

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, if, in your judgement, it was my series of supplementaries that held up the debate this morning, certainly I would try to govern myself otherwise. I would certainly bow to your judgement in these matters.

Hon. Mr. White: Mr. Speaker, on the point of order, and speaking only as a member of the Legislature, I have thought for the last couple of years that the 45 minutes permitted for questions and answers should be handled in what generously might be called an unrigorous fashion. And I wonder if it wouldn't be wise for a week or two to try a 30-minute period—

Some hon. members: No. No!

Hon. Mr. White: —thereby forcing the questioners and the responders to tighten up on their language. I think it would be worth a try. It certainly is a slack system now, I'll say that.

Mr. V. M. Singer (Downsview): Yes, we'd get rid of a lot of evasions and non-answers.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: And all the extraneous questions!

Hon. Mr. White: It's your decision, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. R. G. Hodgson (Victoria-Haliburton): Mr. Speaker, I don't think it's entirely understood by the members of the House that there is absolutely no reason why we should go the full limit on the question period. It's only a maximum time. It can be much less than the full time. I also think that there is something that isn't being observed, and that is that the questions are supposed to be urgent; it seems to me many of the questions that are asked could well have been asked six months ago or be asked six months in the future.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: How do we get information?

An hon. member: Write letters!

Mr. R. G. Hodgson: Regarding the other situation that is quite prevalent here, sir, and that is the matter of supplementaries; I think that any time we get past three supplementaries to the original question, then it is a new question. I think it should be seriously restricted in that respect. Thank you very much.

An hon. member: No way!

Mr. R. F. Nixon: A further point of order: As you know, Mr. Speaker, by agreement—

Mr. Shulman: A further point of order? May I speak on the same point of order before—

Mr. Speaker: I think the points of order all have to do with the same thing.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, you are aware that you have complete authority, that we relinquished our right to appeal your rulings during that period, and we are prepared to take your guidance and authority on that basis at any time.

Mr. Lewis: Right.

Mr. Shulman: Mr. Speaker, On a point of order, if I may: There are just two points I would like to make in reference to the comments of the hon. minister. Every day before we come into this House, the members of this party make up a list of those persons who wish to ask questions so that we are not all bobbing up at once the way the Liberals do; we get up in turn.

Mr. Singer: On the days they are here!

Mr. R. F. Nixon: They need the exercise.

Mr. Shulman: And the sad fact about that list is that every day the majority of persons on that list do not get to ask their question, nor do they receive answers. And to suggest shortening the time would be extremely unfair to the private members of the House.

The other point, and it is with the greatest of respect that I make this to you, sir, is in reference to the supplementaries. The first question that was asked today by the Leader of the Opposition was in reference to a visit of certain inspectors to a certain area; yet you allowed supplementaries from both parties on entirely different matters in relation to other cities entirely. Sir, a great deal of this responsibility must be yours.

Mr. Speaker: May I answer some of the comments that have been made, particularly, let me say, with regard to the comments of the hon. member for High Park. Certainly I have at some times in the past attempted to rule certain supposed supplementary questions out of order on the grounds that they were not in fact supplementary. I am sure the hon. member and other hon. members will recall the great furore that arose immediately and the arguments that were put forth to me to try to convince me that they were in fact supplementary to the original question—I think we had one just last week.

I have attempted to be reasonably flexible in permitting supplementaries. The rules simply state that I may allow, at my discretion, a reasonable number of supplementaries. My programme has simply been to attempt to fix in my own mind the importance of the particular question or topic, and if it's something of great magnitude and importance I allow more supplementaries. I think this is a normal and natural thing to do. If the question is of relative unimportance, one or two or three supplementaries perhaps would be better. I think the supplementaries are taking up the greatest part of the time.

I think the hon. member for Scarborough West mentioned something about the replies being given by some of the hon. members. I concur with him completely. In many, many cases their replies could consist simply of a "yes" or "no", but a great to-do is made of presenting what, in fact, does constitute in many cases something that could more properly be presented as statements by the ministry during that period.

I think two or three, or even three-and-a-half minutes by way of a response from the minister is not unreasonable. Once it goes beyond that time, as I say, I have added it to the question period as I did this morning.

Insofar as restricting the members is concerned, in the absence of any rules in the standing orders pertaining to the questions, it's very difficult to restrict many aspects in the question period. I think that it should be pretty well a self-discipline matter among the members. It's their 45-minute period—and it should be their period—and with the leadership and guidance of the leaders of the two opposition parties, perhaps they could control themselves and not ask quite as many questions.

I don't want to rule them out of order; but I think that I will attempt to do so; I will attempt to do so in the future. From here on I will attempt to control them. I anticipate that there may be some objections, but I'll try to deal with them as they arise.

Mr. Lewis: May I, Mr. Speaker, make—

Mr. Givens: Can Mr. Speaker count the number of pushups the members do?

Mr. Speaker: No. Perhaps I might finish my remarks—

Mr. Deans: We thought Mr. Speaker had finished.

Mr. Speaker: Many members have spoken to the point of order; I am attempting to respond to them. There were no indications anyone else wished to speak. I think as the rules indicate, the discussion is pretty well left up to the Speaker. I will work it out myself if the hon. members agree.

Mr. Singer: Mr. Speaker, may I speak on this point of order as well? I think—

Mr. Speaker: I think not.

Mr. Singer: I haven't uttered a word this morning. I waited for a long—

An hon. member: What's that got to do with it?

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: I waited for all hon. members to speak to the point. I waited; there was no one else who arose. Now, to permit further points on so-called points of order would simply develop into an argument. I think enough has been said.

An hon. member: Keep your damned silly argument.

Mr. Speaker: The next order of business is petitions.

Presenting reports.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Cassidy: Not again!

SUCCESSION DUTY COMMITTEE

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Mr. Speaker, hon. members will recall that in June of last year an advisory Committee was named to examine into and report on various aspects of the Succession Duty Act, the Surrogate Courts Act, the Gift Tax Act and related matters. Members of the committee were: J. Alex Langford, QC, chairman; Elmer D. Bell, QC; G. Melvin Bird; J. Albert Brule, QC; Wolfe D. Goodman, QC; John Hodgson, QC; R. Bredin Stapells, QC; Frederick S. Mallett, CA; Garfield P. Smith, FCA; Henry N. R. Jackman; Reginald L. Kayler, QC, CLU; S. Sheldon Taerk, CLU; A. John Cheney, CA; D. Lyall MacLachlan, BSc;

The following civil servants were ex officio members of the committee: Terence M. Russell, Assistant Deputy Minister, Finance, Ministry of Treasury, Economics and Intergovernmental Affairs; Isaac Stephenson, director, succession duty branch, Ministry of Revenue; Derek W. Rowsell, chief estate assessor, succession duty branch, Ministry of Revenue.

Mr. Speaker, I now take pleasure in tabling the committee's report. In its report the committee has dealt in some detail with the several Acts mentioned, and has made a great many recommendations on the problems related to succession duties, including such matters as the following: The cumulative effect of capital gains tax and succession duties; the level of rates and exemptions for various classes of beneficiaries; definitions of property and persons to be taxed; the special problems of the family farm; the valuation of various types of property interest; procedural and administrative practices.

And, Mr. Speaker, while some of the recommendations can be easily assessed, other parts of the report are more complex and have far-reaching implications for estate planning and revenue management in Ontario. We will, of course, proceed immediately with a careful assessment of the report. I should also point out that the committee has recommended that the existing Succession Duty Act be replaced with a new Act. This recommendation, of course, will also receive very serious consideration.

At this stage, Mr. Speaker, I would like to take the opportunity to publicly acknowledge and thank Mr. J. Alex Langford and his committee who have given so very generously of their time and experience in the preparation of this report, which it is now my pleasure to table.

Mr. Speaker, if I may be permitted: I have been derelict in forgetting for the moment to point out to the hon. members that Mr. Alex Langford and the members of his committee are up in the gallery. They've worked very diligently on this and I wouldn't want them to go unrecognized, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: Motions.

Introduction of bills.

TRUSTEE ACT

Hon. Mr. Bales moves first reading of bill intituled, An Act to amend the Trustee Act.

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

Hon. D. A. Bales (Attorney General): Mr. Speaker, this amendment permits the court before which a claim is brought against a deceased person, to appoint a person to defend an action or other proceeding on behalf of the estate of the deceased person where there is no executor or administrator. That person is called a guardian ad litem. Up to the present time such an appointment could only have been made by the Supreme Court.

LEGISLATIVE PAGES

Mr. Speaker: Before the orders of the day I should like to point out to the hon. members that the present group of legislative pages are serving their last day with us today.

As you know we do have several groups of pages in during the session; the period lasts from 4, 5, 6, 7, 8 weeks sometimes, depending upon the timing. So the present group, who were with us up to the end of June for three or four weeks and who have been back with us for the last 10 days or so, will be serving their last day today.

I should like to read into the record the names and addresses of these young people who have served us so well during the last period of time: Drew Brooks, from Toronto; Paul Dagg, from Peterborough; Andrew Dunin, Kingston; Catherine Frid, Guelph; Barbara Green, London; John Hoyes, Scarborough; Paul Hunter, Dorchester; David McCarthy, Don Mills; Allan McCracken Hastings; David Mercer, Southampton; Kara-Lynn Miller, Scarborough; Judith Robertson, Scarborough; James Simiana, Toronto; James Strome, Hanover; Jill Swanborough, Burlington; Barbara Twedde, Fergus; Holliday Tyson, Willowdale; Gordon Watt, West Hill; Andrew Wells, Agincourt; and Sheryl Woolfe, Mississauga.

LEGISLATIVE LIBRARIAN

Mr. Renwick: Mr. Speaker, before the orders of the day, I understand that Miss Jean Kerfoot, the librarian of the legislative library, is retiring, either now or in the immediate future. I would like to express, as I am sure all the members of the assembly would, our best wishes to her and our thanks for the courtesy and the care and the direction which she has given to the operation of the library.

I have occasion to use the library, a number of occasions, and the unflinching courtesy of Miss Kerfoot and her staff and their helpfulness is something that should not go unremarked at this time.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, I certainly want to join with the member for Riverdale in offering our thanks and best wishes to Miss Kerfoot. In the 10 years that I have been a member of the Legislature, the library has changed quite dramatically in many respects, and I think that the changes and the improvements are associated very directly with Miss Kerfoot's initiative.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the government we wish to associate ourselves with the words that have been spoken on the effort that has been put forth by Miss Kerfoot and on her devotion to her position and—particularly here, of course—the members of the Legislature. We will see that she has a suitable remembrance of her duties and her time spent here.

Mr. Speaker: Orders of the day.

THIRD READING

Bill 14, An Act to amend the Proceedings against the Crown Act.

Clerk of the House: The second order, resuming the adjourned debate on the amendment to the amendment to the motion for an address in reply to the speech of the Honourable the Lieutenant Governor at the opening of the session.

THRONE SPEECH DEBATE

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Yorkview.

Mr. F. Young (Yorkview): Mr. Speaker, in participating in this particular debate, I want first of all to commend you and your second-in-command for the way in which you handle the business of this House. There is no question, Mr. Speaker, you are in a tough spot, but I think all of us have been impressed by your unflinching good humour, a good humour which very often allows you to ride this rough steed of a House with a slack rein, which process sometimes is able to resolve the difficulties without hammering too hard with that gavel you have in your possession.

At the same time, when firmness is demanded, firmness is there. While we don't always agree with everything you do and everything you say, by and large I think we in this group respect you and respect the way in which you handle the proceedings of the House.

I want to congratulate the new members who were elected in the recent by-elections. Unfortunately it didn't turn out exactly as we in this group might have wished, but it was tough territory for us. There is no question, Mr. Speaker, that the results of those two by-elections simply spiked the myth which this government has been trying to perpetrate from the Lake of the Woods to the Ottawa River, that this government is doing everything which is pleasing the people and that everywhere there is approval of the policies of the Tory government of Ontario. That myth has been destroyed and no longer can it be perpetrated upon the people of this province.

I was very pleased to hear the mover and seconder of the Throne Speech in their emphasis in both cases upon the need for land use controls, a matter which we in this party have been talking about for a great many years. We have heard responses from the other side of "radicalism," and in one case

"communism," when we talked about this kind of land use control. Yet time does strange things, and today we are finding that this government has come to its senses at least a little bit and is now talking—talking I say—about the need for land use control in the Province of Ontario. What we would hope is that during this session that talk will cease and this government will take action by producing legislation which will bring these hints into fulfilment.

The Premier (Mr. Davis) yesterday waxed eloquent about the need for regional government in Ontario. I look back only a few years when the member for Downsview (Mr. Singer) was thundering from the front benches of the Liberal Party about the need for regional government.

Mr. M. Gaunt (Huron-Bruce): Oh, no—

Mr. Young: Oh, yes! Unfortunately many of his confreres have not followed his sage advice and very often, at election time particularly, they pry at local prejudice.

Mr. R. F. Nixon (Leader of the Opposition): Oh, he made a speech on regional government a week ago. The member had better find out about it before he goes much further.

Mr. D. C. MacDonald (York South): He has touched on a sensitive subject.

An hon. member: Don't the Liberals want regional government down in—

Mr. R. F. Nixon: I just want to remind him. He made a regional government speech in Brantford just last week.

Mr. R. Haggerty (Welland South): They need it down there in South Dumfries.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: That's right.

Mr. Young: I spoke urging regional government. I find that the Liberals in that area are not saying what the hon. member for Downsview was saying here for years, and they are saying something different.

Mr. E. W. Martel (Sudbury East): What else is new?

Mr. Young: One thing I would hope is that the Premier and his party, while he is so enthusiastic about the whole field of regional government, will take a look at the method by which he is implementing regional government in Ontario; and I think the Leader of the Opposition will agree with me on this.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Right. I agree with the hon. member.

Mr. Young: First of all, we have to have a little more care in assessing local feelings and in giving local people participation in what is going to take place. Secondly, we have to undergird regional governments with some sort of financial base.

We have been talking in this party about the need for a municipal foundation plan. We had some hint that the hon. member for Chatham-Kent (Mr. McKeough) was moving in that direction some time ago, but he had a grievous fall from favour, and we don't know exactly what the present incumbent is going to do about it.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Neither does he.

Mr. Young: It may well be that he doesn't know himself.

But the fact remains that regional government is not going to work, Mr. Speaker, until such time as a municipal foundation plan is evolved by this government, or by another government which may take its place, to give the regional government a financial base which will give them the power and the ability to do the job they have to do.

Mr. Speaker, this morning I want to bring before the House three examples—or a few more perhaps, ancillary to them—of some of the problems that people in Ontario are facing today. Problems which arise may be just within the law, but which somehow run them into difficulties which are outside the law.

The first one is the case of a constituent of mine called Phillip Abela, a Maltese who immigrated into Canada some 10 years ago and who was a good worker and ambitious. In 1969 he received a circular letter from A and B Office Maintenance, of 2043C Avenue Rd. in Toronto.

This story was published in the Toronto Star last summer when I wrote a letter to that paper. I'll not go into all the details which were outlined at that time but I do want to set before the House what actually happened.

This letter was signed by Al Fisher—the name is important here—and it offered to provide franchises for office cleaning in spare time. In return for various size investments the company guaranteed "cleaning contracts tailored to individual time and capital." It also promised training, equipment at reasonable prices, with financing if necessary, management assistance and liability insurance.

Phil Abela like the proposition. He figured he could handle a job in the evenings and still work at his own occupation during the daytime. So he called Mr. Fisher, he made an appointment and they hammered out an agreement. Phil was to pay $750 in cash, another $750 some months hence, and in return he was getting $300 worth of contracts each month. He felt that over a period of a year he could pay off his indebtedness to the company. He could then have clear sailing to give up his job and go into maintenance work on a full-time basis.

In all this Phil had the advice of his lawyer. They went over the pertinent documents very carefully and everything seemed very clear and above board. All right. He did the maintenance work thoroughly and carefully, and his future in Canada seemed assured.

But when the time came for the first $300 pay cheque from the franchise company it didn't arrive. When he called them they said that they would pay him as soon as the company having the cleaning done paid them. So Phil waited. Another month went by and still no cheque.

Phil consulted his lawyer and the lawyer wrote the company. A cheque for $35 was received soon after this and the lawyer advised Phil to return the cheque and to sue the company, not only for his original payment but for his lost wages.

Phil tried to get a settlement out of court. He was told first of all that Mr. Fisher was out of town, then that he was on holiday. The day he was told that Fisher was on holidays he went down to the office and found Mr. Fisher there. Fisher promised he would send a cheque within a few days in full settlement, but nothing happened. Then some weeks later he got a note from Mr. Fisher that the company was going out of business and that he'd be paid.

Time passed. The lawyer finally took the matter to court. The examination for discovery was held—and more delay. Finally, Phil was advised by his lawyer that if he took the next day off and brought $100 for the lawyer's extra fees, he would go to court and they would collect. So Phil did this. He was awarded $1,290, plus expenses. The court awarded it. The company was not there to contest it. Collecting it was another matter. The company had simply vanished. The phone didn't answer and the company's lawyer refused to give Phil's lawyer the address of the company.

The Ministry of Consumer and Commercial Relations was called in and looked into the matter but without results. It reported that A and B was out of business and no trace could be found of them anywhere. The fraud squad of the Toronto police dug up a good deal of information about the company, its people and the various allied companies of its operation; but not a single human being who could pay Phil his $1,290 plus expenses.

What chance Phil had can be seen by the fact that at Osgoode Hall there were over 20 judgements against various companies revolving around A and B. Some major oil companies were among those who had taken court action. Also, there are a great many names of new Canadians who had the same hope that Phil had of an eventual independent business of their own.

The record shows that A and B was founded in 1959, with Robert Proctor of 62 Glenvale Rd., Leaside, as its president. Other directors listed were Alan J. Proctor of Agincourt and Mrs. M. Proctor. Robert Lemaire is also listed as a vice-president. A Leonard G. Milner of Bayview Ave. is listed. William Hearn and Brian F. Tilley were signing officers. Somewhere along the way Janitorial Development Co. of 1657 Bayview was established with some of the same principals as A and B. Centennial Janitorial Supplies of Agincourt was tied in to handle supplies for the franchise setup.

In 1969 a Montreal subsidiary of the Toronto firm was established. It was known as Montreal Janitorial Development Co. The company declared bankruptcy in February, 1971. There was also a Robert Proctor Ltd. Janitorial Co. None of these answered the phone when I called and they had no numbers listed over the last couple of years. None seems to be now operating at the addresses given.

How many immigrants in Canada, as well as the companies that I have mentioned, have been rooked by these people I have no way of knowing. Franchise legislation, of course, is deficient in Ontario and people like this do operate.

Now as I said before, Phil Abela's story appeared in the Toronto Star last summer. It brought a flood of letters about similar rackets in which customers were rooked and companies disappearing. A letter from Hespeler told of the writer's experience with the International Janitorial Services. He bought $400 worth of monthly contracts for $800.

The company collected from the offices being cleaned but failed to hand it on to the man doing the work. This chap worked for two months, paid his own expenses and quit since he was not being paid.

He tried again and ran into the same gang with the same treatment. To quote from a letter which he wrote me:

I worked on the job in Guelph, which in a period of five months was sold at least twice. It cost me $520 and I would say it cost the other operators $780, which Janitorial Services pocketed.

In his letter he says that the contracts were a laugh. He lists some of the companies which wrote him during his period of squabbling with them. He said:

The man who operates the Kitchener area office, with which I was first connected, and seems to have, or has had, offices in Woodstock, Hamilton, London, is W. B. Norman. Every letter seems to be from another address.

He lists the addresses: International Janitorial Services, 101 Holiday Inn Drive in Hespeler; another one at Hamilton, Ont.; Interstate Janitorial Services in Buffalo, New York; Interprovincial Janitorial Service in Vancouver—note particularly that Vancouver address—International Janitorial Services on Dundas St. in London.

The letter says, "Norman seems to have lost this one and it has been taken over by International Janitorial Services in Willowdale." He goes on with the names of the companies which wrote him during this period: International Janitorial Services in Kitchener with two addresses, one at 170 Victoria St. S. and another one at 309 Victoria St. N. Then Ontario Office Cleaning Services at 309 Victoria St. N. in Kitchener, Ont.

He says:

I have contacted W. B. Norman who is managing these various operations. His family seems to be living on welfare while he lives in a camper behind the office on Victoria St. so that welfare payments can be made to his wife. He claims that any court action taken will only make him bankrupt and no one gets any money. I have tried to interest the local Crown attorney in a charge of fraud but the only answer I get is "to have your lawyer contact us." I don't have any money to pay a lawyer and I should have taken my former lawyer's advice months ago and forgotten all about it.

This chap's reference to the Vancouver address for this outfit is interesting in the light of a letter I got during the summer from that city. It reads in part:

From the article I understand that no one knows where Fisher is [Fisher, remember, was the manager of the business here]. If I am not mistaken, I believe Mr. Fisher is in Vancouver and again operating a franchise office cleaning operation out of 543 East Broadway under the name of D and V Janitorial Enterprises Ltd. I am concerned about this case and believe that with this information Mr. Abela and many others may again get their money back. Concerned also since I as well as many others have been taken for a ride.

I wrote the new Attorney General of British Columbia about the matter and I have his reply here as follows:

Thank you for your letter [and so on]. At the moment we have no specific legislation on franchises and I'm not aware of any that exists in Canada at the present time. We are grappling with the problem of pyramid selling at the moment, and if it appears that substantial abuses are taking place in the franchise field as well, then that is a matter that will have to be attended to.

In any event I am asking my department to make investigations.

I got a letter from his department, from a Mr. M. H. Smith, director of administrative law, Department of the Attorney General, Parliament Buildings, Victoria. He says:

On this date I reviewed files held at the Better Business Bureau of Vancouver, and I established the following:

D and V Janitorial Enterprises Ltd., formerly known as Janitorial Developments Ltd. [these fellows change their names constantly], Vancouver office, 543 East Broadway, Vancouver [and the telephone number is given].

The head office, Mr. Speaker, is listed as 1657 Bayview Ave., Toronto, Ont. I cannot find a listing in the phone book for that office or a phone number for it.

The president is listed as A. J. Proctor, one of the men whose names I read in connection with the former Toronto operation. The vice-president is William Hearn, another name that appeared here. The president of the Vancouver office is Mr. Al E. Fisher; the vice-president, Robert LeMaire; other names are given which don't appear in the Toronto list.

He goes on to say this:

The file indicates that there has been a large number of inquiries requesting: (a) information about the legality of the company; or (b) complaining about the terms of the contract. Letters on file indicate that this company was operating in the states of Washington and Oregon and letters from Bethell and Seattle, Wash., and Beaverton, Ore., required general information and were of a complaint content.

I contacted Jacob Wiens residing at 6759 Main St., Vancouver [the chap whose letter I read recently]. A copy of his complaint is attached to this report as Annex A. He outlines his contract agreement with D and V and indicates that the company owes him a total of $620.

He is a student at UBC, I might say.

The letter goes on:

It is obvious that the Al Fisher mentioned in this article [that's the Star article] and the present president of D and V Janitorial Enterprises Ltd., Vancouver, are one and the same person. This company was registered with the Registrar of Companies, Victoria, on July, 22, 1971.

A certificate number is given.

Members will remember that Abela got his judgement on Nov. 10, 1971, several months after this company had disappeared and gone to Vancouver and registered there. No wonder he couldn't be found in Toronto! The letters says again:

During the review of files at the Better Business Bureau, I notice a similarity of contracts of this company and the following janitorial companies:

1. The Achilles Janitorial Services, 8183 Main St., Vancouver, telephone 324-3567. Commenced operations in Vancouver in 1970. A contractor of janitorial services and finder of janitorial contracts. Head office is listed as Suite 215, 2901 Bayview Ave., Toronto.

[Again not listed in the phone book. I tried to find it.]

There are a large number of complaints against this company on file at the Vancouver office, Better Business Bureau. The Interprovincial Janitorial Services Ltd. located at Suite 302, 636 West Broadway, Vancouver. Principals: Reg Sisson, president, and Bill Norman, vice-president, formerly located at Suite 213, 2901 Bayview Ave. Toronto. This company's contracts are similar to Achilles' contracts in wording.

He says this:

In all instances, the three companies have offices at either 2901 or 1657 Bayview Ave., Toronto. Their contract agreements are similar and they are located in the same general area in Vancouver. Their method of operations appears to be the same and I could obtain further information and details of the complaints if you should require more background.

I wrote again just a couple of weeks ago to Jacob Wiens to make certain that these facts were correct and he replied to me saying this:

About your recent letter concerning Al Fisher and his franchise business in Vancouver; yes, he is still operating at 543 E. Broadway, still under the name of D and V Janitorial Enterprises Ltd. Also, I believe he has expanded his operation to centres elsewhere, one I believe in Seattle, Wash.

Thank you.

Yours truly, Jacob Wiens.

It's not only a Toronto-based operation with many heads; it's international now as well. When things get too hot in one location, Fisher and his crowd move and find new crops of victims.

As I said a moment ago, there is no question that the franchise legislation in Ontario is due for a complete overhaul. Hearings have been held but so far government hasn't acted.

In the meantime, the franchise racket goes on and far too many people wanting to build a secure future for themselves and their families are robbed blind. Phil Abela isn't alone. He acted in good faith, believing in the protection of Ontario law. The position he's in is a reflection on our kind of society which tolerates this kind of skulduggery, which is based here in the city of Toronto and which is stretching its tentacles into various parts of this country and south of the border. Protective action in this field is certainly long overdue.

Mr. Speaker, I want to turn to the second case, which I also mentioned in this House a year or so ago—two years ago actually. It is the case of Mr. Len Playter who lives on Shoreham Dr. in my riding. Mr. Playter saw a TV Guide advertisement for Consumer Carpet Craft in North York. A gentleman by the name of—I'm sorry I haven't his name here—but a salesman called on him, saw the area he wished covered in his hallway and offered a carpet.

On May 23, 1970, a carpet was laid. It was not what the gentleman had thought he ordered. He paid $12 a sq. yd., a price high enough to give him a top quality carpet. He was unsatisfied at the time of the laying and told the company it was not what he had ordered. But, unfortunately, when he had asked for a sample at the time the order was given, the company refused to give him a sample. It told him it wasn't necessary.

He called me on July 17, less than two months after the carpet was laid. At that time, the carpet had already started to disintegrate. I could take my heel and tear the carpet where it was laid on the floor, it was that fragile.

Mr. Playter, of course, was very dissatisfied. He talked to the gentleman at Consumer Carpet. They would do little or nothing for him. Finally, after some intervention, they said they would replace the old carpet with one of exactly the same quality. Mr. Playter was unhappy with that and said, no, he wanted his money back.

I have a letter here from the Consumer Protection Bureau of the then Department of Financial and Commercial Affairs, which Mr. Playter contacted. They say this:

Sandra Associates operating as Consumer Carpet Craft were registered as itinerant seller, under the provision of the Consumer Protection Act, Aug. 20, 1969, and their registration continued to be in force until Aug. 14, 1970. Termination of registration became effective on written notification from their solicitor that Consumer Carpet Craft was no longer carrying on business and the certificate of registration was duly returned to us.

We have informed Mr. Hubbard, who is acting on behalf of Mr. Playter, about the bond forfeiture provisions of section 8 of Ontario Regulation 207/67 made under the court action, claim under the guarantee bond of this itinerant seller may be filed if the judgement remains unsatisfied for a period of 30 days. The regulations under the Act provide, that for the purpose of every act or omission occurring during the period when the bond was in effect prior to termination, the bond shall continue to be in force and shall remain on deposit for a period of two years after the termination of the bond.

Time passed by. A letter to his solicitor, finally, on March 26, 1971, said:

The effective date of the cancellation of the bond is Oct. 19, 1970. Payment of any claim cannot be made until that period [two years] has elapsed. Thus your client, Mr. Playter, will be reimbursed only after October, 1972. You might care to advise him accordingly.

In other words, Mr. Playter had to wait two years for the reimbursement for the carpet which had already disintegrated.

Almost two years passed, and Mr. Playter called me on Sept. 18, 1972. He told me that his lawyer had informed him that he—the lawyer—had not been paid and that unless Legal Aid came through—and we had arranged for that, or thought we had—there would be nothing left for him, that is, Mr. Playter, out of the judgement and that Playter might well owe the lawyer money. After some haggling, via the phone, I was assured by the department and by Legal Aid that the thing was clear.

On Oct. 2, 1972, I was told that everything was okay and Mr. Playter would be getting his cheque on time. I called Mr. Playter to assure him of this. The two years were up on Oct. 19, and he looked forward to his cheque before Christmas.

Well, the lawyer had billed Legal Aid $250 for his work in the case; but finally settled for $190.25 on Oct. 27, 1972.

At the same time I was informed that legal steps necessary for Playter to get his money from the bond might take a month or two longer. Again I called Playter and told him of the delay. On Dec. 15 when nothing had happened, I wrote to Mr. Don Forbes as follows:

You'll recall that some time ago I checked with you about the case of Mr. Len Playter of 35 Shoreham Dr. in Downsview, against a carpet manufacturer who sold him a defective rug a couple of years ago.

Mr. Playter, as you can understand, is very anxious to get the amount of money, in the neighbourhood of $150 or so, in view of Christmas. I would appreciate it if you would check into the matter and get in touch with Mr. Playter about it.

And I gave him the phone number. Then I had a letter on Dec. 21, just before Christmas; and the gist of it is that certain legal complications have developed in the finalization of this matter.

Well, after more phone calls, Mr. Speaker, I was finally assured by Mr. Forbes on Feb. 14, 1973—that's Valentine's Day—that the matter had been cleared by Treasury Board and that the cheque would be issued shortly—that is Feb. 14. Mr. Playter called me on Feb. 25 to tell me that his cheque had arrived—a cheque for $160—$150 for his claim and $10 for his court expenses; no interest, in spite of his having to wait over two years, and no apology or explanation of why he had to wait an additional four months after the date of the cancellation of the bond.

It is an interesting fact, Mr. Speaker, that it cost the public treasury, through Legal Aid, $190.25 to secure $160 for Mr. Playter, after he had been rooked by an unscrupulous rug sale.

Surely legislation can be framed to prevent this kind of waiting for justice on the part of a consumer; and this kind of abuse of the public treasury in seeking justice of this nature.

I have no criticism of the staff—I want to make that clear—or the Consumers' Protection Bureau. They gave us full cooperation, right through the piece; but they had to work within the framework of legislation, which is archaic and which is patently unjust. It's time the new minister produced new legislation to clear up this kind of a situation.

And while the minister is producing this legislation, let me repeat a suggestion I made a couple of years ago, and which the then Attorney General, Mr. Wishart, agreed was practical and could be done. It was this, and it appears on page 2632 of the Hansard of June 10, 1971:

When a contract is signed for a rug, a small sample of the rug contracted for be given to the purchaser so that a comparison can be made between the sample and the rug actually laid.

Mr. Playter was certain in his own mind that the rug he got was not the one he contracted for. And certainly the $12 a sq. yd which he paid should have brought him a top quality rug; not the flimsy thing which I saw in his home two months later.

Now, Mr. Speaker, many other dissatisfied rug customers have called me from time to time. Most report they are certain they didn't get the quality of rug they ordered, and that the salesman misrepresented the durability of the product.

Just recently, Mrs. W. R. Jamieson of 2 Fox Road in my riding had been in correspondence with the bureau and me about a rug she purchased from Mr. Broadloom on Nov. 24, 1972. She paid $10.50 a sq yd for the rug and the underlay installed. She ordered "golden splendour acrilan." That's the name on the contract. She got "miraculous golden ivory." The company claims they're the same thing under different trade names; but she has no sample of the rug she ordered. And she is certain she didn't get what she ordered; and that she ordered a far better quality than the one actually laid.

In any case, flaws have developed and the company has offered to lay a new rug in the hall portion of the job but refuses to extend this to the living room, where Mrs. Jamieson claims the rug is also defective.

A letter from Mrs. Jamieson to the Consumer Protection Bureau says in part:

I filled out the questionnaire left by Mr. Broadloom after the rug was laid and stated my displeasure at being inconvenienced for two days by two sets of servicemen who first failed to complete the job and then failed to clear up the litter after them. A Mr. Mel Radke came to see me on Dec. 14, 1972, and was in my home for a total of five minutes, which in my estimation is not sufficient time to inspect anything, let alone a rug, as he overlooked the flaw in the living room and only briefly acknowledged the large one in the hall. He states my dog piled the rug, which, of course, is not true as the dog is mostly outside. It was caused by people in three short weeks. That is not my idea of a sturdy, durable rug which I requested.

He was to get in touch with me at a later date—thus the attached two letters [which I have here].

Incidentally [she says] the contract [copy attached] states I purchased "Splendour, golden ivory acrilan," and both of Mr. Broadloom's letters suggest I purchased "Miraculous." Are these the same? Your assistance would be appreciated.

The guarantee which comes with all these rugs is interesting, and I simply quote a little part of it. It says this:

In the event that any carpet is found to be worn out within the term of the warranty, Mr. Broadloom agrees to credit the purchaser towards the purchase of new carpeting of better quality at the then current market prices, a sum equal to the purchase price of the original carpet, divided by the time for which the carpet is warranted, and multiplied by the difference between this time and the time which has elapsed since the original installation.

If so replaced, the customer will pay for padding and labour to install new carpet and taking up the old carpet. [They also say this in the guarantee.] In any event, Mr. Broadloom will be the sole judge as to determining the difference between abuse and normal wear.

That's the kind of a guarantee that I think any merchant would like to give to his customers providing he is a bit unscrupulous; but that's the kind of guarantee which was given, and which is commented on, by the way, in the report of the committee on consumer warranties.

To continue, I talked to Mr. Radke, the manager of Mr. Broadloom, and suggested it would be good business to give the purchaser a very small sample of the rug contracted for, and pointed out that this would meet any charge of substitution. Mr. Radke felt that this was just not necessary. To be fair to the company, they finally did offer to replace the rug that was in the hall with another rug, not of higher quality but of the same quality.

Of course, Mrs. Jamieson is very unsatisfied with the whole situation and she wants all the rug that was laid replaced. From the number of complaints that I have had I am certain that it is necessary that a small sample be given; not a sample to every customer who comes into a place and wants to look at rugs, but at the time the contract is signed, then an inch-by-inch sample at least should be given to the purchaser of that rug. Too many shoddy rugs are being sold at prices higher than the quality would warrant, and certainly in my judgement and the judgement of other people that I have consulted, this particular rug was in that category.

If people want to buy these rugs at the prices that are quoted, that's their own business—I suppose we can't offer them any protection through this Legislature—as long as they actually get the quality of rug they contracted for. But if, in each case, the seller was required to give the purchaser a sample of the rug contracted for, then actual comparisons could be made and if the customer then feels that he has been gypped, at least the seller can prove he got the item he specifically ordered. That's the kind of legislation I think we have to face up to in this province, and I hope that the report of the committee on warranties will have some effect here.

There is one other case which I want to bring to the attention of the House. It's the case of Mr. Henry W. Francis, 233 Holly-berry Trail, Willowdale, Ont. This particular case is not in my riding, but I had a letter from the gentleman and I took up the cudgels for him. He had bought a house, and he wrote, "I've already sunk my life's savings in this house, which I purchased on March 30, 1972." And he asked for help in connection with that house.

In looking into the situation, and after talking to the building inspector in North York, in which borough the house is situated, the building inspector went out there and on Dec. 11, after we had intervened, the building commissioner wrote a letter to Victoria Wood Development Corp. Ltd., 1 Valleybrook Dr., Don Mills, Ont.

Now, by and large, Victoria Wood Development has been a pretty good builder in our borough. Recently they've been bought out by an American syndicate, one of the biggest on the continent. Whether that has something to do with the deterioration of their work, I am not sure. I can't make any charges in that regard, but certainly in recent days there have been problems.

In any case, the building commissioner wrote this letter to Victoria Wood Development:

Following a receipt of a complaint, an inspection was made of the above-mentioned premises, which indicated a number of deficiencies as follows:

And these are very similar to what we have heard already this morning during the question period:

1. Window sash does not fit properly in the master bedroom.
2. There is evidence of dampness in the closets.
3. Sliding closet door is scratched.
4. Ice forms on the sliding track of the windows.
5. Cracks around the top of the bathtub should be grouted.
6. The two bedrooms at the front of the house are difficult to heat properly.
7. Cracks in tile joints in the kitchen should be rectified.
8. The rear door is delaminating at the bottom.
9. Water leaks at the top of the basement wall must be repaired.
10. The areaway drain must be checked to see if it is operating properly on the east side.

You are therefore requested to investigate and rectify the above-mentioned matters within two weeks from the above, at which time a further inspection will be made.

That was on Dec. 11, 1972. Prior to this, away back in April 1972, just after the house was purchased, a letter came from the supervising electrical inspector of the Ontario Hydro North York inspection office, to Mr. Henry Francis, Hollyberry Trail. It read:

In reply to your letter of April 18, 1972, our inspector, Mr. Hogg, reports the electrical installation for the clothes dryer is not complete at your residence.

To complete the installation it will be necessary to connect the cable to the source of supply at the panel and install a receptacle on the cable at the dryer enclosure.

Well, he fought with the company about this, and finally that was made right. Then, on Jan. 8, when nothing had happened about the other matters, the chief inspections officer of Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. wrote a letter concerning the various complaints. He listed a few extras over and above what North York had seen and said, "We trust that our efforts to intercede with the builder on your behalf will prove successful."

Mr. Speaker, this was not the only house in the area. I have a copy of the Willowdale Post of Oct. 4, 1972, and, among other things, John Cotter, Post staff writer, says this—he's quoting the ratepayers' association's vice-president: "The real problem is just plain shoddy workmanship . . ." It's a frustrating experience trying to get through to the right person when you can never find out who is responsible for anything. "After our meeting [at which these things were discussed] last spring, we had a fair amount of action—for about three weeks. But every time someone comes in to make repairs it leads to more damage and more repairs.

The story adds:

"Last July a spokesman for Victoria Wood Development, Brian Sparks, told the residents that a large number of their problems stemmed from a shortage of manpower and problems of the subcontractors. He also promised that any homeowner who was absolutely dissatisfied with his house could have a refund on the home plus expenses to move. "We have tried to take them up on this," said George Cann, the ratepayer official, "but he is never in, and he wont return our calls."

I had another letter in February, Feb. 2, from Mr. Francis. He tells me that:

My difficulties with Victoria Woods Development have not been solved. As a matter of fact, there was a man here on Friday and today to look at my floors, which had since deteriorated, and my wife is informed that they will be taking the floor up to do some repairs to the sub-floor.

Now between the time of the original inspections and the beginning of this year the parquet floor began to lift, as did the tiles in the other areas in the kitchen and playroom where mastic tiles had been laid. The floor is a quarter-inch plywood above the joists, which are set well apart, and parquet tile is laid above that.

This is the kind of flooring, evidently, which is now allowed; but it seems to me extremely inadequate because that quarter-inch plywood can give between the joists and the floor when you step on it.

An hon. member: Can and does!

Mr. Young: And so, inevitably, when you get the thin parquet on top of that quarter-inch plywood, nailed to well-spaced joists, they come up, as they came up in this house.

So again we took up the cudgels with the authorities; the company, CMHC and the borough. Mrs. Francis called me one day and said that the bedroom door was removed some time ago. It's still off. She can't get it back—and the company doesn't seem to know about it. I talked to the commissioner, and that finally was restored.

Finally, in respect of the flooring, she was told by the builder that if she and her family would move out and take their furniture, they would move in and look after the floor.

Imagine! Asking these people to move to a hotel or some place else for a period of time—and look after their furniture, because the company didn't want to be accused of any damage if they moved it; take their furniture with them—and then come back when the floors were replaced.

Well Mrs. Frances would have none of that. She told them she'd move around in the house while they worked, but she would not get out.

I went over to visit the house and I found that the parquet tiles had been taken up with a shovel or some other way, and that a great deal of delamination of that quarter-inch plywood had taken place, so that the top level in many cases was missing.

You had a floor with a very rough surface, delaminated in many places. They had already laid about two-thirds of the living room on that kind of a base when the lady stopped them and told them that she wasn't putting up with that until she had some further inspection made.

When I was there that was the situation. I talked to the inspector from CMHC the other day and he told me that since the living room floor was almost all laid, they had instructed the builder to go ahead and complete it on the understanding that if it came up again, after it was finished, then they would have to pull out the floor, and its quarter-inch plywood, lay new plywood and put a new floor on top of that. For the rest of the house the company would take out the old plywood, would put in new plywood, or better still put another quarter-inch of poplar plywood on top of the old and then lay the floor. That is now being done.

But why, Mr. Speaker, should Mrs. Francis and her family have to go through that kind of a situation in order to get justice in the Province of Ontario in 1973?

Mr. I. Deans (Wentworth): There's nobody listening!

Mr. Young: Well it will at least be on the record and we hope the minister responsible at least will read it. I know the minister's seatmate is here, as he generally is, and I give him credit for that; and perhaps he will pass the word on to his seatmate and get some results in this regard.

I also quote, in addition to the things we have heard here this morning, from the Globe and Mail of Jan. 27, 1973, from an article which brought to light some of the things which were happening. I simply quote a couple of cases:

A Hamilton man living in his new home just six weeks complained to us about excessive dampness in the basement which lifted tiles. He complained also of mildew making the basement virtually unusable.

A Burlington consumer complained to us when his basement leaked that the driveway sank 5 in. below the garage. Not only did the builder refuse to do anything but he defied the customer to sue him.

The gem comes from Sudbury:

A consumer found that his new house was built on an underground watercourse which continues to run through the basement. On rainy days there may be 10 in. of water in the basement and no one can do anything. "The builder told us we should have seen the water before we bought it."

Mr. Speaker, I think these particular situations brought to the attention of this House should bring results if there is anything of compassion or human kindness or anything in the way of a sense of justice in these chairs—which otherwise might be occupied by government members of the cabinet. They are not here to hear it, not one, but—

Mr. J. E. Stokes (Thunder Bay): They don't care.

Mr. Young:—we take it for granted that they read and that somebody in their offices will make a résumé of what I have said and pass it on to the people responsible.

Mr. Stokes: And they maintain that the future is for people.

Mr. Deans: I don't know why the member takes it for granted that they can read.

Mr. Young: Well, I give them the benefit of the doubt, Mr. Speaker. One of the hon. members has said that I shouldn't give them the benefit of the doubt that they can read, but I'll give them the benefit of that doubt and I hope for the best.

In these cases which I've outlined—all of us certainly have many similar ones; I think there's no member in this House who hasn't received similar complaints from time to time—the customer is either being taken by smart operators working just within the law—within existing but extremely inadequate laws—or else there is no legislation which protects the buyer against certain shoddy practices or shoddy goods.

The Law Reform Commission's report on consumer warranties in 1972 covers this whose field of consumer protection with some care. For the benefit of those in the cabinet benches who might read and who may not have read this committee's report, it says this:

We have reached the conclusion that a revision of the substantive rules of law should be accompanied by new measures in public law areas to ensure compliance with the law and to make it possible for the consumer to have his grievances adjusted in a manner which is fair to all parties, with minimum expense and maximum dispatch.

The report goes on to point out that because of the great changes over the past 50 years in the production, distribution and consumption of consumer goods of all kinds, the Sale of Goods Act is largely divorced from present-day commercial and consumer realities. It says:

The Act proceeds from a fictitious premise that the parties are bargaining from positions of equal strength and sophistication. It uses concepts to describe and distinguish between different types of obligations that are now obsolete and difficult to apply. Especially serious is the Act's preoccupation with the bilateral relationship between the seller and the buyer, which totally ignores the powerful position of the manufacturer in today's marketing structure. This results, at least in the Anglo-Canadian law, in shielding the manufacturer from contractual responsibility to the customer. By the same token, the law has largely ignored the impact of manufacturers' expressed warranties and the defects in their content and administration. Our sales law is private law and it has failed to provide any meaningful machinery for the redress of consumer grievances.

The commission then recommends that, since most warranty problems have a common core, a new statute to be known as the Consumer Products Warranties Act be enacted to deal comprehensively and systematically with all aspect of consumer warranties. It outlines the nature and the scope of such warranties and it is there for any member of this cabinet to read.

There is no question of the need for such legislative action. Everywhere across this province people are complaining about the quality and durability of the goods they purchase. Present warranties have little meaning and they are desperately difficult to enforce. The consumer finds himself at a complete disadvantage when he tries to persuade General Motors, for example, to live up to its 50,000-mile warranty—as I tried, and only partially succeeded. When the Firenza owners—who are now organizing to deal with General Motors because they have been sold a car which has proved to be extremely deficient in safety and in mechanical performance—try to deal with General Motors they are told to deal individually with their local dealer.

How much chance the individual has to deal with a company like General Motors is demonstrated by the list that I have here in my hand, showing that the gross annual sales of General Motors is higher than that of every country of the world except 22 of them. In other words, relating gross annual sales to gross national product, General Motors ranks 23rd in the list of power among the nations of the world—a nation in itself. What chance has the Firenza owner in dealing with a corporation of that magnitude?

Mr. Deans: None.

Mr. Young: The consumer finds himself at a complete disadvantage, too, when he faces a manufacturer of disintegrating carpet, or the giant construction company based in the United States which delivered to him an unfinished and defective house. The federal government is discussing, as it has for years, protection for the home buyer. We hope something will happen in the present situation in Ottawa.

This government here in Toronto is toying with warranty legislation, but so far it hasn't delivered. Meantime, people are buying in good faith, believing that they have a legal protection against fraud. Almost every person who comes to me believes he has the protection of the law, and he wants that protection, and that protection just does not exist. They find out to their sorrow when it is far too late.

Mr. Speaker, any warranty legislation which may come to this House or to the federal House, and be passed there, still won't protect the public against a far worse and more blatant ripoff which is being practised openly and without shame across the country and across the world today. The automobile industry is still building bumpers which are designed to create maximum damage to other cars in collision situations. So far we have no legal action to set standard heights and resilient surfaces, although the front bumpers are now supposed to protect certain vital parts of the car at 5 mph and 2½ mph in the case of the rear bumper.

In spite of the auto pact, car makers charge Canadian dealers 10 per cent more for the same car than they charge American dealers. The April 26, 1972, Globe and Mail said, and I quote the article by Thomas Claridge:

Canadian car dealers are being charged about 10 per cent more than US dealers for cars built in Canada. One direct result of this policy has been an estimated $150 million improvement in profits of the four manufacturers, and an extra bill for Canadian consumers totalling $180 million.

He goes on to say this:

The gap between new car prices in Canada [These are cars manufactured in Canada.] widened last year to between eight and nine per cent [That's in 1971.] and then to 10 per cent in 1972 after a six-year gradual reduction to a low between 3 and 3.5 per cent in 1970. Ottawa has asked the four manufacturers for a detailed accounting of "why," but thus far none has been provided. That was in 1972, but the situation is even worse today.

I read the other day about the chairman of the prices commission in Ottawa. He asked why it was that fish was the price it was in the chain stores. And he gave this pertinent fact: fish, he said, is being bought for six cents a pound from the people who do the fishing; six cents a pound.

I happened to look into Dominion Stores last week for a piece of fish and I found that haddock fillets were selling, or were being priced at $1.65 a pound. And this week most fish is being advertised at around the dollar mark. Almost, and in some cases, more than the price of beef. But fish doesn't have to be fed. It grows up without anybody having to worry about it; the way we have to with beef or pork or lamb. Well, it used to be considered a poor man's food. Haddock, of course, is just a grade above the cod — and it should be a cheap fish. But there it is at the price of beef. It went up even though six cents a pound is the price paid to the fisherman. The consumer is being asked to pay these prices which I have mentioned.

Mr. Deans: Aren't the members opposite ashamed of their government?

Mr. Young: You know the ripoff is inexcusable; but there it is.

Hon. E. A. Winkler (Chairman, Management Board of Cabinet): I would like more time off to go fishing.

Mr. Deans: Free enterprise my—

Mr. Young: Free enterprise my—the hon. member says. I call it robbery.

Well, to come to another field: The energy crisis in recent weeks is but another example of how the Canadian customer is being taken for a long, long ride. The oil companies have persuaded the Alberta government to raise the wellhead price of gas to consumers outside the province.

The Alberta treasury won't gain one red cent from the price increase. What they hope to do, of course, is to bring industry into the province for the cheaper gas. But what they get into the treasury is going to be used, they say, to subsidize their own people by the amount of the price rise to them; so they come out even.

But the new income from the higher prices will go to American owners of the companies as our own watchdog on energy resources has put it so well in his speech of March 9 of this year. Let me quote it. On page 9 of the speech he says this:

A general gas price increase benefits primarily and perhaps inordinately the producer, at least 80 per cent of whom are not Canadian owned; that is, their shareholders are not Canadians.

That is the member for Chatham-Kent (Mr. McKeough) who is charged with the responsibility of policy for gas in this province.

It's a strange thing this, Mr. Speaker. We have plenty of oil and gas in Canada; no shortage at all. Although suddenly, yesterday, the Canadian Petroleum Association said that our reserves are going down. It's strange that they didn't discover it until just yesterday. But because of this sudden so-called shortage here—

Mr. Stokes: Why are they so anxious to export it?

Mr. Young: —and what has been called by experts a "contrived shortage" in the United States, we're told that we have to pay higher prices for our own gas in Canada. As a matter of fact the Americans will pay less for our fuel than we will.

The hon. cabinet expert on fuel says this in that recent speech, which I have just quoted. And I quote him again on page 13 of his speech.

Mr. Deans: Does the member mean "gassy Darcy?"

Mr. Young: Well, the member for Chatham-Kent.

No such protection exists in Canada [He's speaking of protection in the United States.] for Canadian consumers. As a result, if the Alberta policy is successful, eastern Canadian consumer rates will escalate much more rapidly than those in the United States where the energy crisis originates.

Again he says this:

While it is popular in the producing industry to blame the FPC for the US gas shortage, the record of the industry in finding adequate crude oil reserves within the continental United States to meet requirements is even worse for oil than it is for gas.

And he says:

I believe there could be a terribly expensive experiment to ask the Canadian consumer to pay much higher prices in a vain attempt to solve a non-existent Canadian gas shortage.

So says the member for Chatham!

How much this increased price is needed is seen by a simple fact: If one reads the morning newspaper, Imperial Oil stock has risen from a low of 18% in 1971 to a high of 49½ in 1973. It is 42 right now. Texaco rose from the 1971 low of 27½ to a high of 71% in 1973. It sold at 66 yesterday.

This, Mr. Speaker, is hardly the performance of an industry which needs more from our pockets for its products. There is plenty of evidence to show that there is no real energy shortage either in the United States or in the world at the present time.

I have in my hand an article by Robertson Cochrane in a recent edition of the Toronto Star, which says this:

From 1951 to 1971, 47 billion barrels were drawn from Persian Gulf reserves, and at the end of 1971, reserves were estimated at 367 billion barrels now lying in 26 large pools including the original eight.

That is nine times as much in reserve there as we used for the total period of 1951 to 1971. The article goes on to say this:

The world energy crisis or energy shortage is a fiction, says Alderman. [This is quoting Prof. Alderman, an economist at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.] But belief in that fiction is a fact. It makes people accept higher oil prices; in fact 10 to 20 times higher than the real long-run cost of producing it. They look upon these prices as imposed by nature when they are really fixed by collusion.

We are told that the oil producing nations in the Middle East are demanding higher royalties for the oil and higher taxes from the producing companies.

Well, that may be so, but this is being done, Mr. Speaker, in collusion with the oil companies. There is no price competition at all among the primary producers of oil in the Middle East, Venezuela, the United States or Canada. When an Arabian sheik wants more from the oil industry the companies oblige. It means a higher profit margin everywhere around the world. Oil can be produced in the Middle East for far less than that of the Gulf of Mexico but a world-wide cartel sets the price of all oil at the level of the highest-priced producer.

When the Middle East oil prices rise, all prices rise around the world. It's collusion all the way. There is no price competition anywhere. Even though we haven't shortages here, because of the action of collusion in the Middle East Canadians are told that they will have to pay more for their own oil.

The threat of shortage at some time in the future, coupled with the collusive planning on the part of the corporations controlling our resources, is being used as an excuse to dip more deeply into our pockets even though the oil industry has never been more prosperous in its entire history.

This is a more blatant and a more vicious thing than the rug salesman's little racket that I mentioned a while ago, but we are being brainwashed to accept it without dissent and to thank our lucky stars that we have these compassionate oil barons riding on our backs with their hands in our pockets. Some day, perhaps, we'll come to the realization that our Canadian oil and gas are Canadian resources, that they should be used to make life better for the Canadian people; but meantime we're being conditioned to the idea that we must pay through the nose to the American oil syndicates for the privilege of using our own oil and our own gas.

Of course in the last few months we've been conditioned for higher food prices. Now they're here. Every week sees the old prices rubbed out on the cans on the grocery shelves and new ones marked. The farmer isn't getting that much more for his products and no one else seems to be able to explain the upsurge, but the profit picture may tell the tale.

Just the other day I came across the morning paper of March 22, 1972. The headline says this: "After-tax Corporate Profits Up More Than 42 per cent in Years." That's the year 1972. And that follows corporate profit increase of 11 per cent in 1971.

The interesting thing here is in the breakdown. In the sector showing the greatest gain we have food processing, showing a profit gain in 1972 of 37.7 per cent.

Mr. Stokes: What's the Minister of Agriculture and Food (Mr. Stewart) going to do about that? He's not even listening.

Mr. Young: Perhaps the committee in Ottawa should take a look at those figures and perhaps they'll come to some understanding of where the ripoff is.

Hon. W. A. Stewart (Minister of Agriculture and Food): He is listening all right. Members opposite would take it out of the farmers' mouth if they could.

Mr. Deans: We're trying to get it to the farmers.

Mr. Young: I said a moment ago that the farmer is not getting that much more, but somewhere between what he gets and what the consumer pays there is a ripoff of major proportions, and increasing every day.

Just yesterday, and again this morning, we had demonstrated in this House the kind of increase that is taking place in the cost of housing right here in this area—housing which is private and housing which is sponsored by Ontario Housing Corp. Houses that in January this year were listed at a certain price are listed again in March at $13,000 to $16,000 more.

Mr. Speaker, we get brainwashed all the time by people saying that labour costs are the reason for these increased prices. That's what we're fed. But certainly there's no labour cost in the increased price of land; and that is skyrocketing in an unprecedented way in Ontario today. There is no labour cost there, but it does result in higher rents and in higher prices all along the line. There are no new labour costs in these houses which were listed at a certain price in January and listed $13,000 more in March. The labour cost was there before.

Mr. Stokes: It is just a smokescreen.

Mr. Young: It won't be long until the workers of this province will be up for major bargaining again. During the past two years we've had a period of fairly stable wages. This year comes the big bargaining by the big units; and then we'll hear about the inflation, which is already here, being caused by the wage demands which are bound to come later this year in a desperate attempt by the workers to catch up with the skyrocketing cost of living.

We'll get that; but let's remember when these increases actually took place and how they are taking place.

Just as a sort of a postscript, the other day I heard a broadcast on the air, I think it was a radio broadcast, which warned us that the cost of a man's suit would soon be up to $300. Well the clothing manufacturers are getting us into the mood; they are softening us up for what they intend to do later on. I suppose with this kind of threat we don't mind paying the present prices for suits, and maybe we will hurry up and replenish our wardrobes before the main disaster strikes. It's all good for business.

These are but a few of the illustrations of the ways that the corporate controllers of our destiny are taking us for a ride, openly and without shame. It is far more damaging to our pocketbooks than the cheating that goes on through shoddy goods and the failure to honour warranties.

The fact is that action is needed all along the line to protect the consumer from the powerful interests which prey on him in a bewildering variety of ways. We need the warranty legislation, yes — to ensure that quality goods reach the marketplace and that when mistakes are made they will be rectified fully and promptly. But we also need the wider protection against the rapacious interests which have gained control of our resources and which have eliminated competitive pricing from the marketplace. I underline that, Mr. Speaker.

No longer is competition keeping prices in line as it was supposed to do in the day of Adam Smith;—

Mr. Deans: There is no competition.

Mr. Young:—collusion to raise prices to the consumer has taken its place: collusion in the increased prices of gas, food—you name it, there it is—and housing particularly, as we have seen today. Where price competition sometimes does appear, as in the supermarket scrap of 1970, the primary purpose of that competition is to eliminate the little operator and bring control more firmly into the hands of the syndicates, Mr. Speaker.

Today's prices are raised in unison. We have never seen gasoline prices raised at one outlet and not raised at another of a different name. And in our supermarkets, little loss leaders appear, but the runners of each chain watch the prices of the others and watch the newspapers and those prices are raised in unison.

There is competition in advertising to get the share of the market, but by and large prices are no longer in the competitive field so a controlled marketplace can raise prices systematically. It can also not only tolerate the inflation this brings, but also carry with it mass unemployment, a thing which we were lead to believe was impossible under the old competitive laissez faire system of capitalism.

But it can do more, and the Minister of Agriculture and Food will attest to this. It can not only raise the prices unilaterally on the market, but it can depress the prices to the primary producer at the farm level or the fisherman level of our economy.

The tragedy is that this government and the government in Ottawa still seem to think that we have a competitive system and refuse to face the fact of a controlled economy and a controlled price structure. This government, despite its small glimpses of sanity here and there, still collectively and pathetically clings to the hope that there is nothing wrong with our society that a little dose of competition won't cure—a competition which ended decades ago.

They still believe in Santa Claus, you see. They still believe in a competitive system which no longer exists and which has gone out of existence long, long ago. So I say to this government: It's wrong about that belief in competition and it had better get on, not only with the warranty legislation we so badly need, but also to begin to frame policies to protect the citizens of the province against the rapacious greed of syndicated collusion.

Never in the history of this land have Canadians collectively been so rich. John Turner, speaking in the recent federal budget, said we are producing a gross national product of $114 billion in 1973. We have about five million families in Canada. That is approximately $23,000 worth of actual wealth produced for each family in Canada. That's the average, yet our people have never been so harassed, and so troubled.

At this time, when we are producing more wealth than ever before, we are cutting back on services to our people—vital services that we should be increasing, not cutting down, in light of our 1973 gross national product. The division of wealth is to be condemned and it is without understanding.

The fact is that this government and the government of Canada are not administering this vast wealth-producing paraphernalia for the benefit of the people. It is being administered for the benefit of a corporate sector of the economy, that sector which has gained control of our resources and has gained control, too, of the price structure of our economy.

Far too much of this corporate sector is either controlled or dominated by people outside our country, mainly in the United States. So the big job facing this government is that of putting the needs of the people of Ontario right back into the centre of government policy.

This Speech from the Throne does nothing to break the power of the corporate monopoly structure and its power to run our economy for its own benefit. This Speech from the Throne does little or nothing to protect our citizens from the massive rip-offs that I have outlined here today. It's time the people themselves had some consideration. I support the amendment to the amendment, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for York Centre.

Mr. D. M. Deacon (York Centre): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to have the opportunity to join in this debate.

I want to make it clear at the outset that one of the most encouraging and stimulating events of the last year to me has been the by-election that resulted in a new member in our front row. Contrary to the statement of the Premier (Mr. Davis) about the possibility that I'd be upset by not being in the front row, I consider any seat in this corner of the House, whether it be back row, front row or middle row, a place of honour and one from which one can participate effectively in debates. I am pleased that in our party the location of a person's seat isn't considered a top priority and something that he has to fight for, as he has to in many other parts of this House.

An hon. member: Very well put.

Mr. Deacon: Mr. Speaker, one of the points that certainly was a major factor in the results of the last two by-elections was that of local autonomy. I mean not only local autonomy to the extent that we have visualized it in the past where individual very small communities were fighting among themselves and never co-operating, and where individuals running those little communities were often not reflecting the real concern and views of all the people because of the type of structure we had.

I am thinking of local autonomy which permits citizens to work much more effectively through their elected representatives to control their way of life and to have some effect on the quality of life in the community in which they live. This is the issue that is now facing Ontario residents, because during the past year this government has continued to show its complete lack of appreciation of what true autonomy means.

It continues to plunge headlong toward bigger bureaucracies, more centralization, and more so-called experts making the decisions for the ordinary man, neglecting the fact that this government doesn't really think the ordinary person has enough common sense to make a right decision for himself.

The move in the last year that has really shattered those in my community is the move to establish the North Pickering development. Without question, this is the epitome of bureaucratic planning and waste. Its location contravenes every principle of sound planning.

Imagine our province, our government, coming forward with a plan to put a city the size of London or of Quebec City right up against Metropolitan Toronto. Imagine the failure on the part of those experts advising this ministry and imagine the failure of those people to realize what is truly happening when they design a North Pickering development.

First of all, they are only adding to an existing megalopolis. Let's not kid ourselves: We're not dispersing growth to the east of Toronto; we're not encouraging growth to occur where it is much more needed, which is truly to the east of Toronto. I am surprised that the member for Oshawa (Mr. McIlveen) and some other members to the east have felt that the Pickering location would be a good location for them, because all the flow of activity will not be toward Oshawa; it will be to the south and the west, to Toronto—more for the big cities.

In planning this North Pickering development, the boundaries have been set in such a way that in effect they are destroying an already strong community, a community that is capable of growing in a way whereby the people can maintain an identity with their neighbours, a community that has strong participation on the part of citizens because they feel they belong to it, and a community that has heart, as well evidenced by the many activities that occur in the Markham area.

The Markham Fair every fall is one of the finest Class A fairs in Ontario. It has a long history of successful operation; it's one of the places where people can really enjoy themselves and feel they are not going into an impersonal money-generating exhibition but one where there are still local people running a local show. And I mean local people—people who live within 10 miles or so of that community. Whitevale, in the township of Pickering, has been one area where people have been more active in participating in occasions such as the Markham Fair.

I cite the Markham Fair because it is only one of the many activities that reflect what a real community there has been out there. It hasn't been a community as defined by the boundaries of the old village of Markham, later the town of Markham. It is a community that has developed because of the actual activities going on in the centre of that community, in Markham itself, to which people from several miles around are attracted. They take part in such activities as the Family Life Centre, which was a leading example of co-operation between the various denominations. In fact, every single denomination in the community and other groups co-operated to provide a counselling service for those who have need of help in the community.

Markham also for many years had a group working toward the establishment of a hospital originally, but now of a total health care programme, recognizing that the best type of health care doesn't mean the need to build a large building but rather the need to have preventive health measures, public health care, good nursing home accommodation and the many things that make up the total health picture.

Markham has been an area where there has been a great activity to ensure that this community—and I mention again that the community is not just the old town of Markham, or the towns right around there, but the total area to which people have been attracted—to ensure that it does enjoy a high quality of health care.

I can cite many other features that lead one to the conclusion that Markham is already a strong centre of activity. This whole concept of putting this new so-called North Pickering development right against its border, a mile and a quarter to the east of Highway 48, is wrong. The feature of that whole proposal that has really angered those of us who live in the area is the manner in which the government has done it. It has done it first of all by announcement, without any consultation with or involvement of the people whatsoever in the decision. It has done it by imposing on the area a large staff of bureaucrats who have been trying to sell the people on what the government has considered best for them.

Isn't it a sad commentary when we don't realize that adults, the citizens of our community who have the responsibility for voting and so supposedly controlling our democracy, are not given the opportunity, and it's not indicated to them that they have the necessary intelligence and wisdom to participate in changes in the structure of government and the structure of their municipalities, and that we have to impose it as it's been imposed in that North Pickering plan?

This is why, when the Minister of Industry and Tourism (Mr. Bennett), who was for a period—and I'm not sure if he still is—responsible for that development, appeared one day in one of the local restaurants and I introduced him to some of the people who were nearby in the restaurant—including some executives of the local Progressive Conservative Association—he suddenly met a barrage of angry criticism that was beyond anything I could have imagined.

Certainly I'm sorry that he did experience what he did as a guest in our community. But those people on the local Conservative executive, who just happened to be in the restaurant at the time, told him in no uncertain terms that his government had completely lost their confidence because of its failure to recognize the common sense of local people and the priorities of local people in planning and developing their future municipalities and structures. The imposition of that whole North Pickering project is an insult to the people of this province.

The second aspect of that North Pickering project that really reflects the ineptness of this government is the whole principle of thinking that government has to own land in order to control land prices and in order to ensure that there is sound development. Here is a party in control of this province, supposedly standing for free enterprise, Mr. Speaker, and it goes in for the idea that free enterprise really can't operate.

It's never given free enterprise a chance to operate here. For many years, it has imposed controls on the availability of services and the means by which services would be made available; that is on assistance to municipalities that would enable municipalities to provide approval for developments of a good type. It's done nothing to ensure that there is an adequate supply of places where people can build a home. In other words, the government has created an artificial shortage of homesites and that has resulted in the last year—actually the last several years—in a feeling that you can't lose by putting your money in land.

We have no better example of that than the example shown by the hon. Attorney General (Mr. Bales) and his decision to participate with some others in the purchase of land in that area. We've seen other examples as a result of the disclosures made following the Premier's order last year. Many members of this government are investing in land and consider land one of the finest things you can put your money into.

I wouldn't object to that if it were land purchased at agricultural values for agricultural purposes. But when it's land purchased at far above agricultural values because it is known that that land will be available for development at high market prices, then I do object and I object strongly. It has been the policy of this government for many years that has caused land to rise to these astronomical levels. It is the policy of this government which has enabled speculators to rip off millions of dollars at the expense of the home buyers of this province. And it is the lack of understanding—

An hon. member: Sit down!

An hon. member: How can the member believe that?

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Deacon: —on the part of those free enterprisers in the Conservative Party of this province that has made it possible for speculators to fatten their pockets and their corporations—

An hon. member: The government knows it, too.

Mr. Deacon: —at the home buyers' expense.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: (Leader of the Opposition): Profiteering!

Mr. Deacon: If the so-called free enterprisers of the Conservative Party including those on my left—will start to analyze what is a basic cause of speculation in land—maybe they'll be able to get some common sense into the cabinet ministers so that they will take a proper course of action.

For example, if we spent a matter of $250 million in each of the coming two years and invested it in services for water and sewage treatment, for plants, we would be able, in that two years, to overcome the shortage of serviced land available in this province. That would not be money going down the drain for subsidizing housing.

Mr. G. Nixon (Dovercourt): Get help from Ottawa.

Mr. Deacon: That would be money going to build an asset through the sale of water and sewage treatment to municipalities; it would bring in revenue in the years ahead. It is not money going down the sewer as is the money that we are at present putting into subsidized housing in this province.

We have done nothing to overcome the basic problems of speculation, and of the high cost of homes. That is our real problem in this province. This government has been trying to put out fires but is causing a conflagration by pouring gasoline on the fire all the time.

I tell the House that the way it has been pouring gasoline on the fires has been well illustrated by this whole North Pickering project. Who has owned most of the land that has been acquired in this North Pickering project? Who are the ones who will be expropriated in the future? A major amount of land in that area has been owned by speculators who will then have money to go out and cause land prices to rise in other areas where they decide the province is going to have one of its pet developments—

Mr. J. E. Stokes (Thunder Bay): Were they all Tories?

Mr. R. F. Nixon: What does the member mean, were they all Tories? Every last one of them.

Mr. Deacon: —which does not do anything to ensure there is an oversupply of lots on which people can build homes.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: The Attorney General is one of the landowners.

Mr. Deacon: I mentioned this matter of investing $250 million a year in each of the next two years, on sewage plants, water treatment plants, and pipelines and trunk mains. It would enable every municipality in the province which has a demand for services and a shortage of serviced lots—which wants to create an opportunity for people to build homes—and which wants to develop land in its area to have an adequate supply. If we did this, working on the average cost of about $750 to $800 to provide the basic sewage treatment plant and water treatment plant and trunk mains for every home—and I'm not talking about the distribution mains within a subdivision—we would have ample facilities to catch up on the tremendous shortage of services that we now have in this province.

We would be in a position to offer to municipalities, without the ridiculous, unnecessary agreement that we now insist they sign, all the help they need to ensure that the services are there. If we needed some help from Ottawa, which I don't say we would need because, after all, what we are doing here is investing in plants that will be returning revenue—

Mr. W. J. Nuttall (Frontenac-Addington): The municipality needs all the help it can get.

Mr. Deacon: We won't need help from Ottawa any more than we need help from Ottawa to run Ontario Hydro. We can get other types of help from Ottawa and I would certainly be the first one to go after it. That is, when we have a loss on the operation of such plants, to the extent we have to subsidize this type of operation—

Mr. T. A. Wardle (Beaches-Woodbine): The member would get no help from Ottawa.

Mr. Deacon: —then we would certainly want to see help from Ottawa, because that is the way Ottawa can best help us. But don't let's wait for Ottawa to take action in a field that is truly our responsibility—

An hon. member: The member wants to pass the buck.

Hon. Mr. Deacon: —that is in dealings between ourselves and the local municipalities. After all—

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Sparrows on a wire.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Deacon: After all, we have always been saying that Ottawa shouldn't interfere with our business. And Ottawa doesn't need to interfere with our business if we'll take the steps to look after the municipalities, for which we are responsible anyway.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Right!

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order!

An hon. member: What does the member mean?

Mr. Deacon: Well, Ottawa gives about 40 per cent of it back to us to spend.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Wardle: What about the airport backed by Ottawa?

Mr. Deacon: I'd love to have the Province of Ontario today tell Ottawa it doesn't want the Pickering airport. Tell them that! The members opposite will see what happens! The Ontario government tries to straddle both sides of the fence. We should get rid of those things we don't need.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Deacon: It is an Ottawa project that has been put forward in the belief—made very evident by this government—that we need to have a second airport. I don't think we need to have a second airport.

An hon. member: And they don't need to have a second airport to the east of Toronto.

Mr. Deacon: I am certainly no apologist for Ottawa, as anyone knows who has read the papers over the last year. I have been strongly opposed to the Pickering airport. I have done this after reviewing the facts as to the need; and there is no evidence of need—no evidence of need for many years to come. By the time a second airport is needed it would probably be a far different type of facility.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Mr. Deacon: Let's get back to serviced land and the government's whole approach to the serviced land question. The fact is that this government doesn't seem to realize that just holding land doesn't do anything. How many acres of raw land does the government of Ontario own?

An hon. member: Three thousand in my area.

Mr. Deacon: I think the last figure that I heard was around 13,000 acres of unserviced land.

An hon. member: They don't know what to do with it.

Mr. Deacon: One of the most notable examples of what the government does to get this land into housing is that of Malvern. We don't need to talk too much about Malvern, because everybody knows that sorry tale—19 years of ownership before anything happened. The first land that was bought there was $500 an acre—and the farm was abandoned. It went into disrepair for 19 years. The land wasn't used properly during that period. It did nothing but provide a blight for the whole area. That's all it did.

An hon. member: And to drive up the price of other land.

Mr. Deacon: And whenever we talked to our former member for Don Mills, Mr. Randall, he would say it was premature. What's premature when you have a shortage of homes. What's premature? The reason he said it was premature was because he couldn't get an arrangement with the municipality of Scarborough to pay the cost of putting in trunk services. He couldn't get Scarborough to agree to pay a far greater share for services to that community because it was going to be a low-cost housing community.

He didn't seem to understand, nor did his colleagues, that what was needed was for the province to put in those trunk sewers and to sell the land to the local municipalities at a rate that was common to all the Metro boroughs; with the provision of water and sewage treatment so the need for services would be filled.

He also didn't recognize that it is quite natural for a member of any council to resent approving a subdivision that is going to bring a burden on the other taxpayers within that municipality. Why should they want to do that?

I can well remember years of sitting on our Markham township council when we had subdivision proposals coming before us for lots of homes. Strawberry boxes we described them. We didn't want to have those things built, because we knew that as soon as they were built there would have to be a new school and the taxes would go skyrocketing as a result. But we did know that, had this province recognized those people-service costs and had it made it possible for us offset them by making a grant over a period of years to provide the funds to put in these schools and so we would have the funds to put in these people services, we knew that subsidy could disappear, because at the end of 10 years we would know that the commercial and the industrial development that comes along after residential development would provide us with a good assessment base.

Back in 1952, Scarborough tried to sell bonds to finance services and it couldn't do it. The debentures wouldn't sell and they didn't sell. I remember one particular issue just didn't sell until the word came through from Mr. Frost that he was going to form the municipality of Metropolitan Toronto. The great advantage at that time of forming the municipality of Metropolitan Toronto was that it gave an overall assessment balance that was attractive. It had the core of the old city of Toronto with a lot of commercial and industrial development that was able to carry the new residential development of Scarborough with its strawberry boxes, so many of which had been built during the early Fifties.

But in this day and age we know that property is not the best place to get revenue for people services. We recognize that the property tax is the easiest tax for the local municipalities to collect. We recognize the fact that it is not sensible to have a local sales tax or a local municipal income tax as is the case in some municipalities south of the border. This isn't a sensible thing. It is just annoying. Why is it that this province doesn't recognize methods by which it can enter into tax-sharing arrangements with municipalities, unconditional tax-sharing arrangements, so that municipalities can be in a position to approve housing regardless of its assessment?

Isn't it wrong for us to have this present pressure of assessment placed upon us in such a way that we distort our planning, and we fail to make available to the ordinary person the possibility of building a home that fits his need—if maybe not his aspirations—and his ability to pay? Why do we have the type of assessment pressure that forces us to ask for homes of 1,200 sq ft and 1,500 sq ft minimum when possibly a 700 sq ft or 800 sq ft accommodation would be quite adequate?

Why do we continue to fail to realize that would be a very sound long-term programme if the Province of Ontario were to undertake the responsibility for providing the basic water and sewage services, so that we don't have consideration of boundaries in municipalities which bear no relation to the real needs of the people?

The province has, in the end, the responsibility and does take the responsibility for financing these projects. Why does it bother burdening the municipalities with agreements? Why does it bother trying to make each project stand on its own feet? Why doesn't it take the Ontario Hydro approach of having a standard rate across Ontario for the wholesale supply of these services, thus enabling municipalities to fill the local needs as the local needs arise?

Mr. Deacon moves the adjournment of the debate.

Motion agreed to.

Hon. E. A. Winkler (Chairman, Management Board of Cabinet): Mr. Speaker, before I move the adjournment of the House, I will say that on Monday we will remain on the current debate, and on Tuesday, certainly from 2 o'clock until 6 o'clock we will do second readings. I am not certain about the course of events on Tuesday evening. I expect the House next week, and subsequently, will sit Tuesday and Thursday evenings.

I would caution the members of the House that the current debate will terminate on April 11. Therefore, we will give every opportunity from now until that date for members to participate in the Throne Speech debate. The hours of the sittings, in general, I think, will be somewhat dependent upon those who wish to contribute. I am not concerned about the order of speakers. We will hope that everybody who wants to participate will come forward.

Mr. R. F. Nixon (Leader of the Opposition): We haven't had a Conservative speaker.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: We will. Have no fear. I would suggest to the leader of the Liberal Party that the Conservative members are probably so satisfied and their confidence is so great that they may not want to participate.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: I hope that's a guarantee that they won't come on in the last two days and take all the time.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: That won't happen.

On Tuesday, Mr. Speaker, I would say that the first bill that we will consider stands as item No. 10 on the order paper. I will endeavour to announce on Monday what the balance of legislation will be for Tuesday. As I said, we will sit Thursday on the Throne Speech debate and Thursday evening. At that time, then, we will look forward to the business for the following week.

Hon. Mr. Winkler moves the adjournment of the House.

Motion agreed to.

The House adjourned at 1 o'clock, p.m.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF ONTARIO

MONDAY, APRIL 2, 1973

The House met today at 2 o'clock, p.m.

Prayers.

Mr. Speaker: We are always very pleased to have guests with us. Today in the Speaker's gallery we have with us Sir Frederick Bennett, MP, chairman of the General Council Executive Committee of the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association, who is accompanied by James Walker, MP, from Ottawa.

In the east gallery we have students from Runnymede Collegiate Institute of Toronto; and in the west gallery students from Huttonsville Public School of Huttonsville and Burlington Central High School of Burlington.

Statements by the ministry.

SUPPORT FOR PHYSIOTHERAPY INTERNS

Hon. R. T. Potter (Minister of Health): Mr. Speaker, as I mentioned last week in this Legislature, I am aware of the difficulties facing physiotherapy, occupational therapy, and dietetic interns, and pharmacy and administrative residents, who are required to spend varying periods of time serving in a hospital.

This government has now reviewed this situation very thoroughly. I am pleased to announce that with the co-operation of hospitals these interns and residents will continue to receive payment for services rendered.

Mr. V. M. Singer (Downsview): Reversal No. 17.

Mr. S. Lewis (Scarborough West): Another by-election lesson learned.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. minister has the floor.

Hon. Mr. Potter: Additional funds, Mr. Speaker, will be provided by my ministry to hospitals, which will be over and above existing limitations for the current year, in order that hospitals will be able to continue to pay for these services.

REORGANIZATION OF MINISTRY OF HEALTH

Hon. Mr. Potter: Mr. Speaker, there have been a number of statements made during recent weeks, both in the Legislature and in the press, which relate to the ongoing reorganization of the Ministry of Health.

Mr. Singer: Yes. Not going fast enough.

Mr. Lewis: I would say so.

Hon. Mr. Potter: Concerns have been expressed that the changes which are occurring are not in the best interests of the public, nor will they lead to an improved health care system for the citizens of this province.

It has also been inferred that the ministry itself is in chaos and disarray, with senior staff demoralized and opposed to the concepts underlying the reorganization.

Mr. Lewis: No, no, no.

Mr. Singer: Who suggested that?

Hon. Mr. Potter: What many observers do not realize, Mr. Speaker, is the scope and magnitude of the changes being introduced. In such a situation there inevitably is some room for honest difference of opinion, particularly when the new concepts significantly affect the current jobs of senior staff members.

Some commentators charge that we are playing a game of musical chairs with senior appointments—

Mr. Lewis: Nol

Hon. Mr. Potter:—while others advocate some sort of a purge which would solve the difficulties we are facing.

Mr. Singer: Why don't they start with the minister?

Mr. Speaker: Order.

Hon. Mr. Potter: Naturally enough—

Mr. J. A. Renwick (Riverdale): Let's skip the blame for a lot of other views and just get to the minister's view.

Mr. Speaker: Order.

Hon. Mr. Potter: Who's running this show? Perhaps some of the hon. members would like to make this statement?

Mr. Singer: Yes, and we'd do it much better too.

An hon. member: And announce the minister's resignation.

Hon. Mr. Potter: Naturally enough, Mr. Speaker, statements of this nature do not assist those of us actively involved in a process as complex as this.

One of the basic principles underlying our reorganization is a redefinition and separation of health care standards and health care services. Until now these two functions have frequently been combined, with the result that medical and other professional personnel primarily responsible for the type and quality of health care programmes were overburdened with day-to-day managerial chores.

This meant that physicians were not able to utilize fully their professional skills, and were required to handle tasks which personnel with administrative qualifications could more effectively handle.

The new Ministry of Health, through a number of divisions and branches contained in the health standards group, will provide for the development of provincial standards and guidelines for the total health care programme. It will undertake the evaluation of services now available or proposed for the future, and provide professional and technical advisory services on a province-wide basis.

The health services group, on the other hand, will be responsible for the administration of direct services provided by the ministry, such as facilities for the mentally retarded, psychiatric hospitals, laboratory services, emergency health services, inspections and so on. In addition, this group will be concerned with the health services which are delivered at the community level by a wide variety of institutions and agencies.

In implementing this new design, ministry personnel with medical and allied health services qualifications will be working in the standards group where they will be able to apply their special training to the fullest. They will not be involved with ongoing administration, which becomes the responsibility of managers who are running the programmes in accordance with the established standards and guidelines.

It will take time to define in detail the responsibilities of programme consultants for all the disciplines involved with health care.

However, in making senior staff moves, no professional person who is reassigned to other duties to bring about the restructured organization will suffer loss of pay. It is true, though, that for many their role and function will certainly change, and this in itself has caused worry to some.

It has been suggested that this kind of apparent "job splitting" simply raises the cost of administration. What is really involved, Mr. Speaker, is a clarification and rationalization of professional and administrative functions necessary for a more effective and economical ministry operation in the long run.

I wish to make it very plain that the vast majority of Ministry of Health employees are providing competent and devoted service. Mistakes have been made from time to time in the past, and no doubt some will occur in the future.

Mr. Lewis: Fifty million dollars' worth?

Hon. Mr. Potter: I am not aware of any large organization, public or private, where all decisions are always correct and all plans work out perfectly.

Mr. T. P. Reid (Rainy River): Well, that's a relief!

Hon. Mr. Potter: I wish to assure all concerned that the health care system which is now being developed will serve the needs of the people of Ontario over many years to come. And every effort is being made to make best use of the human and financial resources available for that purpose.

Mr. Lewis: What a silly statement that is! What a lot of gobbledegook! Good Lord!

COMMUNICATIONS POLICY

Hon. G. R. Carton (Minister of Transportation and Communications): Mr. Speaker, on March 22 the federal government released what is known as a green paper entitled, Proposals for a Communications Policy for Canada—A Position Paper of the Government of Canada.

This is a compact and complex document. The federal government describes it as being designed to suggest possible approaches to a series of problems arising from attempts by Ottawa to formulate a Canadian telecommunications policy. Some of these problems relate to the rapidly developing awareness by all provinces of the importance of communications to the economic and social development of the provinces. Others relate directly to the wide variety of jurisdictional control existing in communications across Canada.

As the minister responsible in communication matters in the government of Ontario, I welcome the green paper as a first step by the federal government. The green paper gives substance to the dialogue which has been going on between the various provincial governments and the federal Department of Communications for some months and years.

Because of the multitude of implications of what is said in the green paper, our analysis of its contents will continue for some time. But I felt I should give the hon. members some background about it and my reaction to it.

In the introduction to the green paper, the Minister of Communications, the Hon. Mr. Pelletier, has written an explanatory letter. In it he states that the paper "does not present exclusive or definitive answers." He states that its purpose is to put forward a number of optional solutions as the basis for public discussions by all concerned.

I wish to assure this House, as I have assured Mr. Pelletier by letter, that we welcome the discussion and are prepared to participate fully in discussions both bilaterally and at a federal-provincial ministerial conference or conferences.

An examination of the issues involved leads one to believe that both the provinces and the federal government have a share of interest in all fields of communications. If we are to reach a consensus on a national policy, there must be full exploration of the provincial interest, objectives and policies, as well as those put forward by the federal government. Because surely a real national policy is not equated with the policy of the federal government, but is a composite of all provincial and federal interests.

The green paper does not lead directly to that national policy because it precludes discussion of several issues of vital interest to the provinces, including broadcasting and cable television.

I would like to emphasize that certain basic principles enunciated in the green paper are those which this government espouses. For example, and again referring to Mr. Pelletier's letter in the green paper, this government supports:

1. The assurance that Canadians have available a reasonable variety of choice in the communications services and that at least basic communications services are available to all Canadians wherever they may live at just and reasonable rates.

2. This government supports efforts to assure that telecommunications systems be developed and used to strengthen the unity of Canada and foster Canadian social and cultural values.

3. We agree that telecommunications systems should strengthen the east-west links in Canada in relation to what Mr. Pelletier describes as "the powerful pull of north-south ties."

4. We desire, and certainly have demonstrated by action in related fields, that communications systems are and remain effectively in Canadian ownership or under Canadian control.

In his letter, Mr. Pelletier also refers to what he describes as "the best means of harmonizing federal and provincial objectives and activities in the field of telecommunications for the greatest benefit of all Canadians."

Mr. Speaker, I wish to assure the House that we also seek the best means of doing this. Given that these are the basic principles of a national policy as expressed by the federal government, I feel extremely confident that collectively we shall achieve the kind of communications system which Canada needs to deal with the pressures and problems of the years ahead.

The debate, sir, therefore is not about the objectives. The debate surrounds the best means of accomplishing the objectives, and which level of government can best respond to the needs and interests of the people of Canada.

We believe strongly that the provinces have the responsibility to define what is meant by "the public interest" at the local level and, in Ontario, we are preparing to do just that.

Mr. Speaker, last November, for the first time, representatives of all provinces met in Quebec City to explore mutual interests in communications. A second meeting of provincial communications ministers will be held in Calgary from May 31 to June 1 to continue these discussions. A third meeting likely will be necessary before the provinces will be in a position to respond constructively to the federal green paper and the other green papers planned by Ottawa in the next few months.

The federal Minister of Communications has invited the provinces to discuss the contents of the green paper on communications policy at a conference in July. For the reasons I have outlined, I have written to him suggesting that such a meeting would be more fruitful in the autumn, but that in the meantime, I welcome the opportunity to have our officials engage in the exploration of a full range of topics related to the interests of both governments.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to serve notice to the hon. members that I plan later in this session, time permitting, to present a full report on the attitudes we have been developing in the field of communications.

Mr. Speaker: Oral questions.

The hon. Leader of the Opposition.

STATUS OF HEALTH OFFICIAL

Mr. R. F. Nixon (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, a question of the Minister of Health: From his statement today which apparently had to do with further reorganization in his department, would he comment specifically on the status of Dr. McNally, whom I asked about last week, whose status as chief of one of the branches of the department is apparently in question?

Hon. Mr. Potter: I have no comment at this time, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: A supplementary: Does the minister not recall that when I asked the question before he said he would undertake to make a statement on this matter; in fact, is what he said today the promised statement?

Hon. Mr. Potter: No it is not, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. E. R. Good (Waterloo North): A supplementary, Mr. Speaker: Could the minister inform the House, if Dr. McNally is removed as director of emergency health services, who would be responsible for the medical aspects and the quality of medical training in the ambulance services?

Hon. Mr. Potter: I have no further comment to make on this, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: On a point of order: I realize, sir, that under the rules the minister is not required to answer questions in this regard, but when it is public knowledge that the job on one of the senior officials has been declared vacant, or he is under the gun as far as the minister is concerned, surely it is the minister's responsibility, as the chief policy-maker in that connection, to make some statement to clear the air? He can't just say, "I have no comment."

Mr. Singer: Particularly when he played footsie with us the other day.

Mr. Speaker: Order. I must say to the hon. Leader of the Opposition that the rules clearly indicate that any minister may or may not reply—he need not reply—to any question. There is no way in which the comments of the hon. Leader of the Opposition can be construed as a point of order. Therefore, it is entirely up to the hon. minister if he wishes to make any further comments.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Surely natural justice would require an answer.

Mr. Lewis: I have a supplementary, Mr. Speaker, which relates to the minister's statement.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Scarborough West has a supplementary.

Mr. Lewis: Can the minister guarantee to the House that Dr. McNally will not suffer a reduction in salary, as he indicated explicitly in his statement today?

Hon. Mr. Potter: Definitely, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: I think there have been enough supplementaries on the original statement.

The hon. Leader of the Opposition.

USE OF GOVERNMENT AIRCRAFT

Mr. R. F. Nixon: I have a question of the Minister of Natural Resources. Are we to gather from his answer late last week to a question about the logbooks of the 40-odd aircraft under his control that he refuses to make any information public or available to this House about the use of those aircraft, except for specific people on specific flights?

Hon. L. Bernier (Minister of Natural Resources): Mr. Speaker, as I said at that time, I had answered that question at the last session of the Legislature. I pointed out that I didn't think it would be a public service to divulge all the logbooks. As the member well knows, there are at least three logbooks for each aircraft and we have 40-odd aircraft. It seemed to me a little ridiculous to give all that information out, but if he has a specific request on a specific flight, I would be glad to get that for him.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: A supplementary, Mr. Speaker: I have a specific request. Because of the recommendation made by the Provincial Auditor to the minister on May 23, 1972, would he undertake to have excerpts from the logbooks made public, indicating the flights made by cabinet ministers, senior officials of the government and the people referred to by the auditor as others who made flights which were charged to a certain segment called the environmental protection branch of the minister's department which, according to the auditor, should not be charged to that particular branch? Now unfortunately—

Mr. Speaker: I think that is sufficient for the question.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: I cannot name the names, but that is because the information is not public.

Mr. Speaker: The hon leader's remarks are simply comment.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Mr. Speaker, I am prepared to take that question under consideration.

Mr. Reid: Supplementary.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. minister has undertaken to take the question under consideration. I think we need not have any further supplementaries. Does the hon. Leader of the Opposition have any further questions?

Mr. Reid: A supplementary, Mr. Speaker, to the original question.

Mr. Speaker: I think we have had enough supplementaries. Does the hon. Leader of the Opposition have further questions?

ALBERTA NATURAL GAS

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, a question of the Provincial Secretary for Justice: Has he got his experts and his colleagues in that area of policy looking at the possibility of bringing some sort of a legal action against the government of Alberta, if it persists in imposing a two-price basis for natural gas on the basis that it may very well be unconstitutional?

Hon. G. A. Kerr (Provincial Secretary for Justice): To answer the hon. member's question directly, Mr. Speaker, the answer would be no. Our policy field is, in fact, involved with the Resources Development policy field in looking at the whole picture of an energy policy for Ontario and how it affects Ontario vis-à-vis Canada and, therefore, Alberta. This is something that respective staff are looking at. There is no particular reference or direction in respect of the hon. member's question.

Mr. Singer: Mr. Speaker, by way of supplementary, does the minister not believe that it is against the provisions of the British North America Act if one province should by regulation discriminate against interprovincial trade, and, particularly, direct that discrimination against another province?

Mr. Lewis: Come on!

Mr. Singer: In the event that he does, would he not consider that it is an urgent problem to refer this matter to the law officers and get their advice as to whether or not an action should be placed before the courts to test the constitutionality of the actions of the Tory Premier of Alberta?

Hon. Mr. Kerr: Mr. Speaker, as I say, there is a very broad general consideration of the whole energy picture in this province. It would include all provinces. As the hon. member knows, there are negotiations still going on between Alberta and Ontario. I think it may be just a little premature to answer the hon. member's question today in that regard.

Mr. Singer: Does the minister—

Mr. Speaker: Does the hon. member for York South have a supplementary?

Mr. D. C. MacDonald (York South): Yes.

Mr. Speaker: I'll permit a supplementary.

Mr. MacDonald: A supplementary question of the minister: Does the minister believe that the obligation rests with the pipeline companies or eastern Ontario public utilities to take action in the courts for breach of contracts by the Alberta Government?

Hon. Mr. Kerr: Mr. Speaker, if there are private agreements in existence with the government of Alberta, certainly their recourse would be to the courts. But, again, I don't want to give any definitive statement of what our policy would be while the study is going on and while negotiations are going on at the top level between the two provinces. This is the type of thing that would be considered in any policy statement that will be enunciated at some later date or in whatever stand we take.

Mr. MacDonald: Let me clarify—

Mr. Singer: By way of a further supplementary question—

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for York South, I believe, has a supplementary. We'll permit it.

Mr. Singer: I have one, too, except you cut me off for the hon. member for York South.

Mr. Speaker: I apologize to the hon. member for Downsview.

Mr. MacDonald: Am I not correct that the action of the Alberta government in effect constitutes a breach of existing contracts, because it is forcing a change in the price within those contracts before their termination?

Hon. Mr. Kerr: Mr. Speaker, I don't know the terms of the contracts. I don't know all the contracts that are in existence at the present time. This is something that would have to be decided between the two parties and the courts, if necessary.

Mr. Singer: Mr. Speaker, by way of further supplementary, is the minister in fact saying that part of this ongoing study does not involve any reference to the law officers of the Crown for an opinion as to the constitutionality of the actions of the government of the Province of Alberta? Is that what he is saying?

Hon. Mr. Kerr: I am not saying that. I am saying that that could be very well part of the overall consideration and study that is now being undertaken under the aegis of the parliamentary assistant to the Premier (Mr. McKeough).

Mr. Singer: Well, is it or is it not going to be!

Mr. Speaker: There have been enough supplementaries. Does the hon. Leader of the Opposition have further questions of urgent public importance?

Mr. R. F. Nixon: No, not at this time.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Scarborough West.

APPOINTMENT OF PERRY RYAN TO OHI CLAIMS REVIEW BOARD

Mr. Lewis: A question of the Minister of Health, Mr. Speaker: What were the qualifications which caused the minister to appoint Mr. Perry Ryan as head of his review board on Ontario Health Insurance claims?

Hon. Mr. Potter: Really, Mr. Speaker, I don't think that this is the place to answer that. These appointments were recommended by government. I am not in the position to advise the opposition in respect to the appointments.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Reid: He is not prepared to answer any questions.

Mr. Singer: What is the place? Tell us about the ministry's reorganization.

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order, the Minister of Health has a minor health problem. When he doesn't hear the opposition, he turns to you. I would appreciate it if he could put it to the opposition. I didn't hear the answer at all.

Mr. Speaker: I must confess I didn't hear all of it. Perhaps the hon. minister would repeat the answer.

Hon. Mr. Potter: Sorry, Mr. Speaker. These appointments are Lieutenant Governor's appointments. I am not prepared to make any comments as to the qualifications of this particular individual.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Lewis: On a supplementary, since the Minister of Health has no basis for justification of the appointment, can he tell us then how he justifies the $100 a day which is paid to Mr. Ryan for sitting as chairman for reasons that are yet unknown to the House?

Mr. M. Gaunt (Huron-Bruce): It's better than being a member, I would say.

Mr. Speaker: I think the hon. minister need not answer that question. He doesn't seem inclined to.

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, by way of supplementary, I'll put it—

Mr. Speaker: The hon. minister doesn't wish to answer. There can't be a supplementary.

Mr. Lewis: Well, I am going to put it in a context which may prompt a reply. In the context of the financial problems of the Health Ministry, how does the minister justify $100 a day to a political appointment?

Mr. Speaker: The hon. minister has no inclination to reply.

USE OF GOVERNMENT AIRCRAFT

Mr. Lewis: All right. Thank you, Mr. Speaker. A question of the Minister of Natural Resources.

Mr. Singer: The minister needn't bother to come into the House.

Mr. Speaker: Order.

Mr. Lewis: Has the Minister of Natural Resources followed the Auditor's recommendation, in May, 1972, regarding flights involving his planes, to turn all of the administrative and operating expenses of such flights over to the Ministry of Government Services? Has that been done?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Mr. Speaker, I would say to the leader of the New Democratic Party that this matter is presently under review. I am hopeful to have a policy statement—

Mr. Singer: This is information day.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: —in the not too distant future, and I will make it available to the members of this House.

MERCURY TASK FORCE

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, I have another question of the Minister of Natural Resources—unrelated.

Interjections by hon. members.

An hon. member: The Minister of Education (Mr. Wells) is here now.

Mr. Lewis: Well, we welcome back the prodigal. They're waiting for him three seats to his right.

Mr. Speaker: I would like to ask the Minister of Natural Resources what has happened to the study of mercury pollution of the English River system and the task force set up?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Mr. Speaker, this particular task force is finalizing its report at the present time. I can assure the member that when it has reached the government's hands, it will be very carefully studied.

Mr. Lewis: By way of supplementary, it is not in the government's hands yet?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: No, it has not reached the government's hands yet.

Mr. Singer: If it had, they wouldn't tell us what was in it anyway.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Rainy River may have a supplementary on that question.

Mr. Reid: Can the minister indicate, especially because this mercury problem is in his own riding, why it took the Minister of Health and his department so long to inform the Indians who are living in the Whitedog reserve and the Islington reserve of the mercury levels that they had? Why did the Ministry of Health wait until March of this year to inform these people of the high levels of mercury?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Mr. Speaker, this is a health matter, as the member for Rainy River has very clearly pointed out. I think the question should be directed to the Minister of Health.

Mr. Reid: There's no sense in asking him.

Mr. Speaker: Does the hon. member for Scarborough West have any further questions?

DEMOLITION PERMITS

Mr. Lewis: Yes, a last question of the provincial Treasurer, Mr. Speaker: Would he consider bringing in an amendment to the Planning Act which would give municipalities the right to issue or withhold demolition permits in order that what is happening now on Sherbourne St. in downtown Toronto would not be readily permitted?

Hon. J. White (Treasurer and Minister of Intergovernmental Affairs): Yes I will, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: Does the hon. member for Scarborough West have further questions? If not, the hon. Minister of Natural Resources has the answer to questions previously asked.

REMOVAL OF AGGREGATE FROM LAKE ERIE

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Mr. Speaker, the hon. member for Essex South (Mr. Paterson) has inquired as to the removal of sand from the bed of Lake Erie. National Sand and Material Co. Ltd. has been informed that the licence for the Point Pelee area will be renewed provided it continues to prospect for another source of material elsewhere in Lake Erie. Their performance bond has been submitted and the licence fees are in the mail to the ministry.

There has been no proven connection with erosion to date. However, studies are continuing on this very problem. No operation may be carried on within two miles of Point Pelee. The licensed area and the amount of material that may be dredged per year were reduced in 1971.

Erie Sand and Gravel Co. Ltd. has completed its application and the renewal licences are ready for signature. The area licensed to this company is in the middle of the lake at the international boundary and it is highly unlikely that dredging would have any effect whatsoever on any shoreline.

Another reply, Mr. Speaker, to a question asked by the member for Sarnia (Mr. Bullbrook). I'll put it on the record. He inquired about action on the recommendations made in the report of the select committee on lake levels of the Great Lakes to the Ontario Legislature, dated and tabled in this House in 1953.

While the recommendations were of such nature as to involve a number of provincial jurisdictions, I can advise the hon. member that many of the studies that refer to Great Lakes levels have been undertaken. In June, 1964, the then Prime Minister of Ontario convened a meeting in Toronto of all the jurisdictions fronting on the Great Lakes and having an interest in Great Lakes levels. As a result of this, and a subsequent joint reference by the United States and Canada to the International Joint Commission, a number of hearings were held in Ontario and in the United States where briefs were received and persons heard in conjunction with the low levels which prevailed that year.

The IJC has undertaken to investigate whether it would be practical and in the public interest to regulate further the levels of the Great Lakes so as to bring about a more beneficial range of levels for the various water users. The IJC established the Great Lakes Water Levels Board to undertake this investigation, and according to my latest advice the report is to be submitted by the board to the IJC possibly next month. We are most anxious to examine and study this report as soon as it is available.

In connection with the administration of public lands fronting the Great Lakes, all the Crown lands were withdrawn from disposition in September, 1963.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for St. David.

FOUR-DAY SCHOOL WEEK.

Mrs. M. Scrivener (St. David): Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Minister of Education. In view of recent newspaper reports on proposals for a four-day work week by certain boards of education in response to the Ministry of Education request for ideas on varying the school year, can the minister inform the House as to whether his ministry would indeed give serious consideration to such a proposal as an alternative to the existing school week?

Hon. T. L. Wells (Minister of Education): Mr. Speaker, as the hon. member has stated, these requests have come in response to our memorandum which to a great degree modifies the school year in this province. It allows for several alternatives to be accepted by boards. The third alternative is a more radical type of school year which could include something like a four-day school week.

If this were to be introduced there are a number of steps—as well as approval from the ministry—that we would insist be gone through before it was introduced. These steps would include consultation with parents, students, the community and so on, because I think what has gone on in other jurisdictions has shown us that the premature introduction of any radical type of school year usually leads to misunderstandings and objections from a great section of the community.

So, in summary, if any board wished to introduce some such school year, if it followed certain procedures, presented them to us and so forth, it would be possible for this to happen in this province. But to this point we haven't had any formal proposals from any board in the province.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Kent.

TOBACCO INSURANCE.

Mr. J. P. Spence (Kent): Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Minister of Agriculture and Food. Is it correct that the Ontario Crop Insurance Commission has hired some insurance agents to go out and inform the tobacco farmers in regard to its insurance plan, and does he agree that this is discriminating against those insurance agents who are not hired by the commission?

Hon. W. A. Stewart (Minister of Agriculture and Food): Mr. Speaker, I would suppose that no matter who was hired it could be discrimination, unless everyone was appointed to be an agent for tobacco insurance. But in the areas where tobacco is grown it was felt that those who were involved now in providing tobacco insurance could very well be those who would handle the programme.

Actually, it is an entirely different selling programme for tobacco crop insurance than it is for other crops, because the records for every producer's acreage and yield going back over a number of years are very obviously held by the tobacco board. The records are there. It's simply a matter of filling out the forms based on the records now available. It is easier than for any other type of crop insurance there is.

So there was a special arrangement made in this particular instance and I frankly feel it will work to the advantage of the flue-cured tobacco growers, the board and the insurance agents involved.

Mr. Spence: Mr. Speaker, a supplementary: Could the minister inform me how many agents have been hired and are they located in counties, or where are they located?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: I saw that information, Mr. Speaker. I haven't got it with me but I'll get it for the hon. member.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Hamilton East.

FLOODING IN HAMILTON

Mr. R. Gisborn (Hamilton East): Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the Minister of the Environment (Mr. Auld) and because of the seriousness of the situation I would direct my question to the Provincial Secretary for Resources Development.

In view of the serious flooding affecting the function of septic tanks on Beach Blvd., Hamilton, commonly known as the beach strip, would the minister have officials of the water resources division immediately contact and co-operate with the corporation of the city of Hamilton in providing engineering and financial assistance to protect the health of the 1,000 residents in these homes?

Hon. A. B. R. Lawrence (Provincial Secretary for Resources Development): Yes, Mr. Speaker, certainly with respect to the engineering. I can't be as categorical with regard to financial assistance.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Downsview is next.

DIAL-A-BUS SYSTEM FOR TORONTO

Mr. Singer: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Minister of Transport and Communications in reference to dial-a-bus.

Could the minister tell us how much it is going to cost? How many people does he think might be served by it? Why does he describe the areas which are proposed to be served as low density areas; and does he, and his officials, really believe that the areas needing such service stop at Highway 401? There are none south of Highway 401.

And, finally, Mr. Speaker, is it more than a coincidence that there is such a heavy concentration of this new and wonderful service east of Yonge St. which is already served by the Don Valley Parkway, and which happens to be represented by the hon. member for York Mills (Mr. Bales) and partially represented by the hon. member for Armourdale (Mr. Carton)?

Mr. Speaker: I'm not sure that the total question is of urgency.

Mr. Singer: I think it's urgent.

Mr. Speaker: Well, the hon. minister may reply.

Mr. Lewis: Certain parts of it are urgent.

Mr. Speaker: Certain parts of it certainly are.

Hon. Mr. Carton: Mr. Speaker, first of all I might point out that when it comes to urban transportation there is no unanimity. There are varying opinions. The hon. member for Downsview could be as right as I am or I could be as wrong as he is.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: I doubt it.

Mr. Singer: That is the difference.

Hon. Mr. Carton: But in any event, Mr. Speaker, the reason that these areas were chosen was that this happened to be the largest single densely populated area with respect to roads—fixed routes that are a mile and a quarter apart. This was the reason that this particular area of North York was chosen.

Mr. Singer: It just isn't true.

Hon. Mr. Carton: Yes, it is true.

Mr. Singer: Downsview Airport is right in the middle of one of those areas.

Hon. Mr. Carton: Yes, and we've taken—

Mr. Singer: That is dense.

Mr. Speaker: Order.

Hon. Mr. Carton: Would the hon. member let me finish my answer, please?

Mr. Speaker: Yes, please let's not have an argument.

Hon. Mr. Carton: And we are servicing the hon. member's riding very well, Mr. Speaker. We have one of the peak routes and one of the off-peak routes in the hon. member's riding.

I have not become too definitive about the particular routes because they are outlined and anyone can get them. They were given with the press releases. I have seen them, however, at the presentation that was made to me.

May I point out, Mr. Speaker, that the routes were determined, not just by my ministry, but by the planning experts in the Toronto Transit Commission and the planning experts in Metropolitan Toronto. This was a recommendation of the joint technical transportation planning committee. So there are a great number of—

Mr. P. G. Givens (York-Forest Hill): One that the minister is accepting.

Hon. Mr. Carton: —experts who have had input, as they call it these days, into the determination of the particular routes.

With respect to the money, it will cost about $540,000 startup capital. If we amortize the startup capital over a period of three years—this is amortized capital costs—it is considered that there will be an annual cost, depending on rider volume—whether there is a high or low volume of riders—of about $900,000 to $1,100,000.

It will, again depending on rider volume, break down to 41 cents per passenger deficit or 70 cents per passenger deficit.

I'd like to point out, sir, that this is a demonstration project. It is the largest demonstration project of dial-a-bus which is taking place on the continent. I would also like to point out that we have been pioneers in this particular system and that other cities are now copying the system. From the Bay Ridges area demonstration project, which was highly successful and which was turned back to the village of Pickering, have emanated the ones for Stratford and one for Kingston; there are two others which are proposed to begin shortly. It is a very highly successful urban transportation aid.

Insofar as the rider volume is concerned—

Mr. Speaker: I think the answer is approaching a ministerial statement.

Hon. Mr. Carton: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Givens: A supplementary—

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for York-Forest Hill has a supplementary.

Mr. Givens: Will the minister please tell us what he intends to do or how he intends to increase the capacity of the Yonge St. subway and the station—which were planned and designed many years ago—to accommodate the flow of about a million passengers that he has stated the dial-a-bus system will feed into it?

Hon. Mr. Carton: Mr. Speaker this particular point was gone into by the planning officials and it was estimated that the effect on the passenger total would be about two per cent per annum and therefore not of a greatly significant amount.

Mr. Givens: Does the minister intend to run a GO train from Richmond Hill to Union Station or does he contemplate approaching the federal government with respect to a commuter train from Richmond Hill to Union Station?

Hon. Mr. Carton: I am leaving for Ottawa on Friday morning with a view to speaking to the federal government about a commuter train from Richmond Hill—

Mr. J. R. Breithaupt (Kitchener): He's not going by train, I'll bet.

Hon. Mr. Carton —to Union Station.

Mr. D. R. Timbrell (Don Mills): A supplementary, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Don Mills.

Mr. Timbrell: Does the minister anticipate that before the service starts, I believe in November of this year, he might—

Mr. Singer: Or next April 1.

Mr. Timbrell: —consider adding additional routes which would serve the Don Mills-Victoria Village area? Main bus lines pass through there travelling to the Bloor-Danforth subway line. Would he anticipate possibly serving those areas as well?

Mr. Singer: The member's riding has the Don Valley Parkway already.

Mr. Timbrell: That's like a parking lot.

Mr. Speaker: Order! The hon. minister was asked a question.

Hon. Mr. Carton: This is, as I explained, a demonstration project; everyone could say, "Why not put the demonstration project in my particular area?" We have the fixed boundaries located now and as it is a demonstration project—mind you, as the success of this demonstration project is seen as we go along, there can be additions made but we don't contemplate putting them in at present.

Mr. Givens: How long is the demonstration going to take?

Hon. Mr. Carton: Three years.

Mr. Givens: Two years?

Hon. Mr. Carton: Three years.

Mr. Speaker: If there is a supplementary from the New Democratic Party members, it is their turn.

If there is no supplementary I think we have had sufficient supplementaries.

Mr. M. C. Germa (Sudbury): This is not a supplementary, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: All right. It is the New Democratic Party's turn. The hon. member for Sudbury.

COST OF HEALTH UNIT OPENING CEREMONIES

Mr. Germa: Mr. Speaker, a question of the Minister of Health; I would ask him why it is necessary to spend $8,500 on opening day ceremonies at the Sudbury and district health unit scheduled for June 9?

Hon. Mr. Potter: That is news to me, Mr. Speaker. I'll have—

Mr. Lewis: There is a lot of money in that ministry to throw around.

An hon. member: Especially in Sudbury.

Mr. Speaker: Supplementary?

Mr. Germa: A supplementary: As the minister is going to supply 80 per cent of these funds and since there are certain constraints on expenditure in his department, would he not consider it wise to intervene in this waste of money, which is essentially a Tory propaganda instrument?

Mr. Speaker: I think the question is not properly phrased.

Mr. Lewis: There is always money for Tory propaganda.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Rainy River.

FURNITURE SUPPLIES TO GOVERNMENT

Mr. Reid: Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Minister of Government Services in relation to the auditor's report. Has the minister taken any action and can he give the House any information on the one firm and its affiliated companies which supply all the furniture and equipment to the Ontario government? What is the name of the firm and what action has the minister taken to prevent this kind of monopoly and to spread this kind of business around?

Hon. J. W. Snow (Minister of Government Services): Mr. Speaker, I am somewhat at a loss to know exactly what the hon. member is referring to—

Mr. Reid: Hasn't the minister read the auditor's report? On page 49?

Mr. Speaker: That's not a supplementary.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: It certainly refers to the minister regularly.

Hon. Mr. Snow: Certainly the ministry does not buy the total office furniture requirements from one supplier.

Mr. Reid: By way of supplementary: Is the minister not aware that on page 49, if I might quote:

A special review was also conducted of purchases of furniture and equipment from one supplier and its affiliated companies. As a result, a number of matters came to our attention which were of interest.

Now, surely the minister is aware of that and has he asked for any further information to find out what's going on in his own department?

Hon. Mr. Snow: Mr. Speaker, I do not have that information readily available. I'll get it for the hon. member.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Cochrane South.

QUETICO PARK

Mr. W. Ferrier (Cochrane South): I should like to ask a question of the Minister of Natural Resources. What is he going to do about the master plan for Quetico Park that he's had in his possession for about eight months? Has he issued a policy statement, or is he going to adopt it—or what is he going to do with it?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Mr. Speaker, as I have pointed out in this House on previous occasions, the report is in the ministry's hands. We asked for public opinion and for public comment by the end of 1972. This has been received and the members of my staff are going over all the submissions. It will be brought before the resources development policy committee very shortly. I hope to make some statement on it in the not-too-distant future.

Mr. Lewis: Right!

Mr. Singer: The task force will review it.

Mr. J. E. Stokes (Thunder Bay): Supplementary.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Thunder Bay.

Mr. Stokes: Since the minister well knows that the advisory committee sought out the opinion from the public for over two years, why does the minister now feel it's necessary to go back to the public for any reaction to a report that was based on public opinion and two years in the making?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Mr. Speaker, over on this side we believe in participatory democracy. We like to get as much public involvement as we can; and—

Mr. Stokes: That's what we did.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: —this is one way of doing it.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: A supplementary, Mr. Speaker: Is it participatory democracy that is delaying the minister's decision on Algonquin Park policy?

Interjections by an hon. member.

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Is it the same thing that is delaying the minister's decision on Algonquin Park policy?

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Lewis: Or on mercury pollution?

Mr. Singer: Or on the guy who issues the airplanes used by cabinet ministers? Is that it?

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Lewis: The government doesn't do anything on that side except appoint members to advisory boards.

Mr. Stokes: Just to study the study.

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Mr. Singer: Some participation!

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: There is lots of public interest.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Rainy River.

Mr. Reid: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the minister: Since he will not lead, will he perhaps follow the example of the American side in Superior National Forest and for the coming year in Quetico Park ban all non-reusable metal containers and bottles, and also restrict to 10 the size of parties using Quetico Park?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Mr. Speaker, any information along these lines, of course, will be incorporated in the statement and the decision of the government when it is made.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Lewis: Sure! Right! It is being looked into.

Mr. Reid: What is the delay?

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Mr. Lewis: What a ministry!

Mr. Speaker: An hon. member of the Liberal Party has kindly pointed out to me that the hon. member for Hamilton Mountain would like to ask a question.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: They need all the help they can get.

ROYAL VISIT.

Mr. J. R. Smith (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, a question of the Minister of Government Services: Would the minister please explain why—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. J. R. Smith: Would the minister please explain why, on the forthcoming royal itinerary, a visit to Hamilton-Wentworth is not listed?

Mr. Singer: Oh, come on!

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Snow: Mr. Speaker, I personally did not arrange Her Majesty's tour, at least the itinerary. I do understand that—

Mr. Singer: Take it up with Her Majesty directly.

Hon. Mr. Snow:—there was a request or an invitation by the city of Hamilton, from the mayor and council, for the royal visitors to call at Hamilton; but by the time this was received by the government—the request was made to the Governor General of Canada—and passed on to Her Majesty's staff, the itinerary for the tour was too far advanced to include the city of Hamilton.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: She is going to be in Brampton that day.

Hon. Mr. Snow: In any case—

Mr. Singer: She told us she doesn't like Hamilton.

Hon. Mr. Snow: I know on her tour she will be coming from the Niagara Peninsula and she will be passing through Hamilton—

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Snow:—as she will also be passing through Oakville.

Mr. Lewis: A good view of Stelco, anyway.

Hon. Mr. Snow: I understand that the royal train will slow down—

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Snow:—so that Her Majesty will have every opportunity to see as many people as possible.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Welland South.

ILLEGAL USE OF DRUGS

Mr. R. Haggerty (Welland South): Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to direct a question to the Provincial Secretary for Justice. With the recent deaths caused by illegal use of drugs, will the ministry give serious consideration for new legislation to control such drug abuse, particularly to amphetamines and those disguised as MDA? Second, will his department provide funds for drug bounties to control drug pushers in Ontario?

Hon. Mr. Kerr: Mr. Speaker, this would be mainly within the responsibility of the Solicitor General (Mr. Yaremko) and also the Attorney General (Mr. Bales). I might just mention that the Speech from the Throne indicated that there will be a stepped-up war, shall we say—increased emphasis against the use of drugs in Ontario. More funds will be allocated for the enforcement of the present provisions of the Criminal Code against the use of drugs, particularly drug trafficking. I would suggest that the member refer his question to the Solicitor General.

Mr. Singer: Can we expect another task force?

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Thunder Bay.

ACQUISITIONS OF FOREST PRODUCTS COMPANIES

Mr. Stokes: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have a question of the Minister of Natural Resources.

In view of the acquisition of Lac Seul Land and Lumber by Pope and Talbot of the United States, and in view of the acquisition of Multiply of Nipigon by MacMillan Bloedel, and since both of these companies were recipients of forgivable loans or performance loans from the Ministry of Industry and Tourism, has the minister looked into the overall effects that this will have on the wood-using industry? Is the minister satisfied that those acquisitions are in the best interest of the economy of the province and his ministry?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Well, Mr. Speaker, I want to point out to the member for Thunder Bay, that as far as Pope and Talbot is concerned, it was Boundary Sawmills, of B.C., a subsidiary of Pope and Talbot, of Portland, Ore., that bought out Lac Seul Land and Lumber. So that there was certainly Canadian involvement in that particular purchase.

With regard to the loans, it is my understanding that while the loans made to the Lac Seul Land and Lumber Co. were outstanding, these have been totally paid by Pope and Talbot, and that there is nothing outstanding. Under the new terms of reference, of course, if they are not completely Canadian, as I understand it, then they don't become eligible for NODC loans. So there are no loans outstanding to that operation at Hudson.

With regard to the wood usage I can say that we looked into it very, very carefully. We think that both operations are in the best economic interest of northwestern Ontario. When the expansions are completed in both of these areas, I think that the member for Thunder Bay will—and I know the member for Kenora will—be very pleased with what is going on.

Mr. Stokes: Does the minister plan on making any announcements or is he aware of any announcements of any major expansion of Multiply in Nipigon?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Mr. Speaker, I would have to say to you that there are discussions going on between my ministry and Mac-Millan Bloedel, but I am not at liberty at this time to make any comment or statement. I hope that all the details will be finalized in the not-too-distant future, when the announcement can be made.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Huron.

MEAT BOYCOTT

Mr. J. Riddell (Huron): Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask a question of the Minister of Agriculture and Food. In view of the present situation whereby consumers in Ontario are seriously thinking of boycotting meat products because of rising prices, will the Ministry of Agriculture and Food—and I firmly believe this to be the responsibility of the ministry—use every means possible to disseminate information to the consumer regarding the cost of production of such products as far as the farmer is concerned? Would the minister relate this to the price and income which the farmer receives for his products?

I feel that the farmer is being unjustly blamed for these rising prices and that it is time that the consumer realized the farmer is barely making a satisfactory standard of living.

Mr. Speaker: In view of the fact that this was the hon. member's first question I extended a special courtesy to him. It was not in order.

Mr. MacDonald: The minister always gives a speech as an answer, so I am sure he will have a speech in reply to this question.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: With deference to my hon. friend from York South, Mr. Speaker, that question requires a lengthy answer.

Mr. MacDonald: When does the minister ever give one that isn't?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Well, I looked at the clock to see if I had time. But let me say, Mr. Speaker, that the question posed by my hon. friend from Huron county is one that was of very great concern to us. It was of so much concern that this government a year ago introduced a programme to increase the number of beef cattle produced in this province by providing a bank guarantee to those beef producers who might purchase female breeding stock to increase the beef herds of this province.

We have already guaranteed something like between $3.5 million and $4 million to increase beef production in the Province of Ontario. Obviously it was not possible, prior to the more satisfactory price which emerged in the last six to eight months, to encourage many people to get into beef production because, contrary to what my hon. friend may suggest—and I am sure he knows full well, being a member of the extension service of our ministry—it was a well-known fact that there was little or no money to be made in beef production in this or any other province in this country because of the disastrously low prices that beef producers were being forced to accept.

I find it extremely unfortunate today, when for the first time in this century, except the brief period of 1951, the farmers of Canada are receiving a half-decent price for their beef, that people should start to protest against that decent price.

I find it singularly coincidental and most unfortunate that the federal government has not seen fit in this last few days to implement some type of an embargo against the great volume of beef cattle pouring into Canada from the United States, when this country implemented a moratorium against the use of DES, the hormone drug that cannot be used in Canada but can still be used in the United States.

If it's not good enough for our farmers in Canada to produce beef with the benefit of that drug, then why is it acceptable for the Americans to ship beef in here that could be fed that drug?

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order! With respect, the hon. minister's response is exceeding the requirement for the question in terms of time.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Sorry, Mr. Speaker, I bow to your ruling.

Mr. Riddell: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker: I didn't get my question answered.

Mr. MacDonald: One never does!

Mr. Riddell: I want the Ministry of Agriculture and Food to disseminate the information to consumers regarding the cost of production, because the farmer is—

Mr. Speaker: All right, the hon. member is repeating this time. The hon. minister responded in the manner in which he saw fit, which is all that can be required of him.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Mr. Speaker, let me say that I would like to offer publicly my congratulations to the Toronto Star for the excellent article today on beef and meat production and the costs of distribution and handling, which are so very obvious. It covers the story very well.

What my hon. friend suggests is that we should detail the cost of producing a pound of beef from the time the idea of retaining an animal for breeding purposes in this country is conceived right through to the finished article. That information has been documented and made public by the Ontario Beef Improvement Association and by our information branch.

Mr. Speaker: The time for oral questions has elapsed.

Petitions.

Introduction of bills.

FATAL ACCIDENTS ACT

Hon. Mr. Bales moves first reading of bill intituled, An Act to amend the Fatal Accidents Act.

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

Hon. D. A. Bales (Attorney General): Mr. Speaker, under the provisions of the Fatal Accidents Act, an action may be brought by the wife, husband, parent or child of a deceased person where the death has been caused by wrongful act, neglect or default. One of the claims that may be included is the funeral expenses. This bill increases the maximum that may be claimed from $300 to $800 in an action under that Act.

COMMISSIONERS FOR TAKING AFFIDAVITS ACT

Hon. Mr. Bales moves first reading of bill intituled, An Act to amend the Commissioners for Taking Affidavits Act.

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

Hon. Mr. Bales: Mr. Speaker, the amendment ensures that certain officials of metropolitan and regional municipalities are ex officio commissioners for taking affidavits in the same way as the same officials are in the older forms of municipalities. It also provides that the mayors, controllers and aldermen of the boroughs of Metropolitan Toronto may take affidavits in the metropolitan area in the same way as is provided for the regional municipalities.

FLOOD CONTROL COMMISSION ACT

Mr. Burr moves first reading of bill intituled, An Act to establish the Flood Control Commission.

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

Mr. F. A. Burr (Sandwich-Riverside): Mr. Speaker, the bill proposes that a commission be established to protect the shoreline of the Great Lakes from flooding and erosion.

Mr. Speaker: Before the orders of the day I would simply like to take a moment or two to express my appreciation to the hon. members for their co-operation during the slightly amended question period.

Orders of the day.

Clerk of the House: The first order, resuming the adjourned debate on the amendment to the amendment to the motion for an address in reply to the speech of the Honourable the Lieutenant Governor at the opening of the session.

THRONE SPEECH DEBATE

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for York Centre.

Mr. D. M. Deacon (York Centre): Mr. Speaker, at the adjournment of the debate on Friday I was reviewing the fact that the real culprit in the soaring cost of housing in this province is not the speculator but it is truly the government of this province, which has failed to understand the significance of the free market with regard to housing.

For the last 15 years or more it has, by regulation, restricted the availability of places where people can build a house and has caused a market condition to exist which is ideal for speculators in that they know each year there'll be more people wanting places to build than there are places for them to build on. The government has done this by failing to invest the resources of this province in the provision of ample services. It has done this by failing to place behind municipalities the assistance needed so that the assessment tail doesn't wag the planning dog.

We are absolutely out of kilter in the way we have organized our provision of government funds to ensure that housing is provided for the people of this province. I am completely behind the concept of this government in rent supplement programmes. But one of the major reasons we have continued objection from municipalities to low cost housing in this province is that the municipalities know they will not obtain from low cost housing sufficient revenue in property taxes to cover costs in the initial years of those developments. That is one of the major problems.

The other thing is the fact that public housing, as it has been carried out, has really resulted in ghettos. It's been of a type that has not allowed people to work off a feeling of being wards of the state. It has not put them in a position to be able to stand on their feet with pride. It has marked them from the beginning, and this is a disaster when it comes to re-establishing people and enabling them to be contributing members of society.

It's the government of the province that is the culprit. I submit, Mr. Speaker, that this government, until it changes its ways, is one which is going to cause conditions in this province which could lead to riot and unrest of a type we have seen too much of to the south of our boundaries.

The other point I brought to the House's attention was the North Pickering nightmare created by this province and announced a year ago, by which the province is trying to "Malvernize" Ontario, to provide a city the size of London as an alternative thrust to growth in this Toronto region, when it is quite obvious that any city the size of London, Ont., right against Toronto is doing nothing to disperse growth. It is doing nothing to further the principles of the Toronto-centred region. Any development of such a city should be well to the east of Oshawa.

I want to continue, Mr. Speaker, in connection with the development of regional government in this province. I would like to review the fact that in the past this party has stated on many occasions that it does not deny there is a great need for local government reform in Ontario.

What we have objected to is the process whereby this province has written to people saying they need to have local government reform, something that is quite obvious. But it has consulted with the local representatives, with heads of councils, in closed meetings, with no background of information provided to these representatives on a basis that could enable them to truly analyze alternative solutions to their problems.

The government has had, in the course of development of plans, programmes which have not envisaged the possibility of types of provincial financial assistance being given which differ from those given in the past. For example, as the Treasurer (Mr. White) will recall, he has stated on many occasions the importance of Ottawa giving a new basis of tax revenue to the Province of Ontario. I agree with him. It is important for the province to have additional resources available. Why is it the Treasurer and his government have failed to recognize this tax-sharing type of concept is needed in relationships between the province and the municipalities?

There have been practically no changes in the type of grant made to municipalities, particularly regional municipalities. As a matter of fact, one of the reasons that Highway 404 should be built between Newmarket and Toronto is that with the new region of York the conditional grants are so stringent that heavy traffic has to travel between Queen's Park and Toronto to be sure on each occasion that the way the region is spending its money is going to fit the strings attached to and binding on each particular little grant which has been made. The government does not seem to understand the concept of true local autonomy. It does not seem to understand that our role should be one of not instructing by these conditional grants how money should be spent, but rather by setting out information which will help local councils to make the judgements allowing them the complete discretion to make judgements, whether or not we agree that they are good, and then ensuring that the public, which elects these local councils as well as ourselves, is in a position to understand and appraise and assess the quality of representation, the quality of decision making these local councils have demonstrated

This whole concept of Ontario, in setting up these regional governments, saying there has to be between 200,000 and 300,000 people in these regions, thinking in terms of numbers of people instead of in terms of the accessibility of those people to their local representatives, is completely wrong. The Treasurer and his advisers should understand—and they probably do understand—that this type of region is one that can never really provide meaningful local representation and local commitment to improve government services.

The important part of any democratic system is for the people to feel that the government is theirs, a government to which they can provide input. But in these regions, with their huge areas of responsibilities, those sitting on councils have such a small portion of the area that they represent and are so remote from the centre they have no opportunity to provide a different level of service, a different quality of service to their municipality in accordance with the variation in local aspirations.

We must realize that it is not the size of a municipality that determines its efficiency, it's the ability of that municipality to co-ordinate the aspirations and the requirements of the people, the ability of that region to attract involvement of the citizens in the decisions and make the people feel that those decisions are the type that really reflect their aspirations. It is not until this government changes its thrust from one of where they are dictating what the level of service will be to a direction of where they are assessing and enabling the local people to understand the quality of the government their local people are giving, that we are going to get the quality of government, the value for our tax dollars, that we are entitled to in this great Province of Ontario.

I think the whole approach to the district health council that the Minister of Health (Mr. Potter) described about a year ago is an interesting illustration of the conflict that exists in this government between really trying to get local involvement in local government or trying to impose a new level of bureaucracy. In the region of York there is a movement by the local MOH, Dr. Slingerland, at the request of the ministry, to investigate the need for a district health council in that region. He thought in terms of his existing public health service, which is on a regional basis, and he really thought the only efficient region would be one of such a vast scale which has no relationship to the local types of community involvement and participation that exist within that region of York. Some of us were of the view there really should be in the order of three district health councils within that region; that if we had three different district councils we would be able to attract volunteer participation of a type that could greatly reduce the cost of administration and co-ordination of health services; one that could really give the people an incentive to save money and at the same time streamline and improve the health service.

It was one that, if it were carried forward in the years to come with modern technology, could mean that we could have a different level of health costs reflected in the taxes of people within these districts, so that districts would have a real incentive to improve their whole health programme. It would enable districts to recognize the fact that a health programme isn't just of a clinical nature. A health programme should be one that involves preventive measures such as good nutrition, participation in recreation; and all types of improvements in other preventive aspects of health care so that the need for hospital space, that is the clinical aspect of health care, the demand for facilities of that type would be greatly reduced.

Now if this type of district health council were the type of district health council organized in Ontario, then the provincial government would really be doing a first-class job of organizing and reorganizing health care within the province. It would mean that people were close to their health situation and would feel they could have an impact on that health within their own districts. We would see a far different approach than they now take to an impersonal bureaucracy; an approach of indifference that is reflected by the fact that in the region of York less than two per cent of the population are aware of such a thing as a public health programme being in existence. That is a shockingly low percentage!

We don't need regulation all across the province because the way of meeting a high standard of health care in some areas of the province will be different than in others. I think we can have the high standards we wish to obtain, but let's not insist on each area achieving those standards by the same route. Let the local people find the means of achieving the high standards, don't tell them how they must do it.

If we were to establish these district health councils we would also have a potential new form of co-ordination of welfare services, because certainly health and welfare are very closely related responsibilities.

Take for example the situation with regard to mentally retarded patients in our province. Quite wisely, this province is moving away from these huge provincial institutions, institutions that did not provide much hope for the patients within them. It has been recognized, through this programme, that it is important that these patients become part of the communities from which they came; and further, that local involvement would be possible where there was a personal interest in individual patients. But unfortunately at this time, although the province is acting wisely in moving these patients back into smaller institutions, it has made no co-ordinated effort with the Ministry of Community and Social Services to provide grants so that a different type of facility can be made available to them.

In the region of York the Aurora school is going to be expanded to accommodate more people from Orillia; but at the same time we could be providing in existing housing and in new housing excellent facilities where these patients could be looked after at a far lower cost per diem than in provincial institutions. We could do it in a manner which would enable these patients to participate in community life of one sort or another. We have the ARC industries, for example, in Richmond Hill, where these patients can become usefully employed.

We can, by means of this whole approach, really make mental patients a contributing part of the community instead of a weight upon the community. But at the present time the whole programme with regard to additional accommodation in a local community is dropped because the Ministry of Health hasn't talked yet to the Ministry of Community and Social Services and worked out a scheme for shifting grants.

This shows the whole sham of the new structure of government, where we do have a secretariat for human resources, so-called, secretary for human resources, but what has it been doing to really get down into the departments and provide for co-ordination? Nothing is shown, particularly in that area, at this time.

Mr. Speaker, I now want to move into the field of pollution, and the whole aspect of the control of the environment which is the responsibility of that minister.

I was very disappointed last year, as I mentioned to the minister, when he did nothing at the time when the city of Toronto decided to proceed with the reconstruction of the Commissioner St. garbage plant. And the reason I was dismayed at that time is because, although disposal of garbage is his responsibility, he is also the minister accountable for Ontario Hydro and the whole Hydro utility system. It is well known that the Commissioner St. plant is located a very short distance from the Hearn power plant.

It is also known that Toronto Hydro operates a steam heating plant at Adelaide and Simcoe Sts. in Toronto; and both of these plants consume vast amounts of fossil fuels—quite irreplaceable. Yet we're building a new Commissioner St. garbage disposal plant which doesn't make any use of the heat generated by the burning of garbage. It has very few of the modern pollution control improvements which can be achieved by utilizing the heat generated by such burnings. It not only doesn't reduce the amount of pollution but it also doesn't take advantage of the energy that is generated by these other plants.

The east Hamilton solid waste reduction plant, located just off the Queen Elizabeth Way at the south traffic circle, now disposes of most of the waste collected in the city of Hamilton. If you drive by that plant at almost any time it is in operation it is virtually impossible to see any smoke rising from a stack of only 150 ft in height. That plant is designed to take advantage of modern technology in the burning of garbage; not just burning it and wasting it but actually converting it into steam.

The tragedy is that there has been no method made available to the city of Hamilton by this government to sell that steam to industry in the nearby area.

Surely with a little encouragement from this government plants like the east Hamilton waste reduction plant could be established in many parts of this province, particularly in the Toronto area.

It has been shown that if steam is sold at a price anywhere close to the present cost of steam to industry and to consumers in central Toronto, sufficient revenue could be generated by such a plant to virtually cover the full cost of operations. The plant also has the great advantage of taking such recoverables as metals out of the garbage. It converts the ash into a fine powder that can be used in glass manufacturing. In effect, it is a very fine recycling operation.

Yet this government, despite the leadership of the city of Hamilton, has done nothing to take advantage of that practical leadership in providing such plants in areas where the need for improved garbage disposal is well known.

Isn't it a tragedy that the only disposal method the Minister of the Environment (Mr. Auld) can see at this moment—and I repeat, at this moment, because he is talking about studies for the future—is to fill in holes created by the removal of gravel. Surely it is much wiser for us to landscape these old gravel pits in other ways and not fill them up with compressed garbage of various types, thus threatening these areas with pollution of a sort that can never be corrected in the future. I am thinking of the threatened danger to Stouffville and other areas a few years ago when a former Minister of the Environment was confronted with the disposal of liquid wastes at the headwaters of the Holland River in the area from which the town of Stouffville got its water supply. These kinds of approaches to the disposal of wastes reflect the lack of energy, imagination and initiative on the part of the minister to really get on top of the garbage disposal problem.

Hon. G. A. Kerr (Provincial Secretary for Justice): Has the member seen the new liquid disposal plant at Mississauga?

Mr. R. F. Nixon (Leader of the Opposition): Why don't they dump it into Hamilton Bay like they do in the minister's area.

Mr. Deacon: In the town of Vaughan the proposal is to start running CN trains to build up Goodhead mountain to further heights and to fill in the various gravel pits around there with more mountains of garbage instead of building ski areas in more logical places and of materials far more suitable than old garbage.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Build them out of the minister's old speeches!

Mr. Deacon: We've got studies, studies and studies, but we just do not get any action of a nature that makes use of the energy of that garbage or of the recycling potential; we are simply wasting the future resources of our province.

The last area that I wish to review, Mr. Speaker, is in regard to the Ministry of Consumer and Commercial Relations and the approaches being taken in that department to improve safeguards for the consumer.

I am pleased the minister has stated that it is his wish to involve the public more in the direction which this legislation may take and to further involve the responsible industries in the actual control of abuses within their respective areas of activity. But I'm also dismayed that this minister is still incapable of understanding that the involvement of the citizens who have the problems and the solutions to the problems is vital to arriving at a sound solution. His ministry still is following the old method of having briefs submitted to it, having the experts within the department decide what the solution will be and then placing it before us in the Legislature with a grand announcement.

Surely it is important, prior to the government arriving at a decision, that there be an opportunity for those who have the problems to share in an open manner, and in a way that is well structured, the views of various people who are active in that particular industry and the problems related to it. Surely it is important to get consumers sitting down with retailers, and they in turn with manufacturers—in short, to get all these groups together at one time to give us in the Legislature an opportunity to listen to the arguments.

Surely it is no longer practical for this government, from its perch on high, to ask industry and the rest of the people concerned to make separate submissions and then have the government pronounce its own views, without giving all of us concerned with the problem—that is, the Legislature, the public, the consumers, the manufacturers, the retailers—an opportunity to understand the total picture.

We're not stupid. At times we seem to come up with very shortsighted observations, but surely to quite an extent that is because we are not given the opportunity or the encouragement to know the overall situation. That, Mr. Speaker, is one of the serious failures of this government over the last several years which is leading to its decline in popularity in this province. It is its failure to recognize the wisdom of the ordinary people; its failure to sort out a process whereby the ordinary people can become involved in the decisions that it makes, recognizing that we are not asking this government to abdicate the responsibility to make the decisions.

We are saying that this government has a responsibility to stop trying to sell some fait accompli to the citizens. It is vital, if we are going to increase the confidence of citizens in our democratic process, that we give the citizens an honest opportunity to understand the whole situation.

I close, Mr. Speaker, by saying that in all these aspects that I've reviewed—the matter of the North Pickering nightmare; the regional government shambles that has been created; the impasse in district health councils; the failure to deal with problems of the environment and pollution control; and lastly, in the important field of consumer and commercial relations—everywhere, this one thread is lacking. That is the failure of this government to involve people, to enable them to see the whole programme and contribute suggestions to solutions. This government must be truly accountable to those people for the decisions it finally puts before this Legislature.

Thank you for this opportunity, Mr. Speaker, to participate in this debate. I also thank you for the role you have played in making this Legislature a more meaningful place for debate.

Mr. Speaker: The member for Muskoka.

Mr. F. S. Miller (Muskoka): Mr. Speaker, my comments in reply to the Speech from the Throne are not lengthy but I hope they are meaningful.

I have listened with respect to parts of the speeches given by the leaders of the two minority parties and I have, I admit, listened with apprehension to other statements made by them. It is because I do admire the intelligence and the oral ability of both of them that I feel compelled to comment upon some of their charges.

I recall a year ago, when I was following both of these gentlemen in their Throne Speech replies, I heard the leader of the Liberal Party comment at length on his reason for being a Liberal—he followed in his father's footsteps. Not to be outdone, the leader of the NDP stood up and, I think, used the word nepotism. He said that he was still following in his father's footsteps, and this explained his philosophy. Well, I feel a lot better because I couldn't tell members what my father was. I was able to make my mind up by myself so—

Mr. E. J. Bounsall (Windsor West): Someone led the member astray, then.

An hon. member: Does the member know who he was?

Mr. Miller: Thank you! But at least the choice was my own, and it is the better for it.

What a delight it must be, Mr. Speaker, to be able to solve all the problems of government from the opposition benches; to make broad statements without being held responsible for implementation. It make me think of something I read once: "It is a tale told by an idiot, full of sound and fury, signifying nothing." I refer, of course, to the opposition members' constant raucous calls for my minister's resignation. It's all in the rules of the game, of course—fair is fair—but I suggest that beneath their public posturing and beneath their petulant pronouncements must be a realization that the present Minister of Health (Mr. Potter) is one of those rare souls, a man with courage, with determination and with a real understanding of the problems.

An hon. member: He had it, but he sure lost it.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. R. F. Nixon (Leader of the Opposition): But with the member there to help him he has got one problem too many!

Mr. P. G. Givens (York-Forest Hill): The member shouldn't stick to the text.

Mr. Miller: I cannot speak on an impromptu basis like the rest of the members. I have to have something to say.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: We gather that one of those chaps in the member's office has provided him with it.

Mr. Miller: He's a man who says what he believes to be true and he follows up his statements with actions. Far from being a captive—

An hon. member: We don't know.

Mr. Miller: —of his profession, he looks upon it with a critical but comprehending eye, determined to be fair, both to patients and practitioners. It is a measure of his success, and a success that will become all the more obvious as the current reorganization results are made visible by improved efficiency, that he has been singled out for so much attention by the two leaders adjacent to me.

I will go so far, Mr. Speaker, as to predict that when a less emotional analysis of this current minister's effectiveness is made—say five years hence—he will be rated as one of the most successful tenants of that sometimes embattled ministry.

Mr. P. D. Lawlor (Lakeshore): Not in a 100 years!

Mr. Miller: Talking about tourism now, I must say that I've been impressed by the improvements shown in the last two years by the Ontario Development Corp. in its dealings with applications for both performance loans and regular loans, particularly in my riding of Muskoka.

Mr. Bounsall: That's where it is all going.

An hon. member: Sh! The member is on my side.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Miller: Employment is being stimulated by the assistance given to Canadian-owned, and in fact often individually-owned secondary industries within our district. The economic base is being broadened in an area that has traditionally suffered seasonal swings.

Some tourist operators have also received aid. I believe and I sincerely hope that the bung in the money barrel has just been popped and that many more operators will be given the monetary aid to expand, upgrade, winterize and generally improve tourist operations.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: How about Santa's Village?

Mr. Miller: It's a net lender!

If all that part of Ontario lying north of Severn River were a separate province, the essential nature of the tourist industry would be so self-evident that—

Mr. J. E. Stokes (Thunder Bay): Is the member in the north or the south?

Mr. Miller: Well by definition; I am glad to say I finally saw a regulation that says the north begins at Severn River. I say with due respect to the member for Sault Ste. Marie (Mr. Rhodes) that it's a fact. Is it not, sir?

Mr. R. F. Nixon: What was that definition? I thought the north began north of 401.

Mr. Miller: It's in a regulation that I'll produce on demand.

Mr. Stokes: At Richmond Hill anyway!

Mr. Miller: Because, luckily for us, we are part of Canada's wealthiest province, it's absolute local value is sometimes obscured by the economic smog generated by our vibrant, industrial south. Thus those of us from the north feel compelled to shout just to be heard.

Mr. R. Haggerty (Welland South): How far north is the member?

Mr. Stokes: When did the member for Sault Ste. Marie let him join the club?

Mr. J. R. Rhodes (Sault Ste. Marie): He chose to come!

Mr. Miller: There are such nice fellows in the club.

The need for government guaranteed loans of considerable size remains urgent. These loans must be for expansion, for operating moneys or for refinancing, if our industry is to compete for a world population that is now beginning to continent-hop with all the ease that used to be attached to a road trip to the cottage.

We have problems. Money invested in tourist facilities doesn't always earn the return it can in industry. But in terms of human needs and jobs created money can scarcely be used to better avail. These needs are urgent. One of our largest summer resorts in Muskoka has served notice that it will close unless such help can be extended, and soon.

But money isn't the only problem. The industry itself must face some of its problems squarely. Management, once a seat-of-the-pants procedure, needs to be upgraded.

Mr. E. R. Good (Waterloo North): Who is that? Holiday Inn at Huntsville?

Mr. Miller: Not quite!

Promotion needs to be directed at far-away foreign markets. Attractions and programmes must be competitive. Hopefully, our Ministry of Industry and Tourism, under the direction of its dynamic young minister, will encourage such changes.

I'd like now to talk a bit about environment and energy.

Mr. Lawlor: He's got missions all over the world looking at every country—Mexico, Spain, Ireland. They haven't got anybody left at home.

Mr. Miller: It's winter!

Environmental problems have received much public attention and government financial and regulatory support. I'm very pleased to note that the Minister of the Environment (Mr. Auld) very recently increased grants for municipal sewage systems to as much as 75 per cent.

Interjection by an hon. member.

Mr. Haggerty: For the smaller municipalities.

Mr. Miller: Yes; well they are the ones that need it.

I am particularly pleased because last year in my maiden speech I mentioned that this level of support was necessary for so many municipalities that lie in the shield section of Ontario. Hopefully ways will be worked out that will permit municipalities which use their native ingenuity to save money installing these costly services—ways that don't always meet engineering criteria—to receive assistance. To demand engineering standards that are twice as costly as tolerable standards before grants can be made is self-defeating.

But much of Ontario will remain dependent upon septic tanks for sewage disposal. Research needs to be done to determine what ingredients, if any, can be added to the filter beds to chemically or physically remove nutrients, as is now done in sewage plants.

It is a fact that soil which is sandy enough to allow fast movement of sewage is seldom efficient as a retention medium for phosphates. Compounds such as iron or aluminum salts should be tested for efficacy. Regulations, uniform across the province, which are stringent enough to protect and fair enough to be financially feasible need to be adopted. As it stands now each medical officer of health is a law unto himself.

Sewage systems should be tried that use less water in homes that are served by septic tanks. For example, wash water should be filtered and reused to flush toilets. Aerator septic tanks that cut down the biochemical oxygen demand of the effluent and simultaneously increase the ability of the ground to absorb this effluent should be approved across Ontario.

Air pollution standards need to be tailored to Canadian needs, not those of California. In particular I am thinking of the present attention to automobile exhausts. These are aimed at reducing the hydrocarbons and nitrogen oxides now created in most car engines.

The familiar air pollution index measures only two contaminants, sulphur dioxide and particulate matter. However, a few weeks back tests showed the five most common contaminants to be, by weight, carbon monoxide, 52 per cent; sulphur dioxide, 18 per cent; hydrocarbons, 12 per cent; particulates, 10 per cent; and nitrogen oxides, six per cent.

Interestingly enough, totally ignored on this list and in present automobile standards is the one gas that I personally believe to be the sleeper, the truly long-range contaminant to be reckoned with, carbon dioxide. I say this because its short-range harmless nature and relatively low concentration has tended to make us believe it to be the best end product of combustion. In fact I think most of the standards today specify that this be the product of combustion.

Thus today's auto pollution control devices are all aimed at converting hydrocarbons and carbon monoxide into carbon dioxide—and water, of course—while burning fuels at low enough compression ratios to prevent nitrogen oxides from forming.

I haven't been in the chemical engineering field for some years, I say with respect to the gentleman behind me, but I hope the facts are still as pertinent as I think they are.

The irony of this is the fact that, once formed, carbon dioxide is stable and has an exceptionally long residual time in our atmosphere. In fact one recent estimate showed it to be increasing its percentage in our atmosphere at about one per cent of its current level yearly. Seemingly inert, non-toxic and non-irritant, it is becoming increasingly suspect due to its ability to absorb light of certain wave lengths. To date, scientists disagree about its net effect, if any, on our biosphere, but it may eventually change the surface temperature of our earth significantly.

Mr. Lawlor: Hot or cold?

Mr. Miller: We don't know. One set of people say hotter, and I think this is the generally accepted trend right now. There is a second set that say colder; and luckily there may be, if they are both wrong—

Mr. Bounsall: A balancing effect!

Mr. Miller: —a balancing effect. This may turn out to be the case, if we are lucky.

Mr. Stokes: What happens if we're not?

Mr. Rhodes: We go up in smoke.

Mr. Miller: The hydrocarbons and nitrogen compounds do react in sunlight under certain conditions to make photo-chemical smog. These conditions occur often in California; and so their rules have been applied with little thought, in my opinion, to all of North America. The smog itself is dangerous to people with respiratory troubles and is a nuisance to all. But you know, maybe one or two days a year we have these conditions that generates this, whereas California has many days a year.

I feel a great deal more needs to be known before we commit Canada to California's specifications. Imagine how Californians would feel if we said all cars there should have block heaters and snow tires as standard equipment. We must be sure we are not jumping from the frying pan into the fire, eliminating one set of pollutants and producing another with long-range implications. I wonder if it's shades of "Silent Spring"?

Perhaps, though, my real concern about the new methods of controlling auto emissions is their corollary effect—the increase in fuel consumption which they cause.

Remember the days not too long ago when almost any standard sedan got 20 to 25 miles-per-gallon? Today the man who gets 14 to 16 is lucky. And as emission standards tighten, fuel consumption will predictably increase.

Thus we have a paradox. To clean up our air we are burning more fuel. While no one likes to pay the immediate costs, I think we are mentally prepared to do so if the results justify them. But the long-term costs—more carbon dioxide in the atmosphere and less fuel for future needs—may be the more critical in the end. In fact—and for an ex-car dealer this sounds like heresy—I question this generation's right to accelerate fuel use.

Mr. Stokes: Or to export!

Mr. Miller: It may well be that alternative fuel sources will be found, but it is by no means certain that they will be. One thing is certain; energy costs will increase sharply in the near future.

So to our government, which has appointed an extremely capable person to study our energy needs, I suggest we should consider means of reducing petroleum use while time permits. Probably the problem is national at least, and even international. But unless we act within our own power to act, we cannot blame others.

There are ways that come to mind. They are not necessarily popular, and in fact may not be politically possible to effect. But apart from changing every man's secret ambition of owning a huge V-8 gas-eating chariot—an ambition which I share with several members here, I must admit—to that of owning a light, four-cylinder engine Econo-Jet, perhaps the most effective route open to us is to make it very costly to own these hungry leviathans.

Or perhaps we could take a page from the European book of the thirties and increase licence fees on big cars to the point where it hurts; or add restrictions for city use.

If, as a result, lighter vehicles increased in popularity, not only would pollution be curtailed, but valuable energy would be preserved. For example, I have a light four-cylinder car that takes me to Toronto and back to Muskoka for less than $3. My family V-8 sedan, a run-of-the-mill thing, does it for just under $9 dollars. The difference, per trip, is about 13 gallons of fuel left for another day.

My concern about the coming crunch for energy took me to articles in Scientific American and Fortune magazines. I must admit I was booted into doing this. Recently both described hydrogen gas as a possible new fuel. As described by these articles, hydrogen could be electrolytically generated by nuclear breeder or fusion reactors, set out to sea to prevent thermal pollution. The gas produced would be piped by traditional methods—at lower costs and energy losses than for electricity—for use in the home, automobiles and industry. Without going into the many solvable technical details, hydrogen could be burned for heat, producing only water as its byproduct, or converted by fuel cells in automobiles that run on electrical energy. It sounds like Buck Rogers, but remember it was hydrogen that fueled man's trip to the moon.

Mr. Stokes: The member is in the wrong ministry. He should be with the Ontario Research Foundation.

Mr. Miller: I am surprised the hon. member is not suggesting somewhere further away than that!

Interjection by an hon. member.

Mr. Miller: In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, in spite of the clamorous cat-calling and prophet-of-doom comments emanating from our opposition leaders, may I say, in conclusion, that the government is to be congratulated for its well-balanced programme presented by His Honour in the Speech from the Throne, and I am proud to be a member of the party which offers it.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Sandwich-Riverside.

Mr. F. A. Burr (Sandwich-Riverside): Mr. Speaker, I wish to speak on three topics today, the first of which is the E. C. Row Expressway in the suburbs of Windsor.

E. C. Row Ave. for many years was a narrow two-lane road with deep ditches on either side. Some called it a mere cow path.

According to the Windsor Star, Sept. 2, 1970:

It was back in 1954 that Windsor's traffic engineer first suggested that Windsor needed a ring road. Eight years later, in 1962, M. M. Dillon Ltd., a Toronto firm of consulting engineers, made a study which was published in January, 1963. Then came the Windsor Area Transportation Study, known as WATS, which presented in January, 1964, a plan for a $4.5 million arterial road through Windsor's suburbs. This would be along E. C. Row Ave.

By 1965, the then Highways Minister, the Hon. Charles MacNaughton, was announcing that the work would start in two years, which would be 1967.

However, Mr. Speaker, on Jan. 1, 1966, Windsor annexed the suburban area and moved up the social ladder of the big cities. As you know, big cities have to have an expressway; it is indispensable as a status symbol.

According to the Hon. George Gomme, who was Minister of Highways in 1969, this is what happened next:

On May 20, 1966, council for the city of Windsor passed a resolution indicating the need for an east-west arterial street south of Tecumseh Blvd., and that there would be a need for an expressway-type facility with graded, separated interchanges before 1981.

Contained within the resolution was the fact that the projected capital works programme indicated that immediate construction of an expressway was not feasible. As a result, council requested the province to proceed immediately with the development of a facility generally along the alignment of E. C. Row Ave., provided sufficient right-of-way for an ultimate expressway facility along this route be acquired immediately.

It was intended that while the ultimate aim was for a highway of expressway standards, certain portions of E. C. Row Ave. would be constructed to arterial standards.

In November, 1967, the Dillon engineers brought in a massive functional report for the E. C. Row Expressway. Instead of a $4.5 million ring road with four lanes, perhaps separated by a median strip, with one railway overpass or underpass, the project had become, in the words of the Windsor Star, Sept. 2, 1970:

An ambitious project which is supposed to become a 10½-mile long crosstown artery for the Windsor of the future, possibly into the next century. The idea is to build now when things are relatively cheaper, then have a 70-mile-an-hour freeway waiting for the city to grow up around it as Windsor pushes south.

The total estimated cost of this 10½-mile expressway was $67.5 million, including such minor items not required by ordinary four-lane roads as: signals, $172,000; signs, $315,600; landscaping, $672,000; the relocation of utilities, $905,000.

Expressways, Mr. Speaker, are luxury items which small cities of 200,000, such as Windsor, cannot afford—at least until they have finished their sanitary and storm sewer projects. Expressways, of course, generate other expenses, especially service roads. In the case of the E. C. Row, the service roads will almost equal the expressway in length, approximately 10 miles.

In the fall of 1968 the city of Windsor applied to the Municipal Board for permission to dispense with a vote on this very expensive undertaking. I opposed this action which deprived the citizens of Windsor of any say in a multi-million-dollar venture of which they would have to pay 25 per cent.

The expressway would help relatively few citizens of Windsor. It was hard to imagine how more than a few residents of Wards 1, 2, 3 and 4 could make any significant use of the expressway in going to and from their daily place of work. The only major industry whose employees would benefit in any number was Chrysler's. Unlike the Gardiner Expressway in Toronto, the E. C. Row Expressway in Windsor is, at its nearest point, three miles from city hall and the heart of Windsor.

At the time I appeared before the board, asking unsuccessfully for a referendum, I pointed out to the board members—all Torontonians, of course—how remote the expressway was from the activity of Windsor, and how all that was needed along E. C. Row Ave. was a four-lane road with overpass or underpass at the railway tracks between Howard and Dougall.

I mentioned also that an overpass on Tecumseh Rd. between Jeanette and South Cameron would break one of Windsor's oldest and worst traffic bottlenecks. Unfortunately, it is only recently that I happened to obtain a copy of the Windsor Area Transportation Study of 1963. Guess what, Mr. Speaker? It featured, among many other excellent minor suggestions, the two major suggestions I have just mentioned: railway overpasses for E. C. Row and Tecumseh Rd., without any of this cloverleaf nonsense or expropriations of homes and businesses, just a simple $4.5 million plan.

Who are the experts who recommended this 1963 plan? None other than the M. M. Dillon Co., the same experts who about three or four years later designed and defended a $67.5 million super expressway through the suburbs of Windsor, running from the town of Tecumseh—population 5,000—to Ojibway, with a population of two—not 2,000 just two; a caretaker and his wife. That's hardly the way most of us imagine expressways should be built.

Mr. E. J. Bounsall (Windsor West): They don't own a car!

Mr. Burr: They have two bicycles, I believe. The 1963 study also showed a traffic destination map based on thousands of questions to travelling motorists: Where have you come from? Where are you going? The map shows that even if an overpass existed E. C. Row Ave. would have served the needs of very, very few motorists at that time. Of course, with the prospect—or perhaps it was a promise of an expressway, a huge shopping mall dominated by Simpsons-Sears has been built on Howard Ave. at E. C. Row. At the time, 1968, I made the following statement:

Many Torontonians are incensed that they, as taxpayers, have literally paved the way at great expense for the Yorkdale Shopping Centre, or as they put it, for Eaton's and Simpsons. If the E. C. Row Expressway is built and if the outside commercial interests build a "regional shopping centre" on Howard Ave. at E. C. Row, as predicted, the hundreds of downtown merchants in the present "regional shopping centre" in the core of Windsor may find to their sorrow that they have contributed generously through taxes to their own detriment, or even destruction commercially.

And that is what has happened, Mr. Speaker, in many cases. Simpsons-Sears occupies part of the new shopping mall, and with its curate gas station, is making life very miserable and difficult for scores of service station lessees, whose taxes for the E. C. Row enticed Simpsons-Sears and its discount gasoline to Windsor.

Now that phase I, the overpass on Howard Ave. is nearing completion, residents on Parkwood and Woodlawn to the south of the expressway, find that they are going to be cut off; not only from the rest of their community on the north side of the expressway, but also from Howard Ave. by the shopping centre. The 500 residents of these two streets will have to travel an extra 2.7 miles every time they wish to go north on Howard Ave. To go to church will require about 3.2 extra miles; just to get to their church only a few blocks away.

The residents of this area are now asking that one level crossing be left for them on E. C. Row between Howard Ave. and Walker Rd.—until, or unless, access to Howard Ave. near the expressway can be made available to them.

These are not the only people who will have extra miles of travel forced upon them by the E. C. Row expressway. Until the expressway was started, Windsor had one good, and potentially excellent cross-city shortcut, which saved a great many motorists a great deal of time and would have been used by a great many more if traffic lights had been provided as it crossed Dougall Rd. I refer of course to South Cameron, now utterly destroyed as a quick, safe shortcut from the south-central part of Windsor to the mid-western section.

A great many motorists did not make use of this route for two reasons: (a) because it was usually poorly maintained; and (b) because lack of traffic lights at Dougall Rd. made that crossing somewhat dangerous. Nevertheless, it was one of the bright hopes for rapid traffic movement in Windsor; and it is now irretrievably destroyed.

I mentioned the estimated cost as $67.5 million. That was the cost in money. But the cost in human anguish is another matter. By the end of 1967 it became clear to a great many residents living on and near E. C. Row, that they were about to become displaced persons.

A great many, perhaps the majority of these residents, had built their homes themselves—some being veterans of the Second World War. More than four years passed during which many of them lived in a state of uncertainty, fear and discouragement. Some are in their sixth year of upset, hoping that a reasonable offer will be made that will permit them to find equal accommodation elsewhere. Many have built gardens complete with shrubs, ornamental and fruit trees and berry bushes. They have achieved what they consider the right kind of soil, the right kind of drainage; they have planned their property for their retirement activities.

These dreams or plans are all doomed now, because somebody decided that an expressway would get some people home from work or out to the shopping centre a few minutes earlier each day or each evening. The dubious benefits for some overrode the undeniable happiness of others.

For most of the residents of E. C. Row, the four or five years after 1967 have been years of unhappiness. Those responsible for assembling the land have caused, perhaps unwittingly, mental anguish—extreme in many instances—to an alarming number of residents. They have done this by causing long delays, by making ridiculously low offers to purchase, by leaving long periods of silence and by presenting letters of possession.

I should like to thank the present Minister of Transportation and Communications (Mr. Carton) for bringing about settlements last summer for some of the residents who had been in a prolonged state of frustration. When their plight was drawn to his personal attention, he acted—but the record of this government on the treatment of the E. C. Row victims has been a sorry one.

I wish to contrast the treatment given to two businessmen whose businesses were disrupted by the decision to build the E. C. Row Expressway. The first is a barber who bought a barbershop, its contents and its goodwill for $600 in 1957. For 14 years, he maintained a modest one-chair shop, renting the premises from the same owner during all that time.

When it became clear that he must move, he made inquiries. He tried to find alternative premises nearby in the same neighbourhood where his customers lived. Every effort was thwarted by local municipal by-laws. Although washroom facilities were used by customers about twice a month, a new barbershop must have a toilet. He agreed to provide one. Sorry; the premises he wished to buy were not large enough for another septic tank—which would be used only twice a month. There was no way.

As E. C. Row families moved away month by month, the barber's business receipts gradually dwindled despite inflation. Finally, a notice came from his landlord to vacate the premises. He made further inquiries. The city would not even move his barber's chair to his home for storage. Because he had no written lease, he was not entitled to any compensation whatsoever. So said the Hon. Allan Lawrence in a letter written to me when he was Minister of Justice. A letter from the present Attorney General (Mr. Bales) gave a similar opinion.

My constituent finally secured a copy of the agreement of purchase from the previous barber as well as a statement from his landlord indicating that there was a verbal agreement that the barber could stay as long as he wished. Finally, a letter from the Hon. Allan Lawrence suggested that my constituent might appeal to the municipality, asking for compensation for business disruption.

This he did on Nov. 30, 1972. After about five or six weeks of waiting, he telephoned city hall and was finally asked whether $500 would satisfy him. His losses in business have exceeded $1,000 and if we took inflation into consideration, his losses would have been even greater. His equipment was now of no value to him and the usual goodwill that is passed on when a business changes hands simply evaporated along with the demolished building.

Forced, at the age of about 50, to give up the only trade in which he was skilled, it was difficult for him to find another job. Eventually, he found janitorial services work at the minimum wage. He worked steadily on the midnight shift. This has meant a complete change in his lifestyle. Previously he was his own boss, able to take an hour off or a day off if he wished to—not that he often did but he was in a position to do it if he wished.

Now he is bound to a monotonous routine. At the barbershop he had enjoyed meeting the public; now he may go hours without a conversation with another human being. Before, he worked normal hours and slept normal hours; now he must adapt to daytime sleeping, which is very difficult for many individuals.

Although he earns a few more dollars than he did as a barber, he no longer has work that he enjoys. Yet what is he offered by way of compensation? After more than five years of certainty, anxiety, without even a word of apology from those who have destroyed his lifestyle—$500—maybe!

This offer of $500 is only tentative; it was made in a telephone conversation in January of this year. But it was not really an offer, because it would have to be taken to a subcommittee, meeting somewhere. After five years of frustration, perhaps he may get $500. That would come to $2 a week for his inconvenience, suffering and change of lifestyle. It is now April 2. My constituent has asked for a board of appeal.

Contrast the niggardly attitude of government to this very small businessman with the very generous treatment accorded to a big Windsor company, influential in local Conservative circles. I refer to Marentette Bros. Ltd., which since 1960 had a lease on a stretch of land on the west side of Howard Ave., south of E. C. Row. Remember that on May 20, 1966, according to the hon. George Gomme, Windsor city council passed a resolution indicating the need by 1981 for an expressway facility along E. C. Row Ave.

Council asked the Ontario government to proceed immediately, provided that sufficient right of way for an expressway be acquired immediately. Within two months, by July 15, Marentette Bros. Ltd. had borrowed $160,000 from the Industrial Development Bank. By July 18, they had purchased from a Chrysler subsidiary the land on Howard Ave. that they had been leasing for the past six years. The price paid has been reported in the news as $110,000. Because they borrowed $160,000 a few days before, let's be generous and say that this land cost $160,000. As the land transfer tax was paid in Toronto, the Essex county registry office has no record of the selling price. If anyone wishes to find out, the deed was registered on July 22, 1966, and the receipt number is 1742.

On Dec. 19, 1966, the company acquired another parcel to the west of the original parcel on Howard, paying to the New York Central Railroad only $4,000 for this one. Whether the two parcels cost $114,000 or $164,000 doesn't make much difference. In 1969, Windsor city council approved expropriation proceedings to acquire this property. On April 14, 1970, the property passed from Marentette Bros. Ltd. to the city council of Windsor by sale, not by expropriation. According to the Windsor Star of Sept. 1, 1970, it was not until Aug. 10, four months after the sale had been completed, that city council learned of the sale. I quote:

At the Aug. 10 council meeting, aldermen also expressed shock when they heard some of the land costs, especially the cool $1,260,000 for the Marentette land.

The newspaper does not break down the $1.26 million selling price, but mentions:

Higher mortgage rates, real estate brokerage and legal fees for property transfers, moving costs and, most important, the cost of disrupting or terminating a business.

This made interesting reading for my barber constituent whose business was not only disrupted, Mr. Speaker, but also terminated permanently.

Whether there was any significant disruption to the Marentettes construction company, we can only guess, but certainly their business was not terminated. On the contrary, it is building the overpasses for Howard Ave., for the former New York Central Railroad and for Dougall Rd. I believe that it has also relocated the Grand Marais drain at Howard Ave. which flows in the neighbourhood of those three overpasses. At any rate, somebody relocated the drain at a cost of $443,000.

In 1968, Marentette Bros. acquired the remaining portion of land, forming the triangle enclosed by Howard Ave., E. C. Row and the New York Central Railroad tracks. The cost of this third parcel was $147,000. I have examined the map, but not closely enough to say for certain whether any part of this third parcel was sold to the city for the expressway. My impression is that it was not.

But it is interesting to note that this third parcel and what was left over from the other two parcels have been sought as a site for a shopping mall. The land is sufficiently valuable to rate a mortgage from the Canada Trust Co., just a few weeks ago on Feb. 19, 1973, in the amount of $600,000.

So we find that for approximately $300,000 invested, half in 1966 and half in 1968, Marentette Bros. in 1970 sold about one-third of it for $910,000 for expressway use and still has about two-thirds left worth at least $600,000.

How the Department of Highways could accept an evaluation of $910,000 in early 1970 for a part, perhaps no more than half, of what had sold in 1966 for $164,000 at the most is a complete mystery. The price of that piece of land, bought by the city of Windsor and approved by the Department of Highways for $910,000 in 1970, cost the Marentettes approximately $100,000 in 1966.

According to the Expropriations Act, the price to be paid for land, Mr. Speaker, is the market price plus any legitimate expenses the owner can prove.

This piece of land was the least attractive piece of land in Windsor. There is not a member in this House who would have accepted it as a gift, if he were required to build his home on it. How then, I ask once more, could its market value soar from probably considerably less than $100,000 to over $900,000 in less than four years? I suppose the answer is that with the Tory government all things are possible.

In addition, Marentette Bros. received $350,000 for such things as disruption of business and legal fees. My barber friend is asked whether he would accept $500 to compensate him for his loss of business over 3½ years, for the termination of his business and for the forced change in his lifestyle—$500, Mr. Speaker, that's all. Of course, there are two Marentette brothers, I believe, so the disruption might be twice as painful as it was for the barber.

Mr. D. A. Paterson (Essex South): Was he the PC candidate?

Mr. Burr: No, he denied any connection with them, except by birth.

Mr. Paterson: The other brother.

Mr. Burr: Yes. Nevertheless, there is no doubt whatsoever in my mind that the barber has suffered far more both financially and emotionally. Yet the big business already has made $1 million out of the E. C. Row Expressway land acquisition and stands to make the better part of another million out of the land that may still be used for a shopping mall. The little businessman as yet has received nothing except an insulting offer.

To those that have, much more shall be given, and from those that have little shall be taken away even what little they have. That seems to be the Tory philosophy in Ontario as it applies to the acquisition of land for government projects.

Secondly, I want to speak at much less length on a topic that has interested me for some time since I've been in this House. That is the subject of consent cards. A couple of days ago there appeared in the Toronto Star a familiar story. A kidney from a donor in Houston, Tex., had been flown by jet and helicopter to the Sick Children's Hospital. From there it was taken to the Toronto General Hospital to be transplanted into a patient whose life was thereby saved and perhaps prolonged for many years.

A few days earlier another Toronto Star story featured Debbie Nottingham, an 18-year-old North Bay girl, who has been waiting since 1970 to have a kidney transplant. Toronto Western Hospital has been searching for a suitable donor for two years. Her life is now dependent upon an artificial kidney machine at Civic Hospital in North Bay. Her particular blood type makes it impossible for any of her relatives to donate a kidney to her.

Eight thousand Americans die annually for want of a kidney. Yet thousands of people die yearly with perfectly good kidneys they would have been glad to donate had they had any idea that their deaths were imminent and if someone had offered them a donor consent card to sign. When is the government of Ontario going to act in this matter?

It would be simple to have an extra inch or so added to drivers' licences or vehicle licences on which a donor consent form could be printed. It would be simple also to have the OHIP certificate, which all of us carry in our wallets, enlarged somewhat by the provision of a donor consent from indicating that the bearer, in case of death, wished any tissues or organs of his body to be used to help a fellow human being.

The eye bank of Canada provides these cards for those to whom it occurs to donate their eyes for corneal transplants or other uses. Unfortunately hundreds of people die daily in Ontario without thinking to will their eyes to the 40 or 50 who are always on the waiting list for the gift of sight.

Just after Christmas in 1972 the Windsor Star carried the story of a beautiful six-year-old girl who had given sight to two blind persons. Her name was Michelle Havens. Her mother, who had signed a consent card at the age of 16 to donate her own eyes to the Canadian National Institute for the Blind, had registered her daughter as a donor shortly after birth. When the daughter died suddenly the mother remembered.

The publication of this story has prompted several hundred Windsorites to inquire about forms and to sign them. In the previous eight years I believe there were only about a dozen people in Windsor who had signed cards for the eye bank of Canada.

Almost certainly in future years, many more blind persons in Ontario will see again because of this mother's thoughtfulness. A young lady, Miss Vicky Affleck, herself a recipient of corneal transplants, has been very active in publicizing the eye bank donor consent cards in Windsor.

The Human Tissues Gift Act has removed the red tape from the making of donations, but this is not enough. Unless victims of accident fatalities carry consent cards, the chances of their becoming donors are quite remote. Relatives are often far away at the time of a fatal accident of this kind and usually are in a state of shock. Few doctors, nurses or others interested in arranging a donation have the required tact and courage to broach this very difficult subject to grieving relatives.

On the other hand, when a family has discussed the matter and is prepared, the matter is usually easy. Consider the actual case of a man hospitalized after a severe heart attack. Because his wife knew that he carried a consent card, he was able on his death to give sight to two blind persons by way of corneal transplants and to save the lives of two other persons requiring kidney transplants for survival. One thoughtful couple, Mr. Speaker, saved or enhanced four lives.

Only yesterday I received a copy of the donor card promoted by the Kidney Foundation of Canada, located in Montreal. The accompanying brochure that I hold in my hand asks and answers several questions. I shall read parts of only two.

Question: What are the ethics of organ donation and transplantation?

Answer: Moral leaders, the world over, favour such donations as expressions of the highest humanitarian ideals. The gift of an organ essential to the life of another human being is consistent with principles of religious and ethical systems overwhelmingly held.

Question: What else can I do to advance this life-preserving programme?

Answer: Acquaint others with our donor card programme. The more donors available, the more new and important medical advances can be used for the benefit of mankind. Your kidney foundation will be happy to provide additional donor cards.

So we have, trying to reach eight million potential donors in Ontario, two private organizations—the eye bank and the kidney foundation—using their limited and difficult-to-collect funds on brochures and other forms of advertising, yet reaching very few individuals. How much better it would be for the government of Ontario, at scarcely any cost whatsoever, to enlarge drivers' licences and OHIP certificates, thereby reaching millions of possible donors who would carry in their wallets or purses these consent cards.

To put the matter bluntly, Mr. Speaker, how much longer will this government allow lives to be lost through its inaction on this issue? Donor consent forms need to be publicized and popularized. Above all, they need to be made easily available.

The third and final topic is the matter of the rates for Ontario housing geared to income. I should like to make a few comments on this policy, followed for some years by OHC, as it relates to the whole purpose of public housing.

As I understand the theory, citizens in the lower income brackets were to be assisted with low-rental housing while they were temporarily down on their luck. Somehow, this would provide an incentive for people to save up a sufficient down payment for a house of their own.

There is one serious flaw in this plan and I intend to explain it briefly, but I hope adequately. Let us take the case of a married man with two children under 16 years of age. He earns $4,800 a year, which is recognized as being near the poverty line. His rent geared to income is $100 minus $4 for the two children, in other words $96 a month.

His income tax, according to 1972 rates, is $280 plus a few cents. Suppose his income goes up by $1,200 to $6,000 a year. His geared-to-income rent is now $125 less $4, in other words $121 monthly. His income tax increases by $296 a year and his rent by $300 a year. Thus, of his $1,200 increase, he keeps only $604, which is about 51 per cent.

Suppose he goes up to $9,000 a year. His income tax rises to $1,380 and his rent to $183.50 a month. Thus his income has gone up $4,200 but his income tax increases $1,100 and his annual rent increases $1,050. His net increase is $2,050—less than 50 per cent.

Let's put him in the $12,000-a-year bracket. His rent would be $246 a month. His income tax would be $2,290. Thus, out of a $7,200 increase in income he would suffer a rent increase of $1,800 and an income tax increase of $2,009, a total of $3,809, leaving him and his family a net income increase of only $3,391 out of $7,200.

In other words, he would get only 47 per cent of the increase. OHC and the provincial and federal income tax collectors would take 53 per cent of his extra income. No other workers, Mr. Speaker, lose 50 per cent of their overtime money. The geared-to-income renters are the only workers from whom the provincial and federal governments take 50 per cent of whatever money they earn above their subsistence level.

This explains the bitterness of those affected. The harder they work the bigger the slice that goes to the government—25 per cent to OHC and a rising percentage to the income tax departments of the provincial and federal governments. This explains why we hear of tenants who seek to conceal their extra earnings. Dishonesty, Mr. Speaker? Yes. But the OHC system is partly to blame.

Even the capital gains tax, which affects mostly the wealthy, does not tax above 50 per cent. Geared-to-income renters are taxed 49 per cent at the $6,000 level. I use the word "taxed" because they are paying a rent tax and an income tax on any earnings beyond the poverty level.

There must be some changes made. The minister's task force has heard many suggestions from many quarters. In Windsor, representatives of the Windsor council of citizens' groups called for a reduction of the present 25 per cent of gross income to a formula based on 20 per cent of net income.

They asked also that the $2 allowance be increased to $5 for each child in calculating rent scales. I have spoken along these lines before, Mr. Speaker, but I am more convinced than ever that changes in the OHC rental rates are needed and must be made.

Mr. R. G. Hodgson (Victoria-Haliburton): Mr. Speaker, you haven't heard anything yet.

Mr. P. D. Lawlor (Lakeshore): That is right. Let the government know what you think this time.

Mr. T. P. Reid (Rainy River): We know they are not going to be able to.

Mr. T. A. Wardle (Beaches-Woodbine): Mr. Speaker, it is an honour for me to rise at this point and take part in the Throne debate.

I should like first, Mr. Speaker, to congratulate you on the admirable way you conduct the proceedings of this House. I have been most impressed with your patience and good humour. You are dealing with men and women who have submitted themselves to the electors of their ridings, have received their endorsement and have come to this place to make their contribution to the public life of this province. Every member of this House has an important part to play in the government of this province, be he a government member or a member of the opposition. I have been most impressed by the talent displayed here and the dedication of the members.

Mr. Speaker, your office is an ancient one. It seems to go back to Sir Thomas Hungerford, who was appointed Speaker of the House of Commons in Britain in 1377. However, there is some history of presiding officers being appointed even before that time. It seems the primary function of the Speaker in that early time was to act as the resolution of the Commons and to communicate their resolutions to the King.

It was said to be an unenviable task, and at least nine Speakers are known to have died violent deaths—four during the War of the Roses. On the other hand, frequently the Speaker turned out to be a King's man and in the Tudor period is described by the writer, Stubbs, as being the manager of business on the part of the Crown and probably the nominee of either the King himself or the chancellor.

The reign of Charles I saw the climax of the struggle between Crown and Commons and the establishment of the Speaker's first duty to the House. Our procedure carries on in that tradition.

Mr. Speaker, when we read of the evolution of your ancient office, it is plain to see why some Speakers in the past had to be dragged to that very seat, and we can understand their reluctance to assume that office. However, Mr. Speaker, times have changed; but the honour and dignity and responsibility of your office still remains.

The address of the Hon. W. Ross MacDonald is an outstanding document and, speaking of this hon. gentleman, I should like to say that he has represented Her Majesty the Queen in this province with dignity, great ability and with a dedication to his duties that has enhanced the honourable office that he holds.

The Lieutenant Governor will have a busy schedule ahead of him, especially during the latter part of June when this province will be the host to Her Majesty the Queen. I know that the people of this province will offer Her Majesty a warm reception. We know the personal sacrifice that such a position requires and the complete dedication of Her Majesty as head of state under our parliamentary system.

We welcome also His Royal Highness the Duke of Edinburgh who, in his own right, is making an important contribution to world progress and achievement. I hope that the school boards of Ontario will, in advice of the Queen's visit, bring to the attention of the students the importance of the monarchy in our system of government, and will declare at least part of the day a holiday when the Queen visits the various communities in Ontario.

Mr. Speaker, I believe the young people today more than ever before are becoming aware of this great country and its future potential. It is most important, therefore, that we should be more aware of our distinctly Canadian heritage, and the parliamentary institutions that have allowed Canada to remain as a free and independent nation on the North American continent.

I am most impressed, Mr. Speaker, with the large numbers of young people who want to learn more about our constitutional monarchy and its present and future role in our parliamentary system. We must not forget, Mr. Speaker, that constitutional monarchy is respected not only by those of British and French descent but by people who have come here from all parts of the world to make Canada their home. Many of the critics of the constitutional monarchy tend to forget that the system of monarchy is also a respected institution in many countries from which Canada's immigration has come.

In this connection, I wish to quote from a book entitled "The Conservative in Canada," by the late George Hogan, a former Progressive Conservative candidate in Woodbine provincial riding.

Mr. Lawlor (Lakeshore): A pretty dull book.

Mr. Wardle: Mr. Hogan said:

The Crown is the symbol and spirit of those lasting values that unite us as Canadians. When all other political elements conspire to stress the passing issues that divide us, the Crown is also our reminder that we are a nation not only of the past and present, but of the future.

It represents our obligation to ensure that future generations will share with ours the full measure of our national heritage.

Conservatives uphold the Crown because it symbolizes stability, it rallies patriotism, and it commands loyalty. Without these qualities no nation can grow and prosper in the modern struggle of competitive survival.

I should like to quote further from a statement by the Rt. Hon. Louis St. Laurent, a former Prime Minister of Canada. This esteemed gentleman, a former leader of the Liberal Party, said that the constitutional monarchy was "a system of government to which none anywhere in the world is superior."

Mr. Speaker, it is indeed a great honour to have been given the opportunity to represent the people of Beaches-Woodbine riding. We are proud of this riding and we have every reason to be proud.

For example, to the south we have a long stretch of waterfront, where during the year people enjoy the boardwalk, the beaches and parks, and other facilities that have been provided. The beach and waterfront provides recreation for thousands of people, not only from our riding but for miles around.

Then, too, Beaches-Woodbine is an area that has a good family-housing stock. Homes are generally well kept; a number of the older homes have been rehabilitated, and "For Sale" signs are not up for very long. In addition, Mr. Speaker, we have excellent schools and recreational facilities, and there are no highrise buildings in the Beaches area.

Mr. P. G. Givens (York-Forest Hill): Is the boardwalk under water, or are they okay there?

Mr. Wardle: From another point of view, we have a number of sporting traditions in Beaches-Woodbine. The Beaches Fastball League in 1971 celebrated its 50th anniversary, and they have provided good sport and good fastball all through those years.

And, Mr. Speaker, I know that all the members of this House have heard of the Balmy Beach Football Club; it is well-known to sportsmen. The club itself, founded in 1902, has been a family club and still is.

In 1927 and 1930, the Balmy Beach Football Club won the Grey Cup. Those were the days when an athlete was an amateur in all that the word implies. Men such as Ted Reeve, Ab Box, Bobby Porter, Alex Ponton, Harry "Red" Foster, and a former member of this Legislature, Alf Cowling, a former member for High Park, played on teams from Balmy Beach.

A resident of our area for all of his life, Mr. Roy Nurse, a member of the Balmy Beach club, won the single sculls in the Paris Olympics of 1924. We have also in the area the Ashbridge's Bay Yacht Club—

Mr. Givens: And Ashbridge's Bay?

Mr. Wardle: —with over 300 members, and this yacht club has provided facilities for sailors for many, many years. I know, Mr. Speaker, the member for York-Forest Hill is an ardent sailor—

Mr. D. R. Timbrell (Don Mills): He can walk on the water, what is the member talking about?

Mr. Wardle: —and I should say that this club, in addition to the 300 members who own boats, has a long waiting list. What we need on the waterfront in the city of Toronto, Mr. Speaker, are more facilities for small boat owners—

Mr. J. R. Breithaupt (Kitchener): Not just on the waterfront.

Mr. Wardle: —to enjoy this wonderful recreation.

Mr. Timbrell: Why didn't the member for York-Forest Hill put through the waterfront plan in 1959?

Mr. Wardle: Mr. Speaker, in 1952 the municipalities surrounding Toronto were in some cases in financial difficulty. An expanding population required services of all kinds, especially in the suburban areas. There were great pressures placed on all the services. Many people from the city of Toronto moved to the suburban areas; and the city of Toronto was fortunate in the fact that of all the immigration into Canada, a good percentage located in the city of Toronto and the surrounding areas. This meant that houses in Toronto were bought by new people arriving in this area. Mr. Speaker, without this immigration into the city of Toronto we would have had many empty houses within this area.

I should like, Mr. Speaker, to put on the record the immigration into Canada in the past five years and the percentage of immigration into Ontario. I should mention that 53 per cent came to the Toronto area in the following years.

In 1967, 220,876 people entered Canada. Of this number 116,850 came to Ontario. In 1968, 183,974—96,155 to Ontario. In 1969, 161,531—86,588 to Ontario. In 1970, 147,713

—80,732 to Ontario. In 1972, for the first nine months only, 86,787—45,290 to Ontario.

I should mention particularly the problems faced by the boards of education and especially the Board of Education of the City of Toronto after the formation of the municipality of Metropolitan Toronto in 1953. At that time the board of education of Toronto was faced with serious problems. In the city of Toronto itself the population continued about the same, but the suburban areas were growing rapidly. New schools were required for the expanding population.

The city of Toronto was faced with the requirement of making an approximate 50 per cent contribution to the building of new schools and new facilities in the suburbs under the Metropolitan Toronto plan, and at the same time the necessity of building new schools in the city to replace some schools that were 75 to 100 years old and bringing up to an acceptable standard other schools in the city of Toronto.

During the Depression before the Second World War, very little money was spent on school maintenance, and no money was spent during and immediately after the war on school construction. Indeed, some schools at that time could be described as firetraps.

The Toronto Board of Education made a decision in 1955 to go ahead with a programme of school rehabilitation and construction. This cost a great deal of money, but it was money well spent; money that had to be spent if the standard of education in the city of Toronto was to be on the same level and offering the same opportunities to the children living in Toronto as in the other areas where new schools and new facilities were being built.

In the Metropolitan Toronto area we have now a good system of education. Over the years many special programmes have been added to the school curriculum. I refer particularly to the programme for exceptional children. These include not only the especially bright children, but those who have learning disabilities—such as those who are retarded, have hearing and learning problems, and who require special help.

Mr. Speaker, I was honoured to be a member of the Toronto Board of Education in the years 1955 to 1960 and I had the honour in 1960 to be chairman of the board. One of my most satisfying pieces of work on the board was working with the children who had learning disabilities and those who needed special care. I hope, Mr. Speaker, any cut-back in the metropolitan area will not come in this particular programme, which I feel is most important.

These special programmes are expensive, but it seems to me that they are a good investment, for I believe in the principle that every child and every adult should have the utmost in educational opportunities.

While dealing with education, I cannot help but make several observations about our own provincial effort with respect to community colleges. I am certain that members of this Legislature are familiar with the fact that the community college aspect of post-secondary school education became a reality only a very few short years ago—in 1965 to be more specific—when our government announced its intention to provide whatever opportunities necessary to enable each individual, through education, to develop his potentialities to the fullest degree. And we know, Mr. Speaker, many young people who for a number of reasons, financial and otherwise, could not go on to university, were able to go on to worthwhile job opportunities through this community college programme.

Further in the matter of education, I think we owe it to the young people of today to provide for more Canadian content in our textbooks. It is a sad commentary that some of our young people seem to know more about the history of the United States than they do about the history of their own country. But I am pleased with the progress being made in this regard.

Another point I would like to make, Mr. Speaker, has to do with our senior citizens and their needs, particularly housing. In my riding we have about 65,000 people, and there is only one small nursing home in operation, although another one is being built at the present time. It would be an ideal situation if nursing homes could be built in areas where there is a proved need, such as in my area, where the accommodation would be close to relatives and friends.

Mr. Speaker, it is of course a wrench for the persons going into such a home, as well as for their families, when they must be accommodated in an area far removed from their relatives and friends.

We are equally as desperate for senior citizens' homes in Beaches-Woodbine. At the present moment we have four so-called senior citizens' apartments—Glen Stewart with 154 units, Kinsmen Manor with 45 units, Beaches Lions with 43 units and Woodbine Acres with 42 units. Altogether, then, there are 284 units to serve an area with a population of more than 65,000.

Obviously this does not even begin to satisfy the need.

As is the case with nursing homes, our senior citizens must seek vacancies in homes in more distant places and are more than often far from their families, church connections, friends and so on.

I did mention, Mr. Speaker, that our area is an area of family homes. Many people have lived in that area all their lives, and when they come to these latter years of their life to be told that there is accommodation in a senior citizens' home at a price they can afford, but it's out in the north part of Scarborough, in North York or in Etobicoke—just think of the wrench and human problems this causes.

I commend the government for beginning a programme of foster homes for senior citizens. I know many senior people would appreciate living in a home-like atmosphere, and I know homeowners would welcome a congenial person in their home as a companion and as a source of income to pay the expenses of maintaining a home.

At the same time, senior citizens who qualify—at least in the city of Toronto—are given some relief with respect to education tax. At the moment, the city is providing assistance of up to $100 for those senior citizens who own their own homes and who do not have joint incomes exceeding $4,500. They must also be 70 years of age or older.

Many of our senior citizens find it impossible to maintain their homes because of their low incomes and the high cost of living. As a result, they end up giving up their homes and depending on being put up and cared for by the municipality and the province in one way or another. Would it not be more logical to provide for them in their own homes? I'm certain it would prove less expensive. It is in the public interest to maintain people in their own homes rather than elsewhere. An expanded rent subsidy programme is needed in this province.

Mr. Speaker, in the Throne Speech we were told that the province's economy had been strengthened considerably in the past year and had enjoyed the fastest growth rate in the level of employment in over a decade. The government expects this trend to continue in 1973, with an increase in real growth of goods and services of six per cent this year, compared with an estimated 5.5 per cent again in 1972.

Despite the continued rapid growth of the labour force in Ontario, the average unemployment rate has declined from 5.2 per cent in 1971 to 4.8 per cent in 1972, and a record 140,000 new jobs were created. This achievement compared favourably with Canada as a whole where the unemployment rate last year remained virtually unchanged at 6.3 per cent.

A moderation in the labour force growth in 1973 combined with the continuing expansion of job opportunities should further improve the Ontario employment picture. Indeed on a seasonal basis, unemployment in Ontario was 4.1 per cent in February this year, compared with 4.6 per cent in February, 1972.

Ontario's fiscal policy in the past two years has played an important part in alleviating unemployment, including such matters as personal income tax reductions and selective expenditure increases made by the province which have had a favourable influence on subsequent federal policy.

In any event, Mr. Speaker, this government has established an objective, to continue the expansion of the economy and the substantial improvement of our unemployment situation. This must remain the overriding goal of our economic policy. I am certain that it is because of these policies and the policies of past Conservative governments in Ontario that our unemployment level, although not acceptable, is far below that of many of our sister provinces and naturally below the national level.

The Throne Speech says the government will provide increased assistance and encouragement to our amateur athletes through special community-wide athletic and recreational programmes. It will be giving full support to the first Ontario summer games which will be held in Oshawa this summer.

Mr. Speaker, one of the aspects of professional sports today is the high salaries for the players and the commercial aspects of the various games. I am encouraged by the response of the government in giving to our amateur athletes and the various associations the type of help they require to carry on.

We pay tribute to the unpaid coaches and managers of hockey, baseball and football teams—men and women who give of their time freely in order to encourage young athletes. Mr. Speaker, I like particularly this aspect of the government's programme. Sometimes a grant, which will provide sweaters, bats and balls, etc., to a baseball league, will enable dozens of youngsters and parents to enjoy healthy recreation. Sometimes the expenditure of only $1,000 will keep a softball league going with 16 teams all through the summer months.

Mr. Speaker, at this point, before getting into the balance of my address, I wonder if it would be possible to move the adjournment of the debate.

Mr. Wardle moves the adjournment of the debate.

Motion agreed to.

PRIVATE MEMBERS' HOUR

APPRENTICESHIP AND TRADESMEN'S QUALIFICATION ACT

Mr. Drea moves second reading of Bill 18, An Act to amend the Apprenticeship and Tradesmen's Qualification Act.

CONSUMER PROTECTION ACT

Mr. Drea moves second reading of Bill 19, An Act to amend the Consumer Protection Act.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Scarborough Centre.

Mr. F. Drea: (Scarborough Centre): Mr. Speaker, I have combined these two bills because I think they are part of a package and unless we have the entire package, I don't think we can begin to deal with what I regard as one of the most pressing of consumer requirements in our contemporary society. It is a matter of significant concern to an area of small business that, indeed, has been able to expand and hopefully prosper—which is against the general economic trend. Finally, but not least, it is on behalf of future job opportunities for a great number of talented young men and women in this province.

The reasoning behind Bill 18, I think, is fairly elementary to anyone who has had any experience with trade qualifications in this province, because, with the exception of the electricians and the plumbers and sheet metal workers, all trade qualifications and certifications in this province are voluntary.

In short, those qualifications and the accompanying certificate of competency are very nice to have. They certainly show that you persevered and you sacrificed of your time and talent to obtain the necessary knowledge and experience to qualify, but in realistic terms they matter not, because somebody can walk in without having invested in any training whatsoever and proclaim himself a tradesman.

I think that this is a deterrent, particularly to young people who are looking for occupations where they will have stability, where they will have an opportunity to better themselves through the use of their talents and, indeed, can make a contribution to the community.

Mr. Speaker, I think it very significant that we in this province, particularly in the larger urban centres, are now on the threshold of the era of the wired home, if indeed we are not there now. First of all, colour television is becoming more and more accepted as a common thing in homes. Secondly, a number of television sets in a home are becoming accepted as commonplace as technology and, unfortunately, the ability of overseas competitors to put them on the market at a reasonable price with reasonable quality has made the smaller portable set fairly common in households as well.

But we are also into the time when more and more homeowners are beginning to wire their houses for inside communications. We are already into the time of the home entertainment centre, where people are able to buy videotape equipment for a relatively reasonable price—a little under $1,000—where they are able to make their own television or film programmes, or indeed, with the aid of certain technological devices, to be absent from their home and to videotape television programmes that they want to see and be able to see them at a future date. Then, of course, we have the wall-to-wall stereo which is now becoming very commonplace, particularly in the homes or the apartments of younger people.

Mr. Speaker, all of this requires a tremendous amount of service, because no matter how good the equipment there are the inevitable breakdowns that come from very frequent usage. But the problem is—

Mr. M. Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): We experience them from listening to the member.

Mr. Drea: What was that?

Mr. Cassidy: We have those breakdowns listening to the hon. member.

Mr. Drea: Well, why doesn't the member go and have his breakdowns somewhere convenient to him?

Mr. D. A. Evans (Simcoe Centre): He has already broken down.

Mr. Drea: Mr. Speaker, to come back to it, one of the problems in all of this is, marvellous as the machinery may be there is the problem of service. The popularity and the frequency of use, as well as a number of other factors, have brought the service on these particular machines into the limelight, because quite frankly, across this province there have been virtually untold numbers of people who have been either ruthlessly swindled in trying to get their television sets repaired or, while there has been no attempt to commit fraud, have had their machines repaired by people who at best could be described as incompetent or untrained.

As a matter of fact, in the Metropolitan area there is still a thriving industry whereby totally unqualified people advertise that they are in the TV repair business. They come and they pick up your set. Ostensibly they take it away to repair it, but they do not even have a shop. They merely take it to one of the factory outlets where one of the manufacturers repairs it, then they very calmly take it back to the place that is supposed to be a service centre, put on an exorbitant additional fee—and then return it to you.

Furthermore—and I had some experience with this a year or two ago with the Toronto Telegram—I suggest to you that trying to get any kind of service at night or on Saturdays and Sundays puts you in the very unfortunate predicament of virtually being held up for ransom, because the people who are in business naturally want an eight-hour day. They have to pay their technicians. They pay them a very good sum. They are not available at 9 o'clock at night when you come home and suddenly find that your set has broken, and that is the time that people want it repaired; so you turn to the phone book. I suggest very honestly to anybody here, if this ever does happen to you, I would beware of the great number of advertisements in the phone book that deliberately have initials placed in front of them so that they can be Nos. 1, 2, 3, 4 or 5 in the book.

Some of the most remarkable things happen to you. The particular experiment that I did was to replace a very simple tube and to put in one that was defective. To the person looking at the TV set it would appear as though the entire set was shot. To any qualified tradesman it was the first thing he would look for.

A great number of things happened. Unfortunately, about only one out of the seven who was called ever looked at it. The others went through a great variety of excuses, all of which were to get the set out of the particular premises into a repair place where supposedly great things were done to it—at a very good fee. Again, the problem was there was misrepresentation when you asked for the tubes that were taken out. You were told you were getting in a brand new set the products of another manufacturer—which is rather difficult to do when the back of the set had never been off.

Unfortunately, Mr. Speaker, the public is virtually left at the mercy of the serviceman because it neither knows nor is expected to know the inner workings of a television set. I must say to you, Mr. Speaker, the same experiment was carried out by a newspaper in Ottawa with even more drastic results. If I recall correctly, they carried the set into repair premises and, even in places where there was diagnostic equipment available, the number of things they found wrong with a set that actually only had a very small thing the matter with it was really amazing. Of course, they were amazing only in terms of the bill that was submitted for the repairs that supposedly had to be done.

Mr. Speaker, what I am suggesting here today is that there are two facets to this. First of all, the great paradox is that you can have a totally crooked repair service where the repairman is technically competent; and vice versa you can have a totally incompetent repair service where the man is honest. So I think the trade qualifications as well as the licensing and bonding of the repair service are necessary if we are to come to grips with the particular problem that afflicts many thousands of Ontario residents.

I would point out to you, Mr. Speaker, that in the Metropolitan Toronto area in the last two years there has been tremendous work done by the repairmen's own industry, that is, the Metropolitan Toronto TV Service Association. These people who represent the vast majority of the industry, who are not only honest but extremely hard pressed by the dishonest, have taken it upon themselves to act as ombudsmen to the public. I think that that is very commendable. I think that where we can encourage small business to regulate itself and to protect the community are avoiding the unnecessary proliferation of the bureaucracy, which unfortunately is a problem for all of us.

In any event, this association has listened to the public. It has gone out and provided them with an expert commentary on whether the repairs were really needed or not, or indeed whether the repairs were competently carried out. I think this is very important, too. As you know, Mr. Speaker, you can get into what appears to be an endless series of minor repairs. Nobody seems to be able to get at the real problem. The set comes back and it breaks down in another two weeks. It goes out again and they promise that this time it's done and, again, it is back within a week. This is extremely frustrating for people.

Mind you, there is a trend in the industry now that all the parts are going to be in a drawer—all the parts. If one goes wrong you just remove all the parts, throw them away and put in an entirely new set of parts.

This may be very convenient and it may make great television commercials, but it also is an extremely heavy burden upon the consumer. Because all you really need is for a couple of minor parts to malfunction and you are throwing away some of the major parts.

I think a far more reasonable approach to this is to have things that can be serviced—can be guaranteed, so that they will work—at the most reasonable price to the consumer. I don't think that the consumer can ask for these things to be done for nothing. But at the same time, I think that a situation where an industry does not expect to have its equipment serviced and instead throws the entire load upon the consumer, is quite unfair.

Again, there will be difficulty if we get what has been repeatedly asked for and that is that municipalities receive the right to license within their own jurisdictions. I am sure that my hon. friend from Windsor-Walkerville (Mr. B. Newman) will discuss some of the ramifications of this in the medium-sized municipality with which he is most familiar.

But I would like to point out to you that Metropolitan Toronto started into this about a year and a half ago. It was going to license because something had to be done. It went on and on and it held hearings and so on and so forth. Then it came to the point where Metro found out it was going to cost money, and when they found out it was going to cost a little bit of money, then, of course, they shied away.

Now if the largest municipality in the province, one that already has a Metro-wide licensing system, feels that it has to soft pedal this because it is an expensive commodity to the taxpayer, then I suggest to you that it is really the responsibility of the province. Again, if you leave it up to the larger municipalities to do this, you wind up with all kinds of bucket shops two or three blocks outside the actual boundary of the municipality, and I really don't think you accomplish anything.

To come back just a moment to the tradesmen's qualifications. Mr. Speaker, in this province now we have a demand that there be some empty schoolrooms used in technical institutes, both at the secondary school level and in the community colleges. I suggest to you that by putting in mandatory qualifications, and phasing them in over a particular number of years, we can attract young people to this occupation. Once there are qualifications then they do have some bargaining power when it comes to get a job. At the same time, so do the businessmen who will have to employ them as apprentices or as learners.

At the moment, there is little percentage in taking in an apprentice and investing your time with him because right down the street somebody can set up shop, operate at a cheaper price because they (a) have no intention of staying in business, (b) aren't qualified, and (c) use the easy escape route through the factory outlet that I have talked about before.

There is another problem in this too. At the moment it is somewhat customary that people can buy protection policies, and these protection policies range from one, two to five years. What happens if the place goes out of business?

As a matter of fact, Mr. Speaker, there is the case of one large retailer which did encourage people to buy these protection policies—the standard one, where they will make so many service calls over a particular period in return for a certain amount of money being deposited with them. Mr. Speaker, the company they were dealing with went out of business; in fact, it went into receivership. The interesting thing is up to a week before they were offering two and three-year service policies which people had paid for.

Of course, when you go into bankruptcy, as you know, that policy is not only worthless. If your set is in there, you are in real difficulty.

I had some experience with people who had to go to the successor company, go back to the original workshop of the company in receivership and hunt around on the floor for the parts of their set that had been taken out and not repaired. Then they had to take their set somewhere else and pay to have it repaired. And they were told by the people arranging the affairs in receivership that, quite frankly, they were very lucky that they had a receipt that it was there in the first place, or indeed the whole lot might have been sold as a means of satisfying some of the creditors.

Mr. Speaker, what I'm saying in essence today is that on the threshold of the electronic era in the household entertainment centre, that the time has come in this province—despite the fact that we may never be able, because of overseas competition and other factors, to manufacture the particular products that are going into the household—when there is the possibility of a very strong, a very expanding and a very lucrative industry here. Lucrative not only in terms of profits for the owners, but in salaries and work stability for the employees and indeed in service to the community. There is the possibility of creating that kind of industry throughout the Province of Ontario; and I think that this should be looked at in that light.

Secondly, I believe that the compulsory certification of the television repair men—and I would point out to you that the usual grandfather clause would be there so that anyone who now has the experience and is recognized as being experienced would automatically be licensed—would provide an incentive for young people to go into this field.

I think it is common knowledge that we are having more and more difficulty attracting people into the repair industry. It seems to be a very common complaint in our society that you can buy anything new, but you can't get it fixed, even if there is only one small screw or bolt loose.

But secondly, I think the time has come in this province where the consumer protection bureau can stop passing the buck. Virtually every phone call that you make there now winds up with the response that somehow it isn't in their jurisdiction.

I don't think consumer protection begins and ends with magazine salesmen who are coming to the door. Mind you, they were bad enough; and I certainly think that the 48-hour clause, and all that kind of thing, was very necessary.

I don't believe that consumer protection begins and ends with new or used cars. Where the used car business may have been atrocious at one time, through a lot of legislation and a great deal of regulation—in fact in my view a little bit of over-kill—that problem has, by and large, been resolved.

But here we are into something that is in nearly every home. Here we are into a chronic complaint area of the public. I think the time has come to find out if the Consumer Protection Act is worth the paper that it is written on. If it is, then it can quite easily make accommodations for this type of industry.

The people who are in the industry are not asking for total government regulation. What I think they are asking for, Mr. Speaker, is that there be an overall type of regulation, but that the specific recommendations be left to various trade associations.

This, I suggest to you, would be the most efficient and most economical way of doing things. I don't think just because you have consumer protection that you have to have a civil servant, or someone apprenticed to a civil servant, peering over everyone's shoulder. I think that this only adds to the particular bill for the service.

I think that it is a very easy and economical proposition to say, "Yes, we are going to license and bond." Why license and bond? Well, you license for identification purposes; you bond in case anything untoward happens.

And then you say that hand-in-hand with tradesmen's qualifications that the trade group should be able to act as an arbitrator between the public and the individual firm when the customer believes that something has been done to him, either in terms of a very unfair bill or in terms of very slipshod work.

May I point out to you, Mr. Speaker, that such a thing is neither new nor radical. The Law Society has had this type of thing for that profession for over a century; in that you do have a taxing officer and you do have places to go if you feel that you have not been properly dealt with by the profession. I suggest to you in that case it has worked out very well.

I suggest to you that the same type of thing can be applicable to properly trained and certified people in an occupation.

That is why I've introduced Bill 18, which would for the first time in this province bring compulsory certification to someone in the repair industry. I think that this is extremely important at this time.

Secondly, An Act to amend the Consumer Protection Act would license and bond. I think that the two go hand-in-hand and I think that separately they do not attain the goal. The goal is that the public be entitled to the service it should be able to think that the two go hand-in-hand and I expect in a province that is as technologically advanced as this one.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Windsor-Walkerville.

Mr. B. Newman (Windsor-Walkerville): Mr. Speaker, I rise to support the hon. member for Scarborough Centre and congratulate him on the introduction of the two bills—Bill 18, An Act to amend the Apprenticeship and Tradesmen's Qualification Act and Bill 19, An Act to amend the Consumer Protection Act.

The hon. member is interested, not only in the protection of the consumer but also in the protection of the small businessman who will be involved in the repair, in this instance, of television sets. However, I would like to point out to him that he is becoming involved in only one small segment of the electronics industry and I don't think that it goes quite far enough even though the bill, as presented here, is satisfactory. I think we should be interested in a little further protection and the bill should possibly include all electronic equipment.

One year ago, I introduced a bill that would set up a bureau of repair services. I think that my suggestion of including all the repair services, which would include all facets of the electronics industry, would have been far more appropriate. He does have the bonding principle in his bill which I think is noteworthy and should be incorporated in any other legislation.

Mr. Speaker, Bill 19 deals with television repair services solely and that's only one of the concerns of today's consumer purchasing electrical appliances. It's important, of course, to regulate this type of service because of the two dangers inherent in it—those are the dishonest serviceman and the incompetent serviceman. There is little legislation to protect the public against either of the two, the dishonest or the incompetent.

Most television repair servicemen, Mr. Speaker, are extremely reliable. They are trustworthy. They give good and efficient service but it takes only the one rotten apple, really, to spoil the barrel and to blacklist all television repair services.

All of us can recall the Reader's Digest articles several years ago in which they checked across the United States on radio repair. Years later, it was television repair and then, likewise, they went into automotive repair. They went into appliance repair and they found that too often they came upon unscrupulous repair personnel who took full advantage of the unsuspecting public.

Mr. Speaker, there is an apprenticeship system of a sort in the province now and after a certain period of time the provincial government does give the individual a certificate of qualification. But when a person brings a television set in for repair very seldom does he ask to see the repairman's certificate. He still unsuspectingly assumes that the individual is fully qualified.

The city of Detroit has a licensing system. However, Mr. Speaker, the licensing system only licenses the owner of the shop and not the repairman and, as a result, it has been extremely unsuccessful.

There are numerous cases of fraud, which are both reported and unreported, relating to television and appliance repair services. In 1971, the provincial consumer protection bureau received 379 complaints dealing with appliances and furniture and 207 complaints about TV sales and service. The Toronto Better Business Bureau received 814 complaints about TV, radio and phonograph services in the 10-month period of last year; that is, January up to and including October. This was one of the highest categories of complaints. It comprised nine per cent of the total complaints to the Better Business Bureau in that 10-month period.

The problem of repair is only one of the problems involved with electronic equipment and TV. There is also the problem of warranties — the manufacturer putting a warranty on the merchandise yet the warranty being meaningless, so the warranty does not necessarily cover the product to the extent that the purchaser assumes it does. The warranty is fairly drawn and sometimes honestly implemented. It expresses that warranties can be of assistance to the consumer. Unfortunately, warranties don't necessarily all meet this criterion.

Here are some examples of typical pitfalls as far as warranties are concerned: warranties that cover only part of the component and not the most important one; warranties that undertake to replace defective parts but hold the consumer responsible for the cost of installing them—this leaves the consumer at the unscrupulous dealer's mercy since the dealer can manipulate the prices to suit his own purposes—warranties that expire long before the normal life expectancy of the product especially in coloured television picture tubes; and warranties that merely credit the buyer with the original purchase price on the purchase of new goods of the same type at a higher price.

Mr. Speaker, possibly the dating of television sets or all types of electronic equipment—the date that the set was actually manufactured, when it left the plant after final inspection—should be visible in some place in the set so that the individual purchasing the set knows that he is buying a 1973 model, not one that was shipped out of Japan in 1969.

The Ontario Law Reform Commission report dealt with the problem of warranties but as yet no legislation has been enacted. As far as warranties are concerned, Mr. Speaker, it is quite unrealistic to expect the consumer to bring these grievances into the regular courts since litigation is expensive and time-consuming and the results are usually unpredictable. The commission made three proposals to deal with this situation. First, the Ontario consumer protection bureau should be specifically authorized to mediate all warranty complaints. Secondly, if mediation is not successful, the parties will be invited to submit their dispute for arbitration before a government-appointed arbitrator free of charge. Thirdly, the alternative for the consumer will be to bring his grievance before the commercial registration appeal tribunal. The government must waste no time in implementing these or similar proposals to ensure that the consumer will get a fair hearing for his complaint.

In Manitoba, Mr. Speaker, the appliance division of the Electrical Services League is setting up an arbitration board in an attempt to settle disputes between consumers and the appliance industry — that is, television industry—over services and other matters. It is expected that the board will deal with small appliances, home entertainment items and major appliances. The board will probably include consumer groups, suppliers and retailers.

Mr. J. E. Stokes (Thunder Bay): A very enlightened bunch in Manitoba.

Mr. B. Newman: In Metro Toronto, it is estimated that there are 475 people who have a licence to purchase parts for the repair of electronic equipment. The Metropolitan Toronto Television Service Association has only 130 registered members in Metro Toronto and the total number of repairmen working on a full-time basis is approximately 260. However, there are many repairmen, who operate part-time from telephone answering services with no stated address, advertising a ridiculously low, bait-catching service charge. These people must be brought under control.

Electronic and TV servicing is now one of the most advanced technical and highly specialized fields. With microminiaturization, with the modular concept in electronic equipment, with integrated circuitry and with hand-held computers you can see the need for a bureau of repair services. Only the skilled and knowledgeable technician, using the most up-to-date, sophisticated electronic equipment, can ever begin to cope with the problems involving modern, advanced, transistorized, colour circuitry. The television set is a complex electronic equipment, and there are no standards for good or bad service.

The training and experience of a serviceman is extremely important. Even though associations in Metro Toronto, Hamilton, Ottawa, Windsor, and Sault Ste. Marie do have official codes of ethics, a small group of people who may be inadequately trained and unethical can cause a great furore in the press and damage the reputation of the entire television repair industry.

It's precisely for these reasons that some type of licensing is important. It would eliminate the fraudulent operator by making it impossible for him to obtain a licence.

Some of these operators, Mr. Speaker, use bait advertising, stating that TV repair calls will be $2 or $3. The average TV service call, including travelling time, takes about one hour. The cost of the car and the cost of having to give some free calls make it virtually impossible to make a profitable service call at that price.

This is used as a ploy to get into a customer's home. Once inside the home, charges are also made for additional labour, setups, adjustments and so forth, so the average bill is usually $10 to $15.

Mr. Speaker, the licensing of television repairmen is an excellent concept but it should not end there. People involved in the repairing of all household appliances should be licensed. Along with this a bureau of repair services should be set up to receive and investigate complaints.

A bureau of this type has been set up in California to fight against outright repair frauds and inept repairmen. With a staff of just 11, it is estimated to save California more than $15 million a year. It is financed by registration fees paid by repair dealers. Now California has legislated a similar bureau for auto repairs.

Some states have enacted legislation recently to follow the lines of the California setup. These states are Florida, Oregon, Indiana, Louisiana, Massachusetts and Connecticut.

In conclusion I would like to bring to the attention of the members sitting here that the Metropolitan Toronto Television Service Association has brought up a series of 10 points on its golden rule or code of ethics. Surely, its members wouldn't have had these 10 different points if they didn't see a real problem in the television repair field.

Mr. Speaker, we on this side of the House support the legislation introduced by the member for Scarborough Centre.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Wentworth.

Mr. I. Deans (Wentworth): Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I want to say that we support the legislation proposed by the member for Windsor-Walkerville because, in fact, it is considerably different from the legislation proposed by the member for Scarborough Centre! To support the legislation proposed by the member for Scarborough Centre, as it is drafted, wouldn't achieve the results already discussed by the member for Windsor-Walkerville.

With those two things clearly out of the way, I want to make it clear to you, sir, that we—well, I shouldn't say "we" since this is private members' hour—I have some doubts about whether Bill 19 achieves the results that the member for Scarborough Centre is, in fact, trying to achieve.

I was eagerly looking through the material which is available through the press clipping service for something to say about this particular bill because frankly I had little experience with fly-by-night television repair people. I have received few complaints from constituents about fly-by-night television repair people although I do understand that there are members in the Legislature who have received a goodly number of complaints. The matter does, in fact, exist as the member for Scarborough Centre has outlined it.

I don't doubt for a moment that there is need for some kind of legislation to protect the public against the crooked element in the business society. Whether it be here or whether it be in some other area of business, there is no question that into every area creep a few crooks. They give a black eye to all of the legitimate operators.

In this case we are dealing with, I suspect, a minority but nevertheless that minority is perhaps a minority which has to be dealt with. I do like the way the member for Windsor-Walkerville put the case about the protection bureau. I think that approach probably would achieve a better result.

I want to suggest to the member for Scarborough Centre—

Mr. Stokes: I wonder why he knows so much about crooks?

Mr. Deans: —to begin with, that I think in his section in which he defines both the repairmen and television repair service, he ought to have included in that section defining repairmen the requirement that any person operating in the trade be qualified to receive a licence under the Apprenticeship and Tradesmen's Qualification Act so that we would have tied the two bills together.

The one bill should have said, I suspect, under section 1(R)(a), "Repairman means a person employed, appointed or authorized to give a television repair service who has obtained a certificate under the Apprenticeship and Tradesmen's Qualification Act." Then we wouldn't leave it up to the director or leave it up to the industry to have the kind of grandfather clause that the member is talking about. Frankly, I think that if we are going to protect the public we have to protect them all the way. We have to ensure that the people who are going to deal with their products are, in fact, well qualified and trained to do that. Upon reading the Act to amend the Consumer Protection Act I came to the conclusion that it was a sort of circuitous thing; it was like a dog chasing its own tail. At the beginning we don't set out what a repairman is or how he becomes a repairman, and therefore you end up in the final analysis by saying, "If you don't comply with this Act, you may lose your bond." But to comply with the Act simply means that you have got to satisfy the director that you ought to be licensed. I think that it should go a little further than that.

I want to go even further than that though, to be quite frank with you. I don't think that it's only a matter of protecting the public against the fly-by-night repair people; I think it's a matter of protecting the public against shoddy work by the manufacturer. I'm absolutely convinced that in the area of television sets in particular, and in other appliances, there is some pretty slipshod work being done by some of the manufacturers—not nearly enough testing, not nearly enough care and attention paid—and people are buying inferior products as a result. There is no quality control.

I want to say that in looking for something to refer to in this regard, I came up with—

Mr. Stokes: A lot of it is planned obsolescence.

Mr. Deans: —a Consumer Report of late 1969, which is now perhaps somewhat out of date but it does point out the picture that I am going to make. It deals with the major television people—RCA, Zenith, Magnavox, Sylvania, Motorola, and on and on—and it's interesting to note that in the years 1964 to 1968 inclusive, only Zenith gained a rating of better than average in regard to the service required for the colour television sets which they produced, and that other names which many of us might tend to think are acceptable brands—RCA, for example—during the same period had a rating clearly poorer than average in this Consumer Report.

Let me look at two others that are of interest to us, which fall in this area: Admiral—which really doesn't apply too much any more—and Westinghouse simply qualified as being average throughout the entire period. We find that Zenith, Westinghouse, RCA, Sears-Silvertone—a lot of people buy Sears—were clearly poorer than average for 1964 through 1967, but better than average in 1968. So maybe they are improving.

What I am really saying is that there is not much point in having some kind of guarantee for the public against shoddy repair if the product they are getting in the first instance is shoddy. I think that we are going to have to put some responsibility on the manufacturers to guarantee their products, and we are going to have to write into the legislation some pretty firm guarantees for the kind of protection people can expect for the product they are buying, and the kind of service that they can expect.

I think maybe it's time that we put an onus of responsibility on the manufacturer to guarantee his product and to guarantee it against all defects. Not only that, not simply the one or two year guarantee on the picture tube, I am talking about guaranteeing the workmanship of the product so that if, in fact, something does go wrong with it, it can be taken to that particular manufacturer's outlet and made to work.

I think that the manufacturer has to assume some of the responsibility for the shoddy workmanship that goes on by the repair people in the industry. I think that maybe we have to tie the repair portion of the industry into the manufacturing portion, so that when you take your set to an approved repairman that approved repairman is also approved by one of the major manufacturers which, in turn, will stand behind the repairs that are carried out.

So if you take your set in and you get it back—as the member for Scarborough Centre has pointed out—and it hasn't even been looked at, you can then go back to the manufacturer and you can say, "I took this to your approved outlet and that approved outlet didn't do the job." The manufacturer will then rescind the contract between the two and do away with that outlet altogether. Maybe that way we could really come to grips with who is doing the right thing for the people of the area.

I might say to the member for Scarborough Centre that I was interested to find, in looking for information, that he is the only noted authority on the subject, according to my own records. Much of what has been written about it was in fact written by him. Much of what has been said about it was said by him. I looked, rather eagerly, to try to find some other person in the business who may have had something to say about it, but other than a story by one Martin Dewey, written in April 1972, I could find no other person who had written any articles about the shoddy repair service in the television end of the appliance business.

This says something, because I would have thought, with a year and a half having gone by since the election and recognizing that this is a matter of considerable concern, that the member would have been able to influence the cabinet to the point where perhaps they would have shown their concern for the people of Ontario by introducing some kind of appropriate legislation to safeguard them from these shysters.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member's time is now up.

Mr. Deans: I just want to say that I am frankly disappointed, Mr. Speaker, that the member was forced to bring it in. It shows what a lightweight he is in the Conservative Party.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Carleton.

Mr. S. B. Handleman (Carleton): Mr. Speaker, I would like to say a few words in support of the principles of Bills 18 and 19. It did seem to me that the principles of the bills had so commended themselves to all speakers that further comment would be redundant. However, the hon. member for Wentworth, in his usual polite manner, has nipped in a way that usually takes place in clause-by-clause examination. I did gather from his remarks that he was somewhat in favour of the principles and the intentions of the hon. member for Scarborough Centre—

Mr. Deans: They still don't satisfy me.

Mr. Handleman: —but he wouldn't even grudgingly admit that he found the principles to be somewhat attractive.

Mr. Speaker, many of us remember, however vaguely, the pre-television era; and it is a constant source of wonder to me that this modern miracle has become so insidious a fact of our daily lives. Its effect is soporific, and apparently when we are deprived of this pacifier we tend to panic.

Many of the people whose sets break down immediately let their fingers do the walking in the yellow pages to find somebody, anybody, who will come to do the job and put it back into its usual efficient state. They select a name at random, and once again God help the innocent consumer who does this. Unfortunately, I suppose, we cannot legislate against that kind of thing. The only thing we can do is try to make sure the person he picks at random is properly trained, licensed and bonded.

The consumer may be lucky. He may choose one of the majority that are honest and qualified. Despite the words of the member for Scarborough Centre, I honestly do believe the majority of the people in the repair field are both honest and qualified. But he may be one of those tragic unfortunates who falls into the claws of one of these rapacious vultures who find their way into any remunerative calling.

Hardly a day goes by that this doesn't happen, and we see the letters to Action Line in the daily newspaper. There was one in the Toronto Star today—

Mr. Stokes: The hon. member is being nastier to the member for Scarborough Centre than the member for Wentworth.

Mr. Handleman: I don't know whether the hon. member for Wentworth wrote that letter, but apparently somebody did buy a television set, went to have it repaired by the authorized repairman of the dealer, who is a reputable dealer, and found that the repairman had gone bankrupt. Fortunately, in this case the dealer was reputable; he stood behind the product and had it repaired at his own expense, even though the warranty had expired.

It is regrettable that the Action Line columnists seem to have more success in dealing with these problems than the Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations (Mr. Clement) is willing to undertake. When I receive complaints of this nature I suggest that they call the local Action Line. The Ottawa Citizen, which was mentioned by the member for Scarborough Centre, did an excellent survey to show what happens. Otherwise I can only say: "Sorry, buddy boy, you should have dealt with a reputable dealer," which is not a very good way of dealing with complaints.

If my own friendly TV dealer is listening somewhere out there in the far beyond, I would like him to know I consider him to be one of the good ones, because I have had problems and I have had them dealt with very well.

This again is an interference in what we consider to be the basic rights of the free enterprise system—and I am one of those strong proponents of that particular system. But free enterprise will destroy itself if it fails to reject those wormy apples, the bad apples, from its midst. When the private sector will not move to protect the public, then the state must move in and do the job. This is exactly what the hon. member has proposed.

I urge the sponsor of the bill to examine the clauses—particularly of Bill 19—to ensure that, if the government should proceed in the direction indicated, the testing procedure for qualifications would be more than simply paper examinations. Quite frankly, I don't care if the man has paper qualifications; if he can fix my set, I'm satisfied.

I agree with the hon. member for Windsor-Walkerville—TV repairmen are only one of a large number of appliance repairmen. And appliance repairs, I guess, are second, in complaints only to the automobile industry, which far exceeds the rest of them; and we may be dealing with that sometime later in the session.

Therefore, I urge all members to support this bill, and consider its future application to other trades at some later time.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for York-Forest Hill.

Mr. P. G. Givens (York-Forest Hill): Mr. Speaker, I will support this bill. The consensus is so in favour of it that I don't understand why television, now being about 25 or 30 years old—that sort of coincides with the Conservative Party being in power—why this matter hasn't been enacted before this. I have to wonder why my hon. friend for Scarborough Centre isn't listened to more than he is.

We had the same thing with respect to the regulations for dance studios that he brought in, and the health studios, where we all agreed that the principle was right. And I don't know why they don't listen to the member for Scarborough Centre; they'd be a great deal farther ahead if they did.

Mr. B. Newman: He can come on over here.

Mr. Givens: I want to agree with my friend from Wentworth on this business of quality control. It's a rare exception today when you get an appliance—or you even get a piece of furniture, let alone an appliance—which is the way it's represented; that it really works. And you find on examining the guarantees and the warranties that they're like the fine print on an insurance policy; they exempt themselves from more things than they include in the product.

Mr. Deans: Right!

Mr. Givens: And I agree that we'd have less of this chicanery and rapacity that the hon. member for Ottawa referred to if, ab initio, the product was what it was represented to be and that it really worked—instead of just being a piece of machinery thrown together with a lot of labels on it and without the quality control that it should have.

I get a little suspicious when everybody heaps scorn on this poor television repairman. Now I know some television repairmen and I don't know any one of them who drives an Eldorado Cadillac, or a Lincoln Continental, or a Chrysler Imperial—I don't want to leave anybody out—or a Mercedes-Benz; but I do know doctors who do and lawyers who do—

Mr. Stokes: Lawyers! Lawyers!

Mr. Givens: —and accountants who do and dentists who do. So where are these crooked television repairmen who are feeding off us like vultures, like parasites. Let's not over-exaggerate with hyperbole what is being done to the public; although where it exists this petty larceny is very convenient. I sometimes wonder whether some of the letters that are sent into Action Line and some of the complaints that you hear about are as valid as they could be.

However, this sort of thing does go on and I agree with the hon. member for Scarborough Centre that it would probably be highly desirable if a compensation fund were set up—such as the legal profession has—where people could be compensated in cases where they have been flummoxed. And I also agree with the idea of bonding.

This business of repairs has become a very big business. I've been reading an article—none of the speakers before me have mentioned this; they have mentioned everything else and it's hard to think of something to say now which hasn't been said before—but the repair business in electronic equipment today has become as big a business as the sales business of electronic equipment itself. We find that for every $50 a year that a person spends on an electric appliance, he spends an equal amount of money on the repair or the maintenance thereof. That's a fact. It's become a very big business.

Mr. Stokes: Planned obsolescence.

Mr. Givens: Well, planned obsolescence or whatever the member wants to call it.

A lot of people who are in the business are one-man operations and they can't afford the time or they can't afford the expenses involved in making repairs they should, or in maintenance.

Now there has been a certain amount of self-government on the part of associations which have tried to rid the industry of the taint of the accusations that are made, but they haven't really been able to be that effective. They've tried to raise standards and to establish standards; and they've got a complaint board and so on; but nothing can succeed as well as a proper piece of legislation that requires this to be done.

You've got to understand today, with respect to electronic equipment, and this not only applies to television sets but also to the hi-fi industry, the tuners and the speakers, that there are people who will go out and spend thousands of dollars on this kind of equipment. This equipment is regarded as not only soporific, as my friend from Ottawa referred to it, but also very expensive equipment, which they put in their homes and which requires servicing. This is the sort of thing that should be covered as well.

The main point that I want to make is that a television repairman who has the opportunity to enter your home, to enter your living room, your recreation room, or your bedroom for that matter, should have some form of credentials when he comes to the door and there is a latch-key kid at home, let's say, or somebody at home who can't take care of himself.

I don't mean from a physical standpoint, but I mean someone who doesn't know how to deal with this person. I don't like to see a meter reader come in without proper credentials. Consequently, a person who has this kind of access to your home, to your castle, should have to identify himself. He should have the proper kind of bonding and the proper kind of credentials to indicate that he is licensed.

As I have noted before, electronic equipment today is extremely expensive. It isn't getting any cheaper; it's getting more expensive all the time. I think it is more important for a person who is a TV repairman or an electronics repairman of any kind to have these kinds of credentials than it is for an electrician to have them; and electricians have had these credentials for many many years, as you know.

So we're plagued with an industry where there are a lot of amateurs and where the stuff is becoming more and more complex all the time. You see these advertisements stating that they can do it cheaply and that they will repair your set for $2 an hour. In the long run, we know, this is very expensive; because cheap is expensive. If they louse it up for you, it's going to cost you a heck of a lot more to fix it, repair it or to get a new set.

There are a lot of good schools today which we didn't have 20 or 25 years ago; hence there should be no reason why this kind of legislation cannot be invoked for good purposes. The untrained person is the unfair competitor as compared to the trained man. His charge may be lower, but as I said before in the long run it's going to be much more expensive.

Then there is this whole business of coming into your home; this business of access, which I talked about, when he comes in and he has this opportunity to tell you that the machine has to go down to the shop. You have to make a quick value judgement whether this fellow knows what he's talking about or whether he's taking you for a ride. Nobody should be in this position, where there's a possibility of victimization. This kind of person should not have the kind of permit and the kind of licence and the kind of bonding that we've been talking about.

So, all in all, having said everything that we've said, and based on all the circumstances of the case that we have described here today, I think the member for Scarborough Centre should go into his caucus and tell them that the Liberals agree with him, the NDP agree with him, and his own guys agree with him. For once and for all, he should have this epitaph on his career, whenever it may end, that he should be able to come in and say, "Everybody in the Legislature here agrees that Bill 18 and Bill 19 should get the assent and the consent of this House and should pass into the laws of this magnificent Province of "Onta -ari -ari -o."

Mr. R. Gisborn: (Hamilton East): Mr. Speaker, supporting the final comments of the member for York-Forest Hill, that we can support the principle involved in the two bills, we have to ask some questions of course. I'll be quite anxious to ask some questions of the Ministry of Colleges and Universities as to whether it will entertain this kind of legislation, since it lies in their hands at the present time.

We will also ask why the Ministry of Labour has never considered the certification of electronics repairmen and servicemen in the past. I recollect some debate in the select committee in this field. There seemed to be realistic reasons why they didn't feel it should be brought under the Act at that time, and I can't recollect just what they were. But I feel very doubtful as to whether this kind of legislation will correct the ills that we have talked about this afternoon. I think we have to go back to the point made by the member for Wentworth—we have to look at the manufacturer. That's where the biggest ills lie.

It is a sweet little deal, he electronics repair and service industry. Some call it a cute little, sweet little racket, the same as new car servicing and the life insurance industry. Legal rackets — that's what they are; the three of them—legal rackets.

I wonder, when I see the advertisements for the new model cars that come out in September prior to the year of designation. They tell us that with all the new options, the car is 100 per cent better than the car you had last year. It makes me wonder what I have been driving for the last 15 years! What kind of junk was I driving?

We get the same in the television industry. New models come out and they have better cabinets and they are all automatic and we will have none of those problems that we had before. One wonders what happened to the model one paid $1,000 for two years ago.

We have to look to the manufacturer. We have got to have some way through government, to say to the manufacturer: "You must be able to produce a more simplified machine in the electronics field, one for which people don't have to call the serviceman and pay anywhere from $12 to $15 per a service call to correct the horizontal distortion that happens."

I have a combination machine, my first colour machine. I have had it now for a year and a half. I paid $1,000 for it. It wasn't the most expensive. It was a combination—

Mr. Givens: Ouch.

Mr. R. G. Eaton (Middlesex South): Must be nice.

Mr. Gisborn: It was a combination of radio and stereo and the—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Gisborn: It was only the second machine I have had in my life. Not many can say that.

Mr. R. F. Ruston (Essex-Kent): Rich NDP! Boy, they have got the money!

An hon. member: I paid $400 for mine.

Mr. Ruston: He must be related to the member for High Park (Mr. Shulman).

Hon. W. A. Stewart (Minister of Agriculture and Food): Anyone can make a million in that party.

Mr. Drea: I would never have believed that.

Mr. Gisborn: I spend my money; I don't hoard it like a lot of people!

Mr. Givens: The member is worried about succession duties.

Mr. Gisborn: I feel that I have been entitled to two television sets in the last 30 years.

Anyway, with that set they told me that I would have guaranteed service for one year. I said: "What does that mean?" He said: "If anything goes wrong with it, we will come down and service it—keep it operating—and the manufacturer will pay for it." I said, "That's fine. If I have you down once a month, it means I have got a bum machine and at the end of the year, I have got a real bum machine and you haven't fixed it! You have kept repairing it so it will keep operating." That's exactly what happens.

Fortunately, with mine, he came once a month for 12 months and there has been very little wrong with it since. In the last five or six months it has been working pretty well.

We had trouble with horizontal distortion and we could not find the adjuster knob for horizontal correction. There isn't one on the machine. We had the coaxial man come in and he fixed the colour all right but he said: "You'll have to get the repairman to come down and fix that distortion in the horizontal."

We called them and they said: "There is one there but you are not supposed to touch it." My wife finally got a little disturbed and she reached over the back and played with five of them. She finally found the one and she has it all fixed now. But it is a serious point—

Mr. M. Gaunt (Huron-Bruce): The hon. member better get his wife licensed!

Mr. Givens: Get her licensed.

Mr. Gisborn: They have a sign on the back of these machines that tells you: "Danger! Don't touch machine." Then in little print it says: "Unless you pull out the plug"—then you can play with it.

On most of the machines you have to have a serviceman in to put a station indicator bulb in. Some of them are fixed to the point where you can't take the front panel off to get that bulb in. It has to be done through the back.

These are manufacturers' faults. As was said by the hon. member previous to me, we should get away from picking on the serviceman who is carrying out a job. God knows, there are as many of those around as there are real estate offices; you know, there is a radio and TV serviceman in every block. You don't see as many for general appliances, like refrigerators, because they don't go wrong so quickly. It is the manufacturer we have to get after. He has to produce a better piece of goods and simplify it so that people can make the adjustments and get away from this racket and the high costs of servicing TVs.

Mr. Stokes: Very well said.

Hon. E. A. Winkler (Chairman, Management Board of Cabinet): Mr. Speaker, before I adjourn the House I would just like to reiterate what the business might be tomorrow. I am not certain at this point in time if the Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations will be able to return, but at the moment the first item will be Item No. 2 on the order paper, then No. 9 and No. 4, with the possibility of us running through Nos. 5, 6, 7, 8, 10 and 11; if it is otherwise, we will return to the first item of business.

Mr. P. G. Givens (York-Forest Hill): Mr. Speaker, would the House leader indicate what he is doing about Wednesday? There was some quandary about this last week.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: We will not be sitting Wednesday this week, but we will be sitting tomorrow evening and Thursday evening.

Hon. Mr. Winkler moves the adjournment of the House.

Motion agreed to.

The House adjourned at 6 o'clock p.m.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF ONTARIO

TUESDAY, APRIL 3, 1973

The House met at 2 o'clock, p.m.

Prayers.

Mr. Speaker: Our guests today in the east gallery are students from the adult day centre, YMHA, Toronto, the Olivet Day School of Islington, and St. Vincent de Paul Separate School of Toronto. In the west gallery we have students from Allan A. Martin Senior Public School of Mississauga, and Haliburton Highlands Secondary School of Haliburton.

Statements by the ministry.

Oral questions.

The hon. Leader of the Opposition.

PRICES OF FOODSTUFFS

Mr. R. F. Nixon (Leader of the Opposition): Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I'd like to ask a question of the Minister of Agriculture and Food concerning the role of the Food Council in the present situation regarding the complaints about the prices of foodstuffs, particularly meat and milk. Is the Food Council authorized and budgeted to prepare the information that consumers seem to lack or, at least, pay no attention to, concerning the costs of production? Is the minister prepared to provide financing to the food council for it to become more of an arm of public instruction and information in the present circumstances?

Hon. W. A. Stewart (Minister of Agriculture and Food): Mr. Speaker, I can't answer the question as to whether or not it's budgeted for. I do know that there were one or two reports prepared, I believe, two years ago and which were published at a previous time of comparatively stronger meat prices than had prevailed before that time. I can't really tell the member whether or not it's in the budget; nor do I think the service is available from the council. The service is available from an agency in the city, as I understand it, which does consumer shopping from a prepared list and compares prices week by week.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: A supplementary: Can the minister tell the House whether the campaign at present in the advertising pages of the newspapers, and put out by the Ontario Milk Marketing Board, is paid for by the farmers or is there a government budget to assist in that? A question associated with that, Mr. Speaker: Would the minister not agree that one of the serious shortcomings in this whole situation is a lack of information, or at least the consciousness of the information that should be available on the part of the consumer relating to some of these costs at the farm level?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: The cost of providing the information service, to which my hon. friend the Leader of the Opposition refers, from the Milk Marketing Board is paid for entirely by the producers.

That's an information service, a promotional programme of their own, paid for by deductions by themselves; and I understand that the processors contribute to some extent, although I am not sure what the percentage is. There may be some input there by the processors, but I'm not sure how much. But there's no government money involved in that.

The service to which my hon. friend refers that should be provided by the Ministry of Agriculture and Food on various matters is available and has been made available to the press on numerous occasions in one way or another, but has not been printed as provided. There could be a variety of reasons for that—and I'm not blaming the press or the news media.

I think perhaps the Beef Improvement Association wants very much to have an increase in the levy that will be deducted for each head of beef animal sold, and I'm quite certain a good deal of that will go toward promotional work to tell the association's side of the story of beef production.

Mr. J. A. Renwick (Riverdale): Mr. Speaker, by way of a supplementary, would the minister indicate to us whether he believes that the Ontario Food Council could be re-fashioned in such a way as to become a prices review board in the field of food? And does he have the jurisdiction and authority to make such a revision of the functions of the Food Council?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: No, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. Leader of the Opposition.

MEAT BOYCOTT

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Another question of the same minister on a related topic, Mr. Speaker: Would he not agree with the contention that has been put forward, that by farmers holding up shipments of beef animals and other meat animals because of the present boycott, the results of the circumstances might in fact force prices higher and thus defeat the intent of those who are boycotting the use of meat?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Well, I'm not sure what my hon. friend means by that statement. It's really more of a statement than a question, as I determine it.

I think the producers of Canada, both in western Canada and eastern Canada, acted reasonably wisely in not moving livestock to the market in the usual numbers this week. For instance, Mr. Speaker, if I may beg your time for just a moment, last week, when the threatened boycott was about to take place in the United States, there was a backup of livestock on the markets in the United States that had ready access to the processing industry here. As a matter of fact, something like 1,500 head of cattle came in up to Friday afternoon, when the offices closed. How many came on Saturday and Sunday, I am not sure; but I wouldn't be surprised if it was a like number.

Those cattle came in from the United States because they were not held back on the farms in anticipation of the proposed boycott; in effect they had to be moved, and they came into Canada. I fancy that our livestock farmers, knowing that this was happening, felt they would be much wiser not to unload cattle in particular on the market in Canada until they determined what the effect of the proposed consumer boycott might be.

With hogs it's a somewhat different story, Mr. Speaker. I'm sure anyone who is associated with the hog market at all knows that hogs have to be moved at relatively the same weight and stage of finish, which doesn't quite pertain as far as cattle are concerned.

I would think that until there is some determination made as to what the market will absorb, our producers, as ordinarily good businessmen, likely will not rush or panic to dump cattle or livestock on the market.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: A final supplementary, with your permission, Mr. Speaker: Would the minister not agree that his department and the Food Council, which is an emanation from it, have something more to do than just play a passive role in the provision of information, and that in fact this whole matter is based to some extent on misinformation that has been made available? For example, would the minister not agree—

Mr. Speaker: I think the hon. Leader of the Opposition is making a speech now—order, order. The comments are actually a statement rather than a question.

Mr. I. Deans (Wentworth): Supplementary question—

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, with your permission, the question was: Why doesn't he think that his ministry has something more than a passive role to play?

Mr. Speaker: Well, in view of the nature of the original question and the comments given, I think that the supplementary hardly constitutes another matter of urgent public importance. There can be no further supplementaries. The hon. Leader of the Opposition.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Not at this time, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Wentworth on behalf of the New Democratic Party.

IMPORTATION OF WORKERS

Mr. Deans: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have a question of the Minister of Labour. Does the Minister of Labour think it appropriate that a company in Ontario should be bringing into the province skilled workers when there are, in fact, workers of similar skill unemployed in the Province of Ontario and available for work?

Hon. F. Guindon (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, I don't think I will comment whether it is appropriate or not. I did receive a call yesterday from a lady whose husband was a millwright. As you know, these people are here because of a federal permit through the Manpower Department, so I don't think there is anything coming under our department that we could do.

Mr. Deans: A supplementary question: Doesn't the minister feel it appropriate that he should make representation to the federal government to stop it bringing in employees to take the jobs of Canadian workers in Ontario?

Hon. Mr. Guindon: I would be only too glad, Mr. Speaker, to make representation.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. R. F. Ruston (Essex-Kent): The member should have stopped and thought that one out.

Mr. Deans: One final supplementary question.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order. The hon. member for Wentworth had a supplementary question.

Mr. Deans: Yes, I did.

Mr. Speaker: I will permit one supplementary.

Mr. Deans: I want to ask the minister whether he is aware that, in fact, these people are being brought in on a short-term contract to do one particular job only, and that that job could well be done by members of a union in the Province of Ontario who have many unemployed workers on their rolls?

Hon. Mr. Guindon: Mr. Speaker, I am really not as familiar as I would like to be with the case. I will look into it, but surely my hon. friend wouldn't want me to discriminate in any way, shape or form. I would be glad to look into it.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Wentworth. No further supplementaries.

Mr. Renwick: Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Speaker: I think we have pursued it sufficiently.

Mr. Renwick: —after all, there are jobs for people involved in it, so we can't question it in the Legislature beyond the point that the Speaker decides.

Mr. Speaker: We reviewed it sufficiently for the question period. The hon. member for Wentworth.

THREATENED ARMSTRONG EPIDEMIC

Mr. Deans: I have a question of the Minister of the Environment. Has the Minister of the Environment received any communication from the Minister of Health (Mr. Potter) with regard to work necessarily to be undertaken in the area of Armstrong in order to avert an epidemic which appears to be in the making in that area?

Hon. J. A. C. Auld (Minister of the Environment): Mr. Speaker, I am aware that there has been some problem about services in Armstrong and a number of other small northern communities. I have had no communication with the Minister of Health on this specific matter in recent days or months. I will be delighted to inquire into this.

Mr. J. E. Stokes (Thunder Bay): A supplementary, Mr. Speaker: Is the minister aware that there is a danger of an epidemic because of the low quality of water in the area, as a result of contamination by the CNR in allowing fuel oil to escape and other matter from ground sources? Is the minister aware that the Ministry of Health has sent inspectors in and said that something must be done to avert an epidemic? In view of that, what will his ministry do to avert such an epidemic?

Hon. Mr. Auld: Mr. Speaker, I wasn't aware that any contamination of recent origin was likely to cause an epidemic. I assume that this would be surface water runoff or a discharge of untreated sewage rather than diesel fuel oil, which is certainly not desirable in this district. It is not likely, to my mind, to cause any kind of an epidemic but, as I say, I will proceed with this matter.

It could well be, as perhaps the hon. member is aware, that the Minister of Health has the power to require remedial work to water and sewage just as the Minister of the Environment has for a different reason. It may well be that the Minister of Health is investigating to see whether such an order should be made. I will check into the matter and inform the hon. member.

Mr. Stokes: A final supplementary: Is the minister not aware that this is unorganized territory? Therefore there is no local presence that can take matters in hand and so we are employing the assistance of the ministry.

Mr. Speaker: The Minister of the Environment has the answer to a question previously asked.

FLOODING IN HAMILTON

Hon. Mr. Auld: Mr. Speaker, in my absence yesterday a question was asked of the Provincial Secretary for Resources Development (Mr. Lawrence)—

Mrs. M. Campbell (St. George): On a point of order.

Mr. Speaker: Order. On a point of order?

Mrs. Campbell: Is it not possible, Mr. Speaker, for the minister to speak so that we can hear him over here?

Hon. Mr. Auld: I will be delighted to try harder, Mr. Speaker. At any rate, as I say, yesterday the hon. member for Hamilton East (Mr. Gisborn) asked a question of the Provincial Secretary for Resources Development as follows:

In view of the serious flooding affecting the function of septic tanks on Beach Blvd., Hamilton, commonly known as the beach strip, would the minister have his officials of the water resources division immediately contact and co-operate with the corporation of the city of Hamilton in providing engineering and financial assistance to protect the health of the 1,000 residents involved in these homes?

The provincial secretary said, "Yes, Mr. Speaker, certainly with respect to the engineering; I can't be as categorical with regard to financial assistance."

I would advise the hon. member that a shoreline survey is being conducted by officials of my ministry's private waste and water management branch.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Might I ask the hon. minister if his reply constitutes all of those sheets? If it does, it should be a ministerial statement.

Hon. Mr. Auld: I am simply enlarging on the answer given by the provincial secretary, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: If it is a lengthy reply I am sure the hon. minister realizes it should have been given in the ministerial statements.

Hon. Mr. Auld: Perhaps one minute, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: All right, one minute.

Mr. M. Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): When will the ministers learn the difference between a statement and an answer?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: The member never will, that's for sure

Hon. Mr. Auld: In all areas in southwestern Ontario where private sewage disposal systems have been seriously affected by the high levels of the Great Lakes, a study began on March 17 and is expected to be completed by the middle of this month. There are some 700 to 800 homes in the Hamilton Beach area on septic systems. A number of these systems have been damaged and no longer function as a result of the high water level.

Members of our private waste and water management branch are available to residents of the area and will provide engineering advice in co-operation with the local health unit. However, it appears that it is just not possible to solve individual problems in this area except by the installation of holding tanks. Discussions are being held between officials of the city of Hamilton and the local medical officer of health to determine the best course of action.

Mr. Speaker: When I called on the hon. minister I did not intend to cut the hon. member for Wentworth off quite as quickly as I did. He should have another question.

GREAT LAKES FLOOD DAMAGE

Mr. Deans: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have a question of the Provincial Secretary for Resources Development.

Is the minister aware that, in expert opinion, Lake Ontario's level will rise between 6 and 9 in. before July this year? Does he realize that that, just by the lake level increase alone, will mean severe flooding for a great many people along the shore of Lake Ontario? Will he alter his policy to allow those people to take preventive measures now, using the moneys available from the Province of Ontario which, up to now, have been available only through the municipalities? I mean the 80-20 arrangement.

Hon. A. B. R. Lawrence (Provincial Secretary for Resources Development): Mr. Speaker, I think the point is a very serious one but I have not yet found categorical examples where municipalities have refused to act within that formula. If it turns out that we have any substantial number of municipalities which, for whatever reason, do not concern themselves with their own residents, I expect we will simply have to rethink the 80-20 arrangement and see whether or not some other initiating group could supply the 20 per cent. The difficulty is that in many of these cases the legal title to the roads and works is in the municipality itself.

Mr. Deans: Is that for private residential or what?

Hon. Mr. Lawrence: Private residential homes don't fall within that formula.

Mr. Deans: What is the formula?

May I ask one supplementary question. Isn't it a fact that the emergency diking mentioned last evening by the minister's colleague from Lincoln (Mr. Welch), which does fall within the 80-20 formula, is applicable to private homes?

Hon. Mr. Lawrence: Yes, Mr. Speaker, full-time residential private homes. So in those cases—I've had a couple of calls—I hope that we can initiate municipal activity. If not, we'll simply have to see if there is some way of short-circuiting that programme. The member will just have to leave it until we see how serious it is.

Mr. Deans: One final supplementary question: What possible difference does it make who puts up the 20 per cent? Surely if there are citizens who have the 20 per cent to put up and want to safeguard their properties, it should make no difference to the ministry whether that money comes directly from them or out of municipal coffers.

Hon. Mr. Lawrence: Except from the administrative point of view, I think I'd have to agree. From the administrative point of view, it was put together as a package, if the member will recall. If that particular form or part of the package has to be isolated, I can only repeat what I said earlier, we'll have to assess its severity and see if we can develop a way around it.

Mr. Deans: Don't wait until they are flooded out, please.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Windsor-Walkerville.

LABOUR DISPUTE AT DAAL PLASTICS

Mr. B. Newman (Windsor-Walkerville): Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Minister of Labour. In light of the recent unsuccessful mediation between Daal Plastics in Windsor and Local 195, and in light of the fact that Daal Plastics had signified their intention of closing their operation in Windsor, will the minister attempt to get the two parties involved together in an attempt to resolve the issue?

Hon. Mr. Guindon: Mr. Speaker, I will take this question under advisement.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Port Arthur.

OIL SPILL IN KAMINISTIKWIA RIVER

Mr. J. F. Foulds (Port Arthur): Thank you, Mr. Speaker. A question of the Minister of the Environment: Could the minister tell this House if his ministry has yet discovered the source of the 30,000-gallon oil spill in the Kaministikwia River in Thunder Bay?

Hon. Mr. Auld: Mr. Speaker, I haven't a final report on this. As I recall, the CPR have been doing some alterations and removing of buildings and wharves adjacent to their yards on the Kaministikwia River. Apparently this spill came to light when some of the structures were removed.

What we aren't aware of is whether it has been leaking for some time or it is just a leak caused by the demolition of some of these works. Further inquiries and investigation are going on at the moment, as I understand it, to see if we can locate (a) the source, and (b) the length of time that this oil has been escaping. As I recall, it is diesel fuel oil which is very difficult to get out of the river.

Mr. Stokes: Surely they should know where 30,000 gallons of oil came from.

Hon. Mr. Auld: I think the estimate of 30,000 gallons is just that. That may or may not be an accurate figure.

Mr. Foulds: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: Supplementary. The hon. member for Port Arthur.

Mr. Foulds: As one of the minister's regional engineers has been quoted in the press in Thunder Bay as saying that the escape—

Mr. Speaker: Will the hon. member please direct his question?

Mr. Foulds: —has been taking place for 20 years, does the minister not agree that his report should be up to date? What has taken the ministry so long to determine the source if it has been going on for 20 years?

Hon. Mr. Auld: Mr. Speaker, no one was aware that it was going on until very recently.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Downsview.

SCHOOL BUDGETS

Mr. V. M. Singer (Downsview): Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have a question of the Minister of Education.

In view of the very strong protest expressed by some 7,000 ratepayers and home and school members in the borough of North York yesterday, in relation to the very difficult budgeting situation in which the North York Board of Education finds itself—namely, that some $6 million will have to be cut from their estimates which will involve the firing or letting go of 600 teachers—is the Minister of Education prepared to do anything for the borough of North York to allow it to conduct a reasonable education system within the confines of that borough?

Hon. T. L. Wells (Minister of Education): Mr. Speaker, I think I should say first that if the hon. member assumes that the 7,000 people who are reported as being at those meetings were all opposed to the ceilings, of course this is a false assumption.

Mr. Singer: Well, at the meeting I was at, 500 were opposed.

Hon. Mr. Wells: Seven thousands people attended, but I have received phone calls from people who indicated that some kind of a snow job was attempted on the people there, intelligent adults.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order.

Hon. Mr. Wells: The fact of the matter is that within the ceilings that are presently available it is possible to have an adequate quality education system.

Mr. Cassidy: It is always better than Tanganyika.

Hon. Mr. Wells: But, as the hon. member knows, I am meeting today with the Metropolitan Toronto school boards and some other school boards; I am going to listen to what they have to say, and I'll have a few things to say after that meeting.

Mr. Cassidy: We are still ahead of Alabama as well.

Mr. Singer: Mr. Speaker, by way of supplementary, does the minister believe it is an advance in the educational system if the North York Board of Education has to let go 600 teachers who are already hired?

An hon. member: It may very well be.

Hon. Mr. Wells: Mr. Speaker, I would say that I have never seen, and I don't think any of my staff have ever seen, a definite concrete 1973 school board budget for any of the Metropolitan Toronto school boards. It is all talk at this point in time.

Mr. Singer: The minister will see it!

Mr. Speaker: Supplementary?

Mr. D. M. Deacon (York Centre): Supplementary—

Mr. Speaker: I'll permit one supplementary.

Mr. Deacon: Would the minister consider making the grants unconditional to the North York board and leaving to the discretion of the board and local autonomy the decision as to how much they might wish to raise locally and spend, above the minister's estimate of what is required?

Hon. Mr. Wells: Mr. Speaker, that is the present policy of this government.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Nickel Belt.

SUDBURY HOUSING INVESTIGATION

Mr. F. Laughren (Nickel Belt): I have a question of the Provincial Secretary for Justice, Mr. Speaker.

In view of the fact that no ministry of the government has involved itself in the affairs of the Ross A. Shouldice subdivision in Chelmsford, and since this lack of involvement by the government has led to the absurdity of a $272,800 lawsuit against individual homeowners, would the Provincial Secretary for Justice direct that a full inquiry be held into the affairs in the subdivision and, further, that the terms of reference for such an inquiry include the fundraising activities of Ross Shouldice for the Conservative Party of Ontario?

Hon. G. A. Kerr (Provincial Secretary for Justice): Mr. Speaker, I would be happy to discuss the hon. member's question with the Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. Minister of Government Services has the answer to a question previously asked.

FURNITURE SUPPLIES TO GOVERNMENT

Hon. J. W. Snow (Minister of Government Services): Mr. Speaker, yesterday the hon. member for Rainy River (Mr. Reid) requested information concerning a statement on page 49 of the Provincial Auditor's report dealing with the purchase of furniture and equipment from one supplier and its affiliated companies.

Mr. Speaker, this was general comment in the auditor's report and was not specifically directed, I believe, at any ministry. The auditor certainly has not reported to me his findings relating to this matter.

I can only suggest that if the hon. member desires to pursue this matter further and requests more information on the subject, he can probably arrange to have the auditor provide the information at a meeting of the public accounts committee. I can only inform him of what I am aware of. I have no information from the auditor, and there's been no report to me relating to anything pertaining to my ministry. Whether this refers to my ministry or not, I cannot say.

I might inform the hon. member that Management Board recently approved a new furniture standards catalogue; this, together with our improved purchasing procedures, I hope, will go a long way toward avoiding any possibility of irregularities in the purchase of furniture in the future. This is a guideline catalogue to create a standard, and all purchases are to be made by public tender. I have a copy of the catalogue here which I will be glad to send over to the hon. member.

Mr. T. P. Reid (Rainy River): Supplementary, Mr. Speaker, if I may: Has the minister made any attempt to find out why one company seems to have a monopoly in supplying furniture and equipment to the government? Has the minister made any attempt to contact the Provincial Auditor to find out what he meant when he said they had discovered some things of interest? Thirdly, does the minister not feel that one company being in a position to supply this kind of furniture and equipment, is not leaving the old system open to some kind of graft and corruption, and indeed this seems to be what the auditor's hinting at?

Hon. Mr. Snow: There are three or four questions there, I believe, Mr. Speaker. I'll try to remember them. First of all, yes, I did contact the Provincial Auditor, but was not able to get any additional information regarding this particular paragraph as it apparently did not particularly pertain to my ministry and is something that will be dealt with at the public accounts committee.

The other statements or suggestions made by the hon. member are completely erroneous, because this is one of the many suppliers of equipment, or office furniture. I read that paragraph several times and there is nothing to suggest that this company is the one and only supplier by any means.

Mr. Reid: The auditor's wrong then? The auditor's statement—

Hon. Mr. Snow: With due respect, Mr. Speaker, the auditor's statement in no way says that this is the one and only supplier. It says that it is one supplier and its affiliates. I can only speak regarding the last 13 or 14 months since I've been minister, but when we call tenders for the purchase of furniture it is normal that we may get eight, 10 or 12 bids for the supply of most items of furniture and the contracts are invariably spread around, because it's very seldom that one firm would be low bidder on numerous contracts.

Mr. Reid: A supplementary—

Mr. Speaker: I think anything further on this would be superfluous.

The hon. member for Huron-Bruce.

STUDENT AWARDS PROGRAMME

Mr. M. Gaunt (Huron-Bruce): Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Minister of Colleges and Universities. How much money is at present owed on the student awards programme and how much of this money does the government expect to recover?

Mr. Foulds: Read the morning Globe and Mail.

Mr. Gaunt: I read it.

Hon. Mr. Kerr: Then he has the answer.

Hon. J. McNie (Minister of Colleges and Universities): Mr. Speaker, obviously I can't give the figures offhand, but I'd be glad to report to the hon. member tomorrow.

Mr. E. R. Good (Waterloo North): Two hundred and seventy-five thousand dollars.

Mr. Gaunt: A supplementary, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Huron-Bruce has a supplementary.

Mr. Gaunt: In Saturday's edition of the London Free Press it was indicated that 35 per cent of this money would be recovered—

Mr. Speaker: This, of course, is a statement. Is there a question?

Mr. Gaunt: I'm coming to my question.

Mr. Speaker: The question should be first.

Mr. Gaunt: Does the Speaker want my question first? I'll rephrase it.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member has the privilege of asking a question, not making a statement.

Mr. Gaunt: Is that an accurate estimate?

Hon. Mr. McNie: Would the hon. member rephrase his question, please?

Mr. Gaunt: Is a 35 per cent recovery rate of that money owing on the student awards programme an accurate estimate?

Hon. Mr. McNie: Mr. Speaker, I hope we'll do much better than that.

Mr. A. J. Roy (Ottawa East): Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary.

Mr. Speaker: Yes, I will permit the member's supplementary.

Mr. Roy: Mr. Speaker, the supplementary is this: Does the minister realize that many of the collections that he is attempting to get under way and the actions that he is attempting to take in court are, in fact, past the six-year limitation period under our laws and that he may well be out of time, because according to reports some of these loans are in default for seven years?

Hon. Mr. McNie: Mr. Speaker, the member referred to the money we are collecting. I presume he is talking about the government, through the collection agency.

Mr. Roy: Right.

Hon. Mr. McNie: I am aware of the fact that a great many of these go back to the very early days when the provincial government, not the federal government, was making loans and I would hardly think that they were not collectable for that reason. But I'll be interested in finding out if that's so. I would think that Mr. Spence would have made note of this in his very, very careful analysis of the budget.

Mr. Speaker: Does the hon. member for Hamilton Mountain have a question?

GRANT TO McMASTER UNIVERSITY

Mr. J. R. Smith (Hamilton Mountain): Yes, Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Minister of Colleges and Universities. Would the minister please explain how, in view of the cutbacks, a grant of half a million dollars has been appropriated to McMaster University for the renovation of Hamilton Hall to include, according to the McMaster News, a day hotel, which will be a place where students may shower or lie down and rest briefly during the day—

Mr. Speaker: What is the question? This is a statement.

Mr. J. R. Smith: —and which has previously not been available for students living off campus, and for the relocation of the two pubs on the university as well as other commercial space?

Hon. Mr. McNie: Mr. Speaker, I can say with absolute certainty that there are no grants to McMaster University for funds to build the facilities he's talking about under the current moratorium.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Sandwich-Riverside.

GOVERNMENT ACTION AGAINST DOW CHEMICAL

Mr. F. A. Burr (Sandwich-Riverside): Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Minister of the Environment regarding the Ontario government's suit, announced in March, 1971, against Dow on behalf of the fishermen. Is it true that the government has not yet filed suit?

Hon. Mr. Auld: Mr. Speaker, I think the hon. member should properly direct that question to the Attorney General (Mr. Bales), who is in charge of the legal action. I know that there has been some delay because counsel for the province—

Mr. Singer: Yes, there has been.

Mr. Cassidy: Some delay! It is two years.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Auld: —was appointed to the bench by the government of Canada and a new counsel had to be briefed. But perhaps the Attorney General could give the hon. members—

Mr. J. R. Breithaupt (Kitchener): What is the policy?

Mr. Cassidy: What did they give to the government's campaign funds?

Mr. Singer: We'll fix 'em.

Mr. Cassidy: How much did Dow contribute?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Hon. Mr. Auld: —a detailed statement as to where the action stands at the moment.

Mr. Singer: Yes, that will be interesting.

Mr. Burr: Mr. Speaker, may I redirect that question?

Mr. Speaker: I'm sorry, I didn't hear the complete response?

Mr. Burr: May I redirect the question to the Attorney General?

Mr. Speaker: All right.

Mr. Singer: Try the Provincial Secretary for Justice.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order. I'm sorry I couldn't hear the hon. member. Perhaps he'd like to take the floor and repeat what he said.

Mr. Burr: Mr. Speaker, I couldn't hear myself. I think I was asking for permission to redirect the question to the Provincial Secretary for Justice.

Mr. Good: Let's hear from him.

Hon. Mr. Kerr: Mr. Speaker, as the Minister for the Environment has indicated, there has been some problem as far as counsel is concerned.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Kerr: As the hon. members may now know, one Charles Dubin, QC, was engaged by the government to prosecute its case against Dow.

Mr. Singer: Prosecute the case? Is it a criminal charge or a civil action?

Hon. Mr. Kerr: I'm sorry, to carry the action against the defendant Dow. Certain proceedings have been taken.

Mr. Singer: That is better.

Hon. Mr. Kerr: Certain motions and hearings have been held. Then, as the hon. members know, Mr. Dubin was appointed to the bench and, therefore, had to resign that particular assignment. Subsequent to that, it again was necessary to engage counsel, as the hon. members appreciate. It was important that the Attorney General retain good counsel. After some weeks of delay we have now—

Mr. Singer: Oh, of course! It certainly needs good counsel for that case.

Mr. E. W. Martel (Sudbury East): The minister means if he waits long enough the problem will go away.

Mr. Speaker: Order.

Hon. Mr. Kerr: No, that isn't our intention, unless the member means the mercury. We have now engaged John Robinette who, I think the hon. members will agree, is a good counsel.

Mr. Deans: Isn't he in line for a judgeship?

Hon. Mr. Kerr: The matter is now in good hands and is proceeding.

Mr. Singer: Mr. Speaker, by way of supplementary, could the Provincial Secretary for Justice tell us if there has been a statement of claim filed and served? Has there been a statement of defence filed and served?

Hon. Mr. Kerr: I cannot answer that question. That question should be referred to the Attorney General, but I think there has been.

Mr. Singer: No, of course not. I don't expect that. It would be too much.

Hon. Mr. Kerr: I think there has been.

Mr. Singer: Oh, the minister thinks so.

Mr. Reid: Would the minister find out for us?

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for London North.

PAY INCREASE FOR CORONERS

Mr. G. W. Walker (London North): Mr. Speaker, my question is of the Solicitor General and involves the coroners.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Walker: Could the Solicitor General inform us when the coroners will get a raise in pay?

Mr. Roy: An increase for the coroners?

Mr. Foulds: There is going to be an inquest into it.

Hon. J. Yaremko (Solicitor General): Mr. Speaker, it had been my hope that when the new Act is proclaimed in the very near future, at the same time the regulations would contain a change in the fee schedule. However, in light of the financial constraints which have been imposed upon many sectors of provincial activity, this will not be possible. It's a matter of regret to me, because I must in all honesty say that the coroners have made out an extremely good case. It has been some considerable number of years since they have had any adjustment.

As soon as there is any indication that financial constraints are over, it is my intention, in any event, I assure the hon. member, to pursue the matter because within the ministry the long overdue increase has high priority. I appreciate the fact that a number of—

Mr. Speaker: Order! Order!

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Yaremko: Are you calling the members of the opposition to order, Mr. Speaker?

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Yaremko: I would hope that in the meantime the coroners would carry on their traditional excellent service.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I had doubts that the original question was one of urgent public importance. Therefore I shall not allow any supplementaries.

The member for Essex South.

ODC LOANS QUALIFICATIONS

Mr. D. A. Paterson (Essex South): A question of the Minister of Industry and Tourism: Is the minister planning to make changes in the terms of reference of the qualifications for Ontario Development Corp. loans to include basic food canning and packaging for firms in that business? Secondly, would the minister not agree, at a time when there should possibly be some levelling in the escalating cost of foods, that a change of this nature would be beneficial both to the farmers and to the public in general?

Hon. C. Bennett (Minister of Industry and Tourism): Mr. Speaker, in regard to the first question, the terms of reference are being reviewed at the moment by the Ontario Development Corp. They will be broadened considerably to take into account all industries which are either operating in the province at the moment or would like to operate in the province. The guidelines and the new policies will be brought to this House, I would hope, within the next week or two so that the House will be completely informed of the extensive changes that we are making to both Ontario and Northern Ontario Development Corp.

Mr. Paterson: Could I ask a supplementary, Mr. Speaker? Has the ministry been in touch with the Ministry of Agriculture and Food specifically in relation to that particular industry?

Hon. Mr. Bennett: Mr. Speaker, a simple answer to that is yes, we have.

Mr. Speaker: The member for Yorkview.

PENALTY FOR MISSING ASSESSMENT DEADLINE

Mr. F. Young (Yorkview): Mr. Speaker, a question of the Minister of Revenue: Is the minister planning an amendment to the Assessment Act to provide a penalty for telephone and telegraph companies which fail to meet the March 1 deadline for reporting their gross receipts to the assessment commission of each municipality in which the company does business?

Hon. A. Grossman (Minister of Revenue): Mr. Speaker, if, as and when an amendment is decided upon by the government, the member and all the members of this House, of course, will be informed in due course.

Interjection by an hon. member.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: It's a matter of government policy. When government policy is made on this matter this House will be first to know.

Mr. Reid: The minister forgot his last line.

Mr. W. Ferrier (Cochrane South): Doesn't the minister recognize the need for a change?

Mr. Young: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker: Surely the minister understands the pressing need of this so that municipalities can set their tax rates for the current year?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: I assure the hon. member that whatever is required in this respect will be attended to.

Mr. D. C. MacDonald (York South): A supplementary question to the minister: What conceivable excuse was there for not putting in a penalty in the first instance? Why this kindness in certain areas?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: The question, Mr. Speaker, is a rhetorical question. I don't know how to answer it.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: No, no!

Mr. Good: The minister hasn't got a clue what it's all about.

An hon. member: That's terrible.

Mr. Speaker: The member for York Centre.

POLICE SEIZURE OF COMPANY'S BOOKS

Mr. Deacon: A question of the Minister of Industry and Tourism: Is the minister aware of why the police recently seized the records and books of Disney Display with which, according to the public accounts, his ministry did over 90 per cent of its display business last year?

Hon. Mr. Bennett: Mr. Speaker, I am not aware of it but I'll take the question under advisement.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Windsor West.

Mr. E. J. Bounsall (Windsor West): A question of the Minister of Natural Resources, who isn't quite out of the chamber yet.

Mr. Ferrier: Come on back!

ALLEGED USE OF STRIKEBREAKERS

Mr. Bounsall: Will the Minister of Natural Resources explain why the Ontario provincial parks folder was folded last week by strikebreakers at Brooker Trade Bindery, especially since he assured Mr. Charles Buhler, the president of the International Brotherhood of Bookbinders, in a letter last May that he, the minister, would, in placing orders in the future through his ministry or through subcontractors, take into account the strike situation at that firm?

Hon. L. Bernier (Minister of Natural Resources): Mr. Speaker, I don't have the details of that particular matter before me, but I will get them and will report to the House and to the member.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for York-Forest Hill.

UNIFORM BUILDING AND FIRE CODES

Mr. P. G. Givens (York-Forest Hill): I would like to ask the Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations, whom we welcome back today. After so many years of study, does the minister not intend to introduce into this session a uniform building code and a uniform fire code to apply to all the municipalities across the province; and if not why not?

Hon. J. T. Clement (Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations): Well firstly, I thank the member for his kind words of welcome. I didn't realize he missed me that much.

Mr. Givens: We missed the minister.

An hon. member: He hasn't been here that much.

Hon. Mr. Clement: Secondly, the matter is currently before the municipal liaison committee for advice. Because of the very nature of the proposed legislation it must be co-ordinated with the municipalities across the province.

Mr. Singer: It then goes to a task force, then a select committee.

Hon. Mr. Clement: At the same time, I am aware that the federal government has made mention in the press of introducing legislation of a similar nature across Canada. However, I do hope to have our legislation ready for introduction into the House this session.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: What—the board or the legislation?

Hon. Mr. Clement: The legislation.

Mr. Speaker: We have about 50 seconds left. The hon. member for High Park.

REQUEST FOR INTERPOL HELP

Mr. M. Shulman (High Park): Mr. Speaker, a question of the Solicitor General: In view of the fact that Mr. J. J. Richards, the former Conservative candidate in Riverdale, has now fled from Canada after being caught by the Toronto police carrying out a massive vote fraud, will the minister request the police to ask Interpol to locate and pick up his associate?

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Yaremko: Mr. Speaker, this is a police matter and I have no doubt that the police are giving it the attention it deserves.

Mr. MacDonald: The minister is not pushing the matter with vigour, I take it.

Mr. Speaker: The oral question period has expired.

Petitions.

Presenting reports.

Mr. Maeck, from the standing regulations committee, presented the committee's report, which was read as follows and adopted:

Your committee recommends to the Legislature that, in view of the committee's limited statutory power, regulations be referred to the committee from time to time for review and examination of their merits.

Mr. Young: Mr. Speaker, is it possible to offer an amendment to that report at this time?

Mr. Speaker: There is no motion before the House, I would point out to the hon. member.

Mr. Young: Mr. Speaker, I would like to speak to the report, if I might.

Mr. Speaker: I wonder—order please!

There seem to be a great number of conversations taking place in the chamber which makes it very difficult to hear the hon. members who are attempting to address the Chair.

Perhaps we could have a little more silence, please!

The hon. member for Yorkview.

Mr. Young: Mr. Speaker, the regulations committee met this morning, and at the meeting of the committee a decision was reached that by and large the terms of reference for that committee are without meaning, because all we can do is determine whether the regulations that are set forth are four-square within the terms set out by the Regulations Act.

We felt that there is very little for us to do in that respect, because the legal brains of the government have already determined that, and in their wisdom they have said that they are within those terms. Mr. Speaker, we felt that we should have something more to do than simply make that determination. So we would like, as the words say, to have the House refer to us regulations to be discussed on their merits rather than simply on their technicality.

However, during the discussion in the committee the majority of the committee felt that this resolution, this report, should be placed before the House; but my feeling, and the feeling of some of us, is that unless that business is referred to the House prior to gazetting it is again an exercise in futility.

An hon. member: Hear, hear!

Mr. Young: So our feeling is, and we want to register that feeling, that unless the regulations are referred to the committee before they appear in the Gazette, it is useless, because once they appear in the Gazette they are regulations.

The Gazette goes out, and the authorities concerned with enforcing those regulations know about them and start the wheels in motion to enforce them as they appear in the Gazette. After that it is useless for us to discuss them.

So I register that protest, Mr. Speaker, and point out to the House that unless this change is made it is a useless exercise for the committee.

Mr. Speaker: Of course, the comments of the hon. member are entirely out of order at this time. There is nothing out of order in connection with the proceedings in the House.

I have permitted him to make his point, but there is no motion before the House so there can be no debate.

Motions.

Hon. Mr. Winkler moves that commencing tomorrow and until further order the House will not sit in the chamber on Wednesdays, such Wednesdays being reserved for meetings of the standing and select committees.

Motion agreed to.

Mr. Speaker: Introduction of bills.

COMPANIA SHELL DE VENEZUELA LTD. ACT

Mr. MacBeth moves first reading of bill intituled, An Act respecting Compania Shell de Venezuela Ltd.

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

BEDS OF NAVIGABLE WATERS ACT

Mr. Haggerty moves first reading of bill intituled, An Act to amend the Beds of Navigable Waters Act.

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

Mr. R. Haggerty (Welland South): Mr. Speaker, the purpose of the bill is to provide a uniform interpretation of the deeds of property bounded by navigable waters, so that the high water mark shall be deemed to be the boundary of such property.

Mr. J. A. Renwick (Riverdale): Mr. Speaker, we have no comment on the bill.

Mr. Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak to the bill? The minister.

Hon. J. T. Clement (Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations): Mr. Speaker, I'm grateful to both opposition members who've spoken. The legislation does speak for itself and I don't think I have any other comments to add at this time. We'll transfer it, as has been pointed out, to the Ministry of Community and Social Services, and it will be a counselling service under this legislation.

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

Mr. Speaker: Shall the bill be ordered for third reading?

Agreed.

APPRENTICESHIP AND TRADESMEN'S QUALIFICATION ACT

Mr. Drea moves first reading of bill intituled, An Act to amend the Apprenticeship and Tradesmen's Qualification Act.

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

Mr. F. Drea (Scarborough Centre): Mr. Speaker, the bill provides for the revocation of a motor mechanic's certificate when the person holding that certificate is found guilty of falsifying the certificate of mechanical fitness under section 58 of the Highway Traffic Act.

Mr. Speaker: Orders of the day.

COLLECTION AGENCIES ACT

Hon. Mr. Clement moves second reading of Bill 10, An Act to amend the Collection Agencies Act.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for York Centre.

Mr. Deacon: Mr. Speaker, again we support this bill bringing the credit unions under this legislation. It makes sense under the present approach to collection agencies in this province.

Mr. Renwick: Mr. Speaker, we agree with the exception of the credit unions from the provision of the Collection Agencies Act.

Mr. Speaker: Does any other hon. member wish to enter the debate? The member for Lakeshore.

CONSUMER PROTECTION BUREAU ACT

Hon. Mr. Clement moves second reading of Bill 9, An Act to amend the Consumer Protection Bureau Act.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for York Centre.

Mr. D. M. Deacon (York Centre): I'm glad to see this bill brought in to confirm the action taken last year to shift this responsibility to the Ministry of Community and Social Services. In fact, even the title of the bill is misleading. It's been more of a counselling service with regard to consumer credit in the past. Certainly, by bringing it into the area of the other department this bill, in effect, cancels the present Act and makes a lot of sense. We support the bill.

Mr. P. D. Lawlor (Lakeshore): I have no particular comment except to expedite the work of the House and in committee. I notice two entities are excluded from the operations of the collection agencies—that is the business of collecting debts. Has it been, I wonder, up to this time deemed that the credit unions do fall within the scope and dimensions of the Act? As I read the section involved, there are numerous exclusions to the bill, ranging from lawyers to bankers; up to this time, have the credit unions thought themselves to be compromised or, in some way, caught within the terms of the Act?

Mr. Speaker: Does any other member wish to enter the debate?

The member for Scarborough Centre.

Mr. Drea: Mr. Speaker, I would like to point out that while I endorse the principle, anything dealing with any type of counselling for credit purposes or what we used to call debt counselling services in this province, has been treated with monumental disinterest by this government.

I would certainly hope that now this procedure is being put into the appropriate ministry—which, as a matter of fact, is the third one it has been in since 1967—the minister who is receiving these powers for the first time will take a sympathetic interest in the problems faced by organizations, both volunteer and professional, trying to do something about what is becoming a very imposing problem in our society.

Mr. Speaker: Does the hon. minister have any comments?

Hon. Mr. Clement: The only comment I have with reference to this particular bill, Mr. Speaker, is related to the inquiry raised by the hon. member for Lakeshore. I understand that a number of credit unions do their own collecting rather than place it in the hands of a collection bureau or a solicitor; representations were made to this effect, and accordingly this amendment was introduced into the House in this form. That's the only explanation that I am aware of.

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

Mr. Speaker: Shall the bill be ordered for third reading?

Agreed.

SECURITIES ACT

Hon. Mr. Clement moves second reading of Bill 15, An Act to amend the Securities Act.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for York Centre.

Mr. Deacon: Mr. Speaker, in principle we support this bill, because in effect it ensures that an order of the director stands, even though an appeal is lodged. It protects the public from a practice that the director might object to and may order ceased; in other words, the director's power continues to be effective until such time as an appeal is heard and the order is confirmed or reversed.

I do want to take this opportunity, Mr. Speaker, to object to the present powers and role of the Securities Commission in regard to being the investigator, being the one that calls evidence, the holding of non-public hearings, and being in the position of being judge—

Mr. Renwick: Order.

Mr. Speaker: I am attempting to get a copy of the bill so I can determine in fact if it is in order.

Mr. Deacon: —and executioner of all actions within this industry. It is the only place in this province where we seem to ignore simple justice. And I hope that this minister, when he confers powers like this upon the director, will also recognize the tremendous conflict of interest that prevails in the Securities Commission as it is now structured.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Riverdale.

Mr. Renwick: Mr. Speaker, this is a reversal of the normal procedure in most court proceedings which would indicate that when a matter is under appeal, the person continues free to carry on the activity which is the subject matter of the appeal. Indeed, we have a very clear example of that at the present time in Ross and the registrar of motor vehicles, where the Ministry of Transportation and Communications still acts as though that section of the Highway Traffic Act were in full force and suspends licences.

I point this out because it is a substantial change in procedure, even though there is added to this provision, that the decision will come into effect when it is made regardless of whether a review or appeal is taken from it, an extra step where that decision can be appealed itself and perhaps a reversal obtained of the decision.

Now it must be that there was a particular evil at which the minister wished to cure when he introduced this legislation. I think we should have a very considered statement by the minister before we reverse such an accepted practice in other judicial proceedings.

One can readily make the point that the member for York Centre has made: "Oh well, here's a situation where the public good requires that the decision of the director come immediately into force and remain in force, regardless of the fact that a review or appeal is taken, unless that question itself is decided by an intermediate body." We are obviously proliferating the procedures which now have to be taken by any person who is affected by a decision of the director.

I perhaps thought when I first read the bill that it did seem to make sense, that there was a public interest involved in it and that the private interest must give way to it. But there are many questions—legitimate questions—of law and fact which arise, leading to a decision of a director which can, in fact, be in good faith disputed. Perhaps this should not be prohibited during the period that the matter is under review.

I suppose that the commission has brought to the attention of the minister certain specific glaring instances where the device of asking for a review or an appeal was used for the purpose of abusing the public interest. If that was so and the minister so states, we can see no difficulty in agreeing with the principle that is set out in the bill. But in the absence of such a statement, it would appear to us that the power of the director, being as broadly stated as it is in the statute, would appear to us not to require that it be of that overwhelming weight that the moment the decision is made that that decision should stand, regardless of whether or not an appeal is taken from it.

I again emphasize that the minister has provided that the order will remain in effect and that decision can be stayed by a proper application, but the reversal of a principle such as that cannot necessarily be answered by adding an additional appeal procedure. I hope the minister, when he speaks to this bill, would direct his statement to the point which I have raised about it.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Lakeshore.

Mr. Lawlor: Mr. Speaker, I would have thought that in matters of securities legislation, particularly when the crunch comes and movement must be made with respect to stop orders, or with respect to the operation of the market itself in particular shares, that some immediacy or impact would be found, as has in the past been found necessary. Up to a point it would seem again, with the peculiarities of the exchange and with the securities market, that hasn't been applicable and it was found necessary and beneficial to introduce such a motivation into the present legislation.

I accord with my colleague in wanting that fact affirmed. What other reason would there be for the legislation itself?

I note that it is rendered somewhat innocuous by the very fact that the commission itself, overriding the director, or entering into the picture by way of an application, has the power to grant the stay. That's fairly close to the chest.

Of course, if that was exercised arbitrarily in any way, they would still be subject to the procedures of the civil rights legislation we passed in this House and to review again by the divisional court.

Then, on the second level of the appeal, in section 2 of this legislation, if the commission itself won't move, then a direct move may be made by way of an application or motion before the divisional court to grant this stay in certain circumstances.

I notice that the legislation has a certain exquisiteness about it, in portending against possible difficulties that may arise. I want to commend the minister and the drafters of the legislation in making specific reference and note of the changes and circumstances in an ongoing relationship with respect to the marketing of shares; it may be halted, or the commission may grant a stay and permit the ongoing relationship with the public. But a slight alteration in the motivation, in the way it is proceeded with, in the context of the shareholdings—any number of things can arise—and the commission then may re-enter the picture, place the stop order on by saying there has been a reorientation of the situation. First of all, perhaps new material has been supplied which gives ground for second thought in the reimposition of the stay—or rather the imposition of the order as it was originally—or there is sufficient alteration in circumstances that would bring about and make necessary, make highly beneficial to the public, the imposition of an order which would be a brand new order.

And even if the matter were before the divisional court, an unscrupulous operator would be stopped if he were seeking to masquerade under the fact that he had obtained a stay. He would nevertheless be hit by the new order that would come into effect and act as a prohibitive move to the marketing of these shares.

Mr. Speaker: Any other member wish to participate? If not, the hon. minister.

Hon. Mr. Clement: Mr. Speaker, the bill is indeed an important one and I was hopeful that we could go right through and have it become effective as soon as possible. The problems are very obvious as to what could occur if this legislation does not have third reading and royal assent almost immediately.

As I understand the Statutory Powers Procedure Act, the Securities Commission was exempt from the provisions of that Act until April 17, 1973; and I refer my learned colleagues to section 25, subsection 1 of the Statutory Power Act of 1971, which reads as follows:

Unless it is expressly provided to the contrary in the Act under which the proceedings arise, an appeal from a decision of a tribunal to a court or other appellate tribunal operates as a stay in the matter, except where the tribunal or the court, or other body to which the appeal is taken, otherwise orders.

This requirement, Mr. Speaker, would effectively frustrate the Ontario Securities Commission on many occasions, since through launching an appeal, a cease trading order, for example, would be automatically stayed until such time as the appeal was heard.

In the interests of the public, this situation cannot be allowed to continue; because the person making the appeal—the appellant—may well not intend to proceed to perfect his appeal, but might take advantage of this as a method of continuing to offer in the market shares which are not in the best interests of the public; and in fact, it may be almost a fraud they are attempting to practise on the public, which gave rise to the original hearing.

That is the rationale behind it. As I understand the Statutory Powers Procedure Act, that is why we must have this particular amendment. Certain safeguards have been built in and I am sure my friends—they have already made mention of them—agree with those safeguards being there.

If, for example, the commission was in error or acting with malice—or any of those other things that hopefully it would not demonstrate—but should one of those things rise to the surface, then the person against whom the order has been made has the right, of course, to proceed before a court in order to have the stay order lifted. It then would be up to that person to demonstrate to the court that an error mala fides, or something of that nature, was demonstrated by the commission. Again I repeat and urge the House to appreciate the urgency of this legislation in order that no frauds or infringements of the securities legislation can continue. The interest of the public, I submit with the greatest respect, certainly far outweighs the interest of any individual promotor or developer. But I do point out to the House once again that we think the safeguards are legiti-mate and we think that they are obviously necessary.

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

Mr. Speaker: Shall this bill be ordered for third reading?

Agreed.

CERTIFICATION OF TITLES ACT

Hon. Mr. Clement moves second reading of Bill 16, An Act to amend the Certification of Titles Act.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Lakeshore.

Mr. Lawlor: I have a comment or two to make on these funds that are placed aside, basically trust funds under the terms of the Land Titles Act and the Certification of Titles Act. Since they're guaranteed, of course, all these titles must be guaranteed by the government, by the Office of Land Titles. Then, if they make a mistake, they must rectify the same or have the wherewithal with which to do so.

I wanted to bring to the minister's attention that in this area and in the area of the sheriffs of the various counties there has been of recent date some resistance to claims made against these funds. I think maybe the land titles case is a bit different. The minister can perhaps straighten me out on it. The sheriff's office, for instance, on his funds and his bonding of funds, works through insurance companies which have indicated an unwillingness to meet the executions.

The sheriff has not vouchsafed to the person making application for them. In other words, the sheriff has made a mistake in his office. He has indicated that the title is clear. Then he subsequently learns that there is an execution, there has been some difficulty, of which the minister should be aware, in the sheriff's meeting that obligation—not through the sheriff, but through the insurance agencies that are supposedly standing behind him in these various contexts. This has come to my attention through the legal profession. I believe there is something mentioned in the same head with respect to the land titles funds which are supposedly available for this particular purpose.

I would like the minister, if he would take a moment out, to give me an indication of how the funds are handled here. As I recall it, there is a very small sum of money. It is not very great in terms of this government's funding. I would say $200,000. Is that money in a trust fund? Is it immediately available? Is it held by the government? In other words, is it part of the consolidated revenue of this province or is it earmarked for a specific purpose and set aside? If so, how is the interest derivable from these funds made available either to the fund itself or to the government as a whole? In other words, in short, how are the funds handled?

Mr. Speaker: Does any other member wish to participate in the debate? If not, the hon. minister. I doubt that the last comments actually pertain to the principle of this bill. However, if the minister wishes to answer, he may.

Mr. Lawlor: Dead on!

Hon. Mr. Clement: Mr. Speaker, in reply to the question directed by the hon. member for Lakeshore, as I understand it, there are approximately $1 million held in this fund, not $200,000. It fluctuates and it grows. It's held in a trust.

I understand that a substantial portion of the income earned is used for surveys throughout the province—that is, municipal surveys that are required and are by statute to be funded by the province. I made inquiries some months ago as to whether the amount being held in the fund was sufficient and it became almost academic, as I understood our discussion at that time, because if you set aside on an actuarial basis the sum required, there would be many, many millions—if not hundreds of millions—of dollars that would be sitting there earning income but not be available for the general revenues of the province.

As I understand it, as the fund does grow transfers are made out of it from time to time. It is kept somewhere in the neighbourhood of $1 million and the income is used for this municipal survey assistance.

I might add that no insurance company, of course, is involved with that particular fund. I believe that the member's question touched upon sheriffs having malpractice insurance, but there was no suggestion that this one was associated with or managed by any insurance company.

Mr. Lawlor: I wasn't sure of that, thank you.

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

Mr. Speaker: Shall this bill be ordered for third reading?

Agreed.

PARTNERSHIPS REGISTRATION ACT

Hon. Mr. Clement moves second reading of Bill 8, An Act to amend the Partnerships Registration Act.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Lakeshore.

Mr. Lawlor: I have only a few short comments and questions on this bill. I take it that what the minister is seeking to do under the legislation is basically to bring it into computerization; that he is removing from the various registry offices throughout the provinces the power of receiving partnership registrations of all kinds and is placing it within central registry.

I take it that this will be accomplished, in the minister's opinion, by Jan. 1, 1975, is it?—well, some date in about 18 months, I made a note of—and that the thing would operate by way of some kind of telecommunications system perhaps from local offices, legal offices of one kind or another, to a central registry.

I also take it that advice with respect to the full operation of partnerships, the names of the partners, the amounts of the contributions and whatever other information including addresses—which he has gone into here rather more thoroughly than has been the case up to now—would be available from this single, central computerized operation.

That seems to be the general purpose of the legislation, apart from making minor changes with respect to the registrar himself.

This, and the next following bill, which has to do with limited partnerships, seems to switch some of the control, some of the functions, over to the department of insurance and the supervisor of insurance. I find that rather curious as to these echelons of authority that are exercised and I hope it is not in any way supernumerary. I hope the minister is very cognizant of the fact that we have sufficient bureaucratic entanglements now within the filing registration system of the province, and I hope that this would be a streamlining rather than an added complication, which at this time I humbly see it as being, as this programme develops into the computerized future. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Riverdale.

Mr. Renwick: Mr. Speaker, I have only two comments. I have always failed to understand why the Partnerships Registration Act was limited to persons engaged in trading, manufacturing or mining, which is the provision he is re-enacting in one of the early sections of the bill, which states: "Persons associated in partnership for trading, manufacturing or mining purposes shall cause to be filed a declaration". The Limited Partnerships Act, with which we will be dealing in a few minutes, is much more broadly stated, at least it would appear to be so. It provides for:

Limited partnership for the transaction of any brokerage, financial, mercantile, mechanical, manufacturing, or other business in Ontario, except banking, the construction or operation of railways and the business of insurance.

Those, presumably, are excepted for constitutional reasons.

I would suggest to the minister that unless there is some very real reason the language should not conform between the two statutes he would give consideration to amending the Partnerships Registration Act to use the broader scope of language which is set out in the Limited Partnerships Act. It does not appear to me, when we have two statutes dealing with partnerships, that the requirements for filing should apply to a different set of circumstances under each of them, and lead to the question as to whether or not it should fall within one but not within the other Act.

The second one is a matter which I'm sure the minister can clear up but which I can't quite understand. That is why provision is now made that when a corporation files an annual return—or any number of corporations file annual returns—it is now not going to be necessary for corporations engaged in business, in partnership, to file under the Partnerships Registration Act. I think it is probably an oversight on my part but I don't understand that particular provision.

I would ask the minister to explain the reason if it is other than what must appear to be the case—that there is something in the Corporations Information Act which requires a disclosure with respect to the partnership arrangements of corporations among themselves.

I would ask for that explanation because otherwise it would appear to me that whether a partnership is made up of individuals or an individual and a corporation—in which case, as I understand it, it is subject to the Partnership Registration Act—the same provision should apply when all of the partners are corporations; or, if the sole proprietorship provisions are being used, the corporation should register under the Partnerships Registration Act as the sole proprietor if it is carrying on business under a name other than its incorporated name.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. minister.

Hon. Mr. Clement: Mr. Speaker, with reference to the inquiries raised by the member for Riverdale, firstly, it is my understanding that when all the partners are corporations it is mandatory each year, when filing under the Corporations Information Act, that they disclose the fact that they are carrying on business, or trading, mining or manufacturing under a name other than their own or indicate a plurality of membership and so forth. They must file that at that time.

By these two bills—and my remarks, I think, are pertinent to the Act we're discussing and, perhaps, with some tolerance from the Speaker, I'll just touch on the Limited Partnerships Act, too—the responsibility will be seized in the companies branch for very obvious reasons, one of them being the matter I have just touched upon.

The suggestion raised about the broadening from trading, mining or manufacturing referred to in the one statute and what would appear to be a rather broader description in the Limited Partnerships Act, is a matter that has not escaped the attention of the companies branch, so I'm advised by my staff. I believe that the member can rest assured that it will be enlarged in due course, perhaps even at this particular time. I do query it; I think a lot of these things are just traditional. We cite these matters of trading, mining or manufacturing and want them there and yet really the question is a very valid one in my mind. Why would it be restricted in the one Act to those three things while in the other it seems to be much broader? I don't want this construed, of course, as an undertaking on the part of this government, but as a personal wish on the part of this minister.

Mr. Renwick: Mr. Speaker, perhaps the minister would permit a question. I realize the minister would not want to make a statement without discussing it at length with his cabinet colleagues.

Mr. V. M. Singer (Downsview): No, the minister would not want to take a serious decision on to himself.

Hon. Mr. Clement: Not on something as earthshaking as that.

Mr. Renwick: But I do take it to mean that under the Corporations Information Act annual return, which requires a declaration by a corporation as to any other partnerships into which it may have entered, you can go to the companies information office at 555 Yonge St. and, by searching under the name of the partnership, find out the names of all the member corporations of that partnership? This is, of course, the case when you go to the registry office at the present time and search under the name of the partnership; you then find out who the partners of that partnership are.

Hon. Mr. Clement: Mr. Speaker, I don't think that can be done physically right now, but we hope to have that effective by Jan. 1, 1975, so that you can search at 555 Yonge St. for that very sort of thing.

Mr. Renwick: Then for a period of time it appears that one would not be able to make that kind of search in the Province of Ontario, because of the enactment of this provision?

Hon. Mr. Clement: I'll undertake to respond to that when I have definite advice, but that is my understanding as it exists right now.

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

Mr. Speaker: Shall this bill be ordered for third reading?

Agreed.

LIMITED PARTNERSHIPS ACT

Hon. Mr. Clement moves second reading of Bill 7, An Act to amend the Limited Partnerships Act.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for York Centre.

Mr. Deacon: Mr. Speaker, there are some features in this bill which we like. We like the matter of the amendment to provide for recording the place of service rather than place of residence, which makes sense. We like the matter of not requiring certification and the matter of clarifying the wording under section 12, so that it's more reasonable.

What we don't like in this bill is a further trend to having all our Acts made so insignificant that the power of the bureaucracy by regulations is really to provide and enforce legislation that they determine to be the right legislation, instead of giving to and leaving in this chamber the power to set the laws of this province.

Here we have in section 1 the removal of the forum so it's prescribed by regulation rather than by statute. We also have in a new clause (g) further information that is required according to regulation.

We have already had a report from the regulations committee of this Legislature today indicating how they are powerless at this time to do anything to intervene as elected members in very important aspects—in fact, the most important aspects—of the legislation we are supposed to have control over in this chamber.

We are therefore very much opposed to the changes in the Act to do with the regulations, but otherwise we do agree in principle with the improvements set out in this bill.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Riverdale.

Mr. Renwick: Mr. Speaker, I have just one comment. I've always been curious as to the extent to which this Act has been used in the Province of Ontario as a method of carrying on business. I must say that I have never had occasion to use it myself and I don't know of any of my colleagues who may have.

I know that in the State of New York some version of this is used for promoting theatrical shows and productions in order to preserve the limited liabilities of those who are participating in them. But I was just curious, now that we are dealing with this bill, as to whether the minister has any information of the number of limited partnerships which are presently registered in Ontario and how extensively it is used.

Hon. Mr. Clement: Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Speaker: Perhaps the hon. member for Lakeshore could make his remarks before the minister replies.

Hon. Mr. Clement: Oh, I'm sorry.

Mr. Lawlor: Mr. Speaker, the limited partnership concept is a curious bird, to start with. When corporations and individuals get together, some of them may have a general liability, each partner in the normal situation being responsible for all the debts of the partnership, whether acquired by him or not in the course of business, simply by reason of being within the partnership. It's a way whereby individuals may contribute funds to a partnership and keep themselves clean, being responsible only to the extent of the contributed funds and staying out of the arena of court proceedings for the acts of the partnership, perhaps done with the utilization of those funds.

I suppose it is a necessary device in contemporary business; I think it is an interesting question to know just how extensive the utilization of the limited concept is in this province. By and large, it is a fairly unpalatable notion. If people want to operate in this particular way, I would think that the limited company concept is the proper way in which to contribute funds; then we have built-in limited liability. But as a sort of limbo operation, like a Janus figure facing both ways, we have introduced and have in operation this particular beast of burden.

Rather than prolong the discussion with respect to driving it into committee, I would like the minister to tell me, if you will permit, Mr. Speaker, what the exceptions are in section 2 with reference to section 8(a) and section 15(a). I was tempted to look this up prior to coming into this House today, but encountered almost insuperable difficulties in running down the hare. I would like to know the nature of the exceptions that are written into that particular section.

Secondly, I would be interested in learning why these time limitations are set up. Up until this time, this kind of partnership would normally set its own termination of the partnership. Now it is mandatory within the legislation to set decisive times at which they run out and must be renewed.

They are fairly severe with respect to those in existence at the present time, because the cutoff date is the date in 1975; anything after that has a five-year duration. What is the rationale and purpose behind that, and wouldn't it have been simpler in a way simply to leave matters as they are at the present time under this particular legislation?

The only other matter that should have a bit of comment is the fact that the use made of a certification by a notary public, which is in the previous legislation, is being wiped out by this particular legislation. Again, I am not quite sure of the raison d'être of that move. Is it a matter of expediency? Is it awkward to have the certification of documents by a notary public? Just why did the minister delete the poor beggar?

Mr. Speaker: If no other member wishes to participate, the hon. minister.

Hon. Mr. Clement: Mr. Speaker, I personally have never drawn a limited partnership document, and I take it from the questions raised by the hon. member for Riverdale that perhaps he has had a similar lack of experience in dealing with limited partnerships. It's my understanding that at the present time in the Province of Ontario we have approximately 100 limited partnerships registered. The whole rationale behind this matter is that a select committee some six years ago brought in a recommendation for centralization of the storage and retrieving of information pertaining to partnerships so that one search could be done rather than a search by counties, as is the present practice, insofar as partnerships are concerned.

I am advised that once this legislation is approved, a partnership registration will be able to be conducted in Toronto or at the area registry office—the local registry office—as soon as the information is filed in Toronto; that is, the companies carrying on business in this form that are about to be incorporated over the next year or so. But that information will be available immediately it is filed; it will be available to the general public.

The five-year cutoff is really for the purpose of clearing out partnerships of one kind or another that perhaps became insolvent or, in fact, never operated. There are some 225,000 to 250,000 documents stored here in Toronto relating to partnerships and limited partnerships, many of which were prepared and registered prior to the turn of the century.

I would venture an opinion that a substantial number of those businesses are no longer carrying on business, or no longer active. The cost of rent of storage and preserving the documents is high. If they serve little or no purpose then I suggest that this may have been one of the reasons that the select committee in 1967 took the position it did in recommending the central registry. The renewal each five years will indicate that the partnership is in effect; that it is alive and the business is being carried on.

I am sure that the member for Lakeshore shares with me the concern that I have had in the past—and I am sure any practising lawyer has had—when someone comes in and wants to register a partnership and wants to make sure that no one else in the province is carrying on under this name. The physical cost of conducting a search in each and every county within the province would be prohibitive with time delays and other facts.

By having the central registry, and in effect carrying out the recommendations of the select committee of this House, then one search would produce the information required in order to answer clients.

Insofar as the exceptions are concerned, I didn't catch the gist of a question. I would be grateful, Mr. Speaker, if the member for Lakeshore would repeat his question dealing with exceptions.

Mr. Lawlor: Mr. Speaker, it's a substitution for sections 6 and 7 of the existing legislation. Since the provisions of partnership registration except section 8(a) and subsection 2 of section 15(a), which are subsequent to the 1970 consolidations, and the regulations thereunder, I want to know what those exceptions are? Generally the provisions of the partnership registration apply to the registration of documents; the forms that are used would be in accordance with that particular legislation. But the minister has excepted certain things and I am not quite sure why.

Hon. Mr. Clement: Mr. Speaker, section 6 to sections 8(a) and 15(a) refer to the grandfather clause available to partnerships until Jan. 1, 1980. This clause will not be available to a limited partnership because of the possibility of its abuse. A limited partnership is a sophisticated form of business organization and taken with the proposed wide-scale publicity to be given to these amendments, ignorance of the new requirements is extremely unlikely.

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

Mr. Speaker: Shall this bill be ordered for third reading?

Agreed.

MOTOR VEHICLE ACCIDENT CLAIMS ACT

Hon. Mr. Clement moves second reading of Bill 17, An Act to amend the Motor Vehicle Accident Claims Act.

Mr. Deacon: Mr. Speaker, we are pleased to see an improvement specifying the time within which the evidence of insurance must be provided as a 72-hour period rather than just "a reasonable time," which was too vague. We are pleased to see that suspension does not necessarily mean that it is possible for someone to get an automatic reissue of a licence on application and that there is some power to prevent that if it is desirable.

But what we do question here in this bill is the implication of shifting this Motor Vehicle Accident Claims Act to the Superintendent of Insurance. Is the government saying that it is now going to be making this into government insurance? Is this a backdoor method of changing the annual premium from $25 to possibly $200?

This party agrees that everyone in this province should be insured and we have pressed the fact that this motor vehicles accident claims fund is not sufficient protection to those who suffer damage as a result of motor vehicle accidents. I urge this minister to recognize the implications of this change and to recognize the need for the introduction of compulsory automobile insurance throughout the province.

Mr. Speaker: I think there is nothing in the principle of this bill in that connection.

Is there any other member wishing to participate in the debate?

The hon. minister.

Hon. Mr. Clement: Mr. Speaker, the legislation transferring the responsibility to the Superintendent of Insurance is not in any way to be considered a move toward insurance for automobiles in this province being mandatory, but is required following the transfer of the administration of the Act to the Ministry of Consumer and Commercial Relations.

It was always under the responsibility of the registrar of motor vehicles, as the hon. member knows, and the Superintendent of Insurance is representative of the fund in actions brought for recovery from that fund and was the logical individual in whom that responsibility should be lodged.

There is no move toward government insurance or anything of this nature. It was a recommendation of, I think, the Committee on Government Productivity that it be transferred into my ministry and accordingly the Superintendent of Insurance was considered to be the individual best suited to monitor the supervision and operation of the fund.

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

Mr. Speaker: Shall the bill be ordered for third reading?

Agreed.

MINISTRY OF GOVERNMENT SERVICES ACT

Hon. Mr. Snow moves second reading of Bill 3, The Ministry of Government Services Act.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Perth.

Mr. H. Edighoffer (Perth): Mr. Speaker, I'd like to make a few comments on Bill 3, referring to the Ministry of Government Services Act. Generally, this bill is, I guess, a matter of housekeeping in respect to the reorganization of government departments and certainly it's necessary to bring the Ministry of Government Services into focus so that it is compatible with other legislation.

I noticed in the minister's opening remarks, when he introduced the bill, that it authorizes the implementation of certain recommendations of the Committee on Government Productivity. I was disappointed to see that the minister was not able to include more of those recommendations included in that interim report, No. 8.

In checking over this legislation, Mr. Speaker, I notice there are a number of new sections proposed in Bill 3, particularly section 5 which states that:

The ministry shall be operated as a common service agency for the government and its activities shall be directed toward providing the ministries and agencies of the government with services in support of the programmes of those ministries and agencies.

This is similar to what was recommended in the Committee on Government Productivity report when it stated that the availability of common services should be centralized. It went on to say that this centralization is desirable because performing property services requires a range of skills which cannot be spread efficiently among other ministries. Hopefully, this efficiency will be experienced.

Section 6, I notice, outlined the responsibilities of the minister and this section, of course, is very similar to the former section 17 of the 1970 statute. I was somewhat alarmed in particular with section 6 (3). This, I believe, has been added and reads:

Notwithstanding subsections (1) and (2) the Lieutenant Governor in Council may, for such period and under such terms and conditions as he considers suitable, assign any of the responsibilities or powers of the minister under this section to another minister.

As I read this section it seems to me that it allows the Lieutenant Governor in Council the right to assign any of the responsibilities in that section to any other minister. While considering this section, I recalled that a few years ago this ministry introduced a bill which would have allowed the responsibility to be given to practically anyone in the then Ministry of Public Works. After much objection from the opposition this bill was withdrawn, leaving the power with the minister where we, in this party, feel it should belong.

As this bill has been presented with recommendations from the Committee on Government Productivity, I wish to quote from that report that it said it found neither great difficulties nor dissatisfaction with the system of funding the government's capital construction and major renovations and repair programme through the Ministry of Government Services. This ministry has the experience and expertise to supervise this important programme. Retention of this responsibility by the ministry would, I believe, Mr. Speaker, exercise a broad supervision not only by the Management Board but by this Legislature.

I know in the past few weeks or so we have seen such a case where Ontario Hydro decided to acquire a new office building which will be built and then used by it, and, of course, this was not put out to tender. This agreement was reached on a so-called proposal basis. Without going into any details on that particular situation, I would presume that this section could give at some future time the right by order in council to any minister to acquire or build any such building, on a proposal basis. So, in order to control the use of public funds, our party feels that it's very much opposed to this section.

I realize I should hear from the minister to find out if I am correct in what is stated in this section. If I find this is so, I can assure him that we in this party will continue to try to have this clause deleted—if not now, during clause-by-clause debate in committee of the whole House.

Mr. Speaker, also on section 7, this is a new section that states that the minister may charge for commodities and services provided under this Act. I'd like to just ask the minister, and he might explain, why it is "may" and not "shall," because I believe this was also suggested by the Committee on Government Productivity. In Section 19(a) of the repealed Government Services Act, 1970, the Lieutenant Governor in Council could make regulations to establish a central purchasing and supply board. Under the new legislation, section 17(c), I believe it is, this has somewhat changed. I would like an explanation from the minister in this regard as to what change he sees in purchasing and also if it gives a broader power for disposal of any goods.

Mr. Speaker: The member for Riverdale.

Mr. Renwick: Mr. Speaker, I want to be brief because I don't purport to understand all of the implications in the bill. I think it's a major bill if one looks at it in the light of the recommendations which were made for the overall reorganization of the government. I would hope that during the course of the remarks by the minister on the second reading of the bill, he would try to provide some kind of vitality for the bill which he has presented before us.

Anyone reading this bill would have no conception of the important role which the Ministry of Government Services plays in its relationship with the Management Board and, in turn, in its relationship with all of what are termed in the productivity reports "the client ministries." I take it, and I assume it to be so when the minister said that it was for the purpose of implementing a number of the recommendations of the Committee on Government Productivity, that the Ministry of Government Services, acting within the framework of the guidelines and policies decided upon by the Management Board, will play a major role in controlling the sense of cost responsibility for the programmes which are initiated and are in force in the Province of Ontario throughout the various policy ministries.

There are very substantial recommendations in the report with respect to the ways in which those costs will: (a) be adequately disclosed; and (b) will provide the kind of controls which up to now have been lacking in terms of the cost of a particular programme insofar as its physical space, accommodation and equipment provided through the Ministry of Government Services are concerned. I take that to be one of the pivotal recommendations of the Committee on Government Productivity, and I assume that it is being implemented by this bill.

I would like to have the minister's comment. I assume it will be given in assuring tones, that the problems which arose respecting the acquisition of real property by the former Department of Public Works have been corrected to the extent that the royal commission on the Niagara Escarpment lands and the Gertler report reflected adversely upon the then ministry.

Perhaps the minister will forgive me for refreshing his memory when I point out that on page 99 of the report of His Honour, Provincial Court Judge Bennett, he says in his conclusions that the province paid too high a price for the 506 acres.

The Department of Public Works should have obtained an appraisal from a recognized expert in the field of appraisement before entering into negotiations with the Caledon Mountain Estates Ltd., as discussed in detail under question 5 of part IV.

Armed with such an appraisal in the form of bracket figures of $1,200 to $1,500 per acre and by the employment of the kind of forceful and hard bargaining which is necessary in the public interest and which was not evident in the bargaining to reach the figure of $1,450 per acre, in my opinion the government negotiators would have achieved a lower price within the bracketed figures which may well have resulted in a substantial total saving for the treasury. Greater care and vigilance were demanded of Public Works in this transaction.

And the other comment was:

The Department of Public Works was also negligent in the fall and spring of 1968 and 1969 in connection with the attempted purchase by the government of 170 acres of the Trenwith property. The negligence consisted of not reporting on the request of the Department of Lands and Forests to acquire the acreage within a reasonable time and when Public Works did report it, it did so erroneously. As indicated in part IV under heading 5, the negligence may have been costly.

I noticed in reading the report of the Committee on Government Productivity that they have very high praise for the skills which are within the Ministry of Government Services and which were formerly within the Department of Public Works, as it was then known. But I would suggest that the minister should respond to us now, and not in the tone of carping criticism, to indicate quite clearly that the acquisition from the private sector of the lands, premises and other fixtures comprising the real property, whether by purchase or by lease, is being carried out with the kind of expertise that we would expect of a government ministry charged with this kind of public responsibility and which has now centralized within it this very demanding obligation to provide the services to all of the various client ministries within the government circle.

We do have a major concern as to the criteria under which the government moves into the marketplace for the purpose of acquiring the kinds of buildings that have been acquired recently, either by purchase of land and construction or by lease, for the purpose of providing the accommodation to meet the demands put upon the ministry by the various client ministries within the government that are charged with the policy programme responsibilities.

I think it does not go unremarked that although it was stated that the programme was extremely tentative and there wasn't anything very real or substantive about it, the Premier (Mr. Davis) the other day, in conjunction with the minister, had to capitulate totally and withdraw the whole of the building programme which was announced between Bay and Yonge in the massive piece of property which has been acquired over the years by the minister on behalf of the government of the Province of Ontario.

I notice very clearly in the bill that there are provisions that there must be tenders in some of the areas in which are set out the ways in which the government is required to carry out contracts for construction, renovation or repair of a public work. But we have no indication that there is any kind of protective assurance that the public interest is served in the most economical way by the way in which the Ministry of Government Services acts in the private marketplace on behalf of the people of Ontario for the purpose of acquiring the lands and the structures which it does acquire from time to time.

I am quite prepared to recognize the problem of moving into a private market area to acquire this kind of accommodation, but certainly there is nothing which would indicate to us that there is that kind of vigilance which is required to make certain that what is acquired is acquired at the most economical price. The only occasions where we have had an opportunity to look into the question would indicate that by and large a better deal could have been obtained.

That is not any imputation of gross mismanagement at all, but it is quite clearly an indication of a lack in the ministry of the kind of tough bargaining which has to take place when a minister of the Crown is dealing in a very highly sophisticated and tough real estate market, particularly when it centres within the Metropolitan Toronto area. That is a matter on which I would certainly hope that this minister would comment.

There is very little in the bill which deals with the way in which commodities, as they are described in the bill—that is, I suppose, in a lawyer's term, all other movable property which is purchased by the ministry—are to be acquired or the protection which the public treasury has in the routines and procedures which are to be used for that purpose. If I read the Committee on Government Productivity properly, those guidelines are supposed to be developed and go forward to the Management Board and the Management Board is to establish those particular procedures and routines, and presumably to some extent—but I am certain it is always to a very limited extent and usually in such legalese that very few people will be able to understand them—some of them will appear in regulations.

But when you consider the immense purchasing needs of the government of the Province of Ontario in the field of commodities, then it seems to us that there must be, structured within the Act setting up the Ministry of Government Services, some indication of what the guidelines are. I don't think it is sufficient, Mr. Speaker, to indicate that certainly we will try to get the best price and certainly we will work out the procedures which are best designed to achieve that purpose.

In one very limited sphere, and that is the sphere of the construction, renovation or repair of a public work, there is a tender operation. But so far as I read the bill, and so far as I can tell, there is no indication anywhere of the extension of the tender system as a mandatory matter by this ministry for the purchase of the immense amount of commodities which is required to be purchased in the course of a year by the ministry.

As I say, the bill itself is a rather lifeless document. It's very difficult, when one reads the responsibilities of the ministry, to get any conception of the vital and crucial role which this particular ministry plays in the government reorganization which in some of its areas, particularly with respect to the provincial secretaries in the various fields, has tended to fall rather flat on its face.

Mr. Speaker, I would say that of the various stages of the reorganization dealing with the control of costs of the government of the Province of Ontario, this ministry is the focal one. I don't presume to create any impression that I have read in detail all of the reports of the Committee on Government Productivity and know them. There were three reports.

There was the initial interim report, No. 1, dealing with the setup of this particular ministry and having something to say about important matters. There were some further references in interim report No. 3 but the major alteration in the method by which the policy departments, the policy ministries, will be required to establish accounting procedures with this ministry about their space and equipment needs seems to me to be almost a minor revolution with respect to the accounting for the costs of the programmes in the Province of Ontario.

I refer, only briefly, to the recommendations which are set out not as recommendations but in some of the explanatory references in interim report No. 8. This states:

We are proposing that programmes include within their budgets an amount for rental whether or not they are housed within government-owned facilities. It is to be hoped that a practice may be worked out whereby occupancy costs might be reviewed in the context of other costs for each programme. We suggest capital expenditures by the Ministry of Government Services should be contingent upon prior approval of rentals which would be paid to the common services ministry from within operating programme estimates. At present, there have been very few forces at work to make the programme managers more aware of the costs of the property resources required by their programmes . . . Public Works provides accommodation rent free to the programmes including utilities and maintenance.

It goes on at great length to indicate quite clearly that there is to be not only vis-à-vis the public but vis-à-vis the policy ministries of the government a pretty hard-nosed attitude by the Ministry of Government Services with respect to the rent to be charged; with respect to the equipment and supplies to be furnished; with respect to the way in which depreciation charges and amortization charges are to be established.

In fact, when we look at the estimates of a particular ministry and we look at a specific programme we may, for the first time, be able to get some overall sense of what the cost of that programme is in itself. We may, then, be able to get to some point where we can say the costs of that programme with respect to the benefits which it provides for the people of the Province of Ontario are out of line; they're not adequate and they're not sufficient. There may well have to be further economies with respect to the costs in order to increase the benefits; or there may have to be very real thinking about the possibility of abandoning a particular programme because of the excessive cost of the programme when related to the benefits.

It may well be, Mr. Speaker, that if this is followed through properly this minor revolution may, in a sense, bring back to this chamber the importance which it has in our system of government as is stated in a trite statement within interim report No. 8—that is, the assembly voting the moneys for the particular programmes of the government. Certainly up to now when we've approved estimates with respect to programmes we've had no real sense of what the cost of those programmes were.

But we cannot perform the function of the Ministry of Government Services, and in that sense we need the support of the Ministry of Government Services on this side of the House if we are going to be in a position where we can say that there is an effective, tough control of the costs with respect to accommodation, equipment, supplies and other physical attributes needed for the purpose of carrying out a particular programme; and that includes, as the committee on productivity has stated, also charging the client ministries with the cost of provision of specialized services from this reservoir of highly skilled and talented people which the minister has at his disposal.

There is also a very clear indication in the committee's report—but again there is nothing in the minister's bill which would indicate to us the criteria upon which he decides to whom he is going to contract out a wide range of services, which it is recommended in the report be contracted out rather than to be performed within the ministry itself.

And there is an extremely wide range of services now being contracted for.

Again, we have no indication that something in the nature of a tender system, a modified tender system, a tender system within certain limits, is to be used for those purposes.

So, while we have this very limited statement in the bill with respect to the construction, the renovation or repair of a public work, and we have a tender system involved in that, yet masses of other purchasing activities of this minister's department are entirely free from any publicly stated guideline either in this Act, or in the regulations; or anywhere else that would indicate to people that you can't just come to the trough of the government for the sale of goods and services to the government simply because you happen to be friends of the government. After all, after 30 years, who isn't a friend of the government; but the few of us who sit on this side of the House.

Hon. J. W. Snow (Minister of Government Services): I thought the member was a friend.

Mr. Renwick: And therefore it makes it extremely difficult for us here to perform our functions unless the minister is prepared to join with us in riding herd on the government to make certain that there are proper tendering systems within all of the range of the immense purchasing power of the government.

Those have been just a few random thoughts which concern me very much about the ministry. The bill would certainly not give any indication of the pivotal role which the ministry does play and, as I have said, the minor revolution which it may create and may actually provide. I emphasize this, if I may, Mr. Speaker, repeating myself only once for emphasis on this particular point.

Mr. Singer: Once more. Once more.

Mr. Renwick: It may well be that this minister and the role of his Ministry will in fact give some meaning to the debate on estimates with respect to individual programmes as they come before the assembly in order that the moneys can be voted.

Now, I would hope that the minister would deal with any number of those major issues which I consider I have tried to raise in this debate.

I would like to make one other comment—because it is of specific interest to us here in the New Democratic Party—that in the area where the government is contracting for services in the cleaning and maintenance field that it is not, in fact, contracting out at prices for those services which result in people working for the contractors at an abysmally low wage. That is one of the real fears which we have.

Certainly it was not a very affluent life when one was a cleaning person on the maintenance staff of the Ministry of Public Works. But we would like to think that there are some guidelines that are required of the contractors to make certain that the people who do the cleaning and maintenance work under contract arrangements are themselves in turn properly paid. Indeed, we as a government would of course insist that it be done through contractors who employ only union labour. But that, of course, would be too much to ask of this ministry at the present time.

There is an alternative which the minister could adopt, and that is to provide that contractors contracting for that kind of service should pay once and a half the minimum wage, or even twice the minimum wage, and provide a decent living for those who work for the contractors under contracts provided by this government.

That's an addendum to my remarks. I hope the minister will deal with some of the major items which I raised.

Mr. Speaker: The member for Downsview.

Mr. Singer: I share with my colleague from Perth and with the hon. member for Riverdale substantial concern about the content of this Act. I, too, am unable to put it into context with the various recommendations of the Committee on Government Productivity, unless, of course, under the guise of a new Ministry of Government Services Act the minister and the government are going to pretend that they have carried out these recommendations.

Mr. Speaker, as one reads through the statutes, one has to come to the conclusion that the powers given are so broad in their context that this minister or any other minister can do pretty well as he wants to do, notwithstanding all the recommendations. The so-called restrictions are limited in their scope, and are limited in their language. The permission in section 6(3) to allow the minister to assign any of his responsibilities to any other minister—

Hon. Mr. Snow: No, not the minister.

Mr. Singer: All right, the Lieutenant Governor in Council. The permission to assign any of the responsibilities to any other minister surely defeats the whole series of statutes and recommendations that we have dealt with, that have been the subject of various discussions and bitter debates and which, theoretically at least, have been remedied by the passing of new statutes.

But, periodically, Mr. Speaker, there creeps in a general provision such as this one, or the one that they rushed through last June in the wee small closing hours of the morning, which gives them power to acquire land, as in north Pickering, and sell it to anybody they want. That one just snuck through as a house-keeping bill.

These things, periodically, are put into statutes and are passed by the House with these powers, notwithstanding all of the fine words in McRuer or in the COGP reports or in the reports of royal commissioners. All these things are paid lip service to but, in fact, the statutory authority bears no relationship to the commitments made by the government.

For instance, even as repeated here, the power of expropriation for this minister is as broad as it can be. Once the land has been acquired for government purposes, if the government comes to the conclusion—and it could be the same day—that it's no longer required for the use or the purposes of the government, the land can then be disposed of in any way that the government sees fit, subject to the approval of the Lieutenant Governor in Council.

I don't really believe, Mr. Speaker, that the additional seal of the Lieutenant Governor in Council makes the thing any more pure at that point than it would be at the beginning. I don't think that the Lieutenant Governor in Council reviews it at any great length. What, in fact, this kind of exercise of power means is that there is a taking away from the Legislature of additional power and there is permission given in statute to allow the breach of these great principles which are enunciated so loudly and so clearly.

What bothers me, Mr. Speaker, is the use and abuse of expropriation powers, and this statute does nothing to limit them at all. This statute and the statute I referred to that was passed last June are part and parcel of the same kind of thinking. We pay lip service to tenders but the necessity for tender calls is in respect of contracts for construction, renovation or repair of public works.

It is very fascinating, Mr. Speaker, that even on proposal calls, the kind of proposals that my leader was objecting to aren't dealt with in this at all. The proposal system can go on. The government is not even compelled at this stage and in this statute to make available to the Legislature the kind of method by which it is going to determine what kind of a proposal it is going to accept; or who it is going to accept it from; or whether the proposals are made available to the public generally or to the people who are able to submit a proposal.

Those things continue to remain government secrets.

Hon. Mr. Snow: We have no secrets.

Mr. Singer: Yes, indeed they do. I would like the minister to indicate to me when he gets to talk just how and where there is any compulsion on government to reveal proposals to us. If there is why then, in face of the repeated requests made by my leader and others has the government neglected to table the various proposals they have referred to in the House as has been asked?

The best we could get out of the Premier was a grunt.

Hon. Mr. Snow: I don't have the power.

Mr. Singer: No, of course, the minister doesn't have the power. The best we could get out of the Premier was a grunt and we got nothing from the minister at all. There is nothing in this statute that says the Premier has got to do anything more than grunt. No! It continues to be secret.

How can the minister read the report of the Provincial Auditor and not concern himself with the looseness of managerial procedures which have resulted in the waste of many millions of dollars belonging to the people of Ontario? Then he has the nerve to bring before us a statute like this one which applies no control.

Mr. Speaker, the more I think of this Act, the more carefully I read it and the more I listen to my colleague from Perth, the more convinced I am that this Act is nothing more than another pale shadow intended to impress various audiences, to which the government representatives are going to talk, that apparently the government is doing something.

We had the COGP and it made recommendations. Now we have a statute that says exactly what it recommended, except that it doesn't say that! Mr. Speaker, there are so many escape clauses in this Act which negate all the high-sounding principles one can find, that I don't see any way at all in which we can support this Act that's presently before us.

Mr. Speaker: Does any other member wish to address himself to this bill? If not, the minister.

Hon. Mr. Snow: Mr. Speaker, I'd like to respond to the remarks which have been made by the hon. members.

Basically, this bill does replace the old Public Works Act. The Ministry of Government Services was created by the Act last year with the re-organization of government, but this new bill brings the bill up to date. Under the old Public Works Act my ministry was responsible for a great many odds and ends which have now been transferred to other ministries, such as hydraulics and different things which are now part of the Ministry of Natural Resources.

The member for Perth commented on some specific sections on the function of the ministry. It is certainly a common service ministry that supplies common services to all the operating ministries within the government under the direction and approval of policies established by the Management Board. We are doing centralized purchasing to the degree that it is economically feasible to purchase centrally. Of course, we are carrying out the traditional role of the Department of Public Works of constructing all the buildings for the operating ministries but not for the Crown corporations.

Considerable remarks have been made pertaining to section 6, subsection 3, the assignment of duties of the minister by the Lieutenant Governor in Council to another minister. I think I can explain this, Mr. Speaker, by two examples—they are the only things I can think of at this moment—where two particular responsibilities that might be considered to be the responsibility of my ministry have been assigned.

One is the purchase of drugs and medical supplies. This has been assigned to the Ministry of Health by the Lieutenant Governor in Council, as it certainly seems more feasible and more economical to have the expertise of the Ministry of Health look after the purchase of drugs than for my ministry with centralized purchasing to set up people with this knowledge of the particular product and duplicate a service that is already available within the government.

The second item that I can think of—these are the only two that I can think of that have been assigned—is the purchase of automobiles. My ministry does not purchase automobiles or trucks; the purchase of these has been assigned to the Minister of Transportation and Communications (Mr. Carton).

Traditionally, his ministry has been the ministry purchasing the largest amount of equipment and vehicles; it certainly has the expertise already there to carry on this practice. It is now buying, I think, all the vehicles for all ministries and also for the Ontario Provincial Police.

Now, the hon. member for Perth referred to section 7, charging for services under the Management Board of Cabinet Act. This is something that we are certainly implementing, Mr. Speaker. The hon. member for Riverdale referred to this at some length in his remarks.

All I can say is that I think I almost agreed totally with everything he said in this regard. We are certainly initiating, as recommended by the COGP report, the charge-back principle. Personally, I want to see every possible service that my ministry supplies charged to the programme that is benefiting from that service, or purchase, or rent for the building or land that is purchased—whatever it may be—so that when we look at the estimates of the operating ministries, we are able to see exactly what the cost of that programme is.

I am the first to admit that under the present and past method of government accounting, this has not been possible. We are implementing this as quickly as possible and will implement it as quickly as possible, although it is impossible—with the amount of volume we have—to start off with a full chargeback on all services. We will implement these over a period of time.

Now, there was some remark made regarding section 17(c) and regulations prescribing the manner under which government purchases, disposal and storage will be carried out. Mr. Speaker, as far as our purchasing is concerned, I think I can almost unequivocally say that all purchasing of anything of any significance whatsoever is done by public tender—certainly all our construction projects, all our maintenance projects; unless there is such a thing as an emergency, which is covered in the Act, and I don't believe we have had to use that provision.

Mr. R. F. Nixon (Leader of the Opposition): How does the ministry regard proposals? How about the school of the blind?

Hon. Mr. Snow: Pardon?

Mr. R. F. Nixon: The school for the blind; wasn't that on a proposal basis? Have there been any buildings built on a proposal basis?

Hon. Mr. Snow: No, I don't want to—if the member puts those questions to me during the debate. But I will say that my ministry does not enter into proposal calls, and—

Mr. R. F. Nixon: The minister's predecessor defended it.

Hon. Mr. Snow: We enter into construction management contracts but not proposal calls. We do enter into leaseback contracts—but we advertise these publicly—by public tender and the tenders are opened publicly. I can recall, Mr. Speaker, about three or four months ago we called tenders in the city of Thunder Bay for the new courthouse there on a leaseback basis, where we owned the land. We called for these public tenders for a contractor to build and operate the building and lease it back to us.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Hydro should do the same.

Hon. Mr. Snow: I believe we got about eight or 10 tenders on that bid. They were opened publicly and published, for anyone who wants to see them, and the contracts for the leasing of that was awarded to the low bidder. Just yesterday or the day before I signed the authorization for a similar tender call for an office building in Thunder Bay, on the same basis—public tender call. Everyone has the opportunity—

Mr. R. F. Nixon: The minister ought to write a letter to the chairman of Hydro and advise him of the procedures.

Hon. Mr. Snow: Everyone has the opportunity to bid and everyone has the opportunity to sit in the tender room when the bids are opened and see exactly where each bid stacks up with the others.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Except Ontario Hydro!

Hon. Mr. Snow: Mr. Speaker, I want to assure the hon. members that we are implementing the public tender call procedure almost to the last degree that it is possible. Granted, if you want to buy a $10 item it is pretty difficult to go through the expense of advertising for tenders for it. We have to be reasonable. For instance, the other day we purchased computer cards for several different ministries, put all the orders together into one bulk purchase, called public tenders, opened them publicly, and then the different ministries will be supplied from this bulk order. We use the tender procedure for the disposal of real estate or the disposal of, I guess you call them, tangible assets.

Even down at our Mimico yards there, when we have old used furniture for sale, surplus supplies of all kinds, or scrap metal, these sales are advertised and a report comes to me when the tenders are received and opened in public and then the awards are made. When we have a surplus piece of real estate to sell we have it appraised. If the local municipality has an interest in it, quite often we sell to the municipality at appraised value. We will not sell at appraised value to the public, but we advertise publicly and everyone has a chance to bid on any property that is being sold.

As I see our ministry under this Act, Mr. Speaker, we will be operating more like a corporation than the former Department of Public Works has operated. We are, of course, responsible for the purchase of all real property, with some exceptions; Transportation and Communications still purchases land for rights of way, and Environment still has a certain area of purchasing of rights of way and easements that it does for its operations.

We are in charge of property management, we are in charge of the construction purchasing, and as of about 40 minutes ago we officially took over the centralized computer services for the government, and we will be operating this computer centre on a chargeback basis to the other ministries. This is within the reference and the recommendations of the COGP.

On our real estate purchases I want to assure the hon. members that we have, I think, some of the toughest negotiators in the real estate business. We do a great deal of purchasing and leasing of land. We have our internal appraisers for appraising properties we are going to purchase. Also, on all purchases of any significance at all we use the services of an outside appraiser, and in some cases, if it is a large purchase, we will get a second opinion from an outside appraiser so that we have two outside appraisals on such a piece of property we are buying.

I think we have considerable expertise in the realty services branch of the ministry, and the staff there are doing an excellent job according to the guidelines we are operating under at the present time.

As I mentioned, we call tenders for our leaseback properties; we also call public tenders for all our commodities; and we will be implementing accounting procedures in the ministry so that the costs of the items my ministry is responsible for will be visible in that programme.

This goes along with recommendations that are also made on page 71, I believe, of the report of the Provincial Auditor, where he draws our attention to certain cases—three in particular, I think—where, at the request of a ministry, my ministry leased space for a period of time, then the client ministry did not occupy the space for the full period of time and in some cases we ended up having some vacant space.

I think it would be a great incentive to the programme managers and the operating ministries if they were responsible in their budgets for the space that we rented for them, and this is being implemented.

Cleaning contracts also were mentioned, Mr. Speaker, and of course we tender publicly where we enter into contracts for cleaning. We are doing a great deal of this type of work by contract at the present time.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: What about Ontario Place?

Hon. Mr. Snow: We still have hourly paid staff in quite a number of our buildings. We are not really phasing these down at all, but on most new projects we are entering into contracts.

I might say, regarding Ontario Place, that my ministry is no longer responsible for its maintenance. That is now a Crown corporation.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Like Ontario Hydro, Ontario Housing, the Ontario Institute for Studies in Education—a whole list of things that should come under this ministry's jurisdiction if it worked as efficiently as the minister describes it.

Hon. Mr. Snow: I won't argue with the Leader of the Opposition on that point, Mr. Speaker—

Mr. R. F. Nixon: The vice-chairman sits up at the back there—

Hon. Mr. Snow: We have the expertise, and if the Crown corporations within the government wish to make use of this, we would be only too happy to provide them with our expert services.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: The minister should be pretty careful, he is getting away with murder.

Hon. Mr. Snow: The hon. member for Downsview—I wonder where he is now; he was here—mentioned something about the Expropriation Act. Certainly we have expropriation powers, Mr. Speaker. We very seldom use them.

Mr. E. R. Good (Waterloo North): They shouldn't have them for private industry.

Hon. Mr. Snow: They are broad powers. My ministry, like any other, of course, operates under the Expropriation Act passed by this Legislature. The hon. member for Waterloo North says we should not have them for private industry, and I am really at a loss to know what that remark is supposed to mean because we certainly do not go around expropriating for private industry.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Well, some of the municipalities do. What about Oakville?

Hon. Mr. Snow: I don't recall the municipality of Oakville doing any expropriation for private industry.

Mr. Good: They do out in Cedarwood.

Mr. Lawlor: Etobicoke did.

Hon. Mr. Snow: I can't be responsible for what municipalities do, but certainly as far as my ministry is concerned, the expropriation orders that I have signed at the request of other ministries in the 14 months I have been minister, have been very few and basically refer to recreational lands we are purchasing for the Ministry of Natural Resources, including the expropriation of the Sandbanks property, which I signed a couple of weeks ago.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: And Bronte Park!

Hon. Mr. Snow: Yes, Bronte Park!

Mr. Speaker, we've purchased most of the land now, or practically all of it, for Bronte Creek Provincial Park and we have not had to resort to expropriation yet, but I'm rather prepared to—

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Prepared to? What about Pickering?

Hon. Mr. Snow: I'm rather prepared to do so to finish off the last one or two.

Pickering, Mr. Speaker, does not come under my jurisdiction.

Again I must stress that my ministry does not use the proposal call method. I'm not saying I disagree with it in all applications, but I do for the type of work for which I'm responsible and I don't use it. We go strictly by public tender.

Mr. Good: The minister defended it when he was on the OHC board, right down to the letter.

Mr. Speaker: Order please!

Hon. Mr. Snow: Yes, Mr. Speaker, we did, when I was on the OHC board for two years. We used the proposal call method, and for that particular type of operation it works very well.

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

Mr. Speaker: Shall this bill be ordered for third reading?

Mr. R. F. Nixon: No, Mr. Speaker, we'd like it to go to committee.

Mr. Speaker: Committee of the whole House, Mr. Minister?

Agreed.

FOREST FIRES PREVENTION ACT

Hon. Mr. Bernier moves second reading of Bill 66, An Act to amend the Forest Fires Prevention Act, 1973.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. Leader of the Opposition.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Just a comment or two. It appears this bill extends the jurisdiction of the ministry—what is it, to grass fires?

Mrs. M. Campbell (St. George): Grass and brush fires!

Mr. R. F. Nixon: And brush fires—something like that.

There's some indication the minister might want to make some changes in the wording of the bill. It might be appropriate if the minister made some comments about the bill.

Hon. L. Bernier (Minister of Natural Resources): Well Mr. Speaker, if I may, there are no—

Mr. Speaker: These are opening comments I presume?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Beg your pardon?

Mr. Speaker: The minister may have a chance to reply after other members have spoken.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Does anybody else want to speak before I wind up?

Mr. I. Deans (Wentworth): I didn't know the minister had to be wound up.

Mr. Haggerty: Yes, I'd like to speak on the bill.

I can recall making that trip up to northwestern Ontario; back in 1968 or 1969, I believe. I was talking to fire departments in northern Ontario, and in particular one in Kenora. I was talking to a gentleman there about fires and he said: "Well, the biggest problem up here is fighting forest fires and grass fires on land belonging to the Crown." I said: "Who pays for this?" And he said apparently, or at least this was the information I received at that time, they received no remuneration for going out and fighting fires on Crown land.

I was just wondering if in bringing in this amendment today there would be some funds available to fire departments in municipalities in northwestern Ontario and northern Ontario, or any place in the Province, that looked after forest fires? Are there such grants or is assistance made available to them; even in the purchase of equipment?

Mr. Speaker: Do any other hon. members wish to address themselves to this bill? The hon. member for Lakeshore.

Mr. Lawlor: Just two remarks, Mr. Speaker: One of them is the curious wording of section 2 which says "the minister and the Crown in right of Canada." It sounds as though they are legislating, somehow usurping, their jurisdiction.

I certainly think that should be reconsidered and reworded. How can they impose their mandates on the Crown in the right of Canada or any other province? They say that an agreement may be set up between their ministry and these other jurisdictions, but the way in which they say it I find to be, to say the least awkward, and possibly unconstitutional.

The second thing I want to mention and have a response from the minister on, is why the legislation is retroactive to Sept. 1, 1971? What purpose is behind that?

Mr. Speaker: Do any other hon. members wish to speak to this bill? If not, the hon. minister.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Well Mr. Speaker, if I may just explain. There are no significant changes in the principle involved in this amending bill. The purposes of the bill are twofold.

Firstly, an internal reference in subsection 2 of section 5 is corrected. That is just an error in numbering.

Secondly, the wording in section 19 respecting agreements with municipalities and others is brought in line with the wording of the provisions respecting municipal obligations in section 21. If the members will look at the old bill they will notice a discrepancy here. Under the latter provisions the municipalities in fire districts, subject to an agreement, are obligated to extinguish at their expense the grass, bush and forest fires within their limits. The principle contemplated by the existing section is that the municipalities' obligation can be amended by agreement, and the revised wording would bring the two sections in line in providing uniformity in the provisions.

Mr. Lawlor: It is nice that the minister can tell the federal government it may enter into an agreement with respect to fire-fighting.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Well, there are occasions when this is required on our border areas.

Mr. Lawlor: That's not the way the minister worded it.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: We think this wording is the correct wording.

With regard to extra funds available, if a special condition does exist where there is an emergency situation, then we can move in with our own forces and our own assistance. But we don't have funds available, say to assist a municipality—

Mr. Haggerty: What happens then?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: —but we have the services and the wherewithal to move in with our equipment. In many cases we do this where the municipality requests this emergency assistance. It's always available to them.

In getting back to the retroactive section which the member for Lakeshore questioned, I will say to him that this is a correction in the revised statute, and of course it has to go back to Sept. 1, 1971, when the revised statutes were printed. This is the reason for the retroactivity.

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

Mr. Speaker: Shall the bill be ordered for third reading?

Agreed.

Mr. Speaker: Before we proceed to committee of the whole House, perhaps I might inform the hon. members that as required under standing order 27 and standing order 28, this being Tuesday, I have received one notice of dissatisfaction with the answer given to one oral question since last Tuesday. That was the notice provided to me by the hon. member for Ottawa East (Mr. Roy), who has provided me with notice that he was dissatisfied with the answer given by the hon. Minister of Labour (Mr. Guindon) to a question about the French-language school situation.

In accordance with the notice, it is my obligation to inform the hon. members prior to 5 o'clock as to which notices will be dealt with at the adjournment of the House. Therefore, at 10:30 this evening, I will deem a motion to adjourn to have been made, we will proceed with the discussion of this particular item, and the hon. member may have five minutes to present his case, and the hon. minister may have five minutes to respond.

Clerk of the House: The second order, House in committee of the whole; Mr. R. D. Rowe in the chair.

MINISTRY OF GOVERNMENT SERVICES ACT

House in committee on Bill 3, The Ministry of Government Services Act, 1973.

Mr. Chairman: Are there any questions, comments or amendments on the first five sections, and if so which section?

Sections 1 to 3, inclusive, agreed to.

On section 4, subsection (2):

Mr. J. A. Renwick (Riverdale): Would the minister comment briefly on the office of the Queen's Printer in light of the change which took place in the Committee on Government productivity's report about that office?

Hon. J. W. Snow (Minister of Government Services): Mr. Chairman, the title of the Queen's Printer is now held by the Deputy Minister of Government Services for the purpose of control of the imprint and copyright of any documents of the government of Ontario. The actual function, formerly assigned to the Queen's Printer, of being responsible for the printing for the government is now, as recommended by COGP, under the jurisdiction of the director of printing services.

Mr. D. M. Deacon (York Centre): Mr. Chairman, does this mean—this is in connection with the same clause—that the Queen's Printer, who is responsible for the sale of books, continues to have no influence or direction over the amount of printing that takes place?

I think I have raised before the House the problems met by many people in this province when they are trying to get copies of Acts that are out of print. The Queen's Printer bookstore have told me in the past that it is very frustrating to them to repeatedly have to tell people various Acts are out of print. Nothing is done about it because the particular ministries don't seem to care if their Acts are out of print.

As a result, people don't have copies available to them at a price that the government deems to be the price, which is the cost of printing. Surely this poor supply of copies of necessary legislation is not going to continue under the revised organization? Could the minister give us some information as to how he is going to streamline the shoddy performance of the past?

Hon. Mr. Snow: Mr. Chairman, I don't agree with the hon. member's remarks at all.

Mr. Deacon: I am talking about the bookstore next door to the ministry.

Hon. Mr. Snow: Through the government bookstore we do try to make available to the public as many government publications as possible. There is no doubt there are times when publications do run out. One never knows for sure how popular a particular publication will be.

Sometimes too many are run and I guess there have been cases when we end up with a lot of surplus material that is a cost to the taxpayer and is worthless to the taxpayer, if no one wants it.

In other cases, when a ministry asks for the consolidation or the office print of a particular Act, they must decide what the demand will be for that Act. The director of printing services looks after the printing of it, but we cannot add to that order on our own.

Mr. Deacon: Mr. Chairman, surely when any normal business is operated, it goes to its sales outlet to get an idea of what the market for any product is likely to be? Isn't that the best source of information as to the likely sales?

Of course, I think it should be in consultation with the ordering ministry in the case of the Queen's Printer or the printing services branch the minister is talking about. But to have the control of the quantities to be printed continue to be under the various ministries will perpetuate this lack of awareness as to what the real demand is. The demand doesn't come into the ministries, it comes into the Queen's Printer bookstore or wherever those orders are directed. I do suggest that the minister revises the present system and gains some awareness of what the real market is from the source that is far more aware of demand than anyone else; that is, the Queen's Printer bookstore.

Hon. Mr. Snow: Mr. Chairman, we certainly take all these comments into consideration. The only member I have had a complaint from regarding availability is the particular member who has just spoken. I don't really think that a clerk in the bookstore should be my source of information as to how many copies of a bill we should print. I think the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Stewart) who is responsible for the Warble Fly Act knows a lot better than the clerk in the bookstore how many copies of that Act might be supplied.

Mr. E. W. Martel (Sudbury East): All the warble flies want one.

Hon. Mr. Snow: As we are a common service ministry we do the printing as requested by the other ministries and charge them for it.

Mr. Chairman: Shall section 4 stand as part of the bill?

Section 4 agreed to.

On section 5.

Mr. V. M. Singer (Downsview): Section 5, Mr. Chairman, really contains the thrust of the argument we are advancing. It is one of those broadly worded sections that appears to say a lot but means very little. The section says:

The ministry shall be operated as a common agency for government and its activities and shall be directed towards providing the ministries and agencies of government with services in support of the programmes of those ministries and agencies.

The key words and the copout words are "shall be directed towards providing." That means if you are in the mood to direct them to provide they shall provide; and if you are not in the mood to direct them to provide they shall not provide.

I gather while I was out a few moments ago the minister indicated that this government doesn't believe in proposals. If there are proposals for various schemes — they could be Hydro asking for proposals; or the Workmen's Compensation Board asking for proposals, or Ontario Housing Corp. — the minister seems to want to wave a magic wand and convince us that the things that Hydro or the Workmen's Compensation Board or Ontario Housing do, are none of the responsibility of the ministry.

It was just the same when we were talking about central purchasing. Eric Silk, the former commissioner of the Ontario Provincial Police said, "Go away and don't bother me about your central purchasing. I am going to buy my uniforms and I am going to buy my cars. Just don't bother me or I'll quit and I'll embarrass you." The government left him alone and not one of them was prepared to take him on.

This section further enshrines that ability to carry on with this same kind of nonsense. This section is a copout section. This section empowers the minister to avoid the kind of responsibility that he is going to tell the people this new Act gives to him. I say he can't suck and whistle at the same time. Either he has to accept the responsibility or he doesn't accept it at all!

If the minister is going to have a statute with sections like section 5 in it, why worry about the Act? He is just going to carry on in his own merry way, doing what he wants when he wants to do it; when it is not convenient or for some other peculiar reason, he's not going to do it at all.

The minister apparently questioned my reference earlier to the Act to amend the Housing Development Act. I don't see why there should be an expropriating authority that has a wider power than is contained in this Act. Why doesn't the minister bring the housing authority within this Act? Why doesn't he extend the principle in section 5 to the actions of all government departments and all government agencies? With this in mind, Mr. Chairman, I am going to move an amendment to section 5 to this effect:

That the words "be directed towards providing" be deleted and the word "provide"

be substituted as those words appear in the third and fourth line of section 5.

I so move.

Mr. R. F. Nixon (Leader of the Opposition): I would like to speak further about my colleague's motion. In response to some interjected questions during the debate on second reading, the minister implied that he was taking a firm hand with all of those areas under his jurisdiction. For example, Ontario Institute for Studies in Education had its own autonomous and independent board, therefore he would have nothing to do with its requirements for land or buildings. The same with the Ontario Educational Television Authority. Although he didn't respond to it directly, by failing to respond, apparently in his mind Ontario Hydro fell into precisely the same category.

Although I felt that he was staking out a personal position of some strength when he emphasized more than once that he in his ministry had never had anything to do with the proposal method of deciding what company got to build what facility, at a further interjection the hon. member for Waterloo North (Mr. Good) indicated that the minister seemed to have changed his views, since when he was a member of the Ontario Housing Board he was the one who, in this House, defended the proposal method which the minister then said worked very well as far as housing authorities and housing facilities were concerned.

My colleague from Downsview says you can't suck and whistle at the same time. I'm not exactly sure that that is so. But particularly in this case it appears that the minister is trying to have his cake and eat it too, if the analogy is any more direct, because on one occasion he is prepared to support the proposal system, and now as minister—and I am very glad to hear him say this—he indicates that it has no role whatsoever in the acquisition or the building, the development, of so many of the facilities that do come directly under his jurisdiction.

In the amendment put forward by the member for Downsview, he actually uses the very words of section 5 when he refers to providing the facilities for the ministries and agencies of government. In other words, in the wording of the section as it now is, the responsibility of the minister is at least directed toward providing uniform facilities for all of these agencies which, in the debate we have just completed on second reading, the minister is indicating are autonomous and separate from his authority.

I personally believe that he himself is convinced that under the Ministry of Government Services—for the sake not only of efficiency but uniformity in policy directed toward the acquisition and the establishment of public facilities, particularly public buildings—there definitely should be the very concept that is put forward in the amendment brought forward by my colleague. In other words, the minister should not simply be moving toward the provision of these uniform facilities but it should be a matter of policy that under the direction of this minister, who as a political person is responsible through this House to the people of Ontario, we would have the uniformity that is so obviously desperately needed in this province.

During the previous debate the vice-chairman of Hydro, who has just taken a seat behind the minister, made some interjections about Hydro's situation in this regard. He might want to take part in the debate to justify Ontario Hydro's decision to use the proposal method, not the competitive tender method, for the building of the $45 million new headquarters just a stone's throw from this very chamber.

I believe that the member for Downsview has put forward an extremely important amendment, one that is a matter of principle. I sense the minister agrees with the amendment put forward and I would say to him that this is the sort of thing the government is going to have to take under consideration and enactment if it is going to restore the kind of confidence in the community that I would say to you, Mr. Chairman, has been lost recently by revelations pertaining to the emanations of government which should be, and in fact are, brought under the jurisdiction of the ministry by the very wording of section 5 as it now is, "ministries and agencies."

For example, the Ontario Workmen's Compensation Board as an autonomous—well it isn't autonomous, but as an agency of government, went ahead with the deal with Fidinam, of which we have heard so much, when it should have been the Ministry of Government Services which essentially made the decision to provide the facilities needed by that board. They should not be empowered to negotiate those facilities for themselves. They should be centralized here with a minister who is publicly responsible and readily accessible to criticism in this Legislature and in the community.

I would hope that he would consider supporting the amendment, because if he does not it will be necessary in our support of the amendment to divide the House.

Mr. Chairman: Anything further? The member for Riverdale.

Mr. Renwick: I think, Mr. Chairman, that we would support the laconic amendment of the member for Downsview.

Mr. Singer: At least it is not unctuous.

Mr. Renwick: That will send you to the dictionary, Mr. Chairman. I think it is fair to say that the Committee on Government Productivity was very weak when it indicated the grounds upon which it excluded from the Ministry of Government Services the various boards and commissions of agencies to the government which it did exclude. It's for that reason that we think the amendment is very well proposed and very well taken, and we will certainly support it.

However, on this particular section of the bill, I would like to ask the specific question as to whether or not the ministry is going to be the landlord of the client ministries and agencies of government. There is no reference to that term in here and the provision of services does not generally include within it the relationship of landlord and tenant.

Yet the very thrust of the Committee on Government Productivity's report is that it will be the landlord, and it uses those terms. For example it states that the Ministry of Government Services as the landlord would be required to meet these demands efficiently and to the satisfaction of the tenants, referring to these demands as meaning the amount and quality of space requested by the programme managers. The reference is to them as tenants and to the ministry as landlord.

Or has that recommendation been dropped and is it not going to be implemented? If so, why isn't there some specific reference to it within this omnibus power-granting clause of the principal function of the minister?

Mr. Chairman: Does the minister wish to reply to this now before we have further questions?

Hon. Mr. Snow: Yes, Mr. Chairman. Although in principle I probably do not disagree with the intent of the hon. member for Downsview in his amendment, I cannot accept it because it would be an unworkable situation to have such a rigid wording in the Act as is proposed. My ministry is not able, nor would it be advisable in so many cases, to supply all services or a specific service for a ministry.

I say we are certainly moving towards the supply of as many common services as we possibly can for all the ministers.

To reply to the member for Riverdale, we certainly are moving forward on this landlord-tenant relationship. As I said—and I believe he had left the chamber when I was replying before—

Mr. Renwick: I am sorry I did.

Hon. Mr. Snow: —it is certainly my intention to put the costs that are now buried, if you wish to use that word, in my estimates. I want to see those costs go into the ministry and the programme that is benefiting from these costs.

We will be implementing this as quickly as we possibly can, but I cannot accept the amendment, because it would mean that my ministry must supply each and every individual service to each and every ministry in each and every location throughout the Province of Ontario, and this is not possible.

Mr. Renwick: Mr. Chairman, I have another question and I think this is the appropriate section to raise it under. The question is with respect to the guidelines that the minister operates under when he contracts out for services with respect to the work which is done for the contractors.

Hon. Mr. Snow: I'm not sure, Mr. Chairman, I know exactly what the hon. member is—

Mr. Renwick: I'm talking about the wages that are paid to the people who work for the contractors; and what standards the minister requires of the contractors in the contracts which are let for the performance of services.

Mr. Chairman: Would this not be more appropriate under section 13, when we're dealing with contracts?

Mr. Renwick: Fine, yes; that would be a very good place to do it.

Mr. Chairman: Does the hon. member for Huron (Mr. Riddell) wish to make a comment? Right! We'll place the question then.

Those in favour of Mr. Singer's motion will please say "aye."

Those opposed will please say "nay."

In my opinion the "nays" have it.

Is it agreed that we shall stack this along with any other possible amendments?

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Yes, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Chairman: Stack it; right!

Any other comments, questions or amendments then up to section 10?

Mr. H. Edighoffer (Perth): Mr. Chairman, I was still just wondering about section 6, subsection (3). The minister made a few comments in reply to my original comments on this section; and he just came up with two small reasons why this section was put in. They were regarding the purchasing of drugs by the Ministry of Health and the purchasing of cars, by, I believe, the Ministry of Transportation and Communications. Right?

To me, if this is all it entails, I would still like to press the minister to withdraw this section from the bill. To me, it does nothing other than pass that power to another minister and could eventually lead to some—as I stated earlier—some type of power given to another minister in designing or constructing a building. The minister may say it is impossible; but it could happen in the future. I would like to ask the minister again if he wouldn't consider withdrawing that section.

Hon. Mr. Snow: Mr. Chairman. I understand the hon. member's concern; but I feel that it is absolutely necessary to have that section in the Act. I have mentioned two examples, which I think are very good examples. There may be others, but they don't come to my mind at the moment. But I can see very well where there could be some other area of responsibility the Lieutenant Governor in Council might wish to assign to another ministry.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Mr. Chairman, if I may just comment further on that section. The examples the minister gave, I suppose, do sound reasonable; that the Ministry of Transportation and Communications should buy the cars. Although I would expect the Solicitor General would buy more cars through the requirements of the police—more than even the Ministry of Transportation and Communications—but maybe they buy more trucks, or something like that.

Even to suggest that the Ministry of Health should have the responsibility for buying all the drugs; well, that sounds rational. Maybe the Minister of Agriculture and Food, should be buying all the food for the various emanations of government.

I think that a certain argument could be given to disperse almost all its purchasing powers; and yet I think a compelling argument can be made for centralizing all the purchases under the direction of this minister. It may well be that somebody would be seconded from the OPP; or their advice would be sought. But the decision to purchase and the responsibility for the specifications and the approving of contracts should be — and I think that this is agreed on all sides — centralized under one political authority; and that is, Mr. Chairman, the Minister of Government Services.

Maybe it's difficult for the minister to persuade certain rather persuasive personalities that he does business with, or deals with from time to time, to give up those powers—which perhaps in years gone by were even more significant than they are now. But all of the reports, and even the statement from Mr. MacNaughton, in his first incarnation as Treasurer, I believe, where he opted for the concept of centralized purchasing, stated that it was with the very understanding that whether it was uniforms for policemen or anything else, it was extremely important to examine the specifications, to approve the specifications and to open the various bids in a public way—in the way that the minister describes as happening in his department now.

There is nothing to inhibit the minister or those people who work for him, who are getting all the advice they need or all the advice that may be forced upon them by various other ministries and individuals within the emanations of those ministries, but I certainly think that this subsection (3) is a mistake.

I sense that the minister agrees with me that the simplest way to bring to heel those people in the various emanations of the government, who work at a level much less exposed to the glare of publicity than the minister does, would be to say that the Act requires him to set out the specifications and the method whereby the bids are opened and approved, and to take the political flak if any flak is flying. Otherwise, the confidence of the community in the purchasing procedures has been undermined, and still is seriously undermined, by the very procedures that the minister is afraid to take unto himself.

I agree it would be quite a move for him to remove this subsection (3), but he does know that it would fall directly into line with the policy statements made by previous Treasurers and other people in the government who certainly were in a position to enunciate policy.

I regret that the minister has not shown strength among his cabinet colleagues to insist upon this for their good and that of so many of the other emanations of government, and for the sake of seeing that the proper procedures are followed and that they are uniform in every purchasing responsibility of government.

Hon. Mr. Snow: Mr. Chairman, in reply to the Leader of the Opposition, we do have established procedures for purchasing. As I've said before, it's just not feasible for us to do all centralized purchasing. But we have established—I'm sure it is completed now; we were working on it, but I think it is in operation now—a common purchase order form that can be used by all ministries throughout the government. So we are working on a standard form.

We have a standard procedure for purchasing, but to remove this clause and say that we cannot assign certain responsibilities to other ministers, Mr. Chairman, I'd say it's just not workable, although I understand what the members who have spoken for it are saying.

I think we can use the expertise of other areas, such as the Minister of Transportation and Communications for the buying of vehicles.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: He buys for the OPP.

Hon. Mr. Snow: That's right. He buys for the OPP now.

Interjection by an hon. member.

Hon. Mr. Snow: And I buy the lawn mowers, if that's what hon. member is worrying about.

Mr. J. E. Stokes (Thunder Bay): Does the minister buy them from Clarence Duke?

Mr. Martel: He just supplies them, doesn't he?

Hon. Mr. Snow: If this type of expertise can be used in the grouping of orders, whether the Minister of Transportation and Communications buys the automobiles or whether I buy them, I'm satisfied with the procedures being used. We are getting the best possible value. The Minister of Transportation and Communications also awards contracts and deals with a greater dollar volume of construction in a year than I do. So he has the expertise in this area—

Mr. Singer: Who buys the uniforms now that Eric is gone?

Hon. Mr. Snow: I'm sorry, I don't know. I can't reply to that.

Mr. Singer: That's why it would be worthwhile taking subsection (3) out. Then the minister would know.

Hon. Mr. Snow: In any case, Mr. Chairman, institutions such as the School for the Blind in Brantford must buy their vegetables, eggs and meat from local suppliers. We can't centralize the purchasing of that here in Toronto, and it would be ridiculous to do so.

Mr. Singer: They would have to buy them all from Queen's Park—

Mr. Deacon: The minister seems to be very confused on this whole question of basic responsibility for the way in which we buy things. It's a matter of allowing each ministry—as he just suggested in the School for the Blind in Brantford—to do their own buying. Of course it's necessary for them to do it, but if we are going to be consistent with all the minister has been talking about under the Committee on Government Productivity, he should be prepared to take responsibility to see that the proper procedures are carried out.

What this section does is remove that responsibility and assign it to a minister—we have no idea who it is—and he does it by regulation. Time and time again we find this same type of legislation coming in where it is by Lieutenant Governor in Council regulation, and this is what we object to.

Mr. Chairman: Shall subsection (3)—

Mrs. M. Campbell (St. George): Mr. Chairman—

Mr. Chairman: Yes? The member for St. George.

Mrs. Campbell: I would like to address a question to the minister. I hope I may be forgiven, being somewhat ignorant as to the powers of other ministers, but one of the things that concerns me, apart from that which has already been said, is that if this power is relegated—if I could put it that way—to another minister, are there ministers with power to further relegate this authority down the scale to directors or others? I have not had an opportunity to ascertain that. Can we be assured that this is in fact, not the case?

Hon. Mr. Snow: Mr. Chairman, the assignment of responsibilities is by the Lieutenant Governor in Council. The Lieutenant Governor in Council can, by order-in-council, perhaps on recommendation from Management Board, state that a certain minister is responsible for a certain responsibility. Of course, that minister then must be responsible for that responsibility. He is naturally going to have his public servants perform the duties for him.

Mr. Singer: Why don't they do it in his name, rather than directly?

Hon. Mr. Snow: They would be doing it in his name.

Mr. Singer: Oh, no. Is the minister aware of what section 16 really says?

Hon. Mr. Snow: We are not talking about section 16 are we?

Mr. Singer: No, no. But my colleague asked for the minister's assurance that what is set out in section 16 really wouldn't happen.

Mrs. Campbell: That's right.

Mr. Singer: And the minister explained that it wasn't going to happen. Now that the minister has made that interesting explanation, I draw his attention to section 16 where deputy ministers, and/or any body else really, can do it if they get the authority. And it would not be done in the name of the minister; but would be in the name of the deputy minister or any officer or officers. So you can go all the way down to the janitor and give him power to award contracts if you get an order in council.

Mr. P. G. Givens (York-Forest Hill): The minister didn't know it was there, did he?

Mr. Chairman: Shall this subsection stand as part of the bill?

Mr. Singer: Oh, no.

Mrs. Campbell: No.

Some hon. members: No.

Mr. Chairman: I'll put the question.

Those in favour of section 6, subsection (3) standing as part of the bill, will please say "aye".

All those opposed will please say "nay."

In my opinion the "ayes" have it.

Some hon. members: Oh!

Mr. Singer: Isn't that ridiculous? What a perversion of that so-called venerable position. We'll never vote for you again.

Mr. Chairman: Thank you!

Shall we stack this along with the earlier vote?

Mr. E. R. Good (Waterloo North): They are really decrepit over there. Surely they can get on their feet when they lose a vote.

Mr. Chairman: I must say I'm to blame for that. I sort of sneaked that question in.

Mr. Singer: Oh no; the government was asleep, as usual.

Mr. Chairman: Just a minute.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Chairman: Is there any other comment, question or amendment to any other section of the bill?

Mr. Singer: Yes, Mr. Chairman, I have a comment about section 8, subsection (3).

Section 8, subsection (3) says "Any disposal by the minister of real property or any interest therein by way of grant or lease or otherwise is subject to the approval of the Lieutenant Governor in Council."

In my remarks in the second reading debate I indicated that it would be advisable if even that provision be tightened up very substantially. I pointed out to the minister that there was a variety of statutes which have different provisions. There was the statute—which was Bill 13 in 1972—that was, as I say, sneaked through in the wee small closing hours of the last session.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: The Attorney General (Mr. Bales) did that.

Mr. Singer: Yes. It allows land obtained under the Housing Development Act to be disposed of on such terms and conditions as the minister may determine. Even the Minister of Government Services must admit that provision goes far too far. It hasn't even the very refined restrictions that this minister as asking for himself—approval of the Lieutenant Governor and a determination that the land is no longer required for government use.

I asked the minister to tighten these up. He has refused, so there is no point proposing an amendment which would ask him to do something he has already refused.

What I am proposing at this point, Mr. Chairman, is an amendment to section 8, subsection (3), which will override the provisions sneaked through by the Attorney General in the Act to amend the Housing Development Act. Therefore I move that in section 8(3) the word "minister" be deleted and inserted in lieu thereof the words "the ministries and agencies of government."

If that amendment is accepted by the minister—and I think he can do no less because surely the minister would want this Act which he brings in to apply to all phases of government—it would successfully override that very sneaky piece of business the government carried out when they put through an Act to amend the Housing Development Act.

Mr. Chairman: Mr. Singer has moved that in section 8, subsection (3), the word "minister" be deleted and the words "the ministries and agencies of government" inserted.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Mr. Chairman, if I might make some comments about the amendment of my hon. friend from Downsview, you will recall, the wording of section 5, that is the wording put before us by the minister himself. It calls for his supervision over the ministries and agencies of the government.

In other words, there is no policy established which leaves the agencies—and a number of them have been referred to and in fact listed here this afternoon—without the supervision of the Ministry of Government Services. If there was ever a place where such supervision and uniformity in the application of the law was needed, it is certainly in this particular area which governs the application of the sale, the lease or the handling otherwise of government properties, particularly land.

You may recall, Mr. Chairman, that the statute to which the member for Downsview was referring and which was designated Bill 213 in the last session, An Act to amend the Housing Development Act, gave great new powers of expropriation and sale of government lands to various government emanations, particularly the Housing Corp.

You may also be aware that it was introduced at the end of the session with the appropriate assurances from the various ministers, including the Attorney General himself, that it was in fact not an expansion of the already tremendous powers of government having to do with expropriation.

You will recall, Mr. Chairman, that the government does have these powers of expropriation, but it has not got the power to expropriate land which can then be sold for private purposes. It is surely reasonable for the minister to consider the amendment put forward by the member for Downsview in light of this variety of powers that have been granted to the various emanations and agencies of government.

The argument for them to be generally supervised by the Ministry of Government Services is unanswerable; and this would provide the kind of general supervision which surely every member of the administration, including the Attorney General, would support.

This matter has been brought to the minister's attention, I am sure privately as well as publicly, by a number of citizens in the Pickering area and elsewhere. The impression is widespread that the government, through subterfuge, got the very powers that are necessary for them to proceed with that policy of buying up in every case possible, and by expropriation where necessary, lands in Pickering, in the new town—that used to be called Cedarwood, they are now calling it North Pickering—and then for the subsequent sale of those lands to private entrepreneurs. And not for public housing or rent-gear-to-income dwellings or anything like that, but simply for the profit of private entrepreneurs.

Now these powers ought certainly to be curbed in the very rational and thoughtful way, the useful and democratic way, that is put forward by this amendment.

Mr. Chairman, surely the members of the House should give it their careful consideration and support; and frankly I would like to hear the Attorney General's views on it.

Mr. Chairman: Does anyone else wish to speak to this amendment?

Hon. Mr. Snow: Mr. Chairman, I can only accept responsibility in my bill for the disposition of land or of real property under the power or under the jurisdiction of my ministry.

So I cannot consider the proposed amendment, which would be a matter of government policy. Accepting such an amendment would be giving my ministry powers beyond those which it has at the present time.

Mr. Chairman: Ready for the question? Those in favour of Mr. Singer's motion will please say "aye".

Those opposed will please say "nay".

In my opinion the "nays" have it.

Mr. Renwick: Well we will want that stacked.

Mr. Singer: We do.

Mr. Chairman: Five members stood up, so it will be stacked.

Any other comments, questions or amendments in a later section of this bill?

Mr. Renwick: Mr. Chairman, to section 10.

Mr. Chairman: Section 10? Anything before section 10?

Section 9 agreed to.

On section 10:

Mr. Renwick: Would the minister give some indication of his answer to my question about the rates of pay that he requires to be paid by contractors when he contracts out services to be rendered, principally in the cleaning and maintenance field?

Hon. Mr. Snow: Mr. Chairman, we do not have any definite requirements or qualifications in that type of contract. We do in the construction contract; it comes under the Fair Wages Act, or the Government Contracts and Fair Wages Act is the wording I think.

This does establish a minimum wage that must be paid under those contracts and it is set out by the provincial Ministry of Labour, in conjunction with the federal Department of Labour, based on the basic construction wage for that particular area. But our maintenance contracts do not come under that legislation.

Mr. Renwick: I take it that what that means is that if one has some clout, such as the people in the construction industry have, one gets some protection; but if you don't have any clout you get no protection, is that about it?

Doesn't the minister think that this is an area where he can do a great deal to standardize and to raise the level of wages of people engaged in providing that kind of service?

You see, the government in this field can provide the kind of leadership which is essential. It is not as though they are the only contractors in the field, the only people who contract out these services. There are an immense number of other business concerns which contract out cleaning services in offices across the whole of Metropolitan Toronto.

It is one of the most depressed areas in which people can be engaged. And one of the reasons for this is that it is off-beat. In other words, it takes place when people aren't around; nobody is terribly interested in the level of wages which are paid or conditions of labour or the hours which are worked.

I'm suggesting to the minister that this is one of the areas where, in consort with his colleague, the Minister of Labour (Mr. Guindon), he can certainly make certain that at least the minimum requirements of the Employment Standards Act are met, and where he can make certain there is some punishment provided, or some penalty imposed on the contractor who fails to meet those levels.

In addition to that, there is a very real opportunity in this area for the minister to do something over and above the minimum requirements with respect to labour in the Employment Standards Act. I think this is a significant role for the government to play in this particular field.

I re-emphasize what I said at the beginning of my remarks: These people generally have no clout. Many of them are recent immigrants to the country. Many of them are women who are trying to supplement the family income. For many of these women it is the only job they're able to get for the purpose of providing for their family's support. These people who require something more than to be dealt with only through the avenue of complaint available to them—complaining through the employment standards director of the Ministry of Labour.

I would ask the minister if he would consult with his colleague, the Minister of Labour, to see whether or not something can be done to have this government set the standards. Across Canada, and in parts of the maritime provinces particularly, it was the railways that provided leadership in raising the level of wages.

I'm suggesting in a very minor way that it's possible for this ministry in that field to set the kind of standards which other business enterprises will then respond to—I believe willingly; but if not willingly, then unwillingly—and assist in raising the conditions of what can only be described next to the security guards operation in the province, as people being employed at subsistence or lower than subsistence wages. I would invite the minister to give me some assurance that he would at least discuss the matter with his colleague.

Mrs. Campbell: Is the minister going to respond to that question before I put one?

I wonder if the minister could explain to me two functions with reference to contracts. First, the construction contracts. Does he set the specifications for these construction contracts or are the specifications set, by the ordering department as it were?

Secondly, when people are moved from one location to another—and this is partly following what the hon. member for Riverdale has said—who is responsible for the working conditions under which people are placed when a move takes place? I would point out specifically, the removal of people from the OHIP offices on Yonge St. to Overlea. Would that be something this department would be taking care of, or would it be the ordering department, because I can't follow it in this statute as proposed.

Hon. Mr. Snow: Mr. Chairman, I'll respond to the two hon. members.

Firstly, the comments regarding labour rates made by the hon. member for Riverdale. I personally do not accept the fact, or the suggestion, that the government should necessarily pay higher rates for services than private industry.

We are very competitive in the market. We call tenders. We give everybody the opportunity to bid. We do not have a minimum wage clause in the contract for cleaning services. I don't think it falls within the purview of my department or my ministry to set the minimum wage rates for the Province of Ontario. That is the responsibility of my colleague, the Minister of Labour. Whatever rates he and the government establish, of course, my ministry would have to live with. As I mentioned before, we do have the so-called Fair Wage Act, the Government Contracts, Hours and Wages Act, with which I personally disagree. I do not think we should have that Act on the statutes of this province any more.

Mr. R. Gisborn (Hamilton East): Because the minister comes from the construction industry, that's why! He's the wrong minister for that job.

Hon. Mr. Snow: I just think that it's a complete muddle up of the Labour rates. The industry is organized to the state today that I don't think there's any place in Ontario where anyone is exploiting any construction labour.

Mr. Gisborn: The government opened the door for the exploiters though.

Hon. Mr. Snow: To answer the other hon. member, the specifications for construction contracts, for the materials and the quality of the workmanship, are basically set by my ministry; but of course with the consultation of the client ministries. The operating ministries are clients to my ministry, the same as a company would be the client of an architect. The architect sets the specifications within the guidelines established by the client ministries. In our case, we establish the specifications within the guidelines of the client ministries, but having the expertise in this area we have a considerable input in recommending the proper specifications.

The hon. member mentioned working conditions and moving of employees from one building to the other. I'm afraid that falls outside of the responsibility of my ministry.

Mr. Chairman: Shall section 10 stand as part of the bill?

Carried!

Anything before section 16?

Mr. Renwick: Section 13.

Mr. Chairman: The member for Riverdale on section 13.

Mr. Renwick: Is the minister satisfied that this is an adequate ambit for the only section of the bill that contains a reference to the tender operation that he is engaged in? It's a very limited operation when it relates only to construction, renovation or repair of a public work as areas where there is an obligation to call tenders. Is there any other indication, either by regulation or elsewhere, that he is going to deal with the tender question on commodities in other areas?

Hon. Mr. Snow: Mr. Chairman, it's not in this bill, but it is certainly in the specific policies of my ministry that within reason all purchases are by tender, whether by invitation or by advertisement. We do use the invitation tender system at some times if there is some urgent requirement for a particular material. We keep on hand a list of the people who normally bid and do certain types of work.

In fact, even when there is an advertised tender call I think a memo is sent out to many people advising them, because sometimes people will miss seeing an advertisement in the newspaper.

I know in one particular case where we were calling a demolition contract, although it was advertised publicly I think about 25 demolition contractors were notified that this job was open for bids.

We do have it in this Act, stating that we do not have to call tenders, really, for estimates where the work is less than $10,000. But I assure members we call tenders for jobs sometimes for a few hundred dollars, even in the construction or repair field. In the case of an emergency, where we must get work done immediately, I would report this to the House in accordance with the clauses in the bill.

Mr. Chairman: Does section 13 stand as part of the bill then?

Section 13 agreed to.

Mr. Chairman: The member for Downsview.

On section 16.

Mr. Singer: Mr. Chairman, I don't see any necessity for this section at all. Whatever is going to be done should be done only in the name of the minister and it shouldn't be done in the name of the deputy minister or any officer or officers of the ministry.

Certainly nobody really expects the minister is going to do all of these things himself personally, but what we are providing here is a vehicle whereby the minister can slough off what should be his democratic responsibility. I don't see, really, what you achieve by allowing the Lieutenant Governor in Council, by order in council, to say that these things can be done by the deputy minister or any other officer or officers.

As I suggested when the original Act went through, this kind of section would allow the eventual delegation of responsibility to the lowliest hourly-rated employee you have.

The minister is going to say "We would never do that." Maybe you wouldn't ever do it, but why should the responsibility be taken away from the minister? That's where the responsibility lies. That's where it should continue to lie and I can see no reason at all for the continuance of section 16 in this statute.

Therefore, Mr. Chairman, I am not going to move an amendment, but I advise you that we are opposed to the inclusion of section 16 in this Act.

Mr. Renwick: Mr. Chairman, we are equally opposed to it. It is an old argument and there has been no cogent reason ever put forward by the government since this matter was first raised some years ago. I don't know why the government must insist on having this power of delegation in the bill.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Mr. Chairman, another point on that. The minister has made the point previously that he is not going to establish personally the tenders and look at all the land and open the envelopes and so on; and no one is suggesting he do that.

We are quite prepared to vote money for him to hire people to do these things for him, but when the statute formally delegates the authority it simply means that the minister is no longer responsible in the eyes of the law.

If it doesn't mean that, he does not need this section in order to hire people to put stamps on the envelopes and open the envelopes, and maybe even give him advice as to which tender is the lower or lowest or that sort of thing.

I feel, Mr. Chairman, that there is a serious misunderstanding on the part of the minister and some of his colleagues who have felt over the years that this section should be included. If you are, in fact, delegating the powers to expropriate land and decide on purchases, this is a terrible thing and something which surely you, yourself, would not support. If you are simply hiring staff to do certain jobs under your direct or indirect supervision, then of course we would support you in it. I can't see why this section is needed; and it should not be included.

Hon. Mr. Snow: Mr. Chairman, I believe if we go back to page 1 of the bill, somewhere it says the ministry shall be under the direction of the minister. Certainly I don't read this section 16, in the same way as the hon. members who have spoken. Of course, I haven't got my QC yet.

Mr. Singer: That's a good excuse.

Hon. Mr. Snow: As far as this is concerned, there is authority to delegate authority to carry out certain duties within the ministry. I think it is only 100 per cent necessary and certainly I don't think any delegation of authority relieves the minister of the total authority for the ministry.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: You already have the authority.

Hon. Mr. Snow: You do not have the ability to delegate without this delegation of authority.

Mr. Chairman: Shall section 16 stand as part of the bill?

Those in favour of section 16 standing as part of the bill will please say "aye."

Those opposed will please say "nay." In my opinion, the "ayes" have it.

Shall we stack this along with the others?
Stacked.

Is there any other comment, question or amendment on any later section of the bill?

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Might I, on a point of order, make a suggestion to the House leader, through you Mr. Chairman. If it is his intention when the vote is called to have the whips go out for 15 or 20 minutes, maybe we could vote at 8 o'clock?

Mr. Singer: Do you want to vote now?

Hon. E. A. Winkler (Chairman, Management Board of Cabinet): I rather thought we might return to the Throne Speech debate this evening.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Well, we can vote right at eight o'clock.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: I prefer to call the vote now.

Mr. Chairman: I think if everybody holds their seats, a very short bell might be appropriate, if I might be so bold as to suggest it.

Call in the members.

We have to ring the bells for a few minutes.

Mr. J. E. Stokes (Thunder Bay): Let's vote now.

Mr. Chairman: Call in the members.

Order please. We have four matters to be determined. We will have to place these separately because the voting will be different.

Mr. Singer moved that in section 5 the words "be directed towards providing" be deleted and the word "provides" substituted therefore.

The committee divided on Mr. Singer's motion which was negatived on the following vote:

Clerk of the House: Mr. Chairman, the "ayes" are 30, the "nays" 37.

Mr. Chairman: I declare the motion lost. Section 5 shall stand as part of the bill.

The committee divided on whether section 6, subsection (3) shall stand as part of the bill, which was approved on a stacked vote, the same count as the first vote reversed.

Mr. Chairman: I declare the motion carried, the section stands as a part of the bill.

The committee divided on Mr. Singer's motion that in section 8, subsection (3), the word "minister" be deleted and the words "the ministries and agencies of government" be substituted therefor, which was negatived on a stacked vote, the same count as the first vote.

Mr. Chairman: I declare the motion lost.

The committee divided on the question of whether section 16 stand as part of the bill, which was approved on a stacked vote the same count as the first vote reversed.

Mr. Chairman: I declare the motion carried, the section stands as a part of the bill.

The committee divided on reporting Bill 3, which was approved on a stacked vote, the same count as the first vote reversed.

Bill 3 reported.

Hon. Mr. Winkler moved the committee rise and report and ask for leave to sit again.

Motion agreed to.

The House resumed, Mr. Speaker in the chair.

Mr. Chairman: Mr. Speaker, the committee of the whole House begs to report one bill without amendment and asks for leave to sit again.

Report agreed to.

It being 6 of the clock, the House took recess.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF ONTARIO

TUESDAY, APRIL 3, 1973

The House resumed at 8 o'clock, p.m.

THIRD READINGS

The following bills were given third reading upon motion:

Bill 3, the Ministry of Government Services Act, 1973.

Bill 66, An Act to amend the Forest Fires Prevention Act.

Clerk of the House: The first order; resuming the adjourned debate on the amendment to the motion for an address in reply to the speech of the Honourable the Lieutenant Governor at the opening of the session.

THRONE SPEECH DEBATE

Mr. T. A. Wardle (Beaches-Woodbine): Mr. Speaker, the municipality of Metropolitan Toronto has become one of the best known areas in the world. The Metropolitan Toronto area and this system of government have been studied by people from all levels of government from many countries. The advent of the metropolitan form of government in 1953 by an Act of this Legislature set this area on the road to becoming a great city complex.

Every year we have some 40,000 to 50,000 more people here in Metro and this, of course, causes great strain on all the services required. At the heart of this expanding area is the city of Toronto. I know it is a desire of the people of this province that their capital city should be one of which they may be proud. A great city is not only a great place to live in but a great place to visit; a city that provides a good living and a good environment for its citizens.

Mr. J. E. Stokes (Thunder Bay): But one wouldn't want to live there!

Mr. Wardle: It is most important, however, that a city be well planned and a suitable place in which to live, work and raise a family.

Mr. Stokes: One wouldn't want to live there!

Mr. Wardle: One of the most important decisions of the Toronto city council in 1962 was a decision to build a new city hall. Two of my colleagues of that time are with me now in the Legislature. Mr. Speaker, $28.5 million seems to be a lot of money and it did seem to be a lot of money in those days.

The decision of the council was an outward and visible sign of faith in the future of this city and this province. Since that decision was made the old armouries on University Ave. were demolished and a new courthouse was built. Following this, private industry built in downtown Toronto and many old or obsolete office buildings were replaced by new structures.

All this is helping to make Toronto's downtown a pleasant place to work, for leisure and recreation. It is most important, however, that any development—public or private—make a contribution to a better and a more vital city.

This, Mr. Speaker, has been recognized in the past few days in particular by this provincial government. Many American cities have been faced with the problem of people leaving their homes or businesses in the central core for the suburbs. In the mid-town area numerous stores have become either vacant or boarded up and obsolete buildings are standing empty.

In many American cities a person would not be safe visiting these areas after dark. At a dinner some time ago I asked a visitor from an American city what impressed him most about Toronto and his answer was that he and his wife walked a downtown street without feeling in danger after dark. He said this was not possible at home. It seems most important that people should be able — not only in the downtown area but in all areas of this city and province—to walk on their streets without fear.

I welcomed the decision of the Metropolitan Toronto police force to initiate a programme of two-man cruisers and to have more men on foot patrol in our neighbourhoods. The new communications network of the Metropolitan Toronto police will enable them to respond within seconds to a call for assistance from a citizen. At the present time the system is so overloaded that calls take a number of minutes and we realize the necessity of having the police department respond to a call for assistance as soon as possible.

Mr. Speaker, I said earlier that it is most important that a city be well planned. I have certain quotations and information from a magazine called "The Plain Truth" of December, 1970, regarding some American cities. This article points out the increasing problems being faced by big cities all over the world.

On the other side of the Atlantic one half of all Britons are already living in seven great multi-city chains—London, Manchester, Birmingham, Glasgow, Leeds, Liverpool and Newcastle and they are crowded cities. Britain has 50 per cent more people per square mile than teeming, populous India. Some 55 million Britons are compressed together on a small island only three-fifths the size of California.

On this crowded island London is but a small area, yet one-sixteenth of the British people call this city home. Tokyo, Paris, Calcutta are other teeming world metropolises. All have big-city problems of congestion and pollution. City planners admit they have little or no control—especially in the United States—over limiting the size of these cities. Of all the world's major and medium cities only London, New Delhi and Brasilia could be said to have made any real progress in this area.

There is a reason why people flock to cities in such uncontrolled numbers. Those coming to cities or already living in them expect to find greater rewards, not increased trouble. People leave an area because they hope to live better somewhere else. They look to cities and suburban centres to provide them with higher-paying jobs, increased cultural opportunities, greater education benefits and more freedom of choice in lifestyle.

Mr. Speaker, at this particular point in the development of this Metropolitan Toronto area we should have in mind the words of the Chinese philosopher, Confucius, who said—and this is a true saying, Mr. Speaker: "A wise man learns from experience; a wiser man learns from the experience of others."

From this article I read first of the experience of New York City, a city that is said to have now become uncontrollable.

Mr. J. F. Foulds (Port Arthur): All sayings are true sayings, because somebody said them.

Mr. Wardle: Some other cities in the USA also have problems, problems that do not appear to have a solution, and I hope we here in the Metropolitan Toronto area can benefit from their experience.

I read, Mr. Speaker, a few columns from page 6, of this particular magazine:

More than one million taxpayers have fled New York City. As a result, the possible tax revenue is diminishing. For those hardy souls with a city address the tax burden has doubled in 10 years. For those who can afford to leave, there frankly isn't much incentive for staying. Meanwhile, the New York City slums are literally becoming "disaster areas." Said one senator: "Expert witnesses predict the city will add 75,000 potential homeless annually for the next 15 years." This was likened to 15 major hurricane disasters sweeping across New York City each year.

There is a paradox in all this. Even though homeless individuals are added to the city's woes, approximately 130,000 apartments and houses have been left to rot in the city within the past five years.

Other cities are suffering a similar "ghost town" fate. In Detroit, buildings are being abandoned at the rate of over 500 yearly. Cleveland finds itself with an added 800 empty apartments and houses yearly. In Philadelphia the rate is 25,000 abandoned dwellings per year. Chicago comes out with a figure of 1,800 structures a year suffering a similar desolation fate.

While houses are being abandoned, the streets are getting more crowded than ever. Today, the vehicular pace in downtown New York City is a pace of six to eight miles per hour. In the horse and buggy year of 1907 the rate of travel was a speedier 11.5 mph. Meanwhile, major cities are increasingly plagued by violent crime. Dr. Milton Eisenhower, chairman of the National Commission on the Causes and Prevention of Violence, warns that "violent crime in the United States is primarily a phenomenon of large cities. The 26 cities with 500,000 or more residents and containing about 17 per cent of the total population contribute about 45 per cent to the total reported major violent crimes."

The six cities with one million or more residents—of which New York City is chief—have 10 per cent of the population and 30 per cent of the crime.

The rate of reported New York City Crime in 1968 was 21.8 per cent above that of 1967. Street crimes rose even more dramatically. Robbery was up 50 per cent on the streets of New York.

Americans used to sing about the "Sidewalks of New York." Today, you can get yourself robbed, mugged or killed on those same sidewalks. . . .

This pinpoints the biggest problem of New York City — or any other city: the human element. New Yorkers, like other city dwellers by and large have lost their human compassion and their desire to help others.

The reaction of an out-of-towner quoted below illustrates this tragic big-city problem:

"When I first came to New York it seemed like a nightmare. As soon as I got off the train at Grand Central I was caught up in pushing, shoving crowd on 42nd St. Sometimes people bumped into me without apology; what really frightened me was to see two people literally engaged in combat for the possession of a cab.

"Why were they [city people] so rushed?"

"Even drunks on the street were bypassed without a glance. People didn't seem to care about each other at all."

The problem — the effect of the city on the human mind—is increasingly the subject of concerned experiments and studies.

As an example of what can happen in the type of city where people just don't care, I would like to list the case, which we all remember so well, of a young woman by the name of Kitty Genovese. She was chased by an attacker and, after repeated attempts, finally killed. Many people saw what was going on and could have come to her aid, but none did. Where will all this end?

Mr. Speaker, many people are pessimistic about the future of cities of this type. As John W. Gardner, a former chairman of the Urban Coalition, said: "Our great cities have lost command of themselves and their futures . . . They have reached the end of their rope."

But why haven't we in this city or in this country taken the necessary steps to solve the city problems? We have the records of cities of past ages; ancient Rome, medieval cities, the cities of the early industrial revolution should all have served as examples of everything wrong with our urban way of life.

Former US Housing and Urban Development Secretary George Romney said, "In too many cases the city lacks a clear definition of what it is or ought to be." He asked: "What is a city? Does anybody know?" What is a great city?

Mr. E. Sargent (Grey-Bruce): Come up to Owen Sound. We'll show him!

Mr. Wardle: Foreseeing the crush of future population growth, a committee of public officials in the United States has recommended that the United States build 110 new cities, and these are said to be ideal cities of 100,000 people each. Ten other cities also are planned that will contain at least one million people each.

Mr. Speaker, how may people in this Legislature know what is an ideal city? What is their hope for their city? What is their hope for their own town or village? Does anyone have a clear definition?

We cannot start with cities as we know them. We know the failures of cities. So we have to decide first what the future should be, but bearing in mind what is a suitable city, having in mind the quality of life.

Now, Mr. Chairman—

Mr. Sargent: Not Chairman—Speaker.

Mr. Wardle: Mr. Speaker, I hope the planning boards of the government departments—be they provincial, metropolitan or city planning departments—responsible for the planning of the cities and towns of Ontario, will always bear in mind the human element so that the cities, towns, villages and the rural areas of this province will become enjoyable places to live and work and play.

Mr. Chairman, I should like—

An hon. member: Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Wardle: Mr. Speaker—

Mr. V. M. Singer (Downsview): Mr. Speaker, tell him who you are.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Wardle: Mr. Speaker, I should like finally—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Wardle: —to bring to the attention of this House a matter of great concern, I am sure, to the people of this province.

Mr. Singer: Oh, no doubt it is.

Mr. Wardle: I believe it is of urgent concern. This matter is the utilization of the large tracts of recreational land we have in this province. I welcome in the Throne Speech the intention of the government to provide a parkway belt system from Dundas in the west to Oshawa in the east.

Mr. Foulds: The road to Oshawa is paved with good intentions.

An hon. member: Don't worry about it.

Mr. Wardle: This parkway belt will provide for the orderly channelling of services and utilities, which are the essential support system of urban life, while preserving open space for urban communities.

Mr. Speaker, this is so important as we see the cities and towns of this part of the province becoming larger. It will offer welcome green spaces and provide much-needed enjoyment and recreation for the people of this part of the province. As I mentioned before, the use of recreational land, both Crown land and land in private hands, is very important to our future. I understand that Crown land may be leased rather than bought by people who are not citizens of Canada. This does not seem to prevent—

Mr. Foulds: Even those who are not citizens cannot buy Crown land.

Mr. Wardle: —non-Canadians from buying up recreational land in Ontario from private owners, or from tax sales.

Mr. A. J. Roy (Ottawa East): Did the Chairman of the Management Board write that speech?

Mr. Wardle: The recreational lands in Ontario are now under great pressure, not only from residents of Ontario but from our neighbours to the south.

Mr. Singer: The government should make him Treasurer.

Mr. Wardle: The population of the United States of America is now 210,361,000—

Mr. Foulds: And 473.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Wardle: —and nearly 50 million of this number are along or close to the border of Ontario. States like Pennsylvania, Ohio, New York, Michigan, Minnesota and Illinois are all within short driving distance. Much of our recreational land is already owned by Americans, and as the land in the United States becomes more and more urbanized, Ontario will be a prime target for buyers bidding higher and higher for choice recreational land. The effect of this, of course, will be the driving up of prices, and the young families with children living in Ontario—

Mr. E. J. Bounsall (Windsor West): Control the price of land.

Mr. Wardle: —will not be able to compete in the purchasing of a cottage or land on which to build a summer home.

Mr. F. Laughren (Nickel Belt): Land banks.

Mr. Wardle: A family in Ontario should have the first right to buy available recreational land in their own province.

Mr. M. Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): That's right. Tell the government that.

Mr. Wardle: I am not referring to commercial or industrial land that may be purchased by non-Canadians and used for those purposes. We have a great heritage here in Ontario, with a good part of our province undeveloped.

Mr. Cassidy: We should sell it to the Americans?

Mr. Wardle: However, steps should be taken for restriction of the sale of recreational land to non-Canadians.

I am speaking only of a restriction on the purchase or resale of recreational lands to anyone but Canadians. I believe we need legislation to prevent non-Canadians from purchasing recreational real estate in the Province of Ontario.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for St. George.

Mrs. M. Campbell (St. George): Mr. Speaker—

An hon. member: Sock it to them.

Mrs. Campbell: I rise, Mr. Speaker, with some trepidation in this my maiden address in this House—

Interjections by hon members.

Mrs. Campbell: I do so, Mr. Speaker, because I have listened to the Areopagitics which flowed so eloquently from the golden voices of the orators of this council, with legislatures—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mrs. Campbell: It takes me back.

Mr. P. G. Givens (York-Forest Hill): Next thing we know, we'll call her Mr. Chairman.

Mrs. Campbell: Not a chance, Mr. Speaker.

So I was of the opinion that perhaps by the content of what I would have to say I might make up in some small measure for my inadequacies as an orator. Then I met with my leader (Mr. R. F. Nixon) and I was advised that protocol made it almost impossible for me to enter into anything of a controversial nature which might provoke any disturbance in those opposite, at least, in this House.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mrs. Campbell: Mr. Speaker, I have found that walking the streets and knocking on doors did not physically fit me for the acrobatics in which I now find I must engage if I am to be able to find a point in time when I may put a question. I ask, Mr. Speaker, that I may be forgiven if I do make some references which might, at least, be mildly disturbing although I shall be as gentle as possible in my discussion about the proposals in the Throne Speech.

One of the things which has concerned me — and I am delighted that my friend, the hon. member for Beaches-Woodbine (Mr. Wardle), shares to some extent my concern — is what appears to be a lack of that very quality of humanity and of human warmth in the proposals from government. I am concerned, deeply, that apparently there is an intention to continue regional government proposals without referral to the people who are involved in the regions and deeply concerned and anxious and frustrated at their lack of a voice.

Surely it is important for us to stop and think of the effect of what amounts virtually to closure; not permitting, for example, the people of Streetsville to be fully heard. This was a position which was taken by the Ontario Municipal Board, an appointed body, and confirmed by the cabinet. Surely if we are proceeding in this direction we can only look for further distress, further concern and further problems?

Mr. Speaker, I don't think there has been adequate communication with the people across this province on the effect of the new formula of assessment and the way in which the residential burden is being increased. Oddly enough it is not only by assessment but also taxation, which is a strange phenomenon in our society which doesn't appear to take place in the United States where so often people in cities increase their assessment in order to keep the tax rate down.

Coupled with this and the fact that the policies in planning and the thrust in planning seem to be taking the autonomy away from the local municipalities, and the fact that the term of office has been cut, it is pretty obvious that the local municipality cannot plan those sophisticated plans which they are really required to do. In two years I really don't think Metro, with or without the assistance of this government, will even resolve the problem of garbage disposal.

I am concerned, Mr. Speaker, as to whether or not it is the policy of this government that the Ontario Municipal Board should be sitting discussing proposals in a portion of the city which falls within the riding of St. George, and treating the people who appear before it as citizens with contempt and certainly with an obvious bias. I am wondering whether this is a policy of government or whether perhaps one might consider looking into the matter.

I had hoped with all my soul that in this House there would be introduced in this session a modern and enlightened piece of legislation which would bring our family law into the 20th century. I recognize, Mr. Speaker, that of course there is a Law Reform Commission but surely someone must direct the priorities of that commission? It does seem awful that we are functioning in our family courts today under legislation which probably has not greatly changed during the lifetime of most of the people — even including me — sitting in this chamber.

Mr. Speaker, I would have asked the question—as I say, if I could have developed my acrobatics more speedily—when the city of Toronto, being charged with administration of justice, led the continent in the provision of pre-trial counselling services, why, when the province took over administration of justice, was this eliminated apparently on the report of a civil servant who, according to my information never even discussed it with the judges involved in that court?

I won't say, Mr. Speaker, that the pre-counselling service effected reconciliations in any great number. What it did achieve was the opportunity for two people to separate with some degree of friendliness and to prevent the children of a marriage from becoming guided missiles between two warring parents. Today, Mr. Speaker, the judges in that court are truly intake workers and there is no way that marriages can be protected or assisted when that pre-trial counselling service is not available.

It also strikes me as strange that at a time when we have tickets of leave in this country for convicted murderers, the only way in which a judge of this family court can enforce an order is by committal to jail for contempt of court.

Mr. V. M. Singer (Downsview): Good point!

Mrs. Campbell: I would certainly urge that this government show, as the hon. member indicates, its concern for humanity and give some priority direction, if that is possible, to the commission.

There are many other areas of concern. If we look at the city itself, we see the difficulties of group after group. Be they teachers, be they students, be they nurses, all of them are confused and uncertain because of the confused and uncertain policies enunciated to date.

I may say, Mr. Speaker, that I was most grateful to the hon. Minister of Health (Mr. Potter) for his announcement as to the stipends for interning students. However, I wonder if he knows just what is the position of the nurses in the hospitals today in Toronto and across the province. If they are in their course now and in hospital training they cannot find out even this simple fact—and they've asked me and I can't find it out, Mr. Speaker: "If we miss one eight-week rotation in our course where are we? Do we have to go to a community college and start all over again? Our course is gone." Yet even on that simple question the hospitals advise that they do not have the answers.

Surely this oversight, if that is what it is, ought to be corrected. If, Mr. Speaker, the ministry in question is not aware of the answers, I would hope that those answers would be forthcoming soon, because these young nurses training in hospitals have sufficient tensions without having to face up to this type of uncertainty.

We have been told—at least the students have been told—that tuition fees will not be increased. But they have not been told, as I understand it, what the policy is with reference to the loan ceiling and whether or not that is to be increased.

It seems to me that when we are trying to keep our young people in post-secondary education, partly on the basis of a very real and proper philosophy of accessibility, but also perhaps at least in some part to keep them out of the labour market until we can sort out some of our basic problems, surely they are entitled to know that the ground rules are not going to be changed from under them from time to time. If we have difficulty planning fiscally here, I think we should be filled with sympathy for the student who needs to be able to plan and cannot do so at this time.

I have perhaps one further observation, Mr. Speaker. It is sad to me to notice with what frequency we look across at blue chairs. I am afraid I cannot always see the rest of the government benches on this side. I try.

Mr. E. Sargent (Grey-Bruce): The member is not missing anything.

Mrs. Campbell: I am concerned, Mr. Speaker, about the increasing momentum of government, other than through this legislative process. It concerns me deeply. I would hope that there would be enunciated at some point a return to the policy of discussion and debate with some input from this side in the important decision-making processes. I would hope that we would return to the use of the standing committees so that the bills could be more readily debated and understood. I would hope that we would not be asked to approve bills without adequate notice and adequate opportunity to discuss them.

Mr. Speaker, I trust in what I have said, in what I hope you will find to have been a brief maiden speech, that I have made some points which will be heard and discussed during this session, and that have not transgressed too deeply against the protocol of the situation of this moment. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for High Park.

Mr. M. Shulman (High Park): Mr. Speaker, it's been some months since we have had the opportunity to have a little chat—actually four months since we had that terrible evening, you may recall, which caused you so much pain and difficulty, and for which I apologize for embarrassing one of your confrères. But more of that later. I was very impressed by the previous speakers tonight. Of course, they have a great deal of experience at city council. Unfortunately, I haven't had those opportunities to polish my deliveries, but I have polished deliveries of a different type. So you'll excuse me.

Mr. P. G. Givens (York-Forest Hill): The member got wound up in his umbilical cord on that one.

Mr. Shulman: Thank you. I want to compliment the previous member (Mrs. Campbell) on her maiden speech. I will try, as she has done, not to irritate anyone in the House because I understand that is the proper way to do things, sort of mid-season as we are with no elections coming up, not even any by-elections.

Mr. J. R. Breithaupt (Kitchener): Not now.

Mr. Shulman: So I, too, shall restrain myself and be completely apolitical, Mr. Speaker, more or less. I would like to compliment you. I don't have many opportunities to do that so I want to take this opportunity of complimenting you on the way you have been conducting the question period for the last two days. We appear finally to have returned the question period to the members. It's a welcome and long overdue change for which I and many other back benchers thank you.

Mr. A. J. Roy (Ottawa East): Now for the bad news.

Mr. J. F. Foulds (Port Arthur): I often wondered why you had that high-backed chair, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Shulman: Before going into the major subject of my speech, Mr. Speaker, I would like to talk very briefly about the most recent business venture into which I have entered, with your help and presumably your approval. As you know, I have opened a bookstore down in room 215 in the north wing, which is doing very well; we have sold out three times and had to reorder. I understand that, being in this building, I am exempt from business tax and sales tax—

Mr. Givens: What about "sin tax"?

Mr. Shulman: And sin tax—due to your control of the building, and I thank you for that. We are doing very well.

I thought it might be of interest to the members this evening if I could read into Hansard certain portions of the two books which we are now selling so that all of them could realize the enterprise in which we are all now associated, since it is taking place from our building.

I have here the two books, Mr. Speaker, and perhaps later in my speech, if there is time this evening—the member for Grey-Bruce (Mr. Sargent) has asked me to try to talk as long as I can because he doesn't want to go on tonight; so perhaps we can fill in the time by reading those two books. Usually it is the other way around. Usually he says, "Shut up." "Sit down." "What's all this nonsense?" But finally he has seen the error of his ways and he realizes that what I have to say is of some importance; so I am going to try to please my hon. friend as much as I can this evening.

Mr. Speaker, on a more serious note, tonight I want to continue the series of speeches which I have been giving since June 1970 about organized crime in this province. But before I turn to that particular subject, I want to come back to the book business again.

Last Tuesday was an average day for crime in this city. According to the statistics, two persons were wounded, 20 others were beaten up; citizens reported four robberies, 50 burglaries and 100 other major crimes. In addition to these, last Tuesday there were 100 automobile accidents causing 40 personal injuries and there were 80 juvenile offences.

And while all this routine mayhem and pillaging was taking place in Toronto, a squad of Toronto's finest was swooping down in a key raid on a major crime taking place in this city. They went from bookstore to bookstore, Mr. Speaker, seizing some books—ones that were really dangerous to the peace—and warning store owners that they faced criminal charges if they did not remove other books from their shelves.

The squad that was responsible for this great piece of police work was headed by Sergeant of Detectives Van Fleet, carefully followed by Detectives Fenton and Reynolds. And they bravely carried out their duties in this. They didn't flinch at any of the bookstores as they went in and read the books, got excited and seized them.

Mr. Speaker, Toronto is one of the most fortunate cities in the world because of its police force. Thanks largely to the efforts of our former Chief of Police, Jim Mackey, our force is honest, it is reliable and it is so efficient that our crime index is among the lowest of all North American cities. Toronto is one of the few large cities in the free world where a citizen can walk with safety anywhere and at any time.

This having been said, notice must be taken of a disturbing trend since Chief Mackey moved to another field, one in which unfortunately he has not been quite as successful as his former field. The crime rate is now rising astronomically, largely because of the problems which are imported from the USA and associated with speed and heroin. This has been largely unpreventable.

However, associated with this has been something bad that was preventable, and this is a loss of respect for our police, which is not the fault of the men on the beat. Many instances come to mind, and perhaps the most ludicrous was the Keystone Kop behaviour of Chief Adamson in the Lastman case, followed by Mel Lastman's revelations of the low standards of our police equipment. The behaviour of the police commission in the case of the site of the police tower shows an obduracy that is disturbing.

But the most recent incident, the book seizure, indicates a loss of common sense that makes one wonder if we are not rushing toward the US police-versus-the-public image instead of the one which we have had for so many years here of the police helping the public.

To aggravate matters, we have the horrible coincidence in this province today of having a man in charge of the police forces in the person of the Solicitor General (Mr. Yaremko), who has shown a unique inability to cope with any of his previous posts. His actions and remarks since his new appointment have done nothing to change the previous image of ineptness, and his comment just a few weeks ago about the CISO indicates his complete miscasting in his role as civilian head of our police. The retention by the Premier (Mr. Davis) of his present Solicitor General makes one give serious thought to the intelligence and judgement of the Premier of this province.

Mr. F. Laughren (Nickel Belt): He should actually be in charge of the blood bank.

Mr. Shulman: Yes, that's a job he wouldn't be bad at.

If, for political reasons, the member for Bellwoods must be kept in the cabinet—and I recognize that there are some political reasons for keeping him in the cabinet, he serves a very important function there; he does deliver a certain block of votes—surely if this is essential under our system he should be put in a less sensitive post? After all, let me think, he couldn't do much harm—

Mr. Laughren: Health?

Mr. Shulman:—in Tourism. My confrère suggested Health, but I'm afraid I can't agree there. He couldn't do much harm in Tourism. We have had a succession of non-doers in that job, and no one seems to notice the difference. But surely he has to be removed from his present job as Solicitor General? The only good aspect of his present position—I recognize this and for this I am thankful—is that his actions and his comments will undoubtedly hasten the end of the present government and for this one must give certain points.

Well, what is to be done? There is still one ray of hope in this particular cabinet, in this particular field, and that is in the person of the Provincial Secretary for Justice (Mr. Kerr). Now, it is true his star has faded badly and in recent months he has had to eat a lot of the words that he spewed at us across the floor.

Mr. Breithaupt: "Polluters must pay."

Mr. Shulman: Yes. We don't talk about non-returnable bottles or things like that any more. He sits quietly in his chair and he is a little embarrassed.

When he is asked a question he has become very cabinet material-like, because as we saw the other day when they asked him a question—and we all knew what he really thought about police action on the day he was asked about it—the poor man, because he has no authority really, had to squirm around and really take no position at all. But yet, despite his present low status, despite his present fall in the esteem of the Premier, he still has the respect of all parties. He still has the potential for moving back into some job with some responsibility—perhaps Solicitor General or Attorney General—and out of the thinking job he has now, where one is allowed to think but not do.

We on this side of the House are very anxious that neither our police nor our Justice department slips any further in public esteem, and I am appealing to the Provincial Secretary for Justice—I am sorry he is not here, but I am sure he will read my remarks—to step in, because there is a tremendous gap that has opened at the top. We happen to have the sad association of a chief of police who is not particularly adept, let's say, at public relations for one thing, associated with a Solicitor General who is not adept at anything. This is bad for us, it is bad for everyone, and it is particularly bad for the police.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to return to the subject which we have discussed on a number of occasions and that is the problem of organized crime in this province. I note with some dismay that I don't have the full front bench that I had for my last speech. Perhaps there is some explanation for that, but I will come to that a little later, Mr. Speaker. First of all, I'd like to turn to one aspect of Mafia activity which has not been previously discussed publicly or in this House—and I use the word Mafia advisedly, I may say. This is the racket involving the smuggling of young Italian men from Calabria and Sicily into the United States and it is being done through Toronto. Information which I shall give you today has all been known by our Department of Justice for some considerable time, but to this date no one has been charged in this country.

I don't want to take credit for this speech, Mr. Speaker. I want to give full credit to the Toronto Star for gathering most of this information. I want to thank them for not printing it until I had an opportunity to deliver this speech in the House today.

Perhaps you will understand that the Toronto Star assigned one of their best reporters to dig up this material, and I know he worked very hard. He travelled to the States and spoke to a number of police officials both in the United States and here, which was the basis of the material which they gathered. The Star's a tiny paper and it doesn't have room for too much to get in each day. I presume that is the reason it hasn't been printed yet. Anyway, I guess they can print it tomorrow.

Mr. Breithaupt: That adds veracity because the member is giving it.

Mr. Shulman: Well, this way they can say, "Shulman said it in the Legislature."

Mr. Breithaupt: Oh! The headlines are already set up.

Mr. Shulman: Perhaps it's that way. I am going to deliver the Toronto Star's material with gratitude to the three reports of the Star that I see sitting up there. I trust they'll be equally kind to me at least.

I'm going to give all the material which they presented, plus a little more. I'm leaving out one or two names of people. I'll discuss these people without names. The reason for this is that the material about these people was received from various police officers in this city, but not by me directly, and I don't wish to use the names of these people who do not have any charge against them, inasmuch as I don't have the facts myself.

Mr. S. B. Handleman (Carleton): The member has learned something.

Mr. J. R. Rhodes (Sault Ste Marie): He has come a long way in four months.

Mr. Shulman: I'm afraid that the members opposite have learned nothing. I may have learned something in four months; they have learned nothing.

The material that was given four months ago was all based on material I had developed myself and dug up myself. This is material dug up by the Toronto Star. That is why I am not using names. I know members opposite will not understand the difference, but afterwards I'll take them aside and I'll explain it more slowly. Forgive me, because the other members will probably want me to go ahead.

I will be mentioning a number of names and these are people who have actually been caught in serious crimes, either involving the smuggling of immigrants into the United States—caught by the Americans, let me say—or else they are involved in equally serious matters involving the smuggling of heroin.

Mr. Speaker, organized crime always steps in to fill an illicit need on which a profit can be made. In this case, in the immigration racket, here's a dual need. The first aspect is the poverty and the high unemployment in southern Italy which encourages young men to emigrate to seek their fortune elsewhere. The second is the need for cheap labour in New York in construction and the need by the Mafia for button men.

Button men, in case you're not aware, Mr. Speaker, are the low men on organized crime's totem pole. They are the men who carry out the unglamorous jobs of collecting, driving and distributing. These aren't terribly glamorous any more, particularly since certain recent movies have been made. The unfortunate thing is—and I speak from the point of view of the persons concerned—that the sons of the persons involved in organized crime don't wish to follow in their fathers' footsteps. Instead they all want to be doctors or lawyers or accountants.

The hon. member: And Cabinet Ministers.

Mr. Shulman: And cabinet ministers, as someone has suggested.

This has produced a serious labour shortage in the field of organized crime. You have still lots of people who are willing to sit up at the top and say, "Herb, do this". But there aren't too many who are willing to go out on the road and do the really hard stuff that's necessary.

So this particular shortage is being filled by importing men from Europe. Because legal immigration from Italy to the USA is almost impossible, this is now being done illegally, largely through Toronto, practically entirely through Canada.

The scheme is very well organized. Recruitment is done through travel agencies in the city of Calabria. They charge an all-inclusive fee, ranging from $350 to $1,000, depending on what the traffic will bear. For this, all costs are covered and the immigrant is promised work in construction or in a pizzeria in Long Island or in New York.

I want to digress just for a minute. There was a story in the Toronto Star last month on Feb. 24, 1973—a fairly long story. For some reason, the name of the reporter isn't on top of the story. It's called a special report. I guess in the rush to get it to the paper, they left the name of the reporter off.

In any case it describes the number of aliens sneaking into the US from Canada in total. It mentions, for example, that last year the figure for persons actually caught at the border was up to 3,745; this is from all nationalities. Many of them are from the Caribbean; many of them are from India or from Pakistan.

I don't want to waste a lot of time by going into this story in detail. This gives the general description of the smuggling racket into the States without going into the specifics which I'm going to talk about tonight. For any who are interested they can read that article; I shan't repeat it.

Now, coming back to Calabria, after the would-be immigrants to the States contact the travel agent in Calabria, they are flown to Rome and they are then flown from Rome to Toronto. When they arrive at immigration—they have been well rehearsed before they ever left Italy—they say that they are tourists and they are here to visit a relative for a period of 30 days, which is perfectly legal. They've been supplied with the proper papers and there is no problem for bona fide visitors coming to this country to visit.

These men are all supplied with the names of supposed relatives—they are not really relatives—whom they are prepared to name to the immigration officers. In addition, in case anything goes wrong, they are given the name of a contact in Toronto with whom they may get in touch. They are instructed when they leave customs to carry a large Sicilian toy donkey so they will be recognized. In fact, they are then met by the Toronto representative of this ring. We'll come to him a little later.

The Sicilian immigrant is now supplied with a US resident alien card, carrying his photograph. These are supplied by a firm of printers and the appropriate photograph is glued in. They are also supplied with the legitimate, borrowed identification of a US citizen. If the immigrant is caught, the person who has given the identification reports that it has been stolen or that he lost his identification.

This part of the scheme is very easy; there has never been anyone from this group stopped from coming into Toronto. There is apparently no difficulty in getting them into Canada.

The immigrant is now taken across the US border in one of several ways. A large number are driven to Windsor and then by the tunnel across to Detroit during the rush-hour; apparently this is fairly simple. From Detroit they are flown straight to New York.

Some are taken across the Niagara River by motor boat, although that is not too popular because one of them was caught that way a short time ago, and a few enter by switching tickets with US citizens on the Maid of the Mist. That is interesting. The Leader of the Opposition (Mr. R. F. Nixon) mentioned this a couple of years ago and there was great laughter in the House when he mentioned the Maid of the Mist as I recall.

Actually, that's quite a legitimate enterprise. One can board from either the Canadian or US side; if one boards from the Canadian side one has a Canadian ticket and must get off on the Canadian side and vice versa. The way it works is that simultaneously they have someone board from the Canadian side and someone board from the US side. They change tickets in midstream, one might say, and then the immigrant gets off on the other side.

However, this is not the way that most of the men are taken across the border. Most are driven by car from Toronto down to the Quebec-US border and they are taken across on a back road. That is described in some detail in the Star article so I won't go into that.

Two ways are used. Most of the back roads down there are not patrolled; there are just too many of them. There is a gismo in the road that sends off a signal which indicates when a car goes across. Then the department rushes people down to take a look. The way they get around this is they very often have these men walk across. Then they go across in the car and meet them on the other side and drive them from there.

Very few are caught at the border because this has been worked out over the years and it's a fairly efficient operation. Interestingly enough, they are picked up by the dozen in New York and from there sent back to Italy.

According to Mr. Joe D'Amico — he's an investigator for the US Immigration and Naturalization Bureau — and according to Mr. Dennis Dillon — who is the head of the federal strike force against organized crime and racketeering for New York State, and he's in the justice department in Brooklyn — there have been several thousand Italians smuggled in this way via Canada in the past three years. Furthermore, they said this was the way that the Gambino family of New York got its recruits. The Gambino family is the family that is the most prominent at the present time in the New York field of organized crime.

There are many illegal immigrants caught each year by the US Border Patrol; I'll just mention that last year the number was more than 3,000. According to D'Amico those from the Caribbean and Asia usually talk freely when caught. However, the Calabrians are too frightened to talk. They all give the same story, that they were walking on College St. when a chap came by and offered to take them to see New York for a visit. The reason they do not tell the truth is that they have been warned that if they do talk they will be found in Italy, back in Calabria, with their testicles in their mouths. I'm told this is not tasty.

Once in New York, the new immigrants have no difficulty getting work as labourers but some, a significant percentage, go into the protection rackets, into extortion and into shylocking. This new influx of manpower has resulted in spreading these evils into New Jersey and, for the first time, into Long Island.

Who is responsible for this smuggling ring, and why has nothing been done about it? The second question is easy. Basically the problem is that all of these immigrants enter this country on a 90-day visitor's visa and they all leave within the 90 days. The RCMP knows the name of the Canadian ringleader — in fact, of the international ringleader, who is a Canadian — but he has not been charged. I'll explain that shortly.

According to police sources, the entire immigration racket is run under the authority of one Montreal family of hoodlums that has had a great deal of press recently, the Cotroni family. But that is the general supervision. Who are the active ringleaders themselves? Only small fry actually take part in the running across the border. The big shots usually stay out of that, because they can get caught. Just a few months ago, one Montreal policeman taking three Calabrians across was caught by the US Border Patrol. The police force in Montreal has now fired him.

On Aug. 22, 1970, one Nicola Collucci, aged 29, who lives in Toronto, was caught in a motor boat off Grand Island in the Niagara River attempting, with two other men, to smuggle a teenaged Italian girl into the United States.

Mr. E. J. Bounsall (Windsor West): A girl button man!

Mr. Shulman: To the girl, unbutton men.
